Give us a teachable attitude, a humble heart, and let thankfulness survive in us, and let us not be weary in well doing: For in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: For all that is in the heavens and in the Earth is Thine.

Now, therefore, our God, we thank Thee and praise Thy glorious name. Amen.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, August 11, 1992.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3 of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable J. ROBERT KERREY, a Senator from the State of Nebraska, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. KERREY thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the time for the two leaders is reserved for their use later today.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will now proceed to the consideration of the conference report accompanying S. 5, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 5) to grant employees family and temporary medical leave under certain circumstances, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The Senate proceeded to consider the conference report.

(The conference report will be printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD.)

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the conference report is agreed to.

So the conference report was agreed to.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will now be 30 minutes under the control of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] or his designee; 10 minutes under the control of the Republican leader, or his designee; and 5 minutes under the control of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. WARNER].

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following staff members of the Subcommittee on Children and Family be granted floor privileges during the consideration of the conference report on S. 5: Trammell Alexander, Anne Ford, and Judy Ezzell.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise this morning to speak on behalf of this conference, S. 5, known as the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1992.

Last October, the Senate approved, by more than a two-thirds margin, this critical measure to provide short-term job security for working parents in times of family or medical emergencies.

There is a lot of talk these days in the Halls of Congress and on the campaign trail about helping working families—families who have lost hundreds of thousands of jobs in the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression; families who look at unemployed neighbors and wonder if their jobs are next; families who ask themselves how they would care for a child or an elderly parent who suddenly becomes ill; families who, for the first time in generations, cannot count on a better life for their children.

So far, all these families have heard from Washington, quite frankly, Mr. President, is talk. Despite the rhetoric, despite all the speeches and the promises, I believe that we have failed to provide the real solutions to the real problems that average families face every single day.

Mr. President, now is the time. It is time to replace family values rhetoric with real policies that truly value families. It is time to say no to big business lobbyists and yes to hard-pressed working parents; it is time to show that we can be pro business and pro family at the same time.

The American family has changed. It has changed dramatically over the last number of years. And fortunately Government, with this legislation, recognizes that change and tries to do something about it. The Family and Medical Leave Act is an idea whose time is long overdue. In America today, life is a daily struggle to balance the competing demands of work and family responsibilities.

Two-thirds of all women with children work full time. Let me repeat that, Mr. President. Two-thirds of all women with children are working full time today in America's economy. One-quarter of all children live with a single parent. Millions of three-generation households now care for elderly parents. And almost 1 million women care for their parents and children while working full time.

Take Jeanne, from western Connecticut. She was forced to give up a $35,000 annual salary when her employer denied a request for leave to care for a newly adopted daughter. Jeanne returned to the job market 2 months later, only to find her options limited to jobs that paid one-third of her original salary. After months of emotional and financial stress, Jeanne's marriage ended in divorce.

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Or take Carmen, from Chicago, IL; a single mother of three. Carmen lost her job of 19 years as a pharmacy technician when she needed to have leave to recover from a very difficult pregnancy and to care for a newborn child with Down's syndrome. After two decades, 20 years of bringing home a paycheck, Carmen was forced onto the welfare rolls just to feed her children.

Or take Sandra, from a small town in Wisconsin. When her 82-year-old father had two serious heart attacks Sandra's employer refused her request for 1 week—1 week—of unpaid leave to help care for her father. Ironically, Sandra was offered 3 days' leave, should her father die. That was part of the policy. But no time for the chance to comfort her mother or to help the nurse and help her father back to health.

For these families and thousands like them, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1992 provides an answer. If you need time off to care for a new child or care for a sick child or an elderly parent, your job and your health insurance will be there when you return.

With technical and conforming changes, the conference report that we have just adopted is the same legislation that we approved last October by a more than two-thirds margin. This legislation ensures up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for the birth or adoption of a child or the serious illness of an immediate family member: yourself, your child, your spouse, or your elderly parent.

Small businesses are exempt completely and strong protections have been included for those employers covered by the legislation. It is a simple but compelling idea: Job security during a key family crisis that can remove the primary breadwinner from the labor force and cripple a family's economic security. This legislation is the product of more than a dozen congressional hearings and countless discussions with business people and State officials from around the country.

We have amassed strong and convincing evidence that a national family leave law is not only good public policy, but it also makes good business sense.

According to a recent study conducted by the Small Business Administration—and I quote from that report, Mr. President:

> The net cost to employers of placing workers on leave is always substantially smaller than the cost of terminating an employee.

This SBA study, commissioned and paid for by the Bush administration, pegged the cost of family leave at less than 2 cents—at less than 2 cents—per covered employee per day without even factoring in employer savings from reductions in terminations costs.

Another recent study commissioned by the Ford Foundation examined employer practices in four States that have enacted family leave policies. Nine out of ten employers in those four States reported that the laws were easy to implement and that they were not forced to provide fewer health benefits. Eight out of ten employers reported no increase in training or unemployment insurance costs.

Aetna Life & Casualty Co., one of the largest employers in my State of Connecticut, recently reported that its family leave program saved them $2 million each year in reduced employee turnover and lower hiring and training costs. Prior to implementing its policy, only 77 percent of Aetna's female employees returned to work after child birth. Now 91 percent of those who take family leave return to their jobs.

Across the country, employers with leave policies in place report tremendous savings in terms of employee training, productivity, loyalty, and reduced absenteeism.

States with family leave laws report minimal costs for enforcement, minimal costs to businesses, and an improved atmosphere of labor-management cooperation. Most important of all, I believe we have put to rest once and for all the specious argument put before us by Washington lobbyists, and that is that the evidence is clear and unequivocal, employers simply do not take away other employee benefits when a family leave policy is put in place.

Almost 4 years ago, in September of 1988, a prominent national leader stood at a podium in Rockford, IL. He said:

> We need to assure that women do not have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during a serious illness.

That is a statement that I would be proud to call my own. It promotes family leave as a right, not a privilege; a guarantee that every working parent should and must have. I am sad to say, however, that this remark belongs to President Bush, the same man who vetoed this bill in 1990 and who has threatened a veto again this year. American families read the President's lips but so far he has offered only lip service in return.

The President talks about family values but fights a policy that values families.

He would deny a woman's right to choose but rejects a bill that promotes adoption and provides real options for women who must work and raise children at the same time.

He talks about the health insurance crisis but will not protect those who could lose their coverage, now, during a family or medical emergency.

He reports welfare reform but rejects the bill that would enable low-income, single parents to raise their children and be productive working members of our society.

Over the next 3 months the President will have the chance to make an old campaign promise made in Rockford, IL, in September 1988—he will have a chance to make that promise and that commitment made on that day a reality in the new law of this land; a chance to place the needs of American families ahead of the big business lobby's narrow political agenda; a chance, in his words, Mr. President, to assure that working parents never again are forced to choose between the jobs they need and the families that they love. I hope the President will not let this opportunity pass him by.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time and yield whatever time the majority leader needs.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, today the Senate will pass the Family and Medical Leave Act. That is the result of a lot of hard work by a lot of people. But no person deserves credit for this significant action more than the Senator from Connecticut. With great perseverance, with deep commitment, and with a tremendous effort at leadership, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] has led the way to passage of this important legislation. He deserves the gratitude of every American family because job protection during times of childbirth and family illness is important to every American family.

Too many women have been forced to make a painful choice between the economic imperative of working to supplement their family's income and the anxiety of caring for a seriously ill child. We ought not force women to choose between their job and their families. The Family and Medical Leave Act will strengthen families. Well over half of American women do not have maternity leave. Well over half of American parents do not have leave to care for seriously or even terminally ill children. Very little consideration is given to those working adults who are also caring for their aging parents.

Poll after poll shows that the American people want a Family and Medical Leave Act. Americans want to know that they have some basic job protection during times of family crisis. A substantial majority of House Members are on record as supporting this legislation. The same is true in the Senate. What is preventing this legislation from enactment is the threat of a veto by the President. That is truly regrettable. Family leave ought not be a partisan issue. To know the worker has the flexibility to take care of a newborn child or to take care of an ailing parent without the fear of losing a job ought not to be remarkable. It really ought not to require a law. It ought to be a matter of course.

This legislation will strengthen families. Those who believe in family values should be supporting this family legislation. It will provide job security to those who need it most. I urge the President to reverse his position and sign this bill into law.

Mr. President, I want to close, as I began, by commending Senator DODD for his truly outstanding leadership, his patience and perseverance and, most of all, his deep commitment to the kind of values that I believe are important for American families.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his very generous remarks and thank him for his support. I will be glad to yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. I see my good friend, Senator BOND, on the floor. How much time remains?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut has 16 minutes and 40 seconds left.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, first of all, all of us on the Labor and Human Resources Committee want to express our appreciation to the majority leader for his cooperation on this legislation. The struggle to provide family and medical leave to all working Americans has been a long and continuing journey, and we appreciate his cooperation in scheduling this matter, as well as his strong support for the legislation itself. He has been enormously helpful.

I also want to join in commending my good friend, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] for bringing us to where we are today. This has been a 7-year effort. We must not forget the hundreds of hours of hearings that were held all across the country in the early days, when this legislation was being fashioned. The step the Senate takes today is enormously important, ensuring continued progress toward achieving the goals of this legislation, but we must remain mindful of all the steps that have been taken in the past.

I also want to express appreciation to our Republican colleagues and friends who have supported this legislation. As the Senator from Connecticut has pointed out many times, the effort to enact family and medical leave has been a bipartisan effort in the Senate as well as the House. We would never have been able to get as far as we have without their support, and I think it is important to note that fact.

Mr. President, this legislation is enormously important and it deserves to become law this year. Every year that goes by without this legislation, tens of thousands of families are put through the enormous personal tragedy of having to decide to risk their job or ignore the needs of a family member who is seriously ill.

The extraordinary fact is that individuals who lose their jobs under those circumstances often lose their health care benefits as well. While these individuals are trying to cope with an enormous emotional trauma, they lose their jobs, and they lose their health insurance—just when they most need it.

It is difficult, I think, for many of us to recognize that this is happening across this country, but it is happening. It may not happen to employees of the U.S. Senate. As I have mentioned on other occasions, I had the opportunity to take family leave from the U.S. Senate when my son, Teddy, who lost his leg to cancer, needed a 2-year chemotherapy treatment, every 3 weeks for a period of 3 days. I was able to take leave. No one was threatening to cut off my health insurance; no one was threatening to take away my job. It was absolutely indispensable that I take that leave, and it meant the world to both my son and to myself.

Countless Members of this body, as well as the House of Representatives have faced a similar situation. Nonetheless, we still have to fight to try and achieve this right for the working men and women of this country.

As has been pointed out and as I will discuss more extensively later in my remarks, Mr. President, this is neither an expensive nor a burdensome bill. The record indicates quite clearly that companies that currently provide leave are able to deal with the administrative challenges which providing such leave may present, and that the estimates that were given earlier about the cost of this program were not based upon real-life experience.

Yet by not enacting this family and medical leave law, we are putting additional burdens on our taxpayers, who must pay the increased costs of welfare, unemployment compensation, Medicaid, food stamps, and all the other programs that workers who lose their jobs because they lack job-guaranteed leave must turn to. The cost to taxpayers is not unimportant. It is not the major reason this legislation should go into effect, but it is something that we ought to carefully consider.

Finally, Mr. President, the value of this legislation in terms of relieving the anxiety that parents feel during a time of family crisis is immeasurable. While this benefit cannot be valued in terms of dollars and cents, the relief it offers those families from intense anxiety, fear, and frustration is of enormous importance.

It is gratifying Congress is finally completing consideration of the Family and Medical Leave Act. Working Americans have waited far too long for this very important piece of legislation.

The Family and Medical Leave Act stands for a basic principle. It embodies a national consensus that no worker should be forced to choose between caring for their loved ones and keeping their job. When a child is born or a serious illness strikes a family member, working Americans should be guaranteed the right to take a reasonable amount of time off, without fear that they will lose their job.

Despite the controversy surrounding it, the requirements of this legislation are neither burdensome nor expensive. The act requires firms to permit employees to take up to 12 weeks a year of unpaid leave if they are seriously ill themselves, if they need time off from their job to care for a new baby or a newly adopted child, or if an immediate family member is seriously ill.

The bill also requires that employers continue providing regular health benefits for workers who take family or medical leave, since such benefits may be especially important during that period.

The conference agreement is identical in most respect to the substitute amendment adopted by the Senate last October by a vote of 65 to 32. It differs from that bill in three respects. First, it adds the requirement that leave to care for a newborn child must be in order to care for the child. Second, it makes several changes to title II to make it more consistent with other laws on Federal employees. Third, it improves the coverage of Senate employees by incorporating the enforcement mechanism in last year's Civil Rights Act.

Like the bill passed by the Senate last fall, the conference report contains an extensive series of provisions to protect employers and ensure that the right to leave is not abused:

It exempts firms with 50 or fewer employees—approximately 95 percent of all businesses.

Leave must be provided only to employees who have worked for the firm for at least a year, and who worked at least 1,250 hours during that year.

It permits employers to deny leave to key employees.

It allows employers to recover health premiums, if an employee chooses not to return to work at the end of the leave period.

It requires employees to provide 30 days' notice for foreseeable leaves, to make a reasonable effort to schedule planned medical treatments so as not to disrupt the firm, and to provide medical certifications; employers may require a second medical opinion and reasonable subsequent recertifications.

It allows a firm to transfer an employee who intends to take intermittent leave to an equivalent alternative position.

It allows a firm to require employees to substitute accrued paid leave for any portion of the 12-week unpaid leave.

The bill also contains a limited damages remedy. It incorporates enforcement provisions parallel to the Fair Labor Standards Act, to encourage the resolution of claims in administrative rather than judicial proceedings. It restricts damages to double the amount of lost wages or actual monetary losses. It further limits damages against employers who act in good faith and have reasonable grounds to believe their actions did not violate the act.

A GAO cost estimate confirms that the act will not unduly burden employers. GAO estimates that the total cost of the legislation will be only about $5.30 per covered employee per year.

The estimate does not even take into account the significant benefits to the employer of providing leave, such as reduced turnover, improved employee morale and a more experienced, loyal, and committed work force.

As researchers from Cornell University and the University and the University of Connecticut have concluded:

> The net cost to employers of placing workers on leave is always substantially smaller than the cost of terminating an employee. Therefore, while there will be costs to firms of mandating leave by the Federal Government, these costs will be relatively small as compared to the cost of terminating the worker who desires the leave.

The conclusion that providing family and medical leave is neither burdensome nor costly is supported by the experience of employers in States that have already enacted family leave.

According to a study commissioned by the Ford Foundation and undertaken by the Families and Work Institute: 91 percent of employers in four States reported that the State laws were not difficult to implement; 93 percent reported that the State laws had not forced them to provide fewer health benefits; 73 percent reported that the laws had not resulted in an increase in health benefit costs; and a majority reported that the laws resulted in no change in training costs, unemployment insurance costs, or administrative costs.

As I mentioned briefly earlier, providing reasonable job-protected family and medical leave is not costly. But ignoring the need for such leave is. A 1990 study by the Institute for Women's Policy Research found that workers who become seriously ill and who lack job-protected medical leave suffer $12.2 billion in lost earnings annually. Working women lose another $607 million due to lack of parental leave. Taxpayers pay an additional $4.4 billion annually in welfare, unemployment compensation, food stamps, and Medicaid payments to workers who lose their jobs due to the lack of job-guaranteed leave.

Enligtened employers already recognize the benefits that flow from adopting a responsible family and medical leave policy. Indeed, some provide more generous leave than is required by this bill. Since 1988, Aetna Life & Casualty Co. has provided workers with up to 6 months of unpaid family leave a year, with continued benefits and seniority. Aetna reports that its program saved the company $2 million in 1991, by cutting down employee turnover and reducing costs for hiring and training.

But far too many working families continue to suffer because of the lack of a reasonable family and medical leave law.

The vast majority of men and women are denied reasonable leave to care for a newborn child. A 1990 study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics found that only 37 percent of female employees in firms with 100 or more workers had maternity leave, and a 1991 BLS study found that only 14 percent of women in firms with fewer than 100 workers had such leave. Even in the Nation's largest companies, more than half of all workers lack maternity leave beyond a basic maternity-as-disability period—typically 6 weeks.

Even fewer men have the right to take time off from work to care for their newborn children. A 1988 study found that only 14 percent of companies had a formal paternity leave policy.

A 1990 BLS study found that only 18 percent of fathers at medium and large firms are covered by an unpaid paternity leave policy, and only 6 percent of fathers at small firms had the right to take leave.

The situation is even more grim for medical leave. According to the Chamber of Commerce, 82 percent of employers provide no leave to care for a sick child. A 1988 study found that 86 percent provide no leave to care for a sick parent. Even where leave is provided, it often consists of only a few weeks a year—not the 12 weeks provided in this legislation, and not enough time off to deal realistically with many serious illnesses.

The vast majority of Americans believe in family leave and expect Congress to do something to correct the current shortsighted situation. In poll after poll, 70 to 80 percent of those asked, support Federal legislation guaranteeing unpaid, job-protected leave to care for a new child or a seriously ill family member.

It is not enough to say that workers and employers should negotiate over family and medical leave. Workers deserve such leave as a basic right, on par with basic guarantees like the minimum wage, health, and safety on the job, and other fair labor standards.

I join with the majority leader and the Senate from Connecticut in urging the Senate to pass this measure, and to vote to override President Bush's veto if he continues to maintain his irresponsible ideological opposition to this fundamental right. No workers in this day and age should be forced to choose between the job they need and the child or parent they love. And no humane society would ask them to make that choice.

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from Massachusetts. We would not be here at all without his support and the backing of the committee, during, as he put it, the 7-year battle on this measure. I would be terribly remiss if I did not commend him for the help he and his staff have given us over the years.

I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Missouri.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I express my thanks to my colleague and friend from Connecticut.

Over these past few years we have heard many people discussing the family, family values and how we must strengthen the family. As one who believes that for far too long government has ignored the importance of families, or worse yet, has created policies more likely to break them up than keep them together, I welcome this discussion.

Many of the problems facing society today can be attributed to the weakening of the American family. Drugs, violence, crime, declining educational performance, and poverty can be traced back to an empty childhood or a shattered family. There is a great need to strengthen the American family by reinforcing the bond and sense of responsibility between parents and children.

Of all the efforts and initiatives that I have been involved in since coming to the Senate, none have been more important to me than my efforts in the area of family preservation and children's issues.

Thus for the past several years, working with organizations in Missouri as well as interested individuals I have been actively pushing a series of reforms and new policies designed for the sole purpose of keeping families together.

I believe that programs to help children and families are long-term investments by today's generation that will brighten the future of our Nation. I believe that our solutions should be preventive rather than reactive. We must address the root causes of problems rather than simply applying Band-Aids to deep cuts.

America's children hold the key to our long-term prosperity. They will share America in the years to come and affect the progress of our country. The motivation and the capacity to learn start from birth and need constant attention. Parental involvement in the education of their children is the single most important factor in ensuring long-term academic success for youngsters. Parents are their children's first and most influential teachers. As Governor, I established Missouri's statewide parents as teachers program, making Missouri the first in the Nation. It is designed to assist parents in fostering their children's language cognitive and motor development skills, and to provide advice to parents on what to expect at each stage of a child's development. Because of the program's success, 35 other States have used the Missouri model to develop their own programs.

Recently, I worked with the St. Louis Salvation Army to create a new, innovative housing and counseling center to address the needs of homeless families with children to get them out of the emergency shelters and into a program to rehabilitate their lives.

With the Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI] I worked on getting the new family unification program up and running. This will help keeps kids out of foster care who would otherwise be split up because of housing deficiencies and reunite other families already split up because the lacked affordable housing. This is an extremely important program, and I am proud to be associated with it.

But while all these efforts are important I believe the single most important step we can take to help all families in America, is by taking steps to reinstill individual and family responsibility. And to do that, we as a society need to make family obligation something we encourage rather than discourage. That's why I believe we should pass and the President should sign into law the Family and Medical Leave Act we have before us today.

As a society we should never force a parent to choose between a sick child and her or his job.

We should never force a parent to choose between caring for an aged parent and a job.

And we should never force a mother to leave her newborn days after its birth in order to stay employed.

That is why I developed the compromise before us today, which I believe is reasonable that is why I so strongly support this conference report, and that is why I will continue to urge the President to support this bill.

Mr. President, some may feel this issue is about mandates. But I believe it is much more about the strong signal that as a society we place a very high value on parenting and family obligation.

The workplace of the nineties cannot live by the rules of the 1950's. The fact is that more mothers of young children, even infants, work outside the home than ever before. In 1988, married women with young children comprised the majority of new entrants in to the labor force. More than half of women with young infants return to work outside the home within a year of their child's birth. And contrary to what some may have you believe, it is not necessarily out of choice—it simply takes two incomes to pay the bills.

To prove my point: We know that more than two-thirds of women in the work force today are either single parents or have husbands who earn less than $18,000 per year. The fact is a family of three or four cannot live comfortably on under $18,000 per year in most parts of this country. Surveys show us that many married couples would choose to have one person stay home full time if money were not an object, but it is.

So what happens when a family faces an emergency, an illness, or unexpected chance to adopt, but both partners work? Well, they had better hope they have an understanding employer. A 1990 Bureau of Labor Statistic study found that only 37 percent of female employees have maternity leave. And of the Fortune 1,500 companies, where one might expect the best coverage of workers, only half offered parental leave beyond the standard 6-week maternity as disability period.

Paternity leave is extremely scarce. A 1990 Bureau of Labor Statistics study found that only 18 percent of fathers at medium and large firms are covered by unpaid paternity leave.

According to the Chamber of Commerce, 82 percent of employers provide no leave to care for sick children.

And if an employee is sick himself or herself, there is a good chance that he or she works for a company that does not even provide sick leave.

That is why this bill is vital. During that unforeseen family emergency, we want our Nation's parents to think about their family's wellbeing, and not also worry about whether their job will be there when their youngster gets out of the hospital.

Mr. President, I have thought long and hard about these issues, and I believe the compromise developed with Senator DODD last year, which is now embodied in the conference report, is important, necessary, and should be signed into law.

As a society we should never force a parent to choose between a sick child and her or his job.

We should never force a parent to choose between caring for an aged parent and a job.

We should never force a mother to leave her newborn days after its birth in order to stay employed.

And by all means, if we believe in family values, we should encourage a policy of family obligation when at all possible.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to do the right thing and vote to get this conference report to the President.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, before the Senator from Missouri leaves the floor, I want to make it abundantly clear—I mentioned the tremendous support provided by the Senator from Massachusetts, the chairman of the committee—without the efforts of the Senator from Missouri in building a compromise position, we would never have achieved the level of support we did. We might have passed the bill, but I think it would have been a narrow passage. That 68 Members of this body support the family and medical leave legislation in no small measure is due to the efforts of the Senator from Missouri. I am deeply grateful and appreciate of his efforts.

I want to make the same comment of the Senator from Indiana, who is the ranking minority member on the subcommittee. Senator COATS was with me through the hearing process. He has been tremendously supportive, again, good ideas, good suggestions, a far better bill because of his involvement and making a couple of additions to the legislation that I think strengthened the idea and made it more acceptable to a broader spectrum of people, and I am deeply grateful to him.

I will yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Indiana.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana is recognized.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for yielding the time and for his assistance and leadership in this important issue.

Each year, increasing numbers of mothers are forced into the workplace by family financial pressures. Today, about two-thirds of the Nation's adult women are in the work force, and over half of the mothers with children are employed full-time for some portion of the year. Two-thirds of the new entrants into the work force between now and the year 2000 will be women, most in their childbearing years. Clearly, one of the tasks we face as a Nation is to reconcile the conflicting needs of parents, work, and children.

I support S. 5, the family and medical leave bill. I do so however recognizing that the business community has legitimate concerns, many of which have been addresses in this legislation. However, I want to again express, as I have on several occasions, my desire to continue to work with the business community to encourage the development of, and Federal support for more flexible work arrangements. These policies include, but are not limited to preferential rehire, flex time, telecommuting, and home based employment. These are policies, which, coupled with a reasonable leave package like the one we are voting out today, assure that no family will be forced to choose between work and a child.

While this legislation is not a perfect solution, indeed, I had hoped for many years that it would not have been necessary, it represents a sincere attempt to address the needs of business and working families. To remain competitive in the global economy, to recruit and retain good employees and to improve productivity, particularly in a time of growing labor shortages, employers have already recognized the need to offer more attractive benefits to its employees. Many already offer plans similar to the one in this legislation and those employers should be commended. However, there are those employers who have policies that are not only unfavorable to families, but are actually hostile toward families. Those are the employers we are trying to reach with this legislation.

There is no substitute for the love, care and concern that a parent can give to its child. We need a Federal policy that recognizes the fact that children need their parents to be intimately involved in their lives, not just during the first 12 weeks after birth, but for many years after. We as a nation should support families and encourage parents to spend more time with their children. A parent should never be forced to choose between their children and economic survival. Yet, without a family leave policy we will force many families to do just that.

Mr. President, few can argue with the concept that mothers need to spend time with their newborn children. Few, if any, can argue the concept that mothers and fathers need to spend time with a critically sick or ill child or that working men and women need to spend time with critically ill and dying parents.

These are some of the most important and critical times of life. Few can argue that that should be interrupted or that a choice should be forced upon that individual between job and family. Strengthening the American family ought to be one of our top, if not the top, goals that we as a society face because the family provides so much of what society needs in dealing with the many problems that all of us face on a day-to-day basis.

So I support S. 5, the family and medical leave bill because the concept that it advances is a very valid concept. Throughout this process, there were very legitimate concerns raised by business about the impact of this bill on their business.

I find to my astonishment that most businesses and business people today think of this bill as the bill that was originally introduced 3 or 4 years ago. There have been very substantial modifications. With the support and help of the Senator from Connecticut, with the very able assistance and leadership of the Senator from Missouri, and others, there has been a significant recognition of the very legitimate concerns raised by business relative to potential abuses in this bill.

I have with me a two-page addendum of changes that were made to the bill to accommodate those legitimate business concerns. So what we have before us today is truly a compromise that takes a very valid concept, recognizes legitimate concerns, and melds the two together.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. COATS. It is an effective bill. I am pleased to support it.

Mr. DODD. How much time does the Senator from Connecticut have?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut has 3 minutes 15 seconds.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I would like to reserve the remainder of my time. There is 10 minutes, I believe for the Republican leader, is that correct?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader has 15 minutes.

Mr. DODD. I am not sure whether or not the Republican leader or others are going to come to the floor, but I would like to reserve at least a minute or two of my time at the end to rebut any comments from the opposition.

Granted, the opposition is very small in this body; only a handful of people oppose this legislation, but if they wish to be heard on this, now would certainly be the time to do so.

Let me yield 2 minutes to my colleague from Ohio.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Connecticut has 2 minutes 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Ohio be permitted to speak for 5 minutes without it being charged to either side.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise in support of this conference report on family medical leave. I was both an original cosponsor and I was a Senate conferee. But the man who really gets so much of the credit for this legislation is the Senator who sits to my right, Senator DODD, because his steadfast leadership on this critical issue for working families has been just a privilege to behold. He has been there constantly, resolutely, and without him it never would have come to pass.

Frankly, this legislation should have been signed into law years ago. But, regrettably, President Bush vetoed it. We have heard a lot of talk from the administration about family values, but when the President had a chance actually to do something for America's working families, he turned out one of the thousand lights about which he had spoken previously.

In the past two decades, we have witnessed profound changes in the American working family. It is totally different than that which it was 30 years ago. Today, most American families cannot survive on just one income. Both parents have to work just to put food on the table and pay the rent for a roof over their heads.

The President says he favors voluntary but not mandatory leave. But the reality is that most of corporate America has not responded to this revolutionary change. Even in the biggest companies only half of all the working mothers have adequate maternity leave. Roughly, a third of American businesses provide no sick leave at all, and only 14 percent of American businesses provide spousal or elder care leave.

Workers are all too often faced with an agonizing choice between their job and their family. No worker should lose a job because he or she needs to take a few days or a few weeks off to care for a newborn infant, a sick child or dying parent or spouse.

Let us not kid ourselves. It is low-income workers who are most likely to have no leave. It is low-income families who are most dependent on two wage earners, and it is they who stand to lose the most when they lose a job because they have to care for a sick family member.

The administration's opposition to this legislation is absurd.

First, let us remember this bill provides only unpaid leave—not paid leave, unpaid leave. In a study of States that already require family and medical leave, 91 percent of employers said the requirements were not difficult to implement. And under the bill's small business exemption, 95 percent of the businesses in this country would not even be covered, leaving over 60 percent of the work force unprotected. This bill ought to protect all workers but not just in arbitrary fashion. But I recognize that compromise is part of the legislative process and it is a major step in the right direction.

The pro family legislation is a matter of basic human decency. Over 70 percent of Americans support it, as did 68 Members of this body.

I urge the President to come to his senses and sign this legislation when it comes across his desk. It will be a better country. We will be a better Nation if he does so.

Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I will yield my time after the minority has come in to speak in opposition.

I ask unanimous consent that the vote tally that occurred in October of last year, that reflects the 65 to 32 outcome of that recorded vote in the Senate, be printed in the RECORD.

Second, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the names of those Members who were unavoidably absent that day, but who support the legislation, be included as well in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 216 Leg.]

YEAS—32

NOT VOTING—3

Harkin, Kerrey, Pryor.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, while waiting for the opposition to appear on this bill, I would just reemphasize these points.

It has been 7 years, almost, since this legislation was first introduced. It has been a long and arduous fight. It is a better bill, I think, today than it was when we first introduced it, because the hearing process and the conversations with others have improved it and made it a stronger piece of legislation.

Mr. President, we have a lot of talk about change. Change seems to be the password this year that will get you into any audience in this country, and will get you the opportunity for people to listen to you. Here is a chance to actually really do something about change; to really make a difference in average people's lives.

There is a real problem for people, trying to balance work responsibilities and family responsibilities. Not a single person in this body does not understand what that means. It is very difficult today for families. All we are saying is exhaust all your other benefits; but when you have exhausted them all, and you have a family crisis of significant proportions, you should not lose your job. You should not lose your health insurance. We will not pay you for those 12 weeks, but you have at least an equivalent job to come back to at the end of that family crisis.

That is all we are trying to do with this legislation. I used to make the speech that we were only one of two industrialized countries in the world that did not have a family and medical leave policy. I can no longer make that statement. South Africa has now adopted a family and medical leave policy. We are the only industrialized nation in the world that does not recognize the difficult burdens of trying to be a good employee, a good parent, a good spouse, a good child, and taking care of the elderly parent.

Mr. President, I urge the President, I hope the President will reverse the view that he has maintained and sign this legislation into law, and really do something for change.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas, the Republican leader, is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, do I have 15 minutes?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader has 15 minutes.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not think I will use 15 minutes. Two of my colleagues are unable to be here at the moment. My colleague from Kansas, Senator KASSEBAUM, and the Senator from Mississippi, Senator COCHRAN, are tied up in committee meetings.

I will just take a few moments.

Mr. President, there is no controversy here over whether family leave is good or not. I strongly support such programs and believe that they have served—and will continue to serve—a very important role in the workplace where more and more American families find both parents out of the home.

For similar reasons, Mr. President, I also support health insurance benefits, disability plans, life insurance, vacation, sick leave, maternity leave programs, training and continuing education programs, and all the other infinite types of programs and benefits that the employers of this Nation voluntarily provide to their work force.

But this is not the issue.

The debate is not whether family leave is a good idea. If that were the issue the vote would always be unanimous in support of such programs.

Instead, what we are really deciding is whether the Government knows best how to spend everyone's benefit dollars.

FLEXIBILITY VERSUS MANDATE

I keep saying that the old liberals never die. I keep reading about all the changes in the Democratic Party. But the change is for more government, more programs, more mandates, telling people what to do all over America. That is not the change that I understand the American worker or the American employer want.

That is what they are going to continue to receive from those who think the Government knows best—the Government can tell us what to do, the Government has one size that fits all.

So it seems to me that this approach is the fatal flaw of this legislation.

While we live in an era of freedom of choice, where employees and employers bargain over their salaries and benefit packages as best meets their collective and individual needs, we have before us a conference report which says "one size fits all."

Regardless of whether you are single or married, whether you have children, whether your children are infants or grown up, whether your family is healthy or sick, whether your parents are dead or alive, you will get family and medical leave to the detriment of benefits better suited to your own personal needs and desires. You may not want that mix of benefits, but you are going to get it if a bill like this should pass.

For younger workers, their priority may be child care and life insurance; for older workers, it may be pension benefits and retiree health benefits.

And the response of the proponents of this legislation to this preemption of individual choice and flexibility is: Too bad, Washington knows best, as always.

MANDATES HARM BUSINESS AND WORKERS

We can fix it for you. We fix everything in Washington. We raise your taxes, we raise the deficit, we have more regulations, so we can give you more mandates and tell your employer what to do in Topeka, KS, or wherever it may be in America.

I do not dispute the good intentions of the sponsors of this legislation. Everybody wants to do good. But some think the Government is the only one who knows how we do good—that we cannot do good through the private sector.

Well, Mr. President, this is one of those cases where Washington does not know best.

It is a basic fact of life that business can allocate only a specific amount of money for benefits. Like the Federal Government and State governments, they have projections and budgets. But in the businesses, they have to meet their budget or they go out of business. We just charge it to our children and our grandchildren. We have been doing that to the tune of about $4.2 trillion now, and the deficit is getting bigger and bigger.

And part of those projections and budgets of businesses is how much they will spend on salaries and how much they will spend on benefits.

So if we are going to spend more on benefits, we will probably spend less on salaries.

The real world impact of this well-intentioned legislation—this mandate—is that employers will revisit those projections and budgets and cut back on something else, including creating new jobs at the very time that we need new jobs.

A recent poll by the Gallup organization—a pretty good organization—of over 950 small businesses indicated that if this bill were to become law, more than half of small firms would establish stricter personnel policies and cut back employee benefits such as paid vacations and health insurance.

So, although we are hearing in the speeches today that this conference report is a win-win for everybody, it is more of a lose-lose.

It is a bad law for business which is trying to emerge from the recession and gets hit with this hidden tax.

This is another tax. Do not kid anybody. When you have a mandate that says you have to do A, B, or C, that is another tax on business.

It is a bad law for workers and their families who are able to negotiate this much less of their benefit package on their own. They will have fewer options.

And it is a bad law for those workers and their families who do not fit within this one-size-fits-all mandate. They are the real losers under this conference report for they are the ones forced to subsidize benefits for others.

In this connection, Mr. President, I might add that another Gallup poll found that only 1 percent of 1,000 respondents listed parental leave as their most valuable employee benefit.

And a January 1991 Penn & Shoen survey found that 89 percent of 1,000 respondents preferred that employee benefits be decided privately between employers and employees rather than mandated by the Federal Government.

LEGISLATION WILL BE VETOED

Mr. President, President Bush has repeatedly made clear his intention to veto this legislation.

He strongly supports family leave programs. He does not support universal mandates that treat everyone the same when in fact we are all very different.

I also ask unanimous consent that an editorial which appeared in USA Today on August 10, 1992, be included in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this piece further underscores the point that with States and businesses taking an aggressive lead on family and medical leave benefits, Congress should step aside. The Government ought to get out of the way.

As with other benefits like health insurance, vacation, and sick leave, family and medical leave is charting its own course in the employment market.

No good, and perhaps a great deal of harm, can only come from this unnecessary congressional intervention.

NO TO FAMILY LEAVE BILL

With states and business taking the lead on family leave, the federal government should step aside.

Family leave is a terrific concept that could turn into a not-so-hot federal law. But Congress wants you to have one anyway.

A bill near nearing passage and favored by Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton would require employers with more than 50 workers to offer up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year for the birth or adoption of a child or the serious illness of the employee or an immediate family member. Other benefits would continue, and workers would be entitled to the same or comparable jobs when they returned.

This is a ham-handed way to speed up a process that's well under way. President Bush is right to threaten a veto.

Only 5% of employers and 50% of workers would be covered. And satisfying an inflexible federal mandate takes away money businesses might use for benefits workers prefer, such as day care.

Worse, the idea comes at a time when companies and states are finding solutions for themselves. Most companies already provide some family leave—some more and some less than Congress proposes—not just because it's good-hearted, but because it's good business.

Family leave policies reduce job turnover—a high-priced item for business. Replacing a worker costs an average 1.5 times the employee's annual salary, according to the Families and Work Institute, a non-profit research group.

Aetna Life & Casualty credits its extended family leave policy with a $2 million saving on turnover. Under the new policy, half as many women who took maternity leave left the company.

In addition to company efforts, at least 30 states now require employers to offer family leave, most for pregnancy. More states are considering legislation.

With states and companies designing a range of family leave policies to suit individual circumstances, a federal law is a clumsy nuisance.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, the Senate should recognize that federally mandated, one size fits all approach, medical and family benefits do not take into account the changing nature and changing needs of an increasingly diverse work force. More and more employees request, and employers more and more provide, flexible, family oriented, medical benefits. The cost of any new federally mandated benefit, including parental and medical leave, will ultimately be paid for by employees through lower wages or the loss of other preferred benefits such as dental coverage or paid prescriptions.

The proponents of federally mandated parental leave have often pointed to Europe where family leave policies are said to be more progressive. Progress, in this instance, is certainly in the eye of the beholder, as the liberal and progressive family leave policies of Austria, Canada, France, Finland, West Germany, Italy, Japan, and Sweden are all financed by those Governments.

Furthermore, Mr. President, European labor markets are often criticized for their rigidities which inhibit adaptation to changing economic, demographic, and competitive situations. Perhaps their adoption of progressive labor policies, such as mandated leave, are part of their problem. If we take the mandated, less flexible approach to employee benefits as the Europeans have, at least we ought to recognize and acknowledge the likely result—fewer jobs and a less competitive economy.

Mr. President, the United States during the 1980's was referred to as the "great American job machine." Between 1980 and 1989, job growth in the United States greatly surpassed job growth in Europe. At the beginning of the decade, employment in Europe surpassed that of the United States, but by 1989, total employment in this country climbed to over 199 million, while European employment rose to only 108 million.

Between 1980 and 1989, the United States generated jobs at a rate four times faster than Europe. Job growth in the United States accounted for slightly over 80 percent of the combined job growth in both the United States and Europe—four out of five jobs generated in both the United States and Europe were in the United States. The United States has been able to provide employment for 63 percent or almost two-thirds of our workage population, compared to only 52 percent, or slightly more than half in Europe.

Mr. President, the mandated parental leave entitlement guaranteed by this legislation is unfair to those employees who neither need nor want it. For example, singles, childless couples, and older workers will have no interest in parental leave and would prefer other uses for their limited benefit dollars.

The marketplace already provides strong incentive for employers to provide appropriate fringe benefits for employees. Employers periodically change their benefit policies to meet the changing needs of the work force and enhance the ability of the company to compete for employees with the talents and skills they require.

Mr. President, current economic conditions are forcing employers to make more efficient and effective use of limited dollars available for employee benefits, to provide the most cost-effective and flexible benefits needed by employees. This legislation, however, would undermine that effort by reducing that flexibility and limiting choice.

We ought also to recognize that labor costs of American companies are rising, and those increasing costs do not reflect escalating wages, but instead reflect the availability and the increasing costs of employee or fringe benefits.

While wages and salaries accounted for 72.7 percent of total compensation in 1989, benefits represented 27.3 percent or more than one-fourth of all compensation. Between 1980 and 1989, real benefit costs increased more than five times the rise in wages and salaries.

Mr. President, mandated benefits in the form of payroll taxes to finance Social Security, workers' compensation, and unemployment insurance constitute the largest cost to employers among the benefit categories, accounting for almost one-third of each benefit dollar. While legally mandated benefits are among the most rapidly increasing components of employee compensation, health insurance costs are also skyrocketing.

Federally mandated parental and medical leave would be one of the first legally mandated benefits not financed through the tax system. The individual employer would bear the entire cost of this benefit. For some companies, other benefits may be reduced to cover the cost of the new government mandated leave program.

Mr. President, no one, including employers, objects to the provision of parental and medical leave to employees who are in need of it. However, a federally mandated, one size fits all program for every workplace is not the answer to meeting those needs.

PARENTAL LEAVE

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me say right up front that no one on this side of the aisle—and not the President of the United States—opposes family leave. We do not differ with the Senator from Connecticut on the concept of family leave.

Where we disagree is on the method that has been chosen to promote family leave. The legislation before us calls for a mandated, inflexible, one-size-fits-all benefit.

We can argue all day long about the cost estimates; but, the plain fact is that this proposal is not free. To comply with this bill, employers must make adjustments in the benefits they offer workers.

They must continue to pay benefits for employees who are not working. This obviously incurs a cost. As a result, workers may not get the compensation packages they actually prefer because Government has not only required a family leave benefit, but a family leave benefit that measures up to the Federal standard.

So, Mr. President, the first reason Senators should not support S. 5, even in its modified form, is because it is not only a mandate on employers, it is a mandate on workers as well.

The second reason, Mr. President, is that all of this cost shifting is not good for the economy as a whole. Employers must be free of the same kind of rigidities that have plagued the economies of many nations in Europe.

Every new requirement we impose on business renders American industry less able to adapt to changing economic conditions. We become less competitive.

Finally, S. 5 is not the only answer to the problems confronting families. There is an alternative. I believe the American Family Protection Act offers advantages to families that S. 5 does not. This alternative does so in a way that permits maximum flexibility and choice for both employers and workers.

Mr. President, I recognize the diligence of my friend from Connecticut in passing this bill. Particularly since we worked so hard together on the Child Care Development Block Grant Act, I regret that we disagree on this issue.

I have to agree with President Bush. You do not have to be for this bill to be profamily. You cannot separate the interests of the family from the interests of a healthy, strong economy.

This bill will impose new mandates on all Americans: mandated costs to employers; an inflexible leave policy for employees; and costs that are passed on to workers and consumers alike.

This is not the way to help families.

If we are going to be profamily, let us make sure we do not mandate mothers and dads out of the ability to negotiate their own pay and benefits, or worse, mandate them out of a job.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I have run out of time. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes off the bill.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, first of all, I thank the minority leader for being here. I must say I disagree, obviously, in regard to a number of his comments regarding these mandates. This is 2 cents per covered worker per day. That is a very modest amount for a very important benefit. If you ask people who need family and medical leave legislation, you get an entirely different response. No one ever thinks they are going to need this. No one thinks their child is going to get seriously sick or be in an emergency room. No one thinks their parent is going to need special care. It is only when it happens and they want to take some time to care for them that they realize it.

I supported the Americans with Disabilities Act. It was a very important piece of legislation. I know the distinguished minority leader is a strong supporter of that legislation. I do not know if there has been a single larger mandate that was adopted by Congress in recent years. The Americans with Disabilities Act is an extremely important piece of legislation.

There were those who opposed it and said, "Let the employers figure out how to do that and decide how to put in the architectural improvements and figure out how they would hire people with various forms of disabilities." We said, "Look, we tried that. Unfortunately, it does not work." That is no way to deal with these. Unfortunately, you have to make some basic requirements, or you are never going to deal with the problem.

That is true here as well. I would never have pursued this bill had the trend lines showed us to be moving in a direction where the private sector was stepping forward and doing something about family medical leave. As the Senator from Indiana [Mr. COATS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. BOND] pointed out, we still have some 80 percent-plus of the firms in this country that only provide a modest amount of maternity leave. We are not talking about serious illness of a child. So, unfortunately, the trend lines do not show any improvement in this area.

Last, Mr. President, we exempt all small business. The only firms covered by this are 5 percent of employers in this country. Ninety-five percent of all businesses are exempt under this legislation. Those 5 percent of employers who employ more than 50 people cover some 45 to 50 percent of the work force in this country. I have confidence that in a small work environment, a smaller employer will take care of these problems. They know each other, the secretaries, and the people who work on the shop floor. When you get to the larger enterprises, it is impossible for the chief executive officer to know everybody. They cannot do it. It is unfair to expect them to. So in the larger situation, it becomes important that these kinds of benefits are included, because there is no way that we have been able to see that they are actually covered by it.

One more point: This is not a dental plan. This is not vacation time we are talking about here. We are talking about human decency—basic human decency, that if your child is in a hospital someplace, you ought to be able to be with that child and not lose your job. If you have a spouse who is seriously ill and needs your attention and care, you ought not to lose your job. You ought to be able to be with that person. Unfortunately, most people in this country are not in that situation. To maintain your health insurance for a few days, to be a good worker and a good parent and a good spouse is not too much to ask. It ought not to be compared with getting your teeth cleaned or going fishing for a week. This is far more basic than that.

I urge the President to sign this legislation into law. I think it is something he would be proud of. He made a statement in Rockford, IL, in 1988. He said he was for it. Today, I hope he will live up to that and sign the legislation.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not disagree with a thing the Senator said, that we ought to be sensitive and do all this. But should the Government do it? I say to those who want the Government to solve every problem, to make parents do what they should do, or to mandate family values, in my view, it is a fairly big assignment for the Federal Government. We do not do anything very well. The last thing we need to do is get into every family problem. We ought to have family leave. I am looking for corporations to continue their progress, and we will provide other ways through credits.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to support passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

I can think of no other group of Americans in greater need of protective legislation than working mothers.

In this campaign season, we hear so much about candidates being pro-family. This legislation is pro-family and will provide the job protection our families need in desperate times.

This bill provides 12 weeks of unpaid, and I emphasize, unpaid leave per year for the birth of a child.

If a working woman chooses to have a child, we should do all we can to ensure that the family is not strained by the prospect of her losing her job.

Fathers, as well, should have the opportunity to spend the first few months of his baby's life without the fear of unemployment.

This bill contemplates the concerns business owners may have and addresses them adequately. Ninety-five percent of businesses are exempt.

Thirty days notice is required. Medical certification can be requested. Part-time employees are not included.

We must recognize that we live in a society that cares about families and children. And we must recognize that to force these employees out of work, we are asking them to begin receiving public assistance. If they are not working, they are neither receiving a salary, nor any health coverage.

We then increase the number of people on welfare and on Medicaid.

Working mothers constitute a greater percentage of our work force every year. And single mothers are growing in numbers each year. These single working moms are some of the hardest working people I know.

Some work multiple jobs, without any assistance from their absent spouse, so that they may better the lives of their children.

This bill, in a small way, will improve the lives of millions of children and ease some of the great burdens on our working parents—both mothers and fathers.

If this Congress commits itself to invest in families, by allowing parents the flexibility needed for handling serious medical emergencies and pregnancies, then America guarantees satisfied and more productive employees and stronger, healthier families.

I urge passage of this important legislation. American families deserve our support.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I am again pleased to have the opportunity to express my support for the Family Medical Leave Act. This important piece of legislation allows American families to accomplish two critical needs—to devote time to their family when medical needs calls for it, and to maintain their job as a productive member of the work force. However, I remain discouraged and dismayed, for although a large majority of the Congress recognizes the need to strengthen support for our families, the President will likely veto this bill.

The bill provides up to 12 weeks per year of unpaid job protected leave for employees for personal or family medical reason, and for parents upon the birth or adoption of a child up to the age of 18. Businesses with fewer than 50 employees would be exempt from the bill. This act supports the American family and supports American economic growth into the 21st century through support of the American work force.

The changing nature of our work force, with both parents having to maintain jobs to make ends meet, has made family medical leave an issue of growing concern. Nationally, 51 percent of mothers of children under the age of 1 are working, 66 percent of mothers with school-aged children are working, and 96 percent of all fathers with school-aged children are working. In addition, more than 2 million families provide care in their own home for elderly relatives who may require significant care and attention.

Mr. President, I am increasingly concerned that we find ways to reconcile the need to help families care for their children—as well as their aging parents—with the need for working parents to remain productive members of the work force. I believe that the Family Medical Act addresses the concerns of working parents and provides appropriate job security for these families.

The American work force should not be forced to choose between their jobs and caring for their families. I urge adoption of this legislation and I urge the President not to veto it. America's families need and deserve this support.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the conference report on the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1991. If we work at it, Mr. President, this bill can be the first step in the development of a comprehensive policy designed to support American families. I hope that adoption of this conference report will signal a shift in our priorities as a nation regarding families and children.

This is not a complicated piece of legislation. It is not hard to explain. S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act, is designed to protect the jobs of American workers when they are faced with a family crisis. It says that you should not have to choose between having a family and having a job. It says that we believe in families in America, that we are willing to pay the small price, as a nation, for making families possible for people who work. It signals that we recognize that many American workers have trouble supporting their families and keeping them together in difficult times, concerned about the effect of taking leave time on their jobs. It is not television sitcoms that are destroying American families. It is our unwillingness to help people support their families. With enactment of this long-awaited conference report, we can begin to change that situation.

I want to make it clear, Mr. President, that I consider this legislation to be just a beginning, a modest start toward a more comprehensive family policy. We provide, with this act, 12 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave per year for employees who are faced with the birth or adoption of a child, or who need to take care of an immediate family member who has fallen seriously ill. This is not much and it is very late—in the United Kingdom, the first policy of this sort was instituted in 1911, and the current leave policy there dates back to 1946. Canada's policy dates to 1962. Sweden has had a sickness and maternity leave policy since 1891. It is true, we can be a conservative, prudent country when it comes to adopting social legislation. But now that we have had close to a century in which to observe how these policies work around the world, I believe we must adopt our own, modest plan.

We are still the only developed country in the world with no family leave policy. If our observation of other nations tells us that this bill is hardly a radical new idea, it also tells us that it is hardly a family leave policy either. In Canada, workers are provided with 18 total weeks of leave and they receive 90 percent salary during the first 16 weeks of that leave. In France, employees can take up to 16 weeks leave, including 6 before giving birth, and they typically receive 84 percent of their pay during that period. Two of the nations most often cited as our major competitors for international markets, Germany and Japan, provide family leave policies—in Germany it is 14 weeks, paid at 100 percent of salary and in Japan, 12 weeks at 60 percent of salary. So we have a long way to go, if we are to catch up. And I must admit, Mr. President, that I do not understand why we must settle for anything but the best policies in this country.

So here, with this bill and this conference report, we will begin to update American family policy, to catch up with the rest of the developed world. This may be a minimal family leave policy, Mr. President, but it is a step in the right direction. It could not come at a more critical time for this country. More and more, Mr. President, we are a country of working families. Currently, 96 percent of all fathers and 66 percent of all mothers with school-aged children are in the work force. Over half of all women with infants work outside the home. What little progress we have made in the past 20 years on average incomes in this country has been due to the increase of two wage-earner families. If we are not going to make it possible to support a family on one income any longer, then we must make it possible for at least one family member to take some time out of work in case of emergencies.

If the lessons we have learned from other countries, and from studies of our own, prove correct, this policy will prove to be good for American business as well as for American families. According to a 1990 study by the Institute for Women's Policy Research, workers who suffer bouts of serious illness and who have no job-protected leave lose about $12.2 billion in earnings every year. Taxpayers pay an additional $4.3

billion annually through various support programs for workers who have lost their jobs due to lack of this sort of leave. A 1990 study from the Small Business Administration concludes that "the net cost to employers of placing workers on leave is always substantially smaller than the cost of terminating an employee."

As discussed in the conference report we have before us, this policy is expected to cost about $5.30 per covered employee. Keep in mind, however, that the only employees who are covered are those who work in firms that employ 50 or more workers, so that 95 percent of employers are not covered by this policy. In 1989, the General Accounting Office [GAO] estimated that this policy would cost about $244 million annually. That is clearly a bargain.

Mr. President, we do not have to look to foreign countries for examples of the effectiveness of family leave policies. We can look at several of the States for examples of the benefits of this policy. In my own State, we have a parental leave law that requires an employer to provide up to 6 weeks of unpaid parental leave to a mother or father upon birth or adoption of a child. A 1991 study by the Families and Work Institute of our policy along with similar policies in Oregon, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin, found that employers were able to implement the law easily and inexpensively, with little or no impact on other benefits. It did not lead to increases in the cost of health insurance, or unemployment insurance, training or administration, as some critics have predicted. It did promote healthier practices among parents, especially mothers, who were able to take medically recommended leaves to recuperate from childbirth and to be with their children.

By voting for this conference report, we are making a commitment, as a nation to support families, in all their forms. We are making a commitment to children. We are making it possible for parents to work and provide for their families. If we are serious about families, we will take this initial step. If we are serious about competing with Europe and Japan, we will take this step. If we want to make it clear that the values we believe in are rooted in the family, then we will begin by helping to shore up that family. This is, I hope, the first of a new set of policies that will show that we are, in this country, committed to putting our immense national resources behind our children and our families.

I want to thank the sponsors of this legislation for providing us with this opportunity and with the conferees for bringing this report before us. I enthusiastically support this conference report. And I urge President Bush, who has indicated his opposition to this legislation, to reconsider his position and sign this measure into law.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong and longstanding support for the Family and Medical Leave Act. Working families in my State of Washington and throughout the United States need this legislation.

This year family values have unfortunately become a Republican campaign buzzword. The President says he understands what it is like to have a seriously sick child from his own experience. I am sure he would want every American to be able to spend time with their sick children. Yet the President vetoed this bill in 1990. I hope he will sign this bill this year.

We are at a critical point in the economic and social future of our Nation. Ten million Americans need jobs, but they also need to care for their families. The two things, work and family should not be opposing forces. They should not be mutually exclusive. It is time for American businesses to recognize that what is good for workers and families is also good for them and the economy.

This bill is very simple. It guarantees that someone who works will have the same job after a short leave to care for a new child or ill family member, or to recover from his or her own serious illness. According to the GAO, the costs are de minimis. The cost of $5.30 per eligible employee per year is negligible when compared to the cost savings to employers from reduced employee turnover and recruiting.

America lags far behind other industrialized nations on this issue. These countries are competitive and productive, while at the same time they support families. We cannot afford to fall farther and farther behind in the global marketplace. This legislation will help to make America first in the world again.

This is also the Year of the Woman. This legislation recognizes the contributions of our mothers, sisters, and daughters. Many more women work outside of the home today and the number is expected to continue to rise. A large number of these women are single parents who cannot depend on someone else to take care of a sick child. One-third of the 2.2 million Americans that care for our elderly are in the work force. Three out of four caregivers are women.

A woman who needs to work or wants to work should not be penalized because family members depend on her during times of injury or illness.

I urge all of my colleagues to vote for this legislation and I urge President Bush to sign this bill. No American family should be forced to choose between a paycheck and the needs of a sick family member.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, American families are suffering. During the past 12 years, family income has dropped while health care and college costs have escalated. And many are worried about losing their jobs if they need to take time off when a child is born or a family member is sick. Today, we have the opportunity to deal with this concern by adopting the conference report on the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The United States lags far behind our industrial competitors in providing family and medical leave protection to workers. In fact, most other countries provide paid leave while this modest measure provides workers unpaid leave for up to 12 weeks for the birth or adoption of a child or to care for a seriously ill child, parent, or spouse. In fact, the United States is the only industrialized Nation without family and medical leave protection. It's time for this to change.

Many claim this modest bill will bankrupt small businesses, but, a 1990 nationwide survey by the U.S. Small Business Administration found that the cost of providing family and medical leave is substantially less than the cost of terminating an employee. In part, the report said, "the net cost to employers of placing workers on leave is always substantially smaller than the cost of terminating an employee."

Others claim family and medical leave would be difficult to administer, yet, surveys of businesses in States with such laws contradict these arguments. A study by the Ford Foundation surveyed employers in four States with family leave laws; 91 percent said the leave was not difficult to administer.

The bill is a modest, but vital investment in U.S. families. It's time to replace profamily rhetoric with pro-family action by adopting this conference report to provide workers with vital job security at times when they are most vulnerable.

In closing, I would like to commend Senator DODD for his outstanding leadership on this issue for the past 6 years. This legislation is long overdue. It is my sincere hope that President Bush will finally sign this pro-family bill.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I rise today along with Senator DODD, Senator BOND, and numerous other Senators, both Republican and Democrat, in strong support of the family and medical leave conference report. I am a longtime advocate of family and medical leave legislation.

On October 2, 1991, the Senate passed S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act, in the form of a compromise bill which was the result of the hard work of Senators BOND and DODD to respond to the concerns of the business community. The conference report which we have before us is essentially that same legislation. It provides up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for the addition of a new child to the family, or for serious illness of the worker or their immediate family.

My State of Oregon is an excellent example of the success of family and medical leave laws. In 1988, Oregon enacted legislation to allow 12 weeks of parental leave for parents of newborns and seriously ill children. At the time, a great deal of opposition and concern was heard from those who feared it would cost too much, be difficult to implement, and that employers would be forced to cut back other benefits to employees. I am happy to say that experience has proved these claims meritless.

Oregon was so pleased with the benefits of the original legislation that last year it expanded the law to add leave for serious medical conditions. Oregon's new law is one of the Nation's most comprehensive family and medical leave plans.

A report entitled "Beyond the Parental Leave Debate: The Impact of Laws in Four States" was issued in 1991 by the Families and Work Institute. The study featured Oregon and 3 other States which already have family leave laws. The vast majority of employers in those States reported at that they had no problems with those laws—91 percent said that the laws' requirements were not difficult to implement. In fact, 42 percent of Oregon employers said it was actually extremely easy to implement.

There may be skeptics who will say, just because a few States have a good experience with family leave, why should I want it for my State? The best answer I can give you is that the Family and Medical Leave Act is pro-family. Whatever side of the political spectrum you may be on, pro-family legislation benefits your constituents. This bill allows parents to spend the first few critical weeks of their child's life with the child. It also allows a worker whose child, parent, spouse or who himself is critically ill, to take the necessary time for recovery at home. Having the opportunity to deal with a crisis without fear of job loss strengthens families and keeps them together.

I would like to address some of the concerns about the cost of this legislation. From a fiscal standpoint, it is win-win. The taxpayers win, and business wins. Let me explain. When a worker loses a job due to a family crisis, they experience a loss in earnings that is passed on to the taxpayer. Workers who cannot return to their jobs often must resort to receiving assistance from welfare or unemployment. In its 1989 cost estimate of the Family and Medical Leave Act, the General Accounting Office estimated that the cost to the public of not having family and medical leave amounts to about $8 billion annually.

Business wins, too. A study commissioned by the Small Business Administration found that the cost of permanently replacing an employee is significantly greater than that of granting family or medical leave—demonstrating that the Family and Medical Leave Act may actually reduce costs to business.

The family and medical leave conference report deserves our support for all these reasons. I am pleased that we are adopting it.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I strongly support the conference report on S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act. A national policy on this issue—a national policy dealing with the changing nature of the American work force and a national policy to strengthen American families—is long overdue.

I have spoken before on the urgent need for this legislation and will not take much time here today. I do, however, wish just briefly to highlight and reiterate the important need for his legislation.

By choice and by economic necessity, the one-wage earner family is no longer the norm. Gone are the days of father as breadwinner, mother as bread maker. Gone are the days when the men went to work and the women cared for the children. Those were the days of my childhood; but they are not the days of today's children.

Two-thirds of all mothers with children under the age of 3 now work outside the home. Some choose to; some have to. The reasons may vary, but the result does not. The result is that, today, a parent may not be able to be at home in the crucial early days of childhood and during times of great family need. The result is that, today, far too many parents are faced with a difficult choice—a choice between work and family.

Imagine a single mother, working 40 hours a week in a low-wage job to provide for her two children. One day, one of those children becomes seriously ill. In most jobs, that hard-working mother faces a dilemma. Does she keep working, all the while worrying about the well-being of her child? Or does she leave work to care for the child, possibly losing the health insurance that covers the child's illness and the job that allows her to contribute to the economy instead of being a burden on it? And, unfortunately, this is not an imaginary dilemma; it is one in which thousands of Americans find themselves.

This hard choice between work and family—a false choice, in my view—is being thrust upon too many parents. In today's environment, for too many working parents, balancing work and family is a zero-sum game. It is time to change the equation, and that is what the Family and Medical Leave Act does.

It will provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to care for a newborn or newly adopted child, or a seriously ill family member; continue the employee's health benefits; and guarantee that person his or her job upon return. It gives families in need a chance to care for each other without having to risk economic disaster. It is, in short, one of the most important steps Congress can take to strengthen our Nation's families.

And, Mr. President, the Family and Medical Leave Act—despite assertions to the contrary—can strengthen American businesses as well. The General Accounting Office found that the requirements of this legislation will cost businesses just $5.30 per employee per year. That's it: $5.30.

In return, businesses have workers who do not forfeit serious family concerns when they walk through the door. A 1988 study examining State parental leave laws found that small business employment in those States with mandatory pregnancy leave policies grew at a rate 21 percent greater than small businesses in States without leave policies. The reason is simple: leave policies make workers feel safer and happier, which leads to a more productive work force and a more competitive business.

Mr. President, this legislation has been before the Senate several times. Despite the need to help our families and despite the attention to family values, I fear that this legislation will fail again to become law. I suspect that a Presidential veto—and our inability to override that veto—will preclude the Family and Medical Leave Act from enactment. America's families and our economy deserve better.

Mr. DeCONCINI. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the conference report on the Family and Medical Leave Act. Although conferees were named only last week, I am pleased that they were able to complete action on this report quickly. I understand that the report contains the same provisions that were included in the bill passed by the Senate last October.

This will be the second time that the Congress will send a bill to the President that provides working families with some job protection during the birth or adoption of a child or in the event of a serious illness of an immediate family member. He vetoed the first bill in 1990, which the House was unable to override the President's veto. I am hopeful that this year, with the attention that the administration has focused on family values, that the President will see his way clear to signing this bill into law.

Although I have always been a strong supporter of family leave, I would suggest to my colleagues that this legislation is more important now than it was when it was first introduced in 1985. Figures from the 1990 Census showed that 10.1 million American families were headed by single parents—a figure that is the highest in the world—and 86.5 percent of whom were women. The declining economy has forced many families to generate two incomes in order to keep their heads above water. It is projected that by the year 2000, three out of every four American children will have mothers in the work force.

Mr. President, working parents should not have to choose between a job they can't afford to lose and a child or family member who needs them. We can send a strong message to the working men and women of this country by enacting this legislation. We can send a message that says we care about protecting their jobs and their economic security without forcing them to compromise their responsibilities to their families.

We have all heard the arguments against this legislation. Representing a State with an economy that depends on small businesses, I can appreciate concerns that mandated family leave would be devastating to small businessowners. However, I would point out that this conference report is the product of an ongoing bipartisan effort to arrive at a reasonable compromise. The provisions of S. 5 allow an exemption for businesses with less than 50 employees. That is more than 95 percent of all employers. It also allows an employer some flexibility to substitute accrued paid leave for any part of the 12-week period and allows them to recapture health insurance premiums if the employee does not return to work.

While many industrialized nations provide their workers with some form of family leave, most of them do so with compensation. Workers in Germany and Japan—our toughest trade competitors—get 14 weeks of leave with pay. Even countries like Libya, Iran, and Cuba provide maternity leave with pay. S. 5 provides up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for the birth or adoption of a child or the serious illness of the employee or immediate family member. A General Accounting Office report estimates that the annual cost of providing unpaid family leave is $5.30 per employee—costs incurred primarily through the continuation of health insurance benefits for employees on unpaid leave. That seems a small price to pay for the measureless impact that time can have on a family welcoming a newborn or struggling through a serious illness.

President Bush, if your administration truly believes in preserving family values, you will sign this legislation. It reflects the needs of the changing American family—the one that can't afford to stay home during the first 12 weeks of a child's life without the fear of becoming unemployed or the family who can't afford in-home care for a sick parent or spouse, and can't afford to stay home to care for them. Children today are fighting against tremendous odds. The high risk of teen pregnancy, gang violence, drug and alcohol abuse are part of the world in which our young people live. The least we can do is give them the first 12 weeks of their lives with their parents. It is no guarantee that they will avoid these threats to their well-being, but it's a good start. I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the conference report on S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act. This legislation, which would provide for 12 weeks of unpaid leave for employees to care for a seriously ill child, spouse, or parent, or in the event of the birth or adoption of a child, is long overdue. As you know, similar legislation was passed by the Congress in 1990 but was, regrettably vetoed by President Bush.

It is important to note that the United States is the only industrialized country without a national family leave policy. In fact, almost every country in the world has a national parental leave requirement, including our most successful economic competitors in Western Europe and Asia, and these nations typically have requirements which go beyond those of the legislation we are considering today with respect to leave duration and income replacement. For example, in Europe, 5 to 6 months of paid leave is the norm for new mothers, and even Japan, which is often behind European nations in terms of labor standards, provides 12 to 14 weeks of partially paid leave with full job guarantees.

In contrast, we are attempting to once again pass a proposal today which merely provides job protection for workers with new babies or who are faced with family or medical emergencies. It does not require employers to pay such workers for this leave, and excludes entirely employers with fewer than 50 employees. The only thing that would be involved in this legislation that carries any cost would be the maintenance of health benefits. Other than that, this is unpaid leave. Workers are not automatically entitled to it and must, in fact, go through a very stringent screening process to demonstrate that they have a sick child, a sick spouse, or a sick parent, and that their presence is required in order to bring them back to health.

Mr. President, when in this country are we going to get to the point when parents are not put to the choice between looking after their sick child or keeping their job? How much longer are we going to go on confronting people with that dilemma? While we hear much talk from the White House and its supporters about family values and being pro-family, we are unable to enact legislation which would allow our citizens to meet pressing family obligations related to the birth, adoption, or the health of a child. Many employers have such arrangements with their employees, and I salute and commend them. However, there are sufficient instances in which this is not the case to make it reasonable to try to move legislation to address this critical issue.

The Family and Medical Leave Act will assist many Americans in balancing the demands of the workplace with the needs of their families. As a matter of plain human decency, it attempts to take some of the stress and strain off American families without placing a burden on American employers. I strongly support the passage of this important legislation and would urge my colleagues to join me in ensuring its passage and subsequent enactment.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise in support of final passage of the conference committee's agreement on S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1992.

I do so wishing this conference committee agreement would not have taken so long to come back to this body for its final approval.

And, I do so wishing the important issues in this debate could have been resolved in a way that would have produced a greater degree of consensus among Republicans and Democrats, between the President and the Congress, and among America's employers and their employees, all of whom must balance workplace and family responsibilities every day of their lives.

That has been my personal goal in working on this legislation over the past two Congresses—to reach bipartisan, cooperative consensus that targets effective solutions to our most pressing problems. That continues to be my goal today.

In achieving that goal, I do not believe that America's workers and their families deserve to be treated like election-year cannon balls, dragged out and fired in a manner that may document differences among candidates, but that leaves a high national priority still unresolved.

But, despite these misgivings about tactics and timing, Mr. President, I intend to vote to approve this conference committee agreement, for the same reasons I supported the Senate's version of this bill on final passage.

I support this agreement because I believe we are long past the time when national policy should be on the side of the millions of workers and parents who must juggle their jobs and family responsibilities in ways our parents' generation never knew.

I also intend to vote to approve this conference agreement because I represent a State that has been at the forefront of helping workers and parents meet their often conflicting responsibilities at home and at work.

Members and others who have followed this issue closely know that I introduced a family and medical leave bill of my own about 18 months ago.

That legislation was based in part on this bill and, in part on a Minnesota law that allows employees to use sick leave benefits to care for sick family members.

I continue to believe that approach represents a positive alternative to the largely untested new medical leave benefit we are mandating in this bill.

Experience tells us that most workers need relatively short periods of easily accessible time off to deal with all the obligations they face as members of a family.

And, common sense also tells us that having these periods of time off be paid leave will give this new benefit even greater value—especially for low-wage workers.

While some important changes have been made in the original S. 5 to deal with very real issues of concern to smaller employers, I also continue to believe the binding arbitration amendment I offered on the Senate bill would ease its implementation and speed resolution of disputes that will inevitably arise.

The beneficiaries of this legislation should be workers, their children and their family members—not lawyers.

Where differences over interpretation occur, those differences deserve to be resolved quickly. I believe my amendment would have brought that goal much closer to reality.

But, despite my preference for the initiatives I have offered, I intend to vote for this conference agreement because it is the vehicle now before us that assures greater balance in the lives of workers and parents of young children.

I believe it represents an important step forward in affirming not only the value of children but also the important obligations that family members inevitably must have to each other.

Finally, I want to pay special tribute to my distinguished colleague from Connecticut, who has given this issue so much of his time and attention over many, many years.

And, I want to thank my distinguished colleagues from Missouri and Kentucky, whose efforts to address some very legitimate concerns of employers has made it possible to me and others to support the legislation we now have before us.

The time has come, Mr. President, to make a strong statement about the value of families and of children, and a strong statement about the contribution that society as a whole must make, to helping families do what they do best by taking care of each other.

I believe this legislation takes an important step down that long road. I believe it deserves our support. I'm proud to say it continues to have mine.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to support the conference report on S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1991.

This legislation is long overdue. All our major competitors, including Germany, Japan, and Canada, as well as many Third World nations, have recognized that they have a national interest in helping families balance work and family responsibilities. It is time for the United States to do the same.

According to a survey by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, 82 percent of all employers do not provide leave to care for sick children; 85 percent provide no leave for elder care; and 75 percent offer no parental leave for fathers. Only six States and about a quarter of employers offer leave time for adoption, even though such leave is required by most adoption agencies when the child being adopted is an infant.

This bill provides 12 weeks of unpaid—unpaid—leave for childbirth, adoption, or serious illness of an immediate family member. For parents having a child, or wanting to adopt a child, or for families dealing with a terminal illness, this legislation provides an essential opportunity.

And what of the burden on employers? According to GAO estimates, the total cost of this legislation to employers will be around $5.30 per covered employee per year. Some evidence on this question comes to us from the State of Oregon which implemented a parental and pregnancy leave law in 1988. In a study commissioned by the Oregon's Bureau of Labor and Industries, 88 percent of the employers found the bill to be easy to implement and the cost modest.

Mr. President, this bill is long past due, and I urge the President to sign the Family and Medical Leave Act into law.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of the conference report of the Family and Medical Leave Act. It is a much needed job protection bill which removes the potential penalty of an employee of having to choose between his or her job and family needs.

This legislation recognizes the realities of the changing American family. It recognizes the dramatic increase of single-parent households and two-income families.

The reality of the American family is no longer the idyllic dream of a bygone age. The reality is that our Nation is comprised of hard-working people who, in the most difficult times of their lives, have to make extreme choices between economics and personal imperatives.

Such choices place an undue burden on our citizens. The Family and Medical Leave Act asserts a reasonable balance between the needs of business to retain valued employees, and employees to expeditiously fulfill their family obligations in times of crisis and need while maintaining their commitments to their employers.

I have listened to the arguments on both sides of this issue. Those opposed to this legislation claim costs to business would increase and that it creates unnecessary regulatory burdens. However, studies commissioned by the administration clearly show that this reasoning is both unrealistic and unfounded.

We have debated the costs to business, but I ask, what of the costs to affected employees and our economy? In these times of economic uncertainty and distress, the Family and Medical Leave Act will add a needed measure of confidence in the workplace.

Finally, I consider it a tragedy that our Nation is currently the only western industrialized nation without such a policy. Ultimately we must ask the question, if our competitors are able to afford much more expansive policies of paid leave, can we not afford a policy which would allow an employee to take a potential 12 weeks of unpaid leave and would only apply to firms of more than 50 employees? The answer, as far as I am concerned, is that family and medical leave policies enhance our competitive strengths asserting the value of every employee.

Mr. President, we have come too far to turn our backs on the needs of our families. Thanks to the perseverance and dedication of my good friend from Connecticut, we are finally on the brink of enacting this measure.

It is my hope that the administration will reconsider their previous objections to the bill and reconsider the veto threat. Our families are counting on us.

AUTHORIZATION OF MULTILATERAL ACTION IN BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the clerk will report Senate Resolution 330.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 330) relating to authorization of a multilateral action in Bosnia-Hercegovina under Article 42 of the United Nations Charter.

The Senate resumed consideration of the resolution.

Pending:

Stevens amendment No. 2929, to express the sense of the Senate regarding authorization of multilateral action in Bosnia-Hercegovina under article 42 of the United Nations Charter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. AKAKA). The majority manager on the resolution controls 15 minutes for debate. The Republican leader controls 10 minutes. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. WARNER] controls 5 minutes. In addition, there will be 30 minutes divided equally in the usual form on the Stevens amendment No. 2929.

Who yields time?

Mr. PELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. PELL. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, 47 years ago, in San Francisco, there were a group of us discussing theoretically how peace can be brought on the face of the Earth and how arrangements could be made to ensure that there would be peace.

I would like to read into the RECORD the names of those who were working on the Committee on Enforcement Arrangements at the San Francisco conference. We had at that time as chairman, Camilo Ponce Enriquez, of Ecuador; raporteur, Joseph Paul-Boncour, of France; secretary, William T.R. Fox; assistant secretary, Christian de Margerie; assistant secretaries, Ward Allen, Hugh D. Farley, CLAIBORNE PELL.

We were to take from an organization that had failed, the League of Nations, lessons to make a structure that would survive and could enforce peace.

I think one of the good things about the debate on the Bosnia resolution has been that all of us who believe in the United Nations, who are U.N. afficionados are really very pleased to see the way articles 39 to 45 have been brought into the general discussion of the Senate. More than at any other time that I can recall in the last 47 years, these articles have been discussed. More reliance is being placed on them. And to those of us who believe that the United Nations can provide the means to keep the peace, enforce the peace, it has brought a good deal of satisfaction. I think this is one of the fallouts of this debate. I am not sure the central part of the debate has been all that productive. We are, in many cases, duplicating what is being done by the President. But what is important is the reference and the reliance that we are placing on the United Nations and on the chapter 7 action with respect to peace, threats to the peace, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression.

I think, too, some of us, as we look through this little booklet, Officials of the U.N. Conference and International Organization, San Francisco, 1945, could take great interest in it and satisfaction in seeing so many of the names of the young people who were there, who got more responsible jobs afterward. The young people who were there were almost entirely young officers who were in the allied forces, young officers. We were in civilian clothes for the first time in several years. I know my wife had not seen me in civilian clothes, except pajamas, until the San Francisco conference when we took off our uniforms.

I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Rhode Island. I want to speak on the resolution concerning what is happening in Bosnia.

And I thank the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] for his leadership.

Mr. President, sometimes I listen to debates on the floor of the Senate and it is easy for me to muster up quite a bit of indignation. It is not personal. If I hear Senators arguing for tax breaks for people that do not need tax breaks, or for large corporations that are doing fine economically, but at the same time hear that we do not have money to feed hungry children, it is easy for me to feel indignation. The debate is clear; I know where I stand.

Other times on the floor of the Senate we have debates, and political truth is very illusive, and knowing the right thing to do is very difficult. I believe that has been the case with this debate on what is happening in Bosnia today.

I have listened to Senators like Senator MCCAIN from Arizona, and when they speak and they say we have to be careful to enunciate our objectives, that we have to be careful to know what the means are to achieve those objectives, and that we have to make sure that we are not involving young people in our country—men and women—in some kind of quagmire, I listen to them very carefully. They speak, I think, with great, great moral authority, and I take their words very seriously.

Mr. President, as I have analyzed this debate, I think there are probably two central dynamics to it. One of them has to do with the history of Vietnam and what happened in Lebanon and not wanting to repeat those mistakes again. And many, many Senators have been eloquent about that. But there is also I think another historical experience and time in the history of the world that is our reference point. And that is the Holocaust.

Mr. President, when I was a teacher I used to remind my students that the way we think about politics is very personal. It has much to do with our parents, our families, our communities, maybe our religion or personal experiences that have happened to us. In my particular case that is certainty so.

I have here in my hands a book by David Wyman called "Abandonment of the Jews." Preface: "Between June 1941 and May 1945, 5 to 6 million Jews perished at the hands of the Nazis and their collaborators," and then he goes on in this book to talk about the abandonment of the Jews, that the world knew but the world did not react.

Mr. President, when I see on TV the pictures of screaming children and dying children and I hear about the war camps and about ethnic purification, it sends chills down my spine. And I believe, though I take this debate so seriously and I know people argue in good faith on both sides, that sometimes silence is betrayal. Sometimes in the history of the world and the history of humankind, silence is betrayal. And I believe this is such a time and that is why I feel so strongly that we must support this resolution.

Mr. President, let me conclude by saying there are some who argue, "Well, but you have to, Senator WELLSTONE, talk about this in terms of the framework of our national interest." It is in the national interest of my country, the United States of America, to speak out when we hear discussions about ethnic purification, to speak out against these camps, to speak out against the torture of people. It is in the national interest of my country, the United States of America, to occupy high moral ground, to not turn our gaze away, and to not turn our backs away from people who are suffering.

Mr. President, we must pass this resolution. We must not be silent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time yielded to the Senator from Minnesota has expired.

The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it is my understanding this Senator has 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is incorrect. The Republican leader has 10 minutes.

Mr. DOLE. And the Senator from Virginia has 5 minutes, which I claim, because he is not able to be here.

I yield 10 of those 15 minutes to our colleague from West Virginia, the President pro tempore, Senator BYRD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank my friend, the distinguished Republican leader, Mr. DOLE.

Mr. President, the resolution that is before the Senate represents the best and worst in us, the willingness of Americans to refuse to countenance the moral outrages of bullies and oppressors—here the Serbs—on the one hand, and the lack of clarity and focus on how we will match our hopes with decisive acts that can be supportable by the American people over an extended period of time, on the other.

I am reminded by the situation in the Balkans, and by the intent of the resolution, to the situation we confronted in Lebanon in the middle half of the 1980's, a situation which ended in a sharp loss of the lives of hundreds of United States marines, a hasty withdrawal of American forces and the virtual extinction of United States influence in Lebanon from that time through today. Have we not learned about the political results of overreaching? Instead of bringing our influence to bear on a situation in a way which we can sustain at home over the long run, we are in the process here of raising expectations. These are expectations that I believe we cannot deliver on, and in failing to do so we erode the leadership of America in the world. The result may well be the unintended reverse of the laudable goals of the authors of this resolution.

It is fairly clear what is needed to bring peace in Bosnia. It is the presence of a peacekeeping force, or whatever you want to label the army that will have to be inserted into that conflict, of thousands, perhaps a hundred or more thousands of troops. There could be loss of lives in such an enterprise. What is our purpose with this resolution? It is the policing of the ethnic hatreds, now in the form of Serbian atrocities and aggression in Bosnia, in the age old cauldron of ethnic divisions that we call the Balkans. The Balkans beckon us to enter the fray, and none here can say how many lives will be expended in an attempt to bring peace to the warring States of what was once Yugoslavia and what was once Illyria, going back to the years before Christ. The Battle of Pydna was fought in 168 BC. And the result of that battle of Pydna was the extinction of the Antigonid dynasty in Macedon forever. It is a region long accustomed to wars of conquest.

The question here is simple: What kind of forces and levels of commitment should we embark on that the American people will sustain? To what extent can we impose our will in a situation that is inherently the business of the European states to police? We are debating this measure here today because the states of Europe are unwilling to police the conflict with the use of their ground armies. That is the simple reality. No amount of fancy language about U.N. Security Council meetings and resolutions will erase that reality. No amount of brave talk about the potency of American airpower to take out artillery pieces or other weaponry can paper over the military problem. Airpower will not do it. Airpower has never done it. It did not do it in Vietnam. It did not do it in Lebanon. It did not do it in the sands of Kuwait, where we had deployed 500,000 personnel.

This resolution would be more to the point if it said, Europe, do not expect America to save you from your history now. You, Europe, have to take history by the throat. We will support you, but you have to lead. We will play a supporting role, we can provide some logistics, some airpower, some naval gunfire support—but this is all marginalia. Somebody has to be on the ground to enforce the lines of entry and distribution of humanitarian aid and to break the way to the camps. Someone has to crash the gates of those concentration camps or whatever you wish to call them, and put them under the auspices of the Red Cross or some other organization which will save the inmates from perishing. Someone has to wish to give up their children for the safety of the Balkans. Do Senators really believe that the American people are prepared to give up their children in a place we call the Balkans, to take the right side in nationalistic hatreds, wars, bloodshed, and atrocities which, sadly, are part and parcel of the long history of that region?

It was the same in the days of the Roman conquests before the end of the Republic, and during the centuries of the empire. There is where the most warlike, the fiercest warriors came from—Illyria, Illyricum—there and from Germany.

So, Mr. President, I oppose this resolution because it appears to sanction the use of U.S. ground forces within a multinational force under United Nations auspices to "ensure the provision of humanitarian relief and to gain access for United Nations and International Red Cross personnel to refugee and prisoners of war camps." Second, such a force apparently would be responsible for implementing a ceasefire plan "which includes placing heavy weapons belonging to all factions in Bosnia-Hercegovina under U.N. supervision." As presently drafted, unless European ground forces are committed in substantial numbers to these purposes, the resolution accomplishes nothing but to cut the wires connecting this body to political reality.

The question that this body faces is the limits of its power to establish a new security order that will keep the peace in the Balkans. This conflict in Bosnia is not an isolated event. The problem is far deeper. The Balkans have traditionally been an area of political turmoil and violence. The explosion of nationalisms throughout the region and the interventions of the great powers in the 19th century have caused the region to be dubbed the powder keg of Europe. It was this powder keg which ignited World War I. The problem is then, age-old, and it is this: How can we establish a new security order in the Balkans and dampen the nationalistic conflicts of the region which have again reemerged in the absence of the discipline of the bipolar bloc politics of the cold war? It is not just the Serbs and the Croats. Yugoslavia is not the beginning and end of the problem. There are serious ethnic tensions between Hungarians and Romanians in Romania. The status of Turkish minorities are a source of heated controversy in Bulgaria and in Greece. There is the age-old question of the future of Macedonia—about which I spoke earlier—which could serve as a flashpoint dragging into war Serbia, Greece, and Bulgaria. Yugoslavia is only the opening gun of what could well be a spreading zone of instability. It is a test of the political will of the U.N. Security Council, to some extent, and to that point this resolution points the finger in one right direction. But, more fundamentally, Mr. President, it is a test of the European Community, the so-called European Community, and its willingness to establish mechanisms of a new security order in the Balkans. America cannot do it for them, this body cannot ask the Nation to impose its will on a continent that will not even begin such a process. It can call the attention of Europe to its responsibilities, but it cannot do much more than that.

Mr. President, are we going to be the policeman of the world?

Yes, my heartstrings are torn, too, when I see on television and in the printed media what is going on. But we cannot police the world, Mr. President.

What is going on in Somalia is likewise troubling. But do we intend to do in Somalia what we are advocating that we do now in Bosnia?

Where does this all stop? What is to be the cost? What is to be the human cost? What is to be the cost in treasure?

We have a $400 billion deficit this year. We anticipate a $400 billion deficit next year. The war in the Persian Gulf cost over $60 billion. Who is there to say that an adventure in former Illyriaum will not cost many times that amount?

Mr. President, let us think carefully before we vote today. This is just the first step. The second step will be when the President comes back and asks us to put up the money and the manpower. If we do, then we are heading into a bottomless pit. If we refuse, then we will be viewed as hypocritical.

Let us remember the words of Croesus to Cyrus, "In peace, the sons do bury their fathers, but in war, the fathers do bury their sons."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, what is the time situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island has 6 minutes. The Republican leader has 5 minutes.

Mr. PELL. I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, each morning for the past week we have awakened to new reports of the horrors that are taking place in Serb detention camps in the former Yugoslav Republic of Bosnia.

We hear of Croats and Slavic Muslims being beaten, raped, and killed, or left to die without food, water, or protection from the elements.

Now we are hearing reports of Bosnian Serbs suffering in camps.

News of detention camps, prisoners packed into boxcars, and ethnic cleansing brings to mind the horrors of World War II Nazi concentration camps. And those of us who served in World War II are very concerned about this, but we feel that history has given us a second chance.

To characterize this conflict—as some have—as an age-old regional blood feud that vents itself every 50 or 60 years is cynical. We must move beyond the past in a new world of all pervasive communication and rapid change.

People know about everything now. We did not know about everything in world war II as we were finishing it.

The incredible toll in human lives and suffering that we have witnessed should spur more concrete and constructive efforts.

I do not rise on the floor today to attack others or to place blame, but it must be said that there is a moral imperative before us. This situation cries out for leadership, and we must provide that leadership now. Soon it will be too late.

This is precisely the kind of situation that the United Nations was set up to handle. I was in the U.S. Navy in 1945 and 1946 in the bay area of San Francisco when they were signing the U.N. Charter, and I remember the debate over the multilateral use of force.

What the international community was trying to set up was a structure to handle regional conflicts. It was a world without superpowers at that time. The structure was to include the imposition of sanctions and other economic and diplomatic measures, to be followed by military force as a last resort.

Not that U.N. forces were to take sides in civil wars or regional struggles. The U.N. troops were to be the peacekeepers and the custodians of international order.

Unfortunately, the United Nations was never able to make good on its collective security mandate. And those of us who were living then were watching that debate in the San Francisco area as we were preparing to board ships for the assault in the final part of the war which we were only saved from by the peacekeeping in 1946—or actually the military victory.

The rigid cold war of the post-war world provided 40 years of vetoes by Soviets, Chinese, and yes, the United States in the U.N. Security Council.

I would say to my colleagues: History has given us—and the United Nations—a second chance. An opportunity to strengthen the United Nations and broaden the international community's ability to deal with these kinds of regional conflicts is now before us. I repeat: This is not a call for immediate U.S. military action. The resolution before us requires nothing. But all options available to the international community should be considered.

The leadership of Serbia must be put on notice once and for all that we will not allow this behavior to continue. We seek narrow objectives. Humanitarian relief efforts must go forward, and the International Red Cross must have access to all prison and detention camps.

The United States has traditionally been a beacon of hope to people around the world. We must demonstrate in no uncertain terms that the new world order will be guided not by cynicism and expediency but by the principles of morality and humanity. A test case is before us. I hope that we will rise to the challenge.

Mr. President, just as a final word, I knew well some of the members of the Council Five of Yugoslavia, particularly Anton Zelic, who ruled after Tito. We are not taking about a military force into the mountains of Yugoslavia. We are talking about narrow, defined actions as set forth in articles 42 through 44 of the United Nations Charter. So I hope this will happen and I hope we will meet the challenge.

I thank the Senator from Rhode Island for giving me this time, and I thank the Senator from Kansas for having given his leadership time.

I recognize the problem of the Senator from Alaska. I hope we can reach a bipartisan position on this because this is our chance, again.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise in support of this bipartisan resolution. I know it is a very troublesome resolution. It is one that I think is very difficult for some Members to decide. But I think just to make certain, there has been a lot of debate about Bosnia—more than, I think, anybody anticipated. There was also a lot of debate about Yugoslavia itself and the collapse of Yugoslavia.

We had a lot of debate yesterday which is not even related to the text of the resolution.

So I would just like to point out two things and remind my colleagues of two things: This is not an authorization for the use of force. That is No. 1.

No. 2, this is not a binding amendment. It is a sense of the Senate. The Senate has passed by voice vote—in fact the Senator from New York [Mr. D'AMATO] pointed out—in June—a much more rigorous resolution. We pointed out to the United Nations that it ought to have a budget and it ought to have a plan for intervention. This much tougher sense-of-the Senate resolution passed by voice vote.

I ask unanimous consent that copies of the previous resolutions be made a part of the RECORD so somebody reading the entire RECORD will understand. We have done this in the past. Maybe we should not have. Maybe there should have been a focus at that time. But things have a way, sometimes, of sort of slipping through the Senate.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, June 12, 1992

S. RES. 306

Whereas continuing hostilities in the former republics of Yugoslavia are killing thousands of noncombatants, displacing hundreds of thousands of civilians, and causing massive destruction and starvation;

Whereas there is a threat of ever-widening conflict in the republics of the former nation of Yugoslavia, which conflict could extent to other nations in the region;

Whereas resolutions of the United Nations Security Council denouncing the hostilities in the former republics of Yugoslavia, and demanding that they cease, have not been heeded;

Whereas the United Nations Security Council, under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, has adopted Resolution 757, imposing sanctions on the Yugoslavia government, and requesting that the Secretary General work to create a security zone to assure unimpeded delivery of humanitarian supplies to Sarajevo and other destinations in Bosnia and Hercegovina;

Whereas the United Nations Security Council may, under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter, make plans for the application of armed force to maintain or restore international peace and security, and the United States and other permanent members of the Security Council may veto resolutions of the Security Council;

Whereas officials of the United Nations and the United States have not determined what resources would be required to enforce a cessation of hostilities and bring peace to the former republics of Yugoslavia and, specifically, to enforce Resolution 757;

Whereas knowledge of the resources and military forces needed for such a task would enable the United States and other nations to make an informed judgment about how to take such action;

Whereas the process of devising a plan and budget for such action could, in itself, signal greater resolve at the United Nations to take action; and

Whereas the United States cannot and should not be the world's policeman, but is the one nation with the moral authority and military strength to provide leadership at the United Nations for stronger international coalition efforts to enforce peace; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate calls upon the President of the United States to urge the United Nations Security Council to direct the Secretary General of the United Nations to provide a plan and budget for such intervention as may be necessary to enforce the Security Council resolution seeking cessation of hostilities in the former republics of Yugoslavia.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit this resolution to the President.

[From the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Apr. 29, 1992]

SENATE RESOLUTION 290—REGARDING THE AGGRESSION AGAINST BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA AND CONDITIONING UNITED STATES RECOGNITION OF SERBIA

Mr. PRESSLER (for Mr. DOLE, for himself, Mr. PELL, Mr. HELMS, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. GORE, Mr. GORTON, Mr. PRESSLER, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. GARN, Mr. SEYMOUR, and Mr. MACK) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 290

Whereas from February 19–March 1, 1992, the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina held a referendum in which 99.7% of the citizens who participated voted for independence from the former Yugoslavia;

Whereas on April 6, 1992, the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina was granted diplomatic recognition by the European Community and on April 7, 1992, was recognized by the United States;

Whereas since April of 1992 the Serb-led Yugoslav Army and Serbian militants have been engaged in brutal military action against the government and people of the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina resulting in the death of innocent civilians, the diplacement of tens of thousands of persons, and the destruction of homes, schools, mosques, synagogues and churches;

Whereas the attack on Bosnia-Hercegovina follows aggression against the newly independent Republic of Croatia which resulted in the death of more than 10,000 people, the displacement of more than 700,000 persons, and the occupation of a significant portion of Croatia's territory;

Whereas the attacks on Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia by the Yugoslav Army and Serb militants constitute an attempt by the Government of the Republic of Serbia to alter borders by the use of force;

Whereas according to an official with the United Nations High Commissioner on Refugees, Serbian-led forces are delaying, diverting, and stealing humanitarian relief supplies donated to Bosnia-Hercegovina by the United States and other countries;

Whereas the Serbian government has maintained a brutal and repressive regime of martial law in Kosova and deprived the two million Albanians of Kosova of their political and human rights, including their right to self-determination;

Whereas Serbia's repressive policies in Kosova and the aggression of the Serb-led Yugoslav Army in Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia constitute serious violations of the Helsinki Accords and the Helsinki Final Act;

Whereas the United States, the European Community and the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe have condemned the aggression of the Serbian-led Yugoslav Army and Serbian irregulars, as well as the martial law regime in Kosova;

Whereas, on April 23, 1992, 25,000 Serbian citizens in Belgrade participated in an antiwar protest;

Whereas, extensive international diplomatic efforts, and the deployment of United Nations monitors and peacekeeping forces, have failed to achieve the withdrawal of Serbian-led forces and the restoration of peace in the Republics of Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia;

Whereas, the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia has ceased to exist: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) The United States should hold accountable the Government of Serbia for the attacks on and occupation of the Republics of Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia, and for the extensive and systematic abuse of human rights in Kosova.

(2) The United States should withhold diplomatic recognition of Serbia and its ally Montenegro, who proclaimed themselves the "Federal Republic of Yugoslavia" on April 28, 1992, until Serbia ceases its aggression against the independent states of Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia; withdraws its forces from Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia; and halts its brutal repression of the Albanian people in Kosova and denial of the right to self-determination.

(3) The United States should actively encourage its allies to follow the same course.

S. RES. 176

Whereas, following the Declaration of Independence by the Republic of Slovenia on June 25, the conflict between the Yugoslav Army and the Slovenian Government and its citizens resulted in over one hundred casualties before a settlement was reached on July 10 regarding the withdrawal of the Yugoslav Army;

Whereas, over four hundred people have been killed in Croatia, including civilians, as a result of fighting that began after the Republic of Croatia declared its independence on June 25, 1991, and despite several attempted ceasefires;

Whereas, according to the Department of State and the European Community Ministers, the Serbian Republic leadership is actively supporting and encouraging the use of force in Croatia by Serbian militants and the Yugoslav Military;

Whereas, according to the State Department and the European Community observers in Yugoslavia, the Federal Yugoslav Military units in Croatia have not been serving as an impartial guarantor of a ceasefire, but have been actively supporting local Serbian forces violating the ceasefire, and causing loss of life to the citizens they are constitutionally bound to protect;

Whereas, the Republic of Serbia is continuing its brutal repression of the Albanian population in the Province of Kosova which has been under martial law for more than three years;

Whereas, the European Community is actively engaged in efforts to observe and mediate the conflict in Croatia and convened a peace conference on September 7, 1991;

Whereas, the European Community sponsored peace conference on Yugoslavia does not include an Albanian representative from the Province of Kosova; and

Whereas, continued violence and unrest in Yugoslavia will jeopardize the stability and security of Central Europe: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate condemns the policies of violent aggression perpetrated by Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the Yugoslav Army and Serbian extremist guerrillas in Croatia;

(2) the Senate condemns the continuing and increasing repression against the Albanian population in the Province of Kosova;

(3) the Senate urges the administration to base its policy toward the six republics and two provinces of Yugoslavia on the democratic principles enunciated by Secretary of State on September 4, 1991, with respect to the Soviet Union;

(4) the deteriorating situation in Yugoslavia requires the United States to intensify efforts to resolve this crisis;

(5) the Senate commends the European Community for its efforts to mediate the crisis in Yugoslavia;

(6) the Senate urges the European Community to fully include an Albanian representative from the Province of Kosova in the European Community sponsored peace conference in order that a just and genuine settlement to the present crisis in Yugoslavia may be achieved and that potential violence in Kosova may be averted;

(7) the Senate calls on the administration to press for the inclusion of an Albanian representative form the Province of Kosova in the European Community peace conference; and

(8) the Senate urges the administration to raise the issue of Serbian Government sponsored aggression against the Croatian Government and the citizens of the Republic of Croatia, as well as against the two million Albanians in the Province of Kosova, at the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe meeting on the Human Dimension which convened in Moscow on September 10, 1991.

Whereas in 1990 the republics of Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, Macedonia and Slovenia elected non-communist governments committed to democracy and free market economics;

Whereas in 1990 the republics of Montenegro and Serbia elected communist governments;

Whereas in 1990 the provinces of Kosova and Vojvodina were stripped of their autonomous status by the government of the Republic of Serbia and thereby denied representation to the collective presidency of Yugoslavia;

Whereas the leaders of Slovenia and Croatia and the other Yugoslav republics have been engaged in negotiations on the future structure of Yugoslavia since October, 1990;

Whereas these negotiations have not included representatives from the provinces of Kosova and Vojvodina;

Whereas on June 25, 1991, the republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared their independence;

Whereas the Yugoslav Army responded to these declarations by mobilizing and deploying tanks and troops in Slovenia, Croatia and Kosova;

Whereas the unwillingness of the Yugoslav central government and the military authorities to negotiate with the democratically elected leadership of Slovenia and Croatia has led to unnecessary bloodshed;

Whereas there have been numerous reports of deaths of civilians, policemen, militiamen and soldiers as a result of fighting between Yugoslav Army forces and militia forces of the republics of Slovenia and Croatia, and as a result of repression against the Albanian population in Kosova: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate supports the principles of democratization and self-determination for the six republics and two provinces of Yugoslavia;

(2) the Senate urges that the United States use its leadership to ensure that concerns regarding the restoration of political stability in Yugoslavia will not preclude the chief objective of promoting and securing democracy and self-determination;

(3) the Senate condemns the use of force by the Yugoslav authorities against civilians;

(4) the Senate urges the peaceful resolution of political differences in Yugoslavia and the inclusion of Kosova and Vojvodina in that process;

(5) the Senate calls on the Yugoslav Army to refrain from obstructing the functioning of the democratic governments of Slovenia and Croatia and calls on the government of Serbia to cease from using force against the Albanian population of Kosova;

(6) the Senate calls for free and fair elections to be held in the provinces of Kosova and Vojvodina;

(7) the Senate urges the President to explore means of increasing direct diplomatic, political and economic ties with the democratic governments of the republics of Croatia and Slovenia;

(8) the Senate urges the State Department to expand direct contacts with the leaders of the democratic opposition of Kosova and Vojvodina; and

(9) the Senate recommends that the administration shape its foreign assistance, trade and technical assistance programs to support the republics of Croatia and Slovenia and the other democratic republics in Yugoslavia, and to encourage democracy in the rest of Yugoslavia.

S. RES. 147

Whereas since May 15, 1991, Government of the Republic of Serbia has blocked the constitutional rotation of the Federal Presidency of Yugoslavia, effectively leaving Yugoslavia without a President and commander-in-chief of the Yugoslav Army;

Whereas on June 25, 1991, the democratic Republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared their independence;

Whereas in conjunction with these declarations of independence, Croatia and Slovenia have indicated their willingness to continue dialogue and negotiations with the other Republics of Yugoslavia on the future of Yugoslavia;

Whereas on June 26, 1991, in response to these declarations, the Yugoslav Central Government, despite its lack of constitutional authority, ordered the Yugoslav Army to deploy troops and tanks along the Slovenian borders, to seize border posts, and to mobilize Yugoslav Army troops and tanks in Croatia;

Whereas the Yugoslav Army is presently carrying out those instructions;

Whereas there are reports of growing numbers of deaths of civilians, militiamen, policemen, and soldiers as a result of fighting between Yugoslav Army forces and militia forces of the Republics of Slovenia and Croatia; and

Whereas in its June 26 statement on Yugoslavia, the United States Department of State asserted that, "The United States strongly opposes the use or threat of force to resolve political differences in Yugoslavia": Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(a) condemns the use of force to resolve political differences within Yugoslavia;

(b) calls on the Yugoslav Central Government to cease using the Yugoslav Army to address the current crisis, and instead urges the central government to respond positively and immediately to domestic and international calls for negotiations leading to a peaceful settlement; and

(c) calls on the Government of the Republic of Serbia to stop blocking the rotation of the Yugoslav Presidency.

S. RES. 106

Whereas in 1990 four of the six republics in Yugoslavia elected non-Communist democratic governments;

Whereas in 1990 two republics in Yugoslavia elected Communist governments;

Whereas in 1990 the provinces of Kosova and Vojvodina were stripped of their autonomous status by the government of the Republic of Serbia;

Whereas the United States Department of State's 1990 annual report on human rights state that, "in the province of Kosova, Serbian authorities continued and intensified repressive measures that featured in 1990 thousands of political arrests, tens of thousands of politically motivated job dismissals, and widespread police violence against ethnic Albanians."

Whereas the Yugoslav Army has threatened the use of military force to undermine the democratic republics of Yugoslavia and to suppress human rights in the province of Kosova and elsewhere;

Whereas despite continuous and good-faith efforts by the democratic republics to come to a negotiated agreement on the future structure of Yugoslavia, there remains a threat of a military crackdown; and

Whereas the political situation in Yugoslavia is highly uncertain: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(a) United States policy toward Yugoslavia should be based on support for democracy and human rights for all of the people of Yugoslavia;

(b) the Senate calls on Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to cease all repressive policies against the Albanian population of Kosova;

(c) the Senate calls on Yugoslav President Jovic and the Yugoslav Army to refrain from the use of coercive tactics and force against the democratically elected governments of the republics of Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, Macedonia and Slovenia;

(d) the Senate notes that the criteria established in Section 599A of Public Law 101-513 have not been met by the Yugoslav and Serbian governments; and

(e) In the event of a military crackdown by the Yugoslav Army or the imposition of martial law in Yugoslavia, the President should immediately suspend all economic and technical benefits provided by the United States to Yugoslavia.

Mr. DOLE. This resolution, does not direct the President to do anything. It basically reflects the President's efforts to bring relief to the people of Bosnia, and in effect, urges him to continue to pursue the policy on which he is already embarked.

And, I might say for the record that both President Bush and Secretary Baker have personally indicated to me that they do not object to this resolution.

Mr. President, I would hope, that as this resolution is considered we keep in mind the desperate plight of the Bosnian people.

We are getting used to the words "starvation" and "concentration camps" and some may be getting accustomed to the pictures we see on television or in the newspapers. But there is no doubt about it, particularly for the Moslems and the Croats, it has been a living hell for some time.

It is indeed hard to believe. Little did we think that at the end of the cold war we would find not a new world order in the Balkans, but a new world horror. A new world horror in which savage barbarism and brutal dictatorship—unseen on the European continent for 50 years—is threatening to take hold of the Balkans and destroy whole nations and peoples. This time, however, Serbian President Milosevic is to blame.

Yet, while this has been going on in the middle of Europe, the Europeans have done little to prevent the spread of Belgrade's terror. The Europeans have done just enough, just enough to ward off feelings of guilt—guilt for not taking steps to stop Milosevic in his tracks when he first ordered the attack on Slovenia over a year ago.

What are we going to do about it? We, obviously, cannot be the world's policemen. We obviously cannot get involved in every ethnic conflict. There are going to be lots of them. There are many right now. Some would say, if you are going to do this with this part of the world, what about Somalia? Why are they different? Why can we not do the same for Somalia?

My view is we talk about a new world order. But, we have not seen a new world order yet for the Balkans. We do not know precisely what the Serbs have in mind. And there is a lot of confusion, I would say—not in defense of the Serbs but as a matter of fact. There may be other things happening that are not inspired by the Serbs, not initiated by the Serbs. But they were the aggressor.

Maybe we were a little slow 6 months, 8 months, 10 months, 12 months ago, both in Congress and in the administration, by not sending a strong signal at that time. I think the Serbs may have assumed, well, maybe we can do anything; nobody seems to care in the world. But that has changed, too.

Milosevic, the Serbian President, is the last hard-line Communist dictator in Europe. He certainly has not indicated any willingness to cooperate at all.

So we are going to pass this resolution. I do not believe Milosevic is over there trembling, waiting for the Senate to act. My view is he could care less. It probably will not make any difference.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point the text of the United Nation's draft resolution on the Balkan crisis, which is not very strong. It is not very strong at all. But it is an indication that the international community wants to do something about this very difficult problem.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXT OF THE U.N.'S DRAFT RESOLUTION ON THE BALKAN CRISIS

UNITED NATIONS, August 10.—Following is a draft of the Security Council resolution being considered to authorize the use of force to insure that aid is delivered to Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The Security Council,

Underlining once again the imperative need for an urgent negotiated political solution to the situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina,

Recognizing that the provision of humanitarian assistance in Bosnia-Herzegovina is an important element in the Council's effort to restore international peace and security in the area,

Commending the United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR) for its continuing action in support of the relief operation in Sarajevo and other parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina,

Deeply disturbed by the situation that now prevails in Sarajevo, which has severely complicated UNPROFOR's efforts to fulfill its mandate to insure the security and functioning of Sarajevo Airport and the delivery of humanitarian assistance in Sarajevo and other parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina pursuant to resolutions 743, 749, 761, and 764, and the reports of the Secretary General cited therein,

Dismayed by the continuation of conditions that impede the delivery of humanitarian supplies to destinations within Bosnia-Herzegovina and the consequent suffering of the people of that country,

Deeply concerned by reports of abuses against civilians imprisoned in camps, prisons, and detention centers, Determined to establish as soon as possible the necessary conditions for the delivery of humanitarian assistance wherever needed in Bosnia-Herzegovina, in conformity with the mandate given by resolution 764 of 13 July 1992,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Reaffirms its demands that all parties to the conflict immediately cease all military activity in Bosnia-Herzegovina;

2. Calls upon all states to take nationally or through regional agencies or arrangements all measures necessary to facilitate in coordination with the United Nations the delivery by relevant United Nations' humanitarian organizations and others of humanitarian assistance to Sarajevo and wherever needed in other parts of Bosnia-Herzegovina;

3. Demands that unimpeded and continuous access to all camps, prisons and detention centers be granted immediately to the ICRC and other relevant humanitarian organizations and that all detainees therein receive humane treatment, including adequate food, shelter and medical care;

4. Calls upon all states to report to the Secretary General on measures they are taking in coordination with the United Nations to carry out this resolution, and invites the Secretary General to keep under continuous review any further measures that may be necessary to insure unimpeded delivery of humanitarian supplies;

5. Requests all states to provide appropriate support for the actions undertaken in pursuance of this resolution;

6. Requests the Secretary General to report to the Security Council on a periodic basis on implementation of this resolution;

7. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Mr. DOLE. This appeared today in the New York Times. It may be voted on in the U.N. Security Council later this week. It may be changed to some extent, but I think at least it ought to be in the RECORD to indicate that other nations are having difficulty dealing with this problem, too, because of what the distinguished Senator from West Virginia has said and others have said on the floor. We do not want to get involved in a quagmire.

Mr. President, it seems to me, though, we do need to send some kind of signal. Maybe it is not going to be heard beyond this Chamber. I have not seen many headlines on what the Senate has been debating in the last couple of days. Maybe it is not going to be heard at the United Nations. It will be heard in the countries of the former Yugoslavia, though. I can say this, based on experience. The people in Sarajevo will know about the resolution. The people in Croatia will know about the resolution. People in Belgrade will know about the resolution. It might have some small impact if the vote is almost unanimous, as I hope it may be.

We do have an obligation to be the leader in the international community. That does not mean we have the obligation to commit troops. Nobody is suggesting ground forces. But all we suggest, for humanitarian purposes, there may be certain cases where we might have to use all necessary means.

So, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD the President's six-point plan which is referred to in the resolution, and also a statement by the President, to indicate that this is not only bipartisan in the Congress, but bipartisan across the board.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Ladies and gentlemen: Today I want to discuss with you the situation in Bosnia-Hercegovina and the former Yugoslavia and what the United States—working with the international community—is doing to contain and defuse this escalating crisis.

Like all Americans, I am outraged and horrified at the terrible violence shattering the lives of innocent men, women, and children in Bosnia. The aggressors and extremists pursue a policy of "ethnic cleansing," deliberately murdering innocent civilians and driving others from their homes. Already, the war has created over 2.2 million refugees—roughly the population of greater Pittsburgh or Baltimore. This is without a doubt a true humanitarian nightmare.

The war in Bosnia-Hercegovina and Croatia is a complex, convoluted conflict that grows out of age-old animosities. The blood of innocents is being spilled over century old feuds. The lines between enemies—and even friends—are jumbled and fragmented.

Let no one think there is any easy or simple solution to this tragedy. The violence will not end overnight, whatever pressure and means the international community brings to bear. Blood feuds are difficult to resolve, and any lasting solution will only be found with the active cooperation and participation of the parties themselves. Those who understand the nature of this conflict understand that an enduring solution cannot be imposed by force from outside on unwilling participants.

Defusing this crisis and preventing its spread will require patience and persistence by all members of the democratic community of nations and key international organizations. Bringing peace again to the Balkans will take years of work.

For months now, we have been working with other members of the international community in pursuing a multi-faceted and integrated strategy for defusing and containing the Balkan conflict. Let me explain the critical steps we already have underway to help defuse and contain this crisis.

First, we must continue to work to see that food and medicine get to the peoples of Sarajevo and elsewhere in Bosnia no matter what it takes.

To this end, I have directed the Secretary of State to press hard for quick passage of a UN Security Council Resolution authorizing the use of all necessary measures to establish conditions necessary for, and to facilitate the delivery of, humanitarian assistance to Bosnia-Hercegovina. This Resolution is critical to our efforts to bring food and medicine to the people of Bosnia.

This Resolution will authorize the international community to use force, if necessary, to deliver humanitarian relief supplies. My heartfelt hope is that will not prove necessary. But the international community cannot stand by and allow innocent children, women, and men to be starved to death. You can be assured that should force prove necessary, I will do everything in my power to protect the lives of any American servicemen or women involved in this international mission of mercy.

To truly end the humanitarian nightmare, we must also accelerate our efforts to stop "ethnic cleansing" and to open any and all detention camps to international inspection. I urge the international community to join with us in an extraordinary session of the United Nations Human Rights Commission to find assured ways to gain access to any and all detention camps.

Second, we must support the legitimate governments of Slovenia, Croatia, and Bosnia-Hercegovina. To this end, I have decided that the United States will move now to establish full diplomatic relations with those governments. I will shortly submit to the Senate my nominations for ambassadors to these posts.

Third, we must continue to isolate Serbia economically and politically, until all UNSC Resolutions are fully complied with. We must continue to tighten economic sanctions on Serbia so that all understand there is a real price to be paid for the Serbian government's continued aggression. The United States proposes that the international community place monitors in neighboring states to facilitate the work of those governments to ensure strict compliance with sanctions.

Fourth, we must engage in preventive diplomacy to preclude a widening of the conflict into Rosovo, Vojvodine, Sandehak, or Macedonia. Therefore, the United States is proposing that the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe place continuous monitoring missions in these locations to provide an international presence and inhibit human rights abuses and violence.

Fifth, we must contain the conflict and prevent it spilling over into neighboring states like Albania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania, and Greece. To this end, the United States proposes that the international community again place civilian monitors, thereby reassuring these governments of our concern for their welfare and inhibiting any aggression against them.

Sixth, we are consulting with our allies in NATO on all aspects of this crisis and how the Alliance might be of assistance to the United Nations.

These six steps represent an integrated strategy for defusing and containing this conflict. We have been working with the international community to advance our work on each and will continue to do so in the weeks ahead. It is only through international cooperation—through the UN, NATO, the EC and other such institutions—that we will be able to help bring peace to that troubled region. Those who frantically call for unilateral action do not understand the magnitude of the crisis, history, or the requirements of a responsible foreign policy.

Mr. DOLE. Clearly, no one person has the answer. No one is willing to commit American troops, as the President said: Who is going to choose whose son to send to Yugoslavia?

But at the same time, it is my view that we have a responsibility in this particular case. This resolution is not a blank check. It is not a Gulf of Tonkin resolution. It is a simple statement of the Senate's conviction that the United States should attempt to get from the United Nations authorization to use all necessary means to give effect to Security Council decisions. If they do not make any decisions then our sense-of-the-Senate resolution has even less impact.

Mr. President, in addition to that, I have received a copy of a paper written by a very distinguished member of the International Institute for Strategic Studies about military intervention in the Bosnian conflict, Francois Heisbourg, Director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies which will be printed on August 14, but I have permission to put it in the RECORD at this time. He is an expert on the subject who comes to the position that this is a very close call, that we should do something, that we should express ourselves, and we should make certain that we do all we can to provide humanitarian aid.

I ask unanimous consent that the article be made a part of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MILITARY INTERVENTION IN THE BOSNIAN CONFLICT

(By Francois Heisbourg, Director, International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS))

(Article for "Die Zeit" (14.08.92))

In examining options for international military action in Bosnia-Herzegovina going beyond "blue helmet" peace keeping operations, several pre-requisites need to be kept in mind:

(1) The missions of such an intervention have to be formulated in clear terms—unlike what happened in Beirut in 1982–84 with the force deployed for humanitarian purposes by France, the US, Italy and the UK. The necessary material means and rules of engagement have to be established allowing for the accomplishment of the assigned missions. This article will attempt to outline some of these missions and their implications.

(2) coherent command arrangements need to be set up—here again, unlike what occurred in the Beirut debacle of 1982–84.

(3) military missions have to be in full coherence with clearly formulated political aims, which in this case should entail precise objectives concerning the future status, structure and borders of Bosnia-Herzegovina as well as specific humanitarian goals regarding the fate of the civilian population.

The discussion of political objectives is not entered into here, but it imperatively needs to be held, and resolved, by the intervening parties—be they the UN, the CSCE, NATO, the WEU or an ad hoc coalition—before entering into forceful military operations.

(a) The militarily least demanding mission would be to impose a military blockade as a means to enforce sanctions against Serbia/Montenegro. Timely detection of unauthorized and significant air, road, sea and river traffic can be ensured by a combination of available means: the fleets and naval air in the Adriatic; NATO and/or British and French AWACS aircraft; monitors to be deployed along the borders of Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, etc., although in practice coordination between the detection of a violation and a timely military response could be difficult. Naval forces and combat air patrols operating from Italy and carrier vessels would be in a position to interdict unauthorized movements, although his could entail politically difficult decisions, since airliners, ships or trucks may have to be threatened with destruction as a last resort. Risks to the blockaders would be small, although some losses could occur. Fighter aircraft stationed in Western Europe are more than able to deal with a Serbian air force which only possesses some twenty top-of-the-line MIG-29s (along with a hundred or so rather older MIG-21s). That being said, a military blockage would do less to implement the sanctions than effective compliance by the neighboring states. The main advantage of forceful blockade would be to bring home to Belgrade the point that international military intervention has become a real possibility.

(b) International military intervention could also seriously hinder large-scale offensive movements by the Serbian forces in Bosnia and help prevent their reinforcement from Serbia. Air strikes could be undertaken against arms, munitions and fuel depots, military production facilities, choke-points (roads, rail-bridges in the narrow valleys of Bosnia), military vehicle convoys, as well as against artillery batteries and armored formations in the field. Given the distances involved, and the need for intervening aircraft to have to time to locate worthwhile targets, it would be useful to be able to operate from airfields in Croatia and the more peaceful parts of Bosnia. However, aircraft operating from Italy and aircraft carriers could perform the mission. There are potential drawbacks to such air operations:

"Surgical strikes" would be the exception rather than the rule; Bosnia is not a desert: many targets, and notably artillery batteries, will be located near houses, and cannot be "taken out" without civilian casualties. To reduce these, bombing will often have to be made from a very close range. In addition, the weather will frequently hamper air operations

Serbian air defense includes a broad range of hand-held and mobile SAM launchers which would cause significant losses against aircraft coming in at close quarters.

Bombing operations could be initiated promptly by the international community with a telling military, as well as political, effect. Heavy arms operations by the Serbs in Bosnia and support from Serbia would be seriously hampered. Long-range artillery around Sarajevo could be partially neutralized, although the same would not apply to roving mortar squads and snipers.

(c) Extracting the blue helmets from Sarajevo could call for a forceful military operation of some magnitude. A withdrawal may be necessary if the UN peacekeeping and humanitarian efforts were consistently frustrated by hostile action, particularly if UN forces were deliberately targeted as they have been lately, for example in retaliation to military measures of the sort described above. Moving the two thousand blue helmets to safety in the face of hostile fire would entail the provision of dense close air support to the UN convoy which would have to cross several dozens of kilometers of dangerous territory before reaching safety. Such air support should include combat helicopters in order to pin down mortar, anti-tank and machine gun ambushes. This may require use of a facility close to the Croatian-Bosnian border, along with the close-to-shore deployment of the "Iwo Jima".

(d) Breaking the sieges of Sarajevo and Goradje would entail much greater military difficulties. In order to secure a 25km radius around the town of Sarajevo, intervening forces would have to defend a circumference of some 150 kilometers. Even accepting that part of the perimeter would already be in more or less friendly hands, it would require at least a large division of combat forces to man the line plus extra forces to patrol the zone and to ensure the logistics, in effect a total of at least two divisions. Casualties could be substantial. Indeed, the site of Sarajevo offers the political charms of Beirut combined with the topographical attractions of Dien Ben Phu. In other words, inserting combat forces into Sarajevo would be a high-risk venture, which should not be considered if other options are available.

(e) More generalized military operations physically to prevent "ethnic cleansing", to open up forcefully permanent road corridors in hostile territory, and/or to reverse territorial gains by the Serb (and the Croat) forces in Bosnia would call for commensurately greater forces and casualties, even if parallels with World War II operations against Tito's partisans should not be applied to a rather different politico-military situation. However, it may be militarily more feasible to prevent "ethnic cleansing" in areas which have not yet been overrun by hostile forces and to provide humanitarian assistance by force to areas where Serb forces are not heavily concentrated. Foreign military forces with the appropriate artillery and combat helicopter support could be deployed by road to regions yet relatively untouched by combat, for example in the northwestern, Muslim-populated corner of Bosnia and in Herzegovina. These forces would have to be re-inforcable at short notice, via Croatia. In order to be able to cope with a possible all-out effort by Belgrade in support of Serb forces in Bosnia, it would be prudent for such an international expeditionary force to be of at least army corps size (3 to 5 divisions), since Serbia's army disposes of some 100,000 men on active duty. The insertion of an international expeditionary force is not as risky as the "Sarajevo option", since much of this corps could be kept in reserve, and would have secure lines of communications, and its role would be largely deterrent or defensive.

In summary, there are no simple or easy options. In view of military constraints, political realities and the broader context of Europe's effective security regime, it is my considered opinion that the following steps can, and should be considered:

The leaders of Europe and the United States have to impress on the Serb leaders in Serbia and Bosnia that the use of force is a real option, whereas until recently the tendency has been to convince them of the opposite. . . . In particular, we have to induce the leadership in Belgrade to apply to the Bosnian Serb warlords the same sort of pressure which was exercised on Serb leaders in Croatia last January.

The reality of the military option can be readily materialised not only by the mounting of a blockade. Much could be achieved in the way of signalling resolve by mounting intensive reconnaissance and intelligence-gathering flights over Serb-controlled or Serb-threatened territory in Bosnia by aircraft such as the TR1-A or even JSTARS. Such activity is in any case vital to the success of any subsequent bombing campaign.

Bombing operations should commence if the Serb leadership in Bosnia did not rapidly comply with whatever political and humanitarian conditions the international community deemed appropriate such as full Red Cross access to detention camps, a halt to ethnic cleansing, suspension of artillery fire against Sarajevo. Such bombing should be conducted exclusively on Bosnian territory, since this could be done at the request of the Bosnian government on the basis of Article 51 of the UN Charter. In military terms, this would permit both a greater concentration of firepower while reducing the risk of losses from air defenses which are largely concentrated in Serbia proper. Prior to a bombing campaign, it may be necessary to move the UN force out of Sarajevo. If this were undesirable, a combat force of at least two divisions with a full complement of supporting artillery would have to be inserted into the Sarajevo area.

In parallel to the threat of a bombing campaign, countries of the CSCE, either on an ad hoc basis (a Gulf-style coalition), or in the framework of subregional organisations (NATO), (WEU) should prepare for the deployment of an expeditionary force equivalent to a full army corps of some 50- to 100,000 men with a view to deploy in the areas of Bosnia-Herzegovina as yet saved from the scourge of ethnic cleansing. These forces should have the same sort of clean-cut command structure as during the Gulf war. In this respect the baroque NATO-WEU command arrangements in the Adriatic are not only ridiculous: they would become a tragedy if they were applied to ground or air forces in a combat situation when human lives are at stake.

I have come to these conclusions with reluctance: as the IISS has consistently pointed out, the military difficulties are great and are vastly enhanced by the political complexities involved. However, we have reached the stage where the consequences of not intervening have become greater than the dangers of a forceful intervention. There will be no security in Europe during the next decades if "ethnic cleansing", and its cortege of atrocities, is seen as a viable policy by brutal leaders in ethnically diverse regions in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. The warlords of Bosnia must be checked, and Serbia (and Croatia) must not be allowed to extend their borders at the expense of Bosnia-Herzegovina, however fragile and artificial that state may appear to be: it is a recognized member of the UN and of the CSCE and therefore UN and CSCE rules must apply there, if they are to prevail elsewhere in post-communist Europe.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, has time expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the distinguished minority leader gave two-thirds of his time to me. I ask unanimous consent he may have 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

I would also like to compliment the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] for his tireless efforts on this issue. Because he has been the leader in this effort. It is a difficult call. The Senator understands that. This Senator understands that.

I would hope my colleagues, though—I would say in conclusion—take a look at the resolution. We are talking about supporting the decisions of the United Nations. So far they have not made any decisions. It is not a commitment. It is not an authorization.

If this were an authorization, if we were debating an authorization on the Senate floor, then it would be an entirely different thing. This is a freebie for some. They can vote for this. It does not have that much meaning. But, if this were an authorization as we had in the gulf crisis it would be a much different debate, a much longer debate. And I am not certain what the outcome would be. I would not want to guess at this point.

But this is not an authorization. This is a sense-of-the-Senate resolution. It is not binding. But I do believe based on other resolutions we pass and what many of us really believe, that we should pass this resolution, we should have strong bipartisan support, and that we ought to do that later today.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

I thank the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] controls 15 minutes on his amendment No. 2929. The manager of the resolution also controls 15 minutes on the amendment.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, is there any time remaining to me on the bill itself?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has less than 1 minute remaining.

Mr. PELL. I yield that less than 1 minute to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Senator from Rhode Island, and I look forward to having a few more seconds to speak on the amendment of the Senator from Alaska. Let me use this less than 1 minute to thank the Senate Republican leader for his statement, for his kind words and for his leadership on this, which really has shown that this is a bipartisan expression of outrage at what is happening in Bosnia, and it is essentially a call to police. It is not an assumption by the United States as the role of policemen of the world. In fact, it specifically says it calls for an international multilateral effort.

The fact is the Europeans, in whose neighborhoods this disaster is occurring, should take the lead. But just as the British and French stood with us in Operation Desert Storm, we should stand with them in this expression of outrage and support for the use of all appropriate means, not to win a war, but to bring the Serbian aggressors to the peace table.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair, and urge adoption of the resolution, and yield the floor.

Mr. STEVENS addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 2929, AS MODIFIED

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I have a modification to my amendment. It contains two technical amendments as suggested by the majority staff.

I ask that my amendment be modified. It changes the paragraph number and changes "are" to "may be."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to modify his amendment.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

At the end of the resolution, insert the following new section.

"(5) The United States Senate pledges to provide such funds as may be necessary for United States participation in such humanitarian relief and multilateral force activities, pursuant to such mandates as may be adopted by the United Nations Security Council, consistent with the terms of this resolution.".

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I will use a portion of my time as allocated to me. I believe it is important to keep in mind what the Republican leader just said, that we are not dealing with a blank check. In October 1990, as Operation Desert Shield began, the Congress and the President entered into a budget agreement that recognized the possible extraordinary costs of that United States deployment to the Persian Gulf. To that end, Congress created a $15 billion reserve fund to be available only in an emergency to defray such costs. All Desert Shield-Desert Storm related costs were deemed to be off budget for the purpose of the budget summit agreement.

At this stage, of course, any discussion or assumption of costs for any potential United States deployment as part of a multilateral force concerned with the Bosnia question would be purely speculative. What is not speculative is the impact of any such deployment on our defense budget which is now pending before the Senate in the form of a Defense authorization bill. That bill makes no assumption of any large-scale overseas deployment of forces. As a matter of fact, I would call it a bare-bones budget. It was cut by $20 billion by the President from the 1992 level. In addition to that, this authorization bill has been reported by the Armed Services Committee to cut another $7 billion from the President's request.

In this context, any United States participation in a multilateral deployment to Bosnia will cost more than we are currently considering for defense in 1993. Let me emphasize that. Any multilateral deployment to Bosnia will cost the United States more than we are currently considering for defense in 1993.

The limited airlift role played by the Air Force so far has been accommodated within the training costs, the normal training budget, though such funds are now very tight as we end this fiscal year.

I want to make these comments not to plead for more money for defense, although I believe this year's level may come out to be too low, but I want to alert the Senate to this reality. Senator INOUYE, as chairman of our Defense Subcommittee, and I are working even now to figure out a way to report a defense appropriations bill within the reduced 602(b) allocation that we have received. There will be no margin in that bill for this Bosnia operation or, as a matter of fact, for any other peacekeeping or war-stopping mission for the United States military forces. We will have to come back to the Senate for more money for any such events.

I do believe that we must support the President's initiative to attempt to bring peace to these warring States. But I want to make sure that we are aware of the fact that we do have severe budget problems. Those problems should not be linked to the decision on whether or not we attempt such an endeavor as participating in a multilateral force. If it is the right thing to do, we are going to do it, obviously, and this Senator is going to support this resolution.

But the Senate and the President must consider where we are going to get the money from. My amendment does one simple thing. It says, as we urge the President to bring about another meeting of the United Nations Security Council, as we urge the United Nations to create a multilateral force to demonstrate our consistent feeling about what is going on in Bosnia, we have to remember the Senate must do something, too, if these two events take place; and that is, we must be prepared to work out the funding for this operation.

Last night I put in the RECORD a series of comments from General MacKenzie, who is testifying before the Armed Services Committee now. I firmly believe that if we support the President now and we show solidarity to the leaders of the United Nations and to the perpetrators of the atrocities in Belgrade, we may not need to send one single U.S. soldier to participate in a multilateral military force now. I do believe that.

The amendment is important. But I also believe it is important for us to keep in mind that this time we pay the bill and, when we pay that bill, we cannot do so at the expense of all the Department of Defense operations to maintain peace elsewhere in the world. We will have to work out a new concept of financing for this operation.

I think that we really can only take one action to lend credence to our words. What we are saying is if the President acts in accordance with our urging, we will stand by him and the United Nations in working to bring peace, and we are prepared to pay that bill. We cannot issue a call to action without pledging our continued support for the costs that may be incurred in such action.

I pointed out last night that my amendment has no more standing than the resolution itself. It is a sense-of-the-Senate resolution. That is not an appropriation. This amendment in no way commits any Senator to any specific course of action. It indicates that morally we understand that we are bound to support our servicemen and women if they are sent overseas as part of a multilateral peacekeeping force.

I do believe the amendment should challenge Members who have come to the floor to exhort the President to action, to exhort the United Nations to action, to contemplate the full ramifications of the President and the United Nations listening to us. But it should strengthen the President's hand and reassure those in the United Nations and it should send an even more ringing message to both Serbia and Bosnia.

I do believe that it is necessary for us to adopt this amendment and to demonstrate that the Senate is willing to go on record that we will support the funding required if the action we contemplate is in fact found necessary by the United Nations and the President. We should not act except under a mandate from the United Nations in this instance and, if that is received, I believe we should indicate we are prepared to finance the operation.

How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes and 15 seconds.

Mr. STEVENS. I yield 2 minutes and 15 seconds to my friend from New York. I pledge the other 5 minutes. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, my position as relates to this crisis I think is well known by my colleagues. I want to take the time now to commend the Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS]. I intend to support his amendment. It is important that we do more than just verbalize our concerns. It is important that we do more than just urge the President to pursue a certain course of action with the United Nations and to move the United Nations into a policy of action to save people. It is important that this body understands that, indeed, there may be and there will be fiscal implications to our taxpayers and that we are willing to make the hard decisions and say, yes, it is not just rhetoric in the commitment we expect from others.

But we ourselves will be prepared to maybe make some decisions, and be called upon to make some decisions to provide the resources that are not going to be so easy. But we cannot just ask others to be courageous, and to do the things that we ourselves have a responsibility to do. It is the right amendment at the right time, and it is the right course of action that we are pursuing.

I commend the Senator from Alaska, and I ask to join with him as a cosponsor of his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Connecticut for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank the Senator from Rhode Island. I thank the Chair.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Shelley Cohen of my staff be permitted floor privileges for the remainder of this debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I will say very briefly that Shelley has been with me for 2 years, has served the office, the State, and really the Nation with distinction.

She is leaving to go to graduate school. We wish her well in everything she does.

Mr. President, I rise to support the amendment offered by our colleague from Alaska, understanding that in my own opinion, action that might be engendered under this resolution by the U.S. military would be so limited that it could be met within existing appropriations to the Department of Defense.

But I am supporting this not so much as an exercise in appropriations but as an assumption of responsibility that in the resolution, we have expressed our values, our willingness to work with our allies in Europe to bring order to the new world order in the Balkans and beyond; but that we have, in a general sense, a responsibility to be prepared to put our money where our mouth is.

I think that Senator STEVENS has challenged us to do that with this amendment. I welcome the challenge, and I support the amendment, because what this entire resolution is about is responsibility. What is our responsibility as we watch the circumstances that are unfolding in the Balkans today?

Mr. President, there have been references in the debate to the history of conflict in that region, to the historic ethnic tensions, to the complexity of the conflict that is there, too. And, of course, all of that is true.

I think we know, not only in this situation but in so much that we do in this Chamber, so many judgments that we make, we cannot turn away from making judgments between what is better and what is worse, what is acceptable and what is unacceptable, particularly in situations that are complex. We are rarely handed a simple, factual situation. And so too, here.

Again, in this morning's paper, Peter Maass has two stories in the Washington Post, one from the Omarska Camp, with notes handed to him:

> There's no doctor here. As soon as you get sick you are shot.

A handwritten note:

> About 500 people have been killed here with sticks, hammers, and knifes. * * * Please help us. * * * Once there is no media attention focused on us, it is not known what will happen to us.

Yes, the Serbs, Moslems, and Croatians have had a history of tensions. But uniquely, in this country of Bosnia, under the leadership of the current Moslem President, President Izetbegovic, this has not been the case. I do not think we could blur that as we consider what our responsibility is here.

Peter Maass says, in this report from Bosnia today:

> Unlike Croatian President Franjo Tudjman, whose strident nationalism gave Serbs there cause for fear, Izetbegovic eschewed stridency. As Bosnia declared its independence from the old six-republic Yugoslav federation, he championed a cantonal plan that would have given significant local powers to each of the three major communal groups and guaranteed minority rights to all.
> Sarajevo and other Bosnian cities had been models of toleration until militant local Serb leaders stirred up fears of an Islamic power grab that would deprive Serbs of their ancient rights and lands. For centuries before, Muslims, Serbs and Croats had lived side by side in the same villages and apartment buildings and paid respects to each other on their respective religious holidays.

So to me there is a judgment to be made. The Serbs are aggressors. They have spoiled a nation that worked together, and we have to ask ourselves what is our responsibility, Mr. President? The question is as old as the conversation between God and Cain when God asked Cain: "Where is your brother?" Cain said: "I don't know. Am I my brother's keeper?" And God chastised Cain and said: "What are you telling me? I hear your brother's blood crying to me from the ground."

Mr. President, we hear the blood of our brothers and sisters crying to us from the ground of Bosnia today, and the question is as current as our responsibility in this country any time we confront random violence.

I have been thinking lately of that story of Kitty Genovese, that woman in New York who was attacked and raped in the middle of the night, who cried out. Later, investigators found that—if I remember correctly—37 people heard those cries, closed their windows, pulled down the blinds, went back to bed, and refused to even pick up the phone to call the police. They did not want to get involved. We were all outraged by that.

The question is whether now we are going to allow Bosnia to become the international Kitty Genovese. I say we cannot and we cannot because we know that once we allow an attacker, a rapist, to attack or rape someone we do not know, they will turn next on us and our families and our friends. It is true of the international community, as well.

Twice in this century an explosion has occurred in Europe that drew us inevitably in at a much higher cost in blood.

Mr. President, the reality is that we are tied historically and culturally to what happens in Europe. If we do not draw the line in the Balkans, there is a danger that is palpable that ethnic conflict will break out in a wider scale within what used to be the former Soviet Union, and we will be drawn into a far costlier battle.

This is all about responsibility. And this amendment focuses that responsibility.

Mr. President, finally I would say this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I hope this amendment will be adopted as an expression of the willingness of this Senate, a majority herein, to accept that responsibility.

I am hopeful and confident that this afternoon, when we vote on the underlying resolution, a strong, bipartisan majority, understanding all the complexities involved in Bosnia, nonetheless will stand up and vote strongly as an expression of our responsibility and our intention to make sure that the new world order really does have order, and the hope of peace and security, not just for our generation, but for the generations to follow.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. PELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, what is the time situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes and 50 seconds.

The Senator from Alaska has 5 minutes and 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I know that I welcome the amendment of the Senator from Alaska, and I believe that what he is doing is correct.

I would emphasize in connection with the debate yesterday that all the United States is expected to pay for is the United States share. It is not the cost of the total operation. I would also add, and I repeat again, the welcome fallout from this debate, from both the underlying resolution, and in the Senate from the amendment of the Senator from Alaska, is more references to the United Nations, to the Security Council, to enforcement arrangements, than I believe there has been in the history of the United Nations today.

I think, as we realize the necessity of relying on the United Nations, it will become an increasingly important player—a prime player—in the international scene, and more so with resolutions of this sort.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, is there any time for the opposition to this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is divided between the Senator from Alaska and the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. BYRD. I would like to speak in opposition, Mr. President.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank my friend.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN] has spoken to the effect that this is a question, an issue, of responsibility. I am not even paraphrasing his words very well, but I respect him greatly. Mr. President, the point is, the responsibility is that of the European nations, not the responsibility of our country.

Mr. President, I compliment the Senator from Alaska on his amendment. He is injecting a point of reality into the debate. He is talking about money. He is talking about paying the costs. He is saying that this body ought to say here and now—today—that we will stand up and vote for the appropriations that may be needed in the future—sight unseen, a pig in the poke. That is what we are buying, in effect, today.

But the able Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] is injecting a note of reality. I hope that Senators will approach the vote on the amendment soberly and also the vote on the resolution. I am opposed to the resolution. That is why I am opposed to the amendment, because there may come a day when we have to pay.

Yes, we are saddened daily by what we see occurring. But, Mr. President, again I say we cannot police the world. These things go on and on and on all down the river of time. Caesar, in his Gallic Wars, wrote of the massacre of 40,000 men, women, and children, old and young, the total population of one city—40,000. Only 800 escaped. Caesar, in his Gallic Wars, also stated that he auctioned off the entire population of another city in one lot—a total of 53,000 souls. Had we been living in that day, had the United States been a part of the world in that day, I suppose this body, if it had existed then, would have addressed the horrors that accompanied those conquests, the Roman conquests, and would have advocated a multilateral force to stop the fighting and the atrocities. These things will continue to happen as long as the world stands. What is going on in Somalia is likewise such a terror. Who is going to advocate that we put American men and women in Somalia if the U.N. mandates a multilateral force to stop that civil war?

Mr. President, we do not have the treasure in blood or in gold to police the whole world. This can cost billions of dollars, and if it comes time for the Senate to pay up to what in essence is a kind of commitment here today, then the Senators will have to retire again to their budget sheets and look at the deficits. They will have to explain to the American people again why we are sending their boys and girls into a guerrilla war.

We have to be concerned. Mr. President, the responsibility is on the Europeans. We can do some things, but let us not buy a pig in a poke. There are limits to what we can do.

I am issuing a warning that we had better take a look at what those limits are, and realize that the United States no longer is a country that is without a massive debt. This no longer is a country that confronts only small deficits. Let us fact up to reality.

I compliment the Senator from Alaska, but I shall vote against this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. STEVENS. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska controls 15 minutes, 5 minutes on his amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. The distinguished Senator from Rhode Island has how much time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

I appreciate the statement made by my good friend from West Virginia, and I understand his position well. It is not my desire to join him in that position in this instance. But I do want the Senate to face the total resolution with reality.

I read at length last night the statements that were made by General MacKenzie. I really believe that we have to keep in mind what we are getting into. For instance, I read from the congressional report concerning the aftermath of the action of the German forces in this area. Let me read again one paragraph from that report that talked about the period after the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand in Sarajevo in 1914. After the time the Germans had been in there—this is a quote:

> After the German conquest of Yugoslavia in 1941, Bosnia was annexed to the independent state of Croatia, a puppet state headed by the Croatian fascist Ustashe movement. The proclaimed goal of the Ustashe was to expel a third of the Serbs, convert a third to Catholicism, and kill the remainder.

I believe that the enmity and hatred in this area is so bad we have to be very realistic about the problem. The problem is, if we commit ourselves to a course of action to support the United Nations, and the United Nations does, in fact, end up mandating the use of force to liberate these camps, then we must realize what we are into. I, for one, am prepared to go that direction as long as everybody understands what is involved. General MacKenzie said it could be 20 years that we would have to have forces in there—20 years. On the other hand, it also could be, if the world unites and indicates that it will not countenance such action again in this century, that perhaps both the Serbs and their opponents will come to reality and sit down once again and try to work this out.

We have the ability in the united forces of both the United States and the United Nations, if we desire to do so, to level this area. I hope we do not have to do it.

But I want the Senate to know I want to be on record as saying there is a severe cost financially to this prospect. We are prepared to meet that cost if the United Nations follows our request upon the President's urging—it is demonstrated in his six points—and says to these combatants that the world will not tolerate this area becoming the flash point of World War III. I am prepared to support that. I hope the Senate is prepared to go on record as saying, yes, it will in fact finance these operations.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Rhode Island has 2 minutes.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I think it would be useful to read into the RECORD the exact commitment that we are making here, the request that we are making. The way it reads is:

> The President should immediately call for an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council in order to authorize, under article 42 of the U.N. Charter, all necessary means, including the use of multilateral force under a Security Council mandate, during particular consideration to the possibility of demonstrations of force, to give effect to the Security Council decisions to ensure the provisions of humanitarian relief in Bosnia-Hercegovina, gain access for the U.N. and ICRC personnel to refugee and prisoner-of-war camps in the former Yugoslavia.

This is what we are asking for. We are asking for U.N. action and recommendations. Then if we see fit, we will go along with them.

What this whole exercise has done, in my mind, is to increase our faith in and our reliance upon the United Nations in the chapter 7 provision for the enforcement of the peace and the regaining of such peace.

I imagine my time has expired. I yield back any time remaining.

Mr. STEVENS addressed the Chair.

Mr. STEVENS. I, too, shall use the remainder of my time. At the time we had before us the Persian Gulf resolution, I spent a considerable amount of time reviewing the history of the United Nations and the commitments of those member nations to support the U.N. mandates. I told the Senate I was prepared to support the Kuwait resolution, because I believed it was following the original intent of the United Nations, and that we should understand that once we indicate our support for the United Nations' actions and we support a mandate such as was issued at that time, we are committed to support our action militarily, and we are committed to dispatch the forces that are necessary to carry out the mandate that we have sought from the United Nations.

I believe in the United Nations. I believe in the concept of being one of the leaders of the United Nations, and assuming our full responsibility. It is my understanding that we are not taking such action today. We are urging the President to seek a mandate through an emergency meeting of the Security Council. We know that there is a meeting scheduled now sometime later this week, and that we have now, today, a draft resolution that will be presented.

I must say, to this Senator, it is rather nebulous as to what really is before the United Nations now. It does not contemplate what I am hearing on the floor in terms of the specifics of the action to be undertaken. But my amendment simply says what the President decides is best, and I hope he will, once again, seek the support of Congress through a resolution, which should be supported by the Senate in terms of a commitment to provide the funds that are necessary.

Again, in my judgment, the funds are not there in the 1992 or 1993 budget to support such a massive action, if it in fact becomes necessary. Thus, this commitment, morally, is one that we should make to the President and to the United Nations.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I would like to briefly discuss with my friend from Alaska his amendment now pending. As I understand it, the amendment puts the Senate on record as pledging to provide whatever funding may be necessary to pay for United States participation in a multilateral force in Bosnia. Do I accurately characterize my friend's amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. The Senator from Delaware is correct.

Mr. BIDEN. If that is the purpose of his amendment, I have no objection to it. However, I want to make clear that this amendment should not be construed to confer authorization upon the President to use U.S. Armed Forces in a multilateral force that may be endorsed by the U.N. Security Council. It is my firm belief that once the U.N. Security Council endorses the use of force in Bosnia, the Congress must then provide a formal authorization to the President to deploy United States troops in any multilateral force. Neither this amendment nor the underlying resolution provides such an authorization.

Moreover, I want to make it clear that any defense appropriations—either current fiscal year funding or fiscal year 1993 appropriations—should not be interpreted as endorsing the use of United States forces in Bosnia. Only a statutory authorization, approved by both houses of Congress and signed by the President, can provide such authority.

Does the Senator from Alaska agree?

Mr. STEVENS. I agree with the Senator from Delaware. My amendment, let me reiterate, is designed to demonstrate that the United States must be prepared to pay its own way for any use of force in Bosnia. It does not imply any authorization to the President to deploy U.S. forces, and I agree with the Senator that the President should seek an authorization from Congress.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I have just filed at the desk an amendment to the pending action by the Senate on the Bosnia resolution. The purpose of this amendment, which is No. 2930, is to conform the proposed resolution, nonbinding resolution, sense-of-the-Senate resolution on Bosnia, with the purported action to be taken tomorrow by the United Nations. I think it imperative, if it is the true desire of the Senate—and I accept the representations of the sponsors of the Senate resolution that it is to support the President of the United States in his actions before the United Nations.

One of the advantages of having this time interval of 4 or 5 days in which to have debated this resolution was to allow the United Nations, in consultation with world leaders, the Security Council, to come up with a resolution, which they now have, and which will be acted on, we are told, tomorrow.

At this moment the Senate Armed Services Committee is having a hearing, receiving testimony from a variety of witnesses on this issue. I shall at this time petition the leadership for an opportunity for members of the Armed Services Committee and members of the Intelligence Committee—that second committee is likewise at this hour holding hearings on Bosnia—to at least have a brief period in which to acquaint Senators with the very valuable testimony that is being received this morning by the Senate.

For the Senate to go ahead with this vote this afternoon at the scheduled hour without having the benefit of just a resume of this testimony in my judgment would be a mistake. So I now indicate my desire for the leadership to somehow adjust the time to allow just a few Members—if necessary only the chairmen of each committee, hopefully the ranking member would have some small amount of time—to acquaint the Senate with the testimony received both in the Armed Services Committee and Intelligence Committee.

But during the course of the deliberations in the Armed Services Committee hearing, which I just left momentarily, there has been a great deal of attention focused on the resolution pending before the Senate and the resolution in the United Nations, and it is clear that there is a difference. And the purpose of this amendment is to conform the amendment—the resolution before the Senate to that action we anticipate that will be taken by the United Nations tomorrow.

We are all joined in trying to bring about a cessation of atrocities which we have witnessed, now, and learned about in greater detail. And we are now learning this morning about added details of these atrocities. We want to act. We want to support our President and we want to support the United Nations. But I ask, Mr. President, that we do it consistent with what is to be done tomorrow by the United Nations. Otherwise we are moving off in two directions. And what we do not need now is confusion—confusion here in the Senate, confusion abroad as to why the Senate is moving in directions which are beyond those being taken by the United Nations.

I had under the unanimous-consent agreement an opportunity for a second amendment. I was not able to draw up that amendment until I knew with greater precision what the United Nation was doing. I now have had that opportunity to learn what the United Nations is doing, to draw the amendment, and I petitioned the leadership of the Senate and the managers of the pending resolution on Bosnia to consider on their own initiative accepting this amendment or to draw one up of their own so we are speaking with one voice, the Senate, the President, and the United Nations—and avoiding confusion.

Mr. President, I do hope the leadership will consider some opportunity for Senators to speak about the hearings this morning. We are learning new aspects of this conflict, a conflict between three religions, a conflict between three ethnic groups in the area of Bosnia, which is between Serbia—which has roots going back to the Ottoman Empire—and Croatia, which has its roots going back to the Austria-Hungarian empire. This small country, the size of two or three of our small States, has some of the most difficult terrain.

In the testimony this morning of the General of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, this terrain is exceedingly difficult to conduct military operations. Over 200,000 different people possess arms. There are five recognized armies. There are 20 warlords. That is the first time I have heard that mentioned—20 different warlords within this geographic area. And it is very difficult to find out who is fighting whom.

The testimony this morning indicated that, while the world is focusing on what Serbia is doing by way of atrocities to prisoners from Bosnia, there is also now testimony that an equal amount of atrocities—not equal, but atrocities in some magnitude are being committed by the other side on Serbian prisoners.

So I think there is much to be learned about this conflict. The Senate should try and inform itself as best it can before it makes this judgment. Because even though this is a nonbinding resolution, it is an act by this body and the nonbinding feature will, I think, be lost as the message travels across the ocean and will inspire hopes in this war-torn country, inspire hopes around the world for those of us who want to see the atrocities stopped.

Mr. President, I hope that the leadership will consider my two requests: First, that we consider an amendment in the nature of conforming with the U.N. action, with the Senate speaking; and, second, that members of the two committees be allowed to address the Senate, if only for a brief period, to share what we have learned by virtue of their testimony this morning.

I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In the resolving clause, strike out paragraphs (1) and (2) and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) the President should immediately call for an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council in order to authorize, under Article 42 of the United Nations Charter, all necessary means, including the use of multilateral military force under a Security Council mandate, giving particular attention to the possibility of "demonstrations" of force, to give effect to Security Council decisions to facilitate the provision of humanitarian relief in Bosnia-Hercegovina;

"(2) during such meeting, the Security Council should—

"(a) demand, and develop a plan to ensure, access for United Nations and International Red Cross personnel to refugee and prisoners of war camps in the former Yugoslavia;

"(b) develop the means by which to implement the July 17, 1992, United Nations-sponsored cease-fire plan, which includes placing heavy weapons belonging to all factions in Bosnia-Hercegovina under United Nations supervision;

"(c) review the effects on Bosnia-Hercegovina of the arms embargo imposed on all states in the former Yugoslavia pursuant to United Nations Security Council Resolution 713 and determine whether the termination or suspension of the application of that resolution to Bosnia-Hercegovina could result in increased security for the civilian population of that country; and

"(d) convene a tribunal to investigate allegations of war crimes and crimes against humanity committed within the territory of the former Yugoslavia and to accumulate evidence, charge, and prepare the basis for trying individuals believed to have committed or to have been responsible for such crimes.".

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the amendment which I have just sent to the desk more clearly reflects the actions that our President is seeking from the U.N. Security Council than does the underlying resolution. For the past few days, we have heard statement after statement from the sponsors of the resolution that they are merely seeking to lend the Senate's support to the U.N. Security Council resolution on the use of force in Bosnia which was initiated by President Bush. If that is truly the intent of the sponsors of Senate Resolution 330, then they should embrace my amendment.

According to the testimony which the Senate Armed Services Committee has just received from Assistant Secretary of State Niles and Assistant Secretary of Defense Hadley, the Administration is seeking a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing "all necessary means" to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance. The United States will also press for a U.N. Security Council resolution demanding that international organizations be granted immediate and unimpeded access to all camps and detention centers. My amendment reflects these goals.

Where Senate Resolution 330 differs from my amendment and from the President's position as reflected in the resolution under consideration in the U.N. Security Council, is that Senate Resolution 330 calls for a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing all necessary means to gain access to the camps. In my opinion, we do not have enough information at this point to commit to the use of force for that reason. At this point, we have no confirmation of the existence of death camps, although no one questions that atrocities have been committed; and, we are not even sure who is guilty of all of the atrocities. According to testimony we have received before the Senate Armed Services Committee from General MacKenzie, the former U.N. commander of UNPROFOR, all sides in the conflict are probably guilty of inhumane treatment of prisoners. While this is not a reason for inaction, it is an indication of the complexity of the situation in Bosnia and one of the reasons why I advise caution and the utilization of further political measures before we rush ahead with the commitment of U.S. military forces.

But perhaps more important, I believe that the Senate is considering the use of force without fully understanding the objectives of any military involvement, the resources that would be required to achieve those objectives, and the losses we could expect to suffer. I agree with the President that we are responsible for the lives of our soldiers, sailors, and airmen. We should take that responsibility very seriously.

Mr. President, I urge the Senate to agree to consideration of the amendment which I have sent to the desk. I believe that the amendment more accurately expresses the objectives of the resolution which the Security Council has under active consideration than does Senate Resolution 330. I support the very limited possible use of force as envisioned by the Security Council for the sole purpose of assisting in the delivery of humanitarian relief supplies. I do not support expanding the mission of any possible miltiary intervention at this time, given the paucity of information we have on the consequences of an expanded use of force. If Senators actually want to endorse the actions proposed by our President and endorsed by the United Nations, then they should vote for my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WOFFORD). All time has expired.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, has all time expired?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senators have used all their time.

Mr. BYRD. I did not understand that they had used all their time,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have used all their time.

Mr. STEVENS. If I may explain, last evening we did agree to shorten the time to 30 minutes this morning, and the time has expired. It is my understanding that the tax bill will come up now.

I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment. There is a vote scheduled for 12:15.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Alaska for injecting a note of reality into the debate.

Mr. President, I hope that Senators will read the amendment carefully. It says that "the United States Senate pledges to provide such funds as may be necessary for United States participation in such humanitarian relief and multilateral military force activities, pursuant to such mandates as may be adopted by the United Nations Security Council, consistent with the terms of this resolution."

The U.S. Senate cannot today commit the U.S. Senate in the 103d Congress. We cannot commit future Congresses in this manner.

But, Mr. President, the Senators who vote for this amendment today and who will still be here in the next Congress, will certainly have made a commitment which, if the time ever comes that they have to face up to their pledge, will find it very difficult to back away from this commitment.

"To provide such funds as may be necessary." The sky is the limit. "Pursuant to such mandates as may be adopted by the United Nations Security Council." Not mandates adopted by the Senate, but "such funds as may be necessary * * * pursuant to such mandates as may be adopted by the United Nations Security Council."

I hope that Senators will look before they leap and vote against the amendment and against the resolution. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. A vote on the pending amendment will occur at 12:15 today.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed on my leader time for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LAWRENCE WALSH—INDEPENDENT COUNSEL

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as Members of this body know, I have been quite critical in the past about Iran-Contra independent counsel Lawrence Walsh.

I have criticized him for the $35 million cost of his investigation. I have criticized him for not shutting his investigation down. I have criticized him for smearing the names of some outstanding public servants.

Despite all this, Mr. President, I never thought that one day I would be standing here to suggest that it's time to appoint an independent counsel to investigate the independent counsel.

Some here might not have seen the information recently discovered by Congressman GERALD SOLOMON, and reported in the media. Others might have glossed right over the information, since the investigation has been going on for so long that no one really cares.

So let me share the information with you.

Congressman SOLOMON obtained some of the vouchers and expense reports for Mr. Walsh and his crew—these vouchers confirm a point I have made before: That Mr. Walsh's inquisition is based in some of the most luxurious real estate in town—just how luxurious? Well, so far, the documents show that the taxpayers have shelled out $5.6 million for office space.

But not only does Mr. Walsh choose to work in the most expensive real estate, he also chooses to stay in expensive hotels. Now, that would be fine if he was paying the bill. But he doesn't. The taxpayers pay the bill.

Documents for the Office of Independent Counsel show that $655,000 has been spent on what is termed "per diem and subsistence."

And, apparently, up to $300,000 of this amount has been used to pay the personal living expenses of Judge Walsh and his chief deputy, Craig Gillen.

Those personal living expenses include Mr. Walsh's hotel bills at the Watergate Hotel, a countless number of $17 room service breakfasts, and room service dinners, which run between $25 to $40 each.

In fact, by Congressman SOLOMON'S calculations, you and I and all the rest of American taxpayers have shelled out $25,000 for Lawrence Walsh's breakfasts and $40,000 for Lawrence Walsh's dinners.

The taxpayers are paying Mr. Walsh's hotel and restaurant bills because Judge Walsh lists his principal duty station as Oklahoma City on his Government travel vouchers.

And Mr. Gillen, his full-time deputy who has really taken over the entire operation, lists his principal duty station as Atlanta.

They do this even though there is no Independent Counsel Office in Atlanta—and even though there's only a part-time one in Oklahoma City.

By listing their principal duty stations as Oklahoma City and Atlanta, Judge Walsh and Mr. Gillen are able to bill the taxpayers for their travel from Oklahoma City and Atlanta to Washington and back, and all their living expenses while in Washington.

Congressman SOLOMON has calculated that Mr. Gillen has collected at least $100,000—that is $100,000—in living and travel expenses above and beyond his legally established salary.

Congressman SOLOMON has also learned that Mr. Walsh and Mr. Gillen receive special rates from the corporation that owns the Watergate Hotel.

I guess I should not complain about this special discount, since it saves the taxpayers money—but I wonder if it might also qualify as an improper supplementation of salary.

There are other expenses that are coming to light: $881,000 in incidental expenses, $401,000 for maintenance, $698,000 for contractual services. The list goes on and on. And I think all of America can now understand why Mr. Walsh and Mr. Gillen are going on and on.

CPB AND THE PERCEPTION OF IMBALANCE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues a perceptive article by Brent Bozell that appeared in the August 4 edition of the Washington Times. In his article, "Moyers Under Glass," Mr. Bozell exposes the blatantly liberal record of Bill Moyers, one of the so-called stars of public broadcasting, and a future central to the so-called perception of journalistic imbalance on public television.

"I say there is one giant step toward correcting that perception," Mr. Bozell writes. "Dump Bill Moyers, or give a conservative as much air time as he gets. This incumbent needs a term limit."

Of course, despite all the promises, few people expect anything like that to happen. As Mr. Bozell argues, "doing nothing underlines that journalistic imbalance at PBS isn't a perception. It's a daily fact of life."

Now, I consider myself a supporter of public broadcasting. I have contributed personal funds to public television, and I supported the President's generous 3-year CPB funding request of $825 million. But whenever I or anyone else raises legitimate questions about public broadcasting's legal requirement of objectivity or about the taxpayer-subsidized video production empire that Bill Moyers says is none of the taxpayers business, we get hit with all kinds of nasty labels.

But some of us are getting a little tired of all the promises. It's time to turn the imbalance—perceived or not—into genuine objectivity.

I think we are all aware of the imbalance. Some do not like to talk about imbalance but it is there by public broadcasting subsidized by the taxpayers whether or not they agree with Mr. Moyers who made millions and millions of dollars out of this little effort. Of course he does not have to account for it, does not have to tell anybody, because they are not covered by the Freedom of Information Act.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Bozell's article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Times, Aug. 4, 1992]

MOYERS UNDER GLASS

(By Brent Bozell)

Sheila Tate, the new head of the Corporation of Public Broadcasting, began her tenure by announcing that public television would have to deal with its "perception" of journalistic imbalance. I say there is one giant step toward correcting that perception: Dump Bill Moyers, or give a conservative as much air time as he gets. This incumbent needs a term limit.

At a Jan. 6 press conference, Mr. Moyers, the preening PBS omnipresence, protested: "Anybody who looks at the bulk of my work over the last 20 years knows that it's a fallacious attack to find in it a left-wing agenda. . . . They've been able to offer no substantive analysis of my work that would confirm their desire to label [me] . . . a 'left-wing Democrat.'"

What a fraud. Conservatives have years of examples and books of transcripts to prove his left-wing bias. Try "The Secret Government," his 1987 documentary on the Iran-Contra affair. Mr. Moyers insisted it was a "terrorist war" the Contras were fighting where "old men, women and children are caught in the middle or deliberately killed as the Contras use violence against peasants." Mr. Moyers said nothing about the Sandinistas' human-rights record.

His most infamous hatchet job, the 1982 CBS documentary "People Like Us," was rebroadcast in 1989 on PBS, and Mr. Moyers added a new conclusion: "The poor and the working poor have born the brunt of the cost of the Reagan revolution. . . . Meanwhile, rich people got big tax breaks. And the middle class kept most of their subsidies intact. As a result, the Reagan years brought on a wider gap between rich and poor."

Don't even go back a few years. Look up his interview with Bill Clinton on his "Listening to America" program July 7: "What do you think the American people get for their government? We have no universal health care, we have no federal guarantee of higher education. . . . The regulatory agencies have in many cases been gutted. . . . Why not just say, 'We will have universal health care and we will raise taxes to pay for it?'"

How can Mr. Moyers deny a left-wing agenda?

Even far-left PBS critics have found in him one of their own. Jeff Cohen, head of the far-left group Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting (FAIR), told a C-SPAN interviewer: "Bill Moyers, of course, was an aide to a very conservative Democratic administration, now is very much, I would say, a liberal or progressive." Protesting PBS promotion of conservatives through "The McLaughlin Group" and "Firing Line," FAIR Washington activist Dennis Perrin argued on C-SPAN that Mr. Moyers is the only regularly scheduled left-wing activist on PBS: "The only example that you can point out to me is Bill Moyers, who, I will grant to you, is definitely left of center."

Remember, this is no mainstream left-wing group: They criticized "Nightline" for bringing on Sen. Christopher Dodd as an "insider opponent," an insufficiently liberal critic of U.S. policy in Nicaragua.

Mr. Moyers' partisan colors shined brightly during his stint as a CNN commentator at the Democratic National Convention. After Mario Cuomo's speech, he declared: "It's worth dying prematurely so you can hear somebody else do your eulogy if that somebody is Mario Cuomo."

Mr. Moyers also praised Jesse Jackson: "Now you know a speech like this reaches me. I'm from East Texas. My daddy was a New Deal Democrat, and I love the vibrations and the rhythms and the cadences and the power that he puts behind lost causes. But they've got to go beyond that."

Jerry Brown emerged as Mr. Moyers' preferred candidate: "I thought all through the primaries that Brown had the message—that this is a party that is spoiled, that this is a two-party system that is corrupt."

Of course, all this talk of greedy companies and corrupt governments is just Bill Moyers being a hypocrite. To this day, no one knows how many millions in profits he's made through his books and PBS Home Video cassettes, all of it thanks to the taxpayers who fund PBS. He's admitted raising more than $15 million for his company, Public Affairs Television, but when the public has demanded more knowledge of his PBS profits, Mr. Moyers replied that his company "is an independently owned production company—like so many others in the field—and our business affairs are none of your business."

Would Mr. Moyers say the same for other government contractors—say General Dynamics?

After all this, I don't expect Sheila Tate or anyone at CPB will actually even say anything to Bill Moyers about his record. But doing nothing underlines that journalistic imbalance at PBS isn't a "perception." It's a daily fact of life.

Mr. DOLE. I reserve the remainder of my leader's time.

TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the bill, H.R. 11, which is to be considered at this time for debate only.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 11) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax incentives for the establishment of tax enterprise zones and for other purposes.

TITLE I—PROVISIONS RELATING TO DISTRESSED URBAN AND RURAL AREAS

Subtitle A—Urban Tax Enterprise Zones, Rural Development Investment Zones, and Indian Reservation Tax Enterprise Zones

SEC. 1101. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this subtitle to establish a demonstration program of providing incentives for the creation of tax enterprise zones in order—

(1) to revitalize economically and physically distressed areas, primarily by encouraging the formation of new businesses and the retention and expansion of existing businesses, and

(2) to promote meaningful employment for tax enterprise zone residents.

SEC. 1102. DESIGNATION AND TREATMENT OF URBAN TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES, RURAL DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT ZONES, AND INDIAN RESERVATION TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 1 (relating to normal taxes and surtaxes) is amended by inserting after subchapter T the following new subchapter:

"Subchapter U—Designation and Treatment of Tax Enterprise Zones

"Part I. Designation of tax enterprise zones.
"Part II. Incentives for tax enterprise zones.

"PART I—DESIGNATION OF TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES

"Sec. 1391. Designation procedure.
"Sec. 1392. Eligibility and selection criteria.
"Sec. 1393. Definitions and special rules.

"SEC. 1391. DESIGNATION PROCEDURE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, the term 'tax enterprise zone' means any area which is, under this part—

"(1) nominated by 1 or more local governments and the State in which it is located for designation as a tax enterprise zone, and

"(2) designated by—

"(A) the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development in the case of an urban tax enterprise zone,

"(B) the Secretary of Agriculture, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, in the case of a rural development investment zone, and

"(C) the Secretary of the Interior in the case of an Indian reservation tax enterprise zone.

"(b) NUMBER OF DESIGNATIONS.—

"(1) AGGREGATE LIMIT.—The appropriate Secretaries shall designate 25 nominated areas as tax enterprise zones under this section, of which 15 shall be urban tax enterprise zones, 8 shall be rural development investment zones, and 2 shall be Indian reservation tax enterprise zones. Such designations may be made only during calendar years after 1992 and before 1997 and shall be subject to the availability of eligible nominated areas.

"(2) ANNUAL LIMITS.—

"(A) URBAN TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES.—The number of urban tax enterprise zones designated under paragraph (1)—

"(i) in calendar year 1993 shall not exceed 6,

"(ii) in calendar year 1994 shall not exceed the sum of 4 plus the carryover amount for such year,

"(iii) in calendar year 1995 shall not exceed the sum of 3 plus the carryover amount for such year, and

"(iv) in calendar year 1996 shall not exceed the sum of 2 plus the carryover amount for such year.

"(B) RURAL DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT ZONES.—The number of rural development investment zones designated under paragraph (1)—

"(i) in calendar year 1993 shall not exceed 3,

"(ii) in calendar year 1994 shall not exceed the sum of 2 plus the carryover amount for such year,

"(iii) in calendar year 1995 shall not exceed the sum of 2 plus the carryover amount for such year, and

"(iv) in calendar year 1996 shall not exceed the sum of 1 plus the carryover amount for such year.

"(C) INDIAN RESERVATION TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES.—The number of Indian reservation tax enterprise zones under paragraph (1)—

"(i) in calendar year 1993 shall not exceed 1,

"(ii) in calendar year 1994 shall not exceed the sum of 1 plus the carryover amount for such year, and

"(iii) in calendar years 1995 and 1996 shall not exceed the carryover amount for such year.

"(D) CARRYOVER AMOUNT.—For purposes of subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), the carryover amount for any calendar year shall be equal to the amount by which—

"(i) the limitation under such subparagraph for the preceding calendar year, exceeds

"(ii) the number of designations made under paragraph (1) for the type of tax enterprise zone to which such subparagraph relates in such preceding calendar year.

"(3) ADVANCE DESIGNATIONS PERMITTED.—For purposes of this subchapter, a designation during any calendar year after 1992 shall be treated as made on January 1 of the following calendar year if the appropriate Secretary, in making such designation, specifies that such designation is effective as of such January 1.

"(c) LIMITATIONS ON DESIGNATIONS.—The appropriate Secretary may not make any designation under subsection (a) unless—

"(1) the local governments and the State in which the nominated area is located have the authority—

"(A) to nominate the area for designation as a tax enterprise zone, and

"(B) to provide assurances satisfactory to the appropriate Secretary that the commitments under section 1392(c) will be fulfilled,

"(2) the appropriate Secretary determines that any information furnished is reasonably accurate, and

"(3) the State and local governments certify that no portion of the area nominated is already included in a tax enterprise zone or in an area otherwise nominated to be a tax enterprise zone.

"(d) PERIOD FOR WHICH DESIGNATION IS IN EFFECT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any designation of an area as a tax enterprise zone shall remain in effect during the period beginning on the date of the designation and ending on the earliest of—

"(A) December 31 of the 10th calendar year following the calendar year in which such date occurs,

"(B) the termination date designated by the State and local governments as provided for in their nomination, or

"(C) the date the appropriate Secretary revokes the designation under paragraph (2).

"(2) REVOCATION OF DESIGNATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Secretary shall revoke the designation of an area as a tax enterprise zone if such Secretary determines that the local government or the State in which it is located—

"(i) has significantly modified the boundaries of the area, or

"(ii) is not complying substantially with the State and local commitments pursuant to section 1392(c).

"(B) APPLICABLE PROCEDURES.—A designation may be revoked by the appropriate Secretary under subparagraph (A) only after a hearing on the record at which officials of the State or local government are given the opportunity to participate and after an opportunity for the State or local government to correct any deficiencies the Secretary determines under subparagraph (A).

"(C) REVOCATION TO BE PROSPECTIVE.—Any revocation under subparagraph (A) shall not take effect before the date of the final determination under subparagraph (A) (after application of subparagraph (B)).

"SEC. 1392. ELIGIBILITY AND SELECTION CRITERIA.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Secretary may make a designation of any nominated area under section 1391 only on the basis of the eligibility and selection criteria set forth in this section.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—

"(1) URBAN TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES.—A nominated area which is not a rural area (and any portion of which is not located on an Indian reservation) shall be eligible for designation under section 1391 only if it meets the following criteria:

"(A) POPULATION.—The nominated area has a population (as determined by the 1990 or subsequent census data) of not less than 20,000.

"(B) DISTRESS.—The nominated area is one of pervasive unemployment and general distress.

"(C) SIZE.—The nominated area—

"(i) is one contiguous area, and

"(ii) is located within not more than 2 States.

"(D) POVERTY RATE.—The poverty rate (as determined by the 1990 or subsequent census data)—

"(i) for each population census tract within the nominated area is not less than 25 percent, and

"(ii) for not less than 80 percent of the population census tracts within the nominated area is not less than 35 percent.

"(E) COURSE OF ACTION.—There has been adopted for the nominated area a course of action which meets the requirements of subsection (c).

"(2) RURAL DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT ZONES.—A nominated area which is a rural area shall be eligible for designation under section 1391 only if it meets the following criteria:

"(A) POPULATION.—The nominated area has a population (as determined by the 1990 or subsequent census data) of not less than 10,000.

"(B) ADDITIONAL CRITERIA.—The criteria set forth in subparagraphs (B), (C), (D), and (E) of paragraph (1).

"(3) INDIAN RESERVATION TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES.—A nominated area which is an Indian reservation tax enterprise zone shall be eligible for designation under section 1391 only if it meets the following criteria:

"(A) SIZE.—The nominated area—

"(i) is located on an Indian reservation,

"(ii) is one contiguous area, and

"(iii) is located within not more than 2 States.

"(B) ADDITIONAL CRITERIA.—The criteria set forth in subparagraphs (B), (D), and (E) of paragraph (1).

"(4) SPECIAL RULE WITH RESPECT TO COURSE OF ACTION CRITERIA.—In the case of a nominated area which is—

"(A) described in paragraph (2) and is located on an Indian reservation, or

"(B) described in paragraph (3), the criteria set forth in subparagraph (E) of paragraph (1) shall apply only to the extent the reservation governing body has legal authority to comply with such criteria.

"(c) REQUIRED STATE AND LOCAL COURSE OF ACTION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No nominated area may be designated as a tax enterprise zone unless the local government and the State in which it is located agree in writing that, during any period during which the area is a tax enterprise zone, the governments will follow a specified course of action designed to reduce the various burdens borne by employers or employees in the area.

"(2) COURSE OF ACTION.—The course of action under paragraph (1) may be implemented by both governments and nongovernmental entities, may not be funded from proceeds of any Federal program (other than discretionary proceeds), and—

"(A) shall include—

"(i) a certification by the State insurance commissioner (or similar State official) that basic commercial property insurance of a type comparable to that insurance generally in force in urban or rural areas, whichever is applicable, throughout the State is available to businesses within the tax enterprise zone,

"(ii) a program to ensure the necessary rehabilitation of publicly owned property within the tax enterprise zone,

"(iii) an increase in the level, or efficiency of delivery, of local public services within the tax enterprise zone,

"(iv) the involvement in the program by public authorities or private entities, organizations, neighborhood associations, and community groups, particularly those within the nominated area, including a written commitment to provide jobs and job training for, and technical, financial, or other assistance to, employers, employees, and residents of the nominated area,

"(v) the giving of special preference to contractors owned and operated by members of any socially and economically disadvantaged group (within the meaning of section 8(a) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)), in connection with an activity any part of which occurs within the tax enterprise zone,

"(vi) the establishment of a program to encourage local financial institutions to satisfy their obligations under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et seq.) by making loans to tax enterprise zone businesses, with emphasis on locally-owned businesses and on small-business concerns (as defined in section 3(a) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632(a)),

"(vii) the giving of special preference to qualified low-income housing projects located in tax enterprise zones, in the allocation of the State housing credit ceiling applicable under section 42, and

"(viii) the giving of special preference to facilities located in tax enterprise zones, in the allocation of the State ceiling on private activity bonds applicable under section 146, and

"(B) may include—

"(i) a reduction of tax rates or fees applying within the tax enterprise zone,

"(ii) the gift (or sale at below fair market value) of surplus land in the tax enterprise zone to neighborhood organizations agreeing to operate a business on the land, and

"(iii) the establishment of a program under which employers within the tax enterprise zone may purchase health insurance for their employees on a pooled basis.

"(3) RECOGNITION OF PAST EFFORTS.—In evaluating courses of action agreed to by any State or local government, the appropriate Secretary shall take into account the past efforts of the State or local government in reducing the various burdens borne by employers and employees in the area involved.

"(4) PROHIBITION OF ASSISTANCE FOR BUSINESS RELOCATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The course of action implemented under paragraph (1) may not include any action to assist any establishment in relocating from 1 area outside the nominated area to the nominated area.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—The limitation established in subparagraph (A) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary if—

"(i) the establishment of the new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in a decrease in employment in the area of original location or in any other area where the existing business entity conducts business operations, and

"(ii) there is no reason to believe that the new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where the existing business entity conducts business operations.

"(d) SELECTION CRITERIA.—

"(1) ELIGIBILITY.—The appropriate Secretary shall make a determination as to whether a nominated area meets the eligibility requirements under subsection (b) for designation as a tax enterprise zone.

"(2) DESIGNATION.—From among the nominated areas determined to be eligible for designation under paragraph (1), the appropriate Secretary shall make designations of tax enterprise zones on the basis of the following factors (each of which is to be given equal weight).

"(A) STATE AND LOCAL COMMITMENTS.—The strength and quality of the commitments which have been promised as part of the course of action relative to the fiscal ability of the nominating State and local governments.

"(B) IMPLEMENTATION OF COURSE OF ACTION.—The effectiveness and enforceability of the guarantees that the course of action will actually be carried out, including the specificity with which the commitments under subparagraph (A) are described in order that the applicable Secretary will be better able to determine annually under section 1391(d)(2)(A)(ii) whether the commitments are being carried out.

"(C) PRIVATE COMMITMENTS.—The level of commitments by private entities of additional resources and contributions to the economy of the nominated area, including the creation of new or expanded business activities.

"(D) LEVELS OF POVERTY AND DISTRESS.—The relative levels of distress and poverty under subparagraphs (B) and (D) of subsection (b)(1).

"SEC. 1393. DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.

"For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) URBAN TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE.—The term 'urban tax enterprise zone' means a tax enterprise zone which meets the requirements of section 1392(b)(1).

"(2) RURAL DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT ZONE.—The term 'rural development investment zone' means a tax enterprise zone which meets the requirements of section 1392(b)(2).

"(3) INDIAN RESERVATION TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE.—The term 'Indian reservation tax enterprise zone' means a tax enterprise zone which meets the requirements of section 1392(b)(3).

"(4) GOVERNMENTS.—If more than 1 government seeks to nominate an area as a tax enterprise zone, any reference to, or requirement of, this subchapter shall apply to all such governments.

"(5) INDIAN RESERVATION.—The term 'Indian reservation' means a reservation, as defined in—

"(A) section 3(d) of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1452(d)), or

"(B) section 4(10) of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1903(10)).

"(6) LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The term 'local government' means—

"(A) any county, city, town, township, parish, village, or other general purpose political subdivision of a State, and

"(B) any combination of political subdivisions described in subparagraph (A) recognized by the appropriate Secretary.

"(7) NOMINATED AREA.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'nominated area' means an area which is nominated by 1 or more local governments and the State in which it is located for designation as a tax enterprise zone under this subchapter.

"(B) INDIAN RESERVATIONS.—In the case of a nominated area on an Indian reservation, the reservation governing body (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior) shall be deemed to be both the State and local governments with respect to the area.

"(8) RURAL AREA.—The term 'rural area' means any area which is—

"(A) outside of a metropolitan statistical area (within the meaning of section 143(k)(2)(B)), or

"(B) determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, to be a rural area. Such term may include an area within an Indian reservation.

"(9) APPROPRIATE SECRETARY.—The term 'appropriate Secretary' means—

"(A) the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development in the case of urban tax enterprise zones,

"(B) the Secretary of Agriculture in the case of rural development investment zones, and

"(C) the Secretary of the Interior in the case of Indian reservation tax enterprise zones.

"(10) POPULATION CENSUS TRACTS.—If areas are not tracted as population census tracts, the equivalent county divisions as defined by the Bureau of the Census for purposes of defining poverty areas shall be treated as population census tracts.

"PART II—INCENTIVES FOR TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES

"SUBPART A. Enterprise zone employment credits.

"SUBPART B. Investment incentives.

"SUBPART C. General provisions.

"Subpart A—Enterprise Zone Employment Credits

"Sec. 1395. Enterprise zone employment credit.

"SEC. 1395. ENTERPRISE ZONE EMPLOYMENT CREDIT.

"(a) AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—For purposes of section 38, the amount of the enterprise zone employment credit determined under this section with respect to any employer for any taxable year is 40 percent of the qualified zone wages paid or incurred during such taxable year.

"(b) QUALIFIED ZONE WAGES.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualified zone wages' means any wages paid or incurred by an employer for services performed by an employee while such employee is a qualified zone employee to the extent such wages do not exceed $20,000.

"(c) QUALIFIED ZONE EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the term 'qualified zone employee' means, with respect to any period, any employee of an employer if—

"(A) substantially all of the services performed during such period by such employee for such employer are performed within a tax enterprise zone in a trade or business of the employer, and

"(B) the principal place of abode of such employee while performing such services is within such tax enterprise zone.

"(2) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS NOT ELIGIBLE.—The term 'qualified zone employee' shall not include—

"(A) any individual described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of section 51(i)(1),

"(B) any 5-percent owner (as defined in section 416(i)(1)(B)),

"(C) any individual unless such individual either—

"(i) is employed by the employer at least 90 days, or

"(ii) has completed at least 120 hours of services performed for the employer, and

"(D) any individual employed by the employer at any facility described in section 144(c)(6)(B).

"(d) CREDIT REFUNDABLE FOR SMALL EMPLOYERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of so much of the credit allowed by section 38 which is attributable to the enterprise zone employment credit of a small employer—

"(A) section 38(c) shall not apply, and

"(B) for purposes of this title, such credit shall be treated as if it were allowed under subpart C of this part (relating to refundable credits).

"(2) SMALL EMPLOYER.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'small employer' means, with respect to any taxable year, any employer which had gross receipts not greater than $2,000,000 during the preceding taxable year.

"(B) PHASEOUT.—In the case of an employer which had gross receipts in excess of $1,000,000, the amount of the credit to which paragraph (1) would otherwise apply shall be reduced by the amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of the credit as such excess bears to $1,000,000.

"(C) GROSS RECEIPTS; PREDECESSORS.—For purposes of this paragraph, rules similar to the rules of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) of section 448(c)(3) shall apply.

"(e) NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF ADVANCE PAYMENT OF EARNED INCOME CREDIT.—No credit shall be allowed to any employer which fails to notify all of the employees of such employer eligible to receive advanced payments of the credit under section 32 (relating to the earned income credit) of the availability of such advanced payments.

"(f) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) WAGES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'wages' has the same meaning as when used in section 51, except that paragraph (4) of section 51(c) shall not apply.

"(B) CERTAIN TRAINING AND EDUCATIONAL BENEFITS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The following amounts shall be treated as wages paid to an employee:

"(I) Any amount paid or incurred by an employer which is excludable from the gross income of an employee under section 127, but only to the extent paid or incurred to a person which is not a related person.

"(II) In the case of an employee who has not attained the age of 19, any amount paid or incurred by an employer for any youth training program operated by such employer in conjunction with local education officials.

"(ii) RELATED PERSON.—A person is related to any other person if the person bears a relationship to such other person specified in section 267(b) or 707(b)(1), or such person and such other person are engaged in trades or businesses under common control (within the meaning of subsections (a) and (b) of section 52). For purposes of the preceding sentence, in applying section 267(b) or 707(b)(1), '10 percent' shall be substituted for '50 percent'.

"(2) CONTROLLED GROUPS.—

"(A) TREATED AS SINGLE EMPLOYER.—All employers treated as a single employer under subsection (a) or (b) of section 52 shall be treated as a single employer for purposes of this subpart.

"(B) PROPORTIONATE SHARE.—The credit (if any) determined under this section with respect to each employer described in subparagraph (A) shall be such employer's proportionate share of the wages giving rise to such credit.

"(3) CERTAIN OTHER RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to the rules of section 51(k) and subsections (c), (d), and (e) of section 52 shall apply.

"Subpart B—Investment Incentives

"Sec. 1397. Additional expensing allowance.

"Sec. 1397A. Accelerated depreciation.

"Sec. 1397B. Deduction for purchase of enterprise zone stock.

"Sec. 1397C. Low-income housing credit.

"Sec. 1397D. Ordinary loss treatment for certain property.

"SEC. 1397. ADDITIONAL EXPENSING ALLOWANCE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a qualified enterprise zone business, for purposes of section 179—

"(1) qualified zone property shall be treated as section 179 property,

"(2) the limitation under subsection (b) shall apply in lieu of the limitation under section 179(b)(1), and

"(3) in the case of section 179 property other than qualified zone property, the limitation under section 179(b)(1) (as reduced under section 179(b)(2)) applicable to such property shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the cost of qualified zone property placed in service during the taxable year.

"(b) LIMITATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The aggregate cost of qualified zone property which may be taken into account under section 179(a) for any taxable year shall not exceed $75,000.

"(2) REDUCTION IN LIMITATION.—The limitation under paragraph (1) for any taxable year shall be reduced (but not below zero) by 50 percent of the amount by which the cost of qualified zone property placed in service during such taxable year exceeds $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE BUSINESS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subchapter, the term 'qualified enterprise zone business' means—

"(A) any qualified business entity, and

"(B) any qualified proprietorship.

"(2) QUALIFIED BUSINESS ENTITY.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified business entity' means, with respect to any taxable year, any corporation or partnership if for such year—

"(A)(i) every trade or business of such entity is the active conduct of a qualified business within a tax enterprise zone, and

"(ii) at least 80 percent of the total gross income of such entity is derived from the active conduct of any such business,

"(B) substantially all of the use of the tangible property of such entity (whether owned or leased) is within a tax enterprise zone,

"(C) substantially all of the intangible property of such entity is used in, and exclusively related to, the active conduct of any such business,

"(D) substantially all of the services performed for such entity by its employees are performed in a tax enterprise zone,

"(E) at least 1/3 of its employees are residents of a tax enterprise zone, and

"(F) less than 5 percent of the average of the aggregate unadjusted bases of the property of such entity is attributable to—

"(i) collectibles (as defined in section 408(m)(2)) other than collectibles that are held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of any such business, or

"(ii) nonqualified financial property.

"(3) QUALIFIED PROPRIETORSHIP.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified proprietorship' means, with respect to any taxable year, any qualified business carried on by an individual as a proprietorship if for such year—

"(A) at least 80 percent of the total gross income of such business is derived from the active conduct of such business in a tax enterprise zone,

"(B) substantially all of the use of the tangible property of such business (whether owned or leased) is within a tax enterprise zone,

"(C) substantially all of the intangible property of such business is used in, and exclusively related to, the active conduct of such business,

"(D) substantially all of the services performed for such business by employees of such business are performed in a tax enterprise zone,

"(E) at least 1/3 of such employees are residents of a tax enterprise zone,

"(F) less than 5 percent of the average of the aggregate unadjusted bases of the property of such business is attributable to—

"(i) collectibles (as defined in section 408(m)(2)) other than collectibles that are held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of such business, or

"(ii) nonqualified financial property.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'employee' includes a self-employed individual (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)).

"(4) QUALIFIED BUSINESS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, the term 'qualified business' means any trade or business.

"(B) RENTAL OF REAL PROPERTY.—The rental of any building or structure located in a tax enterprise zone shall be treated as a qualified business if and only if at least 50 percent of the gross rental income from the building or structure is from enterprise zone businesses (without regard to this subparagraph).

"(C) RENTAL OF TANGIBLE PERSONAL PROPERTY.—The rental of tangible personal property shall be treated as a qualified business if and only if substantially all of the rental of such property is by enterprise zone businesses or by residents of a tax enterprise zone.

"(D) TREATMENT OF BUSINESS HOLDING INTANGIBLES.—The term 'qualified business' shall not include any trade or business consisting predominantly of the development or holding of intangibles for sale or license.

"(E) CERTAIN BUSINESSES EXCLUDED.—The term 'qualified business' shall not include any trade or business consisting of the operation of any facility described in section 144(c)(6)(B).

"(5) NONQUALIFIED FINANCIAL PROPERTY.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'nonqualified financial property' means debt, stock, partnership interests, options, futures contracts, forward contracts, warrants, notional principal contracts, annuities, and other similar property specified in regulations; except that such term shall not include—

"(A) reasonable amounts of working capital held in cash, cash equivalents, or debt instruments with a term of 18 months or less, or

"(B) accounts or notes receivable described in section 1221(4).

"(6) TERMINATION OF ENTERPRISE ZONE BUSINESS.—An activity shall cease to be a qualified enterprise zone business as of the date on which the designation of the enterprise zone in which the activity is conducted terminates or is revoked pursuant to section 1391(d). The preceding sentence shall not apply—

"(A) during the 1st taxable year of an activity,

"(B) to property placed in service before the date of the termination or revocation of such designation, or

"(C) to property placed in service on or after such date pursuant to a binding, written contract in effect before such date and at all times thereafter.

"(d) QUALIFIED ZONE PROPERTY.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified zone property' means any property to which section 168 applies—

"(A) if such property was acquired by the taxpayer by purchase (as defined in section 179(d)(2)) after the date on which the designation of the tax enterprise zone took effect,

"(B) the original use of which in a tax enterprise zone commences with the taxpayer, and

"(C) substantially all of the use of which is in a tax enterprise zone and is in the active conduct of a trade or business by the taxpayer in such zone.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR SUBSTANTIAL RENOVATIONS.—In the case of any property which is substantially renovated by the taxpayer, the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) shall be treated as satisfied. For purposes of the preceding sentence, property shall be treated as substantially renovated by the taxpayer if, during any 24-month period beginning after the date on which the designation of the tax enterprise zone took effect, additions to basis with respect to such property in the hands of the taxpayer exceed the greater of (i) an amount equal to the adjusted basis at the beginning of such 24-month period in the hands of the taxpayer, or (ii) $5,000.

"(3) EXCEPTION FOR ALTERNATIVE DEPRECIATION PROPERTY.—The term 'qualified zone property' does not include any property to which the alternative depreciation system under section 168(g) applies, determined—

"(A) without regard to section 168(g)(7) (relating to election to use alternative depreciation system), and

"(B) after application of section 280F(b) (relating to listed property with limited business use).

"(e) SPECIAL RULES FOR SALE-LEASEBACKS.—For purposes of subsection (b)(2), if property is sold and leased back by the taxpayer within 3 months after the date such property was originally placed in service, such property shall be treated as originally placed in service not earlier than the date on which such property is used under the leaseback.

"(f) RECAPTURE.—Rules similar to the rules under section 179(d)(10) shall apply with respect to any qualified zone property of any business which ceases to be a qualified enterprise zone business.

"SEC. 1397A. ACCELERATED DEPRECIATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of section 168, with respect to qualified zone property (as defined in section 1397(d)) of a qualified enterprise zone business (as defined in section 1397(c)), the applicable recovery period shall be determined in accordance with the table contained in subsection (b) in lieu of the table contained in section 168(c)(1).

"(b) APPLICABLE RECOVERY PERIOD FOR QUALIFIED ZONE PROPERTY.—For purposes of subsection (a)—

"In the case of:	The applicable recovery period is:
3-year property	2 years
5-year property	3 years
7-year property	4 years
10-year property	6 years
15-year property	9 years
20-year property	12 years
Nonresidential real property	20 years.

"SEC. 1397B. DEDUCTION FOR PURCHASE OF ENTERPRISE ZONE STOCK.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction an amount equal to 50 percent of the aggregate amount paid in cash by the taxpayer during the taxable year for the purchase of enterprise zone stock.

"(b) LIMITATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The maximum amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a) to a taxpayer for the taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $25,000, or

"(B) the excess of $250,000 over the amount allowed as a deduction under this section to the taxpayer for all prior taxable years.

"(2) EXCESS AMOUNTS.—If the amount otherwise deductible by any person under subsection (a) exceeds the limitation under paragraph (1)(A)—

"(A) the amount of such excess shall be treated as an amount paid to which subsection (a) applies during the next taxable year, and

"(B) the deduction allowed for any taxable year shall be allocated proportionately among the enterprise zone stock purchased by such person on the basis of the respective purchase prices per share.

"(3) AGGREGATION WITH FAMILY MEMBERS.—The taxpayer and members of the taxpayer's family (as defined in section 267(c)(4)) shall be treated as one person for purposes of paragraph (1), and the limitations contained in such paragraph shall be allocated among the taxpayer and such members in accordance with their respective purchases of enterprise zone stock.

"(c) ENTERPRISE ZONE STOCK.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'enterprise zone stock' means stock of a corporation if—

"(A) such stock is acquired on original issue from the corporation, and

"(B) such corporation is, at the time of issue, a qualified enterprise zone issuer.

"(2) PROCEEDS MUST BE INVESTED IN QUALIFIED ZONE PROPERTY.—The term 'enterprise zone stock' shall include such stock only to the extent that the proceeds of such issuance are used by such issuer during the 12-month period beginning on the date of issuance to purchase (as defined in section 179(d)(2)) qualified zone property (as defined in section 1397(d)).

"(3) REDEMPTIONS.—The term 'enterprise zone stock' shall not include any stock acquired from a corporation which made a substantial stock redemption or distribution (without a bona fide business purpose therefor) in an attempt to avoid the purposes of this section.

"(d) QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE ISSUER.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualified enterprise zone issuer' means any domestic C corporation if—

"(1) such corporation is a qualified enterprise zone business (as defined in section 1397(c)) or, in the case of a new corporation, such corporation is being organized for purposes of being such a qualified enterprise zone business,

"(2) such corporation does not have more than one class of stock,

"(3) the sum of—

"(A) the money,

"(B) the aggregate unadjusted bases of property owned by such corporation, and

"(C) the value of property leased to the corporation (as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary), does not exceed $3,000,000, and

"(4) more than 20 percent of the total voting power, and 20 percent of the total value, of the stock of such corporation is owned directly by individuals or estates or indirectly by individuals through partnerships or trusts.

The determination under paragraph (3) shall be made as of the time of issuance of the stock in question but shall include amounts received for such stock.

"(e) DISPOSITIONS OF STOCK.—

"(1) BASIS REDUCTION.—For purposes of this title, the basis of any enterprise zone stock shall be reduced by the amount of the deduction allowed under this section with respect to such stock.

"(2) DEDUCTION RECAPTURED AS ORDINARY INCOME.—For purposes of section 1245—

"(A) any stock the basis of which is reduced under paragraph (1) (and any other property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such stock) shall be treated as section 1245 property, and

"(B) any reduction under paragraph (1) shall be treated as a deduction allowed for depreciation.

If an exchange of any stock described in paragraph (1) qualifies under section 354(a), 355(a), or 356(a), the amount of gain recognized under section 1245 by reason of this paragraph shall not exceed the amount of gain recognized in the exchange (determined without regard to this paragraph).

"(3) CERTAIN EVENTS TREATED AS DISPOSITIONS.—For purposes of determining the amount treated as ordinary income under section 1245 by reason of paragraph (2), paragraph (3) of section 1245(b) (relating to certain tax-free transactions) shall not apply.

"(4) INTEREST CHARGED IF DISPOSITION WITHIN 5 YEARS OF PURCHASE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) a taxpayer disposes of any enterprise zone stock with respect to which a deduction was allowed under subsection (a) (or any other property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such stock) before the end of the 5-year period beginning on the date such stock was purchased by the taxpayer, and

"(ii) section 1245(a) applies to such disposition by reason of paragraph (2), then the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which such disposition occurs shall be increased by the amount determined under subparagraph (B).

"(B) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the additional amount shall be equal to the amount of interest (determined at the rate applicable under section 6621(a)(2)) that would accrue—

"(i) during the period beginning on the date the stock was purchased by the taxpayer and ending on the date of the disposition by the taxpayer,

"(ii) on an amount equal to the aggregate decrease in tax of the taxpayer resulting from the deduction allowed under this subsection (a) with respect to such stock.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE.—Any increase in tax under subparagraph (A) shall not be treated as a tax imposed by this chapter for purposes of—

"(i) determining the amount of any credit allowable under this chapter, and

"(ii) determining the amount of the tax imposed by section 55.

"(f) DISQUALIFICATION.—

"(1) ISSUER CEASES TO QUALIFY.—If, during the 10-year period beginning on the date enterprise zone stock was purchased by the taxpayer, the issuer of such stock ceases to be a qualified enterprise zone issuer (determined without regard to subsection (d)(3)), then notwithstanding any provision of this subtitle other than paragraph (2), the taxpayer shall be treated for purposes of subsection (e) as disposing of such stock (and any other property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such stock) during the taxable year during which such cessation occurs at its fair market value as of the 1st day of such taxable year.

"(2) CESSATION OF ENTERPRISE ZONE STATUS NOT TO CAUSE RECAPTURE.—A corporation shall not fail to be treated as a qualified enterprise zone issuer for purposes of paragraph (1) solely by reason of the termination or revocation of a tax enterprise zone designation.

"(g) OTHER SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) APPLICATION OF LIMITS TO PARTNERSHIPS AND S CORPORATIONS.—In the case of a partnership or an S corporation, the limitations under subsection (b) shall apply at the partner and shareholder level and shall not apply at the partnership or corporation level.

"(2) DEDUCTION NOT ALLOWED TO ESTATES AND TRUSTS.—Estates and trusts shall not be treated as individuals for purposes of this section.

"SEC. 1397C. LOW-INCOME HOUSING CREDIT.

"For purposes of section 42(d)(5)(C), any building located in a tax enterprise zone shall be treated in the same manner as if located in a qualified census tract.

"SEC. 1397D. ORDINARY LOSS TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN PROPERTY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Loss on any qualified zone asset held for more than 2 years (5 years in the case of real property) shall be treated as an ordinary loss.

"(b) QUALIFIED ZONE ASSET.—For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified zone asset' means—

"(A) in the case of an individual, any qualified zone stock or any qualified zone partnership interest, and

"(B) any qualified zone business property.

"(2) QUALIFIED ZONE STOCK.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'qualified zone stock' means any stock in a domestic corporation if—

"(i) such stock is acquired by the taxpayer on original issue from the corporation solely in exchange for cash,

"(ii) as of the time such stock was issued, such corporation was an enterprise zone business, or, in the case of a new corporation, such corporation was being organized for purposes of being an enterprise zone business, and

"(iii) during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period for such stock, such corporation qualified as an enterprise zone business.

"(B) EXCLUSION OF STOCK FOR WHICH DEDUCTION UNDER SECTION 1397B ALLOWED.—The term 'qualified zone stock' shall not include any stock the basis of which is reduced under section 1397B(e)(1).

"(C) REDEMPTIONS.—The term 'qualified zone stock' shall not include any stock acquired from a corporation which made a substantial stock redemption or distribution (without a bona fide business purpose therefor) in an attempt to avoid the purposes of this section.

"(3) QUALIFIED ZONE PARTNERSHIP INTEREST.—The term 'qualified zone partnership interest' means any interest in a partnership if—

"(A) such interest is acquired by the taxpayer from the partnership solely in exchange for cash,

"(B) as of the time such interest was acquired, such partnership was an enterprise zone business, or, in the case of a new partnership, such partnership was being organized for purposes of being an enterprise zone business, and

"(C) during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period for such interest, such partnership qualified as an enterprise zone business.

A rule similar to the rule of paragraph (2)(C) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph.

"(4) QUALIFIED ZONE BUSINESS PROPERTY.—The term 'qualified zone business property' means—

"(A) any qualified zone property (as defined in section 1397(d)), and

"(B) any land which is an integral part of an enterprise zone business.

"(5) ENTERPRISE ZONE BUSINESS.—The term 'enterprise zone business' means a qualified business entity (as defined in section 1397(c)(2)).

"(6) REAL PROPERTY.—The term 'real property' means any property which is section 1250 property (as defined in section 1250(c)).

"(7) TREATMENT OF ZONE TERMINATIONS.—The termination of any designation of an area as a tax enterprise zone shall be disregarded for purposes of determining whether any property is a qualified zone asset.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) TREATMENT OF PASS-THRU ENTITIES.—

"(A) SALES AND EXCHANGES.—Loss on the sale or exchange of an interest in a pass-thru entity held by the taxpayer (other than an interest in an entity which was an enterprise zone business during substantially all of the period the taxpayer held such interest) for more than 5 years shall be treated as ordinary loss described in subsection (a) to the extent such loss is attributable to amounts which would be loss on qualified zone assets (determined as if such assets had been sold on the date of the sale or exchange) held by such entity for more than 5 years and throughout the period the taxpayer held such interest. A rule similar to the rule of subparagraph (B)(iii) shall apply for purposes of the preceding sentence.

"(B) DISTRIBUTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Any loss described in clause (ii) shall be treated as ordinary loss described in subsection (a).

"(ii) REQUIREMENTS.—A loss is described in this clause if—

"(I) such loss is attributable to loss on the sale or exchange by the pass-thru entity of property which is a qualified zone asset in the hands of such entity and which was held by such entity for the period required under subsection (a), and

"(II) such amount is included in computing the taxable income of the taxpayer by reason of the holding of an interest in such entity.

"(C) PASS-THRU ENTITY.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'pass-thru entity' means—

"(i) any partnership,

"(ii) any S corporation,

"(iii) any regulated investment company, and

"(iv) any common trust fund.

"(2) CERTAIN TAX-FREE AND OTHER TRANSFERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a transfer of a qualified zone asset to which this paragraph applies, the transferee shall be treated as—

"(i) having acquired such asset in the same manner as the transferor, and

"(ii) having held such asset during any continuous period immediately preceding the transfer during which it was held (or treated as held under this paragraph) by the transferor.

"(B) TRANSFERS TO WHICH PARAGRAPH APPLIES.—This paragraph shall apply to any transfer—

"(i) by gift,

"(ii) at death, or

"(iii) from a partnership to a partner thereof of a qualified zone asset with respect to which the requirements of paragraph (2)(B) are met at the time of the transfer (without regard to the 5-year holding requirement).

"(3) CERTAIN OTHER RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 1244(d) shall apply.

"(4) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 1231.—Losses treated as ordinary losses by reason of this subsection shall not be taken into account in applying section 1231.

"Subpart C—General Provisions

"Sec. 1397E. Regulations.

"SEC. 1397E. REGULATIONS.

"The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this part, including—

"(1) regulations limiting the benefit of this part in circumstances where such benefits, in combination with benefits provided under other Federal programs, would result in an activity being 100 percent or more subsidized by the Federal Government, and

"(2) regulations preventing avoidance of the provisions of this part."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of subchapters for chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to subchapter T the following new item:

"SUBCHAPTER U. Designation and treatment of tax enterprise zones."

SEC. 1103. TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE BONDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 142 (relating to exempt facility bonds) is amended by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (10), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (11) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) qualified enterprise zone facilities."

(b) DEFINITION.—Section 142 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE FACILITIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a)(12), the term 'qualified enterprise zone facilities' means any qualified zone property (as defined in section 1397(d) (other than paragraph (3) thereof)) of a qualified enterprise zone business (as defined in section 1397(c)), and any land located within a tax enterprise zone which is an integral part of such business.

"(2) TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE.—For purposes of this subsection (and for applying sections 1397(c) and 1397(d) under paragraph (1)), the term 'tax enterprise zone' has the meaning given such term by section 1391(a), except that such term also includes any other nominated area for the 5-year period beginning with the date such area determined by the appropriate Secretary under section 1392(d)(1) to be eligible for designation as a tax enterprise zone.

"(3) USE OF PROCEEDS.—

"(A) PERIOD TO SPEND PROCEEDS.—

"(i) GENERAL RULE.—A bond issued as part of an issue described in subsection (a)(12) shall not be considered an exempt facility bond unless the proceeds are spent for the governmental purpose of the issue within an 18-month period of the date of the issuance of the bond.

"(ii) EXCEPTION.—Clause (i) shall not apply to any bond if—

"(I) the issuer pays a penalty equal to 3 percent of the amount of available proceeds of the issue which is not spent for the governmental purpose of the issue as of the close of the 18-month period described in clause (i), and

"(II) the issuer redeems such bond not later than 24 months after the date of the issuance of the bond.

"(B) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF BONDS.—A bond issued as part of an issue described in subsection (a)(12) shall not be considered an exempt facility bond if, at any time, the face amount of such bond plus the aggregate face amount of any outstanding bonds issued as part of an issue described in subsection (a)(12) used or to be used with respect to any qualified enterprise zone business which is a principal user of a facility financed by the proceeds of the issue exceeds $1,000,000 (not including as outstanding any bond which is to be redeemed). For purposes of the preceding sentence, all persons treated as a single employer under subsection (a) or (b) of section 52 shall be treated as 1 person.

"(C) HOUSING LOANS EXCLUDED.—A bond issued as part of an issue described in subsection (a)(12) shall not be considered an exempt facility bond if any portion of the proceeds are used directly or indirectly to provide residential real property."

(b) CERTAIN RULES NOT TO APPLY.—Subsection (h) of section 147 (relating to other requirements applicable to certain private activity bonds) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) BONDS FOR QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE FACILITIES.—Subsections (c)(2) and (d) shall not apply to any bonds the proceeds of which are used to finance qualified enterprise zone facilities."

(c) VOLUME CAP ONLY CHARGED WITH 50 PERCENT OF TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE BONDS.—Subsection (g) of section 146 (relating to volume cap) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) 50 percent of any bond issued as part of an issue described in subsection 142(a)(12)."

(d) PENALTIES FOR LOANS MADE TO BUSINESSES THAT CEASE TO BE ENTERPRISE ZONE BUSINESSES, ETC.—Subsection (b) of section 150 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE BONDS.—In the case of any qualified enterprise zone facility with respect to which financing was provided by an issue described in section 142(a)(12)—

"(A) NO DEDUCTION ALLOWED.—No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for interest on such financing which accrues during the period beginning on the first day of the calendar year which includes the date on which—

"(i) the trade or business to which the financing was provided ceases to be a qualified enterprise zone business (as defined in section 1397(c)), or

"(ii) substantially all of the use of such facility (determined in accordance with subchapter U) with respect to which the financing was provided ceases to be in a tax enterprise zone. For purposes of this subparagraph (and for applying section 1397(c) under this subparagraph), the term 'tax enterprise zone' has the meaning given such term by section 142(j)(2).

"(B) PENALTY IMPOSED ON BUSINESS.—If at any time during the 10-year period beginning on the date such financing was provided—

"(i) such facility ceases to be in use in a qualified enterprise zone business (as so defined), or

"(ii) substantially all of the use of such facility ceases to be in a tax enterprise zone (as so defined), there is hereby imposed on such business to which such financing was provided a penalty equal to 1.25 percent of so much of the face amount of all financing provided (whether or not from the same issue and whether or not such issue is outstanding) before such cessation to such business using such facility.

"(C) EXCEPTION IF ZONE CEASES.—Subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall not apply solely by reason of the termination or revocation of a tax enterprise zone designation.

"(D) EXCEPTION FOR BANKRUPTCY.—Subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall not apply to any cessation resulting from bankruptcy."

(e) BANK INTEREST DEDUCTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Clause (ii) of section 265(b)(3)(B) (relating to exception for certain tax-exempt obligations) is amended—

(A) by striking "or" at the end of subclause (I),

(B) by redesignating subclause (II) as subclause (III), and

(C) by inserting after subclause (I) the following new subclause:

"(II) any bond elected not to be treated as private activity under clause (iii), or".

(2) ELECTION NOT TO TREAT QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE FACILITY BONDS AS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS.—Section 265(b)(3)(B) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) ELECTION NOT TO TREAT QUALIFIED ENTERPRISE ZONE FACILITY BONDS AS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS.—A bond issued as part of an issue described in section 142(a)(12)) shall not be treated as a private activity bond if, on or before the date of the issue of such bond, the issuer irrevocably elects not to treat such bond as a private activity bond for purposes of clause (i)(II)."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subclause (I) of section 265(b)(3)(B)(i) (defining qualified tax-exempt obligation) is amended by inserting "or is an obligation issued as part of an issue described in section 142(a)(12)" after "issues".

SEC. 1104. EXPANSION OF TARGETED JOBS CREDIT.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT FOR HIRING TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE RESIDENT.—Paragraph (1) of section 51(d) (defining members of targeted groups), as amended by section 2148 of this Act, is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (J), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (K) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(L) a tax enterprise zone resident."

(b) Tax Enterprise Zone Resident.—Section 51(d), as so amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(18) TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE RESIDENT.—

"(A) In general.—The term 'tax enterprise zone employee' means an individual whose principal place of abode while performing services for the employer is within a tax enterprise zone (as defined in section 1391(a)).

"(B) Coordination with zone employment credit.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified wages' shall not include wages taken into account in determining the credit under section 1395."

SEC. 1105. OTHER PROVISIONS.

(a) Alternative Minimum Tax.—

(1) EMPLOYMENT CREDIT MAY OFFSET REGULAR AND MINIMUM TAX.—

(A) Regular tax.—Subsection (c) of section 38 (relating to limitation based on amount of tax) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR EMPLOYMENT CREDIT.—

"(A) In general.—This section and section 39 shall be applied separately—

"(i) first with respect to so much of the credit allowed by subsection (a) as is not attributable to the employment credit, and

"(ii) then with respect to the employment credit.

"(B) Rules for application of employment credit.—

"(i) In general.—In the case of the employment credit, in lieu of applying the preceding paragraphs of this subsection, the amount of such credit allowed under subsection (a) for any taxable year shall not exceed the net chapter 1 tax for such year.

"(ii) Net chapter 1 tax.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'net chapter 1 tax' means the sum of the regular tax liability for the taxable year and the tax imposed by section 55 for the taxable year, reduced by the sum of the credits allowable under this part for the taxable year (other than under section 34 and other than the employment credit).

"(C) Employment credit.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'employment credit' means the credit allowable under subsection (a) by reason of section 1394, other than that portion of such credit which is treated under section 1394(d) as allowable under subpart C."

(B) Minimum tax.—Paragraph (2) of section 55(c) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Cross references.—

"(A) For provisions providing that certain credits are not allowable against the tax imposed by this section, see sections 26(a), 28(d)(2), 29(b)(5), and 38(c).

"(B) For provisions allowing employment credit against the tax imposed by this section, see section 38(c)(3)."

(2) Expensing.—Subparagraph (A) of section 56(a)(1) (relating to adjustments in computing alternative minimum taxable income), is amended—

(A) in clause (i), by striking "or (ii)" and inserting "(ii), or (iii)", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iv) Expensing for qualified tax enterprise zone property.—The allowance provided by section 1397(a) for qualified zone property shall be allowed."

(b) Enterprise Zone Employment Credit Part of General Business Credit.—

(1) Subsection (b) of section 38 (relating to current year business credit) is amended by striking "plus" at the end of paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (7) and inserting ", plus", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) the enterprise zone employment credit determined under section 1394(a)."

(2) Subsection (d) of section 39 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) No carryback of section 1394 credit before enactment.—No portion of the unused business credit for any taxable year which is attributable to the enterprise zone employment credit determined under section 1394 may be carried to a taxable year ending before the date of the enactment of section 1394."

(c) Denial of Deduction for Portion of Wages Equal to Enterprise Zone Employment Credit.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 280C (relating to rule for targeted jobs credit) is amended—

(A) by striking "the amount of the credit determined for the taxable year under section 51(a)" and inserting "the sum of the credits determined for the taxable year under sections 51(a) and 1394(a)", and

(B) by striking "Targeted Jobs Credit" in the subsection heading and inserting "Employment Credits".

(2) Subsection (c) of section 196 (relating to deduction for certain unused business credits) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) the enterprise zone employment credit determined under section 1394(a)."

(d) Acquisitions.—Subsection (c) of section 381 (relating to carryovers in certain corporate acquisitions) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(26) Enterprise zone provisions.—The acquiring corporation shall take into account (to the extent proper to carry out the purposes of this section and subchapter U, and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary) the items required to be taken into account for purposes of subchapter U in respect of the distributor or transferor corporation."

(e) Nonitemizers Allowed Deduction for Enterprise Zone Stock.—Subsection (a) of section 62 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(14) Enterprise zone stock.—The deduction allowed by section 1397B."

(f) Coordination With Refund Provision.—For purposes of section 1324(b)(2) of title 31 of the United States Code, section 1395(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this Act) shall be considered to be a credit provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 enacted before January 1, 1978.

SEC. 1106. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) General Rule.—The amendments made by this subtitle shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Requirement for Rules.—Not later than the date 4 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the appropriate Secretaries shall issue rules—

(1) establishing the procedures for nominating areas for designation as tax enterprise zones,

(2) establishing a method for comparing the factors listed in section 1392(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this subtitle),

(3) establishing recordkeeping requirements necessary or appropriate to assist the studies required by subtitle B, and

(4) providing that State and local governments shall have at least 5 months after such rules are published to file applications for nominated areas before such applications are evaluated and compared and any area designated as a tax enterprise zone.

Subtitle B—Study

SEC. 1111. STUDY OF EFFECTIVENESS OF TAX ENTERPRISE ZONE INCENTIVES.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the appropriate Secretary (as defined in section 1393(9), as added by subtitle A), shall contract within 3 months of the date of the enactment of this Act, with the National Academy of Sciences (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Academy') to conduct a study of the effectiveness of the incentives provided by subtitle A in achieving the purposes of such subtitle in tax enterprise zones.

(b) Conduct of Study.—If the Academy contracts for the conduct of the study described in subsection (a), the Academy shall develop a study methodology and shall oversee and manage the conduct of such study.

(c) Reports.—The Academy shall submit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate—

(1) not later than July 1, 1997, an interim report setting forth the findings as a result of such study, and

(2) not later than July 1, 2000, a final report setting forth the findings as a result of such study.

(d) Funding.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the study and reports described in this section, $500,000 for fiscal year 1993, and such sums as are necessary for each succeeding fiscal year.

TITLE II—GROWTH INCENTIVES

Subtitle A—Increased Savings

PART I—RETIREMENT SAVINGS INCENTIVES

Subpart A—Restoration of IRA Deduction

SEC. 2001. RESTORATION OF IRA DEDUCTION.

(a) In General.—Section 219 (relating to deduction for retirement savings) is amended by striking subsection (g) and by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (g).

(b) Technical and Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Subsection (f) of section 219 is amended by striking paragraph (7).

(2) Paragraph (5) of section 408(d) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(3) Section 408(o) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) Termination.—This subsection shall not apply to any designated nondeductible contribution for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1993."

(4) Subsection (b) of section 4973 is amended by striking the last sentence.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 2002. INFLATION ADJUSTMENT FOR DEDUCTIBLE AMOUNT.

(a) In General.—Section 219, as amended by section 2001, is amended by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h) and by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g) Cost-Of-Living Adjustments.—

"(1) In general.—If the cost-of-living amount for any calendar year is equal to or greater than $500, then each applicable dollar amount (as previously adjusted under this subsection) for any taxable year beginning in any subsequent calendar year shall be increased by $500.

"(2) Cost-of-living amount.—The cost-of-living amount for any calendar year is the excess (if any) of—

"(A) $2,000, increased by the cost-of-living adjustment for such calendar year, over

"(B) the applicable dollar amount in effect under subsection (b)(1)(A) for taxable years beginning in such calendar year.

"(3) Cost-of-living adjustment.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) In general.—The cost-of-living adjustment for any calendar year is the percentage (if any) by which—

"(i) the CPI for such calendar year, exceeds

"(ii) the CPI for 1991.

"(B) CPI FOR ANY CALENDAR YEAR.—The CPI for any calendar year shall be determined in the same manner as under section 1(f)(4).

"(4) APPLICABLE DOLLAR AMOUNT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'applicable dollar amount' means the dollar amount in effect under any of the following provisions:

"(A) Subsection (b)(1)(A).

"(B) Subsection (c)(2)(A)(i).

"(C) The last sentence of subsection (c)(2)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 408(a)(1) is amended by striking "in excess of $2,000 on behalf of any individual" and inserting "on behalf of any individual in excess of the amount in effect for such taxable year under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(2) Section 408(b)(2)(B) is amended by striking "$2,000" and inserting "the dollar amount in effect under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(3) Section 408(j) is amended by striking "$2,000".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 2003. COORDINATION OF IRA DEDUCTION LIMIT WITH ELECTIVE DEFERRAL LIMIT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 219(b) (relating to maximum amount of deduction) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) COORDINATION WITH ELECTIVE DEFERRAL LIMIT.—The amount determined under paragraph (1) or subsection (c)(2) with respect to any individual for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the maximum amount of elective deferrals of the individual which are excludable from gross income for the taxable year under section 402(g)(1), over

"(B) the amount so excluded."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 219(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For reduction in paragraph (2) amount, see subsection (b)(4)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

Subpart B—Nondeductible Tax-Free IRAs

SEC. 2011. ESTABLISHMENT OF NONDEDUCTIBLE TAX-FREE INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 (relating to pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus plans, etc.) is amended by inserting after section 408 the following new section:

"SEC. 408A. SPECIAL INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in this section, a special individual retirement account shall be treated for purposes of this title in the same manner as an individual retirement plan.

"(b) SPECIAL INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT.—For purposes of this title, the term 'special individual retirement account' means an individual retirement plan which is designated at the time of establishment of the plan as a special individual retirement account.

"(c) TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(1) NO DEDUCTION ALLOWED.—No deduction shall be allowed under section 219 for a contribution to a special individual retirement account.

"(2) CONTRIBUTION LIMIT.—The aggregate amount of contributions for any taxable year to all special individual retirement accounts maintained for the benefit of an individual shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the maximum amount allowable as a deduction under section 219 with respect to such individual for such taxable year, over

"(B) the amount so allowed.

"(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR QUALIFIED TRANSFERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—No rollover contribution may be made to a special individual retirement account unless it is a qualified transfer.

"(B) LIMIT NOT TO APPLY.—The limitation under paragraph (2) shall not apply to a qualified transfer to a special individual retirement account.

"(d) TAX TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in this subsection, any amount paid or distributed out of a special individual retirement account shall not be included in the gross income of the distributee.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR EARNINGS ON CONTRIBUTIONS HELD LESS THAN 5 YEARS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any amount distributed out of a special individual retirement account which consists of earnings allocable to contributions made to the account during the 5-year period ending on the day before such distribution shall be included in the gross income of the distributee for the taxable year in which the distribution occurs.

"(B) ORDERING RULE.—

"(i) FIRST-IN, FIRST-OUT RULE.—Distributions from a special individual retirement account shall be treated as having been made—

"(I) first from the earliest contribution (and earnings allocable thereto) remaining in the account at the time of the distribution, and

"(II) then from other contributions (and earnings allocable thereto) in the order in which made.

"(ii) ALLOCATIONS BETWEEN CONTRIBUTIONS AND EARNINGS.—Any portion of a distribution allocated to a contribution (and earnings allocable thereto) shall be treated as allocated first to the earnings and then to the contribution.

"(iii) ALLOCATION OF EARNINGS.—Earnings shall be allocated to a contribution in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe.

"(iv) CONTRIBUTIONS IN SAME YEAR.—Under regulations, all contributions made during the same taxable year may be treated as 1 contribution for purposes of this subparagraph.

"(C) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For additional tax for early withdrawal, see section 72(t).

"(3) QUALIFIED TRANSFER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2) shall not apply to any distribution which is transferred in a qualified transfer to another special individual retirement account.

"(B) CONTRIBUTION PERIOD.—For purposes of paragraph (2), the special individual retirement account to which any contributions are transferred shall be treated as having held such contributions during any period such contributions were held (or are treated as held under this subparagraph) by the special individual retirement account from which transferred.

"(4) SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO CERTAIN TRANSFERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in the case of a qualified transfer to a special individual retirement account from an individual retirement plan which is not a special individual retirement account—

"(i) there shall be included in gross income any amount which, but for the qualified transfer, would be includible in gross income, but

"(ii) section 72(t) shall not apply to such amount.

"(B) TIME FOR INCLUSION.—In the case of any qualified transfer which occurs before January 1, 1994, any amount includible in gross income under subparagraph (A) with respect to such contribution shall be includible ratably over the 4-taxable year period beginning in the taxable year in which the amount was paid or distributed out of the individual retirement plan.

"(e) QUALIFIED TRANSFER.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualified transfer' means a transfer to a special individual retirement account from another such account or from an individual retirement plan but only if such transfer meets the requirements of section 408(d)(3)."

(b) EARLY WITHDRAWAL PENALTY.—Section 72(t), as amended by section 2021(c), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) RULES RELATING TO SPECIAL INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—In the case of a special individual retirement account under section 408A—

"(A) this subsection shall only apply to distributions out of such account which consist of earnings allocable to contributions made to the account during the 5-year period ending on the day before such distribution, and

"(B) paragraph (2)(A)(i) shall not apply to any distribution described in subparagraph (A)."

(c) EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 4973(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of paragraphs (1)(B) and (2)(C), the amount allowable as a deduction under section 219 shall be computed without regard to section 408A."

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart A of part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 408 the following new item:

(e) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

(2) QUALIFIED TRANSFERS IN 1993.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any qualified transfer during any taxable year beginning in 1993.

PART II—PENALTY-FREE DISTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 2021. DISTRIBUTIONS FROM CERTAIN PLANS MAY BE USED WITHOUT PENALTY TO PURCHASE FIRST HOMES, TO PAY HIGHER EDUCATION OR FINANCIALLY DEVASTATING MEDICAL EXPENSES, OR BY THE LONG-TERM UNEMPLOYED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2) of section 72(t) (relating to exceptions to 10-percent additional tax on early distributions from qualified retirement plans) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) DISTRIBUTIONS FROM CERTAIN PLANS FOR FIRST HOME PURCHASES OR EDUCATIONAL EXPENSES.—Distributions to an individual from an individual retirement plan, or from amounts attributable to employer contributions made pursuant to elective deferrals described in subparagraph (A) or (C) of section 402(g)(3) or section 501(c)(18)(D)(iii)—

"(i) which are qualified first-time homebuyer distributions (as defined in paragraph (6)); or

"(ii) to the extent such distributions do not exceed the qualified higher education expenses (as defined in paragraph (7)) of the taxpayer for the taxable year."

(b) FINANCIALLY DEVASTATING MEDICAL EXPENSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 72(t)(3)(A) is amended by striking "(B),".

(2) CERTAIN LINEAL DESCENDANTS AND ANCESTORS TREATED AS DEPENDENTS.—Subparagraph (B) of section 72(t)(2) is amended by striking "medical care" and all that follows and inserting "medical care determined—

"(i) without regard to whether the employee itemizes deductions for such taxable year, and

"(ii) by treating such employee's dependents as including—

"(I) all children and grandchildren of the employee or such employee's spouse, and

"(II) all ancestors of the employee or such employee's spouse."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subparagraph (B) of section 72(t)(2) is amended by striking "or (C)" and inserting ", (C) or (D)".

(c) DEFINITIONS.—Section 72(t) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) QUALIFIED FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER DISTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(D)(i)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified first-time homebuyer distribution' means any payment or distribution received by an individual to the extent such payment or distribution is used by the individual before the close of the 60th day after the day on which such payment or distribution is received to pay qualified acquisition costs with respect to a principal residence of a first-time homebuyer who is such individual or the spouse, child, or grandchild of such individual.

"(B) QUALIFIED ACQUISITION COSTS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified acquisition costs' means the costs of acquiring, constructing, or reconstructing a residence. Such term includes any usual or reasonable settlement, financing, or other closing costs.

"(C) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER; OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' means any individual if—

"(I) such individual (and if married, such individual's spouse) had no present ownership interest in a principal residence during the 3-year period ending on the date of acquisition of the principal residence to which this paragraph applies, and

"(II) subsection (a)(6), (h), or (k) of section 1034 did not suspend the running of any period of time specified in section 1034 with respect to such individual on the day before the date the distribution is applied pursuant to subparagraph (A)(ii).

In the case of an individual described in section 143(i)(1)(C) for any year, an ownership interest shall not include any interest under a contract of deed described in such section.

"(ii) PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—The term 'principal residence' has the same meaning as when used in section 1034.

"(iii) DATE OF ACQUISITION.—The term 'date of acquisition' means the date—

"(I) on which a binding contract to acquire the principal residence to which subparagraph (A) applies is entered into, or

"(II) on which construction or reconstruction of such a principal residence is commenced.

"(D) SPECIAL RULE WHERE DELAY IN ACQUISITION.—If any distribution from any individual retirement plan fails to meet the requirements of subparagraph (A) solely by reason of a delay or cancellation of the purchase or construction of the residence, the amount of the distribution may be contributed to an individual retirement plan as provided in section 408(d)(3)(A)(i) (determined by substituting '120 days' for '60 days' in such section), except that—

"(i) section 408(d)(3)(B) shall not be applied to such contribution, and

"(ii) such amount shall not be taken into account in determining whether section 408(d)(3)(A)(i) applies to any other amount.

"(7) QUALIFIED HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(D)(ii)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified higher education expenses' means tuition, fees, books, supplies, and equipment required for the enrollment or attendance of—

"(i) the taxpayer,

"(ii) the taxpayer's spouse, or

"(iii) the taxpayer's child (as defined in section 151(c)(3)) or grandchild, at an eligible educational institution (as defined in section 135(c)(3)).

"(B) COORDINATION WITH SAVINGS BOND PROVISIONS.—The amount of qualified higher education expenses for any taxable year shall be reduced by any amount excludable from gross income under section 135."

(d) PENALTY-FREE DISTRIBUTIONS FOR CERTAIN UNEMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.—Paragraph (2) of section 72(t) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) DISTRIBUTIONS TO UNEMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.—A distribution from an individual retirement plan (other than a plan referred to in subclause (I) or (II) of paragraph (6)(A)(iii)) to an individual after separation from employment, if—

"(i) such individual has received unemployment compensation for 12 consecutive weeks under any Federal or State unemployment compensation law by reason of such separation, and

"(ii) such distributions are made during any taxable year during which such unemployment compensation is paid or the succeeding taxable year."

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 401(k)(2)(B)(i) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subclause (III), by striking "and" at the end of subclause (IV) and inserting "or", and by inserting after subclause (IV) the following new subclause:

"(V) the date on which qualified first-time homebuyer distributions (as defined in section 72(t)(6)) or distributions for qualified higher education expenses (as defined in section 72(t)(7)) are made, and".

(2) Section 403(b)(11) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", or", and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) for qualified first-time homebuyer distributions (as defined in section 72(t)(6)) or for the payment of qualified higher education expenses (as defined in section 72(t)(7))."

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to payments and distributions after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 2022. CONTRIBUTIONS MUST BE HELD AT LEAST 5 YEARS IN CERTAIN CASES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 72(t), as amended by section 2011(b), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) CERTAIN CONTRIBUTIONS MUST BE HELD 5 YEARS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2)(A)(i) shall not apply to any amount distributed out of an individual retirement plan (other than a special individual retirement account) which is allocable to contributions made to the plan during the 5-year period ending on the date of such distribution (and earnings on such contributions).

"(B) ORDERING RULE.—For purposes of this paragraph, distributions shall be treated as having been made—

"(i) first from the earliest contribution (and earnings allocable thereto) remaining in the account at the time of the distribution, and

"(ii) then from other contributions (and earnings allocable thereto) in the order in which made.

Earnings shall be allocated to contributions in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR ROLLOVERS.—

"(i) PENSION PLANS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to distributions out of an individual retirement plan which are allocable to rollover contributions to which section 402(c) applied.

"(ii) CONTRIBUTION PERIOD.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), amounts shall be treated as having been held by a plan during any period such contributions were held (or are treated as held under this clause) by any individual retirement plan from which transferred.

"(D) SPECIAL ACCOUNTS.—For rules applicable to special individual retirement accounts under section 408A, see paragraph (8)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to contributions (and earnings allocable thereto) which are made after December 31, 1993.

Subtitle B—Economic Development Provisions

PART I—INVESTMENT IN REAL ESTATE

Subpart A—Modification of Passive Loss Rules

SEC. 2101. MODIFICATION OF PASSIVE LOSS RULES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 469 (relating to passive activity losses and credits limited) is amended by redesignating subsections (l) and (m) as subsections (m) and (n), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (k) the following new subsection:

"(l) SPECIAL RULES FOR REAL ESTATE ACTIVITIES.—

"(1) LOSSES FROM CERTAIN RENTAL REAL ESTATE ACTIVITIES TREATED AS NOT PASSIVE.—If the taxpayer meets the requirements of paragraph (2) for the taxable year, subsection (a) shall not apply to so much of the passive activity loss for such taxable year as does not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) the net loss for such taxable year from rental real estate activities in which the taxpayer materially participates, or

"(B) an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(i) the net income of the taxpayer for the taxable year from real property trade or business activities which are not passive activities, or

"(ii) the taxable income of the taxpayer for the taxable year determined without regard to this subsection.

A similar rule shall apply to any passive activity credit.

"(2) REQUIREMENTS.—The taxpayer meets the requirements of this paragraph for any taxable year if more than one-half of the personal services performed in trades or businesses by the taxpayer during such taxable year are performed in real property trades or businesses in which the taxpayer materially participates.

"(3) REAL PROPERTY TRADE OR BUSINESS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'real property trade or business' means any real property development, redevelopment, construction, reconstruction, acquisition, conversion, rental, operation, management, leasing, or brokerage trade or business.

"(4) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(A) PERSONAL SERVICES AS AN EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of paragraph (2), personal services performed as an employee shall not be treated as performed in real property trades or businesses. The preceding sentence shall not apply if such employee is a 5-percent owner (as defined in section 416(i)(1)(B)) in the employer.

"(B) CLOSELY HELD C CORPORATIONS.—This subsection shall not apply to any interests held by a closely held C corporation.

"(5) COORDINATION WITH SUBSECTION (i).—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—This subsection shall be applied after the application of subsection (i).

"(B) AMOUNTS ALLOWED UNDER SUBSECTION (i).—For purposes of this subsection—

"(i) the passive activity loss and passive activity credit, and

"(ii) the net loss referred to in paragraph (1)(A), shall not include any amount allowed under subsection (i)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

Subpart B—Provisions Relating to Real Estate Investments by Pension Funds

SEC. 2111. REAL ESTATE PROPERTY ACQUIRED BY A QUALIFIED ORGANIZATION.

(a) Modifications of Exceptions.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) (relating to real property acquired by a qualified organization) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(G) Special Rules for Purposes of the Exceptions.—Except as otherwise provided by regulations—

"(i) Small Leases Disregarded.—For purposes of clauses (iii) and (iv) of subparagraph (B), a lease to a person described in such clause (iii) or (iv) shall be disregarded if no more than 25 percent of the leasable floor space in a building is covered by the lease and if the lease is on commercially reasonable terms.

"(ii) Commercially Reasonable Financing.—Clause (v) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply if the financing is on commercially reasonable terms.

"(H) Qualifying Sales by Financial Institutions.—

"(i) In General.—In the case of a qualifying sale by a financial institution, except as provided in regulations, clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply with respect to financing provided by such institution for such sale.

"(ii) Qualifying Sale.—For purposes of this clause, there is a qualifying sale by a financial institution where—

"(I) a qualified organization acquires property described in clause (iii) from a financial institution and any gain recognized by the financial institution with respect to the property is ordinary income,

"(II) the stated principal amount of the financing provided by the financial institution does not exceed the amount of the outstanding indebtedness (including accrued but unpaid interest) of the financial institution with respect to the property described in clause (iii) immediately before the acquisition referred to in clause (iii) or (v), whichever is applicable, and

"(III) the value (determined as of the time of the sale) of the amount pursuant to the financing that is determined by reference to the revenue, income, or profits derived from the property does not exceed 30 percent of the value of the property (determined as of such time).

"(iii) Property to Which Subparagraph Applies.—Property is described in this clause if such property is foreclosure property, or is real property which—

"(I) was acquired by the qualified organization from a financial institution which is in conservatorship or receivership, or from the conservator or receiver of such an institution, and

"(II) was held by the financial institution at the time it entered into conservatorship or receivership.

"(iv) Financial Institution.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'financial institution' means—

"(I) any financial institution described in section 581 or 591(a),

"(II) any other corporation which is a direct or indirect subsidiary of an institution referred to in subclause (I) but only if, by virtue of being affiliated with such institution, such other corporation is subject to supervision and examination by a Federal or State agency which regulates institutions referred to in subclause (I), and

"(III) any person acting as a conservator or receiver of an entity referred to in subclause (I) or (II) (or any government agency or corporation succeeding to the rights or interest of such person).

"(v) Foreclosure Property.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'foreclosure property' means any real property acquired by the financial institution as the result of having bid on such property at foreclosure, or by operation of an agreement or process of law, after there was a default (or a default was imminent) on indebtedness which such property secured."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) is amended—

(1) by adding the following new sentence at the end of subparagraph (A): "For purposes of this paragraph, an interest in a mortgage shall in no event be treated as real property.", and

(2) by striking the last sentence of subparagraph (B).

(c) Effective Dates.—

(1) In General.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to acquisitions on or after July 28, 1992.

(2) Small Leases.—The provisions of section 514(c)(9)(G)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall, in addition to any leases to which the provisions apply by reason of paragraph (1), apply to leases entered into on or after July 28, 1992.

SEC. 2112. SPECIAL RULES FOR INVESTMENTS IN PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) Modification to Anti-Abuse Rules.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) (as amended by section 2211) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(J) Partnerships Not Involving Tax Avoidance.—

"(i) De Minimis Rule for Certain Large Partnerships.—The provisions of subparagraph (B) shall not apply to an investment in a partnership having at least 250 partners if—

"(I) interests in such partnership were offered for sale in an offering registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission,

"(II) at least 50 percent of each class of interests in such partnership is owned by individuals who are not disqualified persons, and

"(III) the principal purpose of partnership allocations is not tax avoidance.

The Secretary may disregard inadvertent failures to meet the requirements of subclause (II). For purposes of subclause (II), interests owned by individual retirement plans (as defined in section 7701(a)(37)) shall not be taken into account.

"(ii) Disqualified Persons.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'disqualified person' means any person described in clause (iii) or (iv) of subparagraph (B) and any person who is not a United States person."

(b) Repeal of Special Treatment of Publicly Traded Partnerships.—Subsection (c) of section 512 is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (2),

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2), and

(3) by striking "paragraph (1) or (2)" in paragraph (2) (as so redesignated) and inserting "paragraph (1)".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to partnership years ending after July 28, 1992.

SEC. 2113. TITLE-HOLDING COMPANIES PERMITTED TO RECEIVE SMALL AMOUNTS OF UNRELATED BUSINESS TAXABLE INCOME.

(a) General Rule.—Paragraph (25) of section 501(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G)(i) An organization shall not be treated as failing to be described in this paragraph merely by reason of the receipt of any income which is incidentally derived from the holding of real property.

"(ii) Clause (i) shall not apply if the amount of gross income described in such clause exceeds 10 percent of the organization's gross income for the taxable year unless the organization establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the receipt of gross income described in clause (i) in excess of such limitation was inadvertent and reasonable steps are being taken to correct the circumstances giving rise to such income."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Paragraph (2) of section 501(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Rules similar to the rules of subparagraph (G) of paragraph (25) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 2114. EXCLUSION FROM UNRELATED BUSINESS TAX OF GAINS FROM CERTAIN PROPERTY.

(a) General Rule.—Subsection (b) of section 512 (relating to modifications) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(16)(A) Notwithstanding paragraph (5)(B), there shall be excluded all gains or losses from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of any real property described in subparagraph (B) if—

"(i) such property was acquired by the organization from—

"(I) a financial institution described in section 581 or 591(a) which is in conservatorship or receivership, or

"(II) the conservator or receiver of such an institution (or any government agency or corporation succeeding to the rights or interests of the conservator or receiver),

"(ii) such property is designated by the organization within the 9-month period beginning on the date of its acquisition as property held for sale, except that not more than one-half (by value determined as of such date) of property acquired in a single transaction may be so designated,

"(iii) such sale, exchange, or disposition occurs before the later of—

"(I) the date which is 30 months after the date of the acquisition of such property, or

"(II) the date specified by the Secretary in order to assure an orderly disposition of property held by persons described in subparagraph (A), and

"(iv) while such property was held by the organization, the aggregate expenditures on improvements and development activities included in the basis of the property are (or were not) in excess of 20 percent of the net selling price of the property with respect to such property.

"(B) Property is described in this subparagraph if it is real property which—

"(i) was held by the financial institution at the time it entered into conservatorship or receivership, or

"(ii) was foreclosure property (as defined in section 514(c)(9)(H)(v)) which secured indebtedness held by the financial institution at such time.

For purposes of this subparagraph, real property includes an interest in a mortgage."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to property acquired on or after July 28, 1992.

SEC. 2115. EXCLUSION FROM UNRELATED BUSINESS TAX OF CERTAIN FEES AND OPTION PREMIUMS.

(a) Loan Commitment Fees.—Paragraph (1) of section 512(b) (relating to modifications) is amended by inserting "amounts received or accrued as consideration for entering into agreements to make loans," before "and annuities".

(b) Option Premiums.—The second sentence of section 512(b)(5) is amended by inserting "or real property" before the period.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts received on or after July 28, 1992.

SEC. 2116. TREATMENT OF PENSION FUND INVESTMENTS IN REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (h) of section 856 (relating to closely held determinations) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TREATMENT OF TRUSTS DESCRIBED IN SECTION 401(a).—

"(A) LOOK-THRU TREATMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), in determining whether the stock ownership requirement of section 542(a)(2) is met for purposes of paragraph (1)(A), any stock held by a qualified trust shall be treated as held directly by its beneficiaries in proportion to their actuarial interests in such trust and shall not be treated as held by such trust.

"(ii) CERTAIN RELATED TRUSTS NOT ELIGIBLE.—Clause (i) shall not apply to any qualified trust if one or more disqualified persons (as defined in section 4975(e)(2), without regard to subparagraphs (B) and (I) thereof) with respect to such qualified trust hold in the aggregate 5 percent or more in value of the interests in the real estate investment trust and such real estate investment trust has accumulated earnings and profits attributable to any period for which it did not qualify as a real estate investment trust.

"(B) COORDINATION WITH PERSONAL HOLDING COMPANY RULES.—If any entity qualifies as a real estate investment trust for any taxable year by reason of subparagraph (A), such entity shall not be treated as a personal holding company for such taxable year for purposes of part II of subchapter G of this chapter.

"(C) TREATMENT FOR PURPOSES OF UNRELATED BUSINESS TAX.—If any qualified trust holds more than 10 percent (by value) of the interests in any pension-held REIT at any time during a taxable year, the trust shall be treated as having for such taxable year gross income from an unrelated trade or business in an amount which bears the same ratio to the aggregate dividends paid (or treated as paid) by the REIT to the trust for the taxable year of the REIT with or within which the taxable year of the trust ends (the 'REIT year') as—

"(i) the gross income of the REIT for the REIT year from unrelated trades or businesses (determined as if the REIT were a qualified trust), bears to

"(ii) the gross income of the REIT for the REIT year.

This subparagraph shall apply only if the ratio determined under the preceding sentence is at least 5 percent.

"(D) PENSION-HELD REIT.—The purposes of subparagraph (C)—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A real estate investment trust is a pension-held REIT if such trust would not have qualified as a real estate investment trust but for the provisions of this paragraph and if such trust is predominantly held by qualified trusts.

"(ii) PREDOMINANTLY HELD.—For purposes of clause (i), a real estate investment trust is predominantly held by qualified trusts if—

"(I) at least 1 qualified trust holds more than 25 percent (by value) of the interests in such real estate investment trust, or

"(II) 1 or more qualified trusts (each of whom own more than 10 percent by value of the interests in such real estate investment trust) hold in the aggregate more than 50 percent (by value) of the interests in such real estate investment trust.

"(E) QUALIFIED TRUST.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified trust' means any trust described in section 401(a) and exempt from tax under section 501(a)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

Subpart C—First-Time Homebuyer Credit

SEC. 2121. CREDIT FOR PURCHASE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to nonrefundable personal credits) is amended by inserting after section 22 the following new section:

"SEC. 23. PURCHASE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.

"(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—In the case of a first-time homebuyer, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter an amount equal to 10 percent of the purchase price of the first principal residence purchased by the taxpayer during the eligibility period. Except as otherwise provided in this section, such credit shall be allowed for the taxable year in which such residence is purchased.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) MAXIMUM OVERALL CREDIT.—The credit allowed by subsection (a) to the taxpayer shall not exceed $2,500.

"(2) MAXIMUM FIRST YEAR CREDIT.—Of the aggregate credit allowable under subsection (a) after the application of paragraph (1)—

"(A) not more than 50 percent shall be allowed for the taxable year in which the residence is purchased, and

"(B) the remaining credit shall be allowable for the succeeding taxable year.

"(c) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' means any individual unless such individual or such individual's spouse had a present ownership interest in any principal residence at any time during the 3-year period ending on the date of the purchase of the residence referred to in subsection (a).

"(2) UNMARRIED JOINT OWNERS.—An individual shall not be treated as a first-time homebuyer with respect to any residence unless all the individuals purchasing such residence with such individual are first-time homebuyers.

"(3) ALLOCATION OF LIMITS.—All individuals purchasing a residence shall be treated as 1 individual for purposes of determining the maximum credit under subsection (a), and such maximum credit shall be allocated among such individuals under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(4) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS INELIGIBLE.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' shall not include any individual if, on the date of the purchase of the residence, the period of time specified in section 1034(a) is suspended under subsection (a)(6), (h), or (k) of section 1034 with respect to such individual.

"(5) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN CONTRACTS OF DEED.—In the case of an individual described in section 143(i)(1)(C) for any year, an ownership interest shall not include a contract of deed described in such section.

"(d) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) ELIGIBILITY PERIOD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'eligibility period' means the period beginning after July 27, 1992, and ending before January 1, 1993.

"(B) BINDING CONTRACTS.—A residence shall be treated as purchased during the eligibility period if—

"(i) during the eligibility period, the purchaser enters into a binding contract to purchase the residence, and

"(ii) the purchaser purchases and occupies the residence before April 1, 1993.

For purposes of clause (i), a contract shall not fail to be treated as binding merely because it is contingent on financing or on the condition of the residence.

"(2) PURCHASE.—The term 'purchase' means any acquisition of property, but only if—

"(A) the property is not acquired from a person whose relationship to the person acquiring it would result in the disallowance of losses under section 267 or 707(b), and

"(B) the basis of the property in the hands of the person acquiring it is not determined—

"(i) in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the person from whom acquired, or

"(ii) under section 1014(a) (relating to property acquired from a decedent).

"(3) PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—The term 'principal residence' has the same meaning as when used in section 1034.

"(4) PURCHASE PRICE.—The term 'purchase price' means the adjusted basis of the residence on the date of its acquisition.

"(e) CARRYOVER OF UNUSED CREDIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(A) the credit allowable under subsection (a) exceeds

"(B) the limitation imposed by section 26(a) reduced by the sum of the credits allowable under sections 21 and 22, such excess shall be carried to the succeeding taxable year and shall be allowable under subsection (a) for such succeeding taxable year.

"(2) 5-YEAR LIMIT ON CARRYFORWARD.—No amount may be carried under paragraph (1) to any taxable year after the 5th taxable year after the taxable year in which the residence is purchased.

"(f) RECAPTURE OF CREDIT FOR CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if the taxpayer disposes of property with respect to the purchase of which a credit was allowed under subsection (a) and such disposition occurs at any time within 36 months after the date the taxpayer acquired the property as his principal residence, then the tax imposed under this chapter for the taxable year in which the disposition occurs is increased by an amount equal to the amount allowed as a credit for the purchase of such property.

"(2) ACQUISITION OF NEW RESIDENCE.—If, in connection with a disposition described in paragraph (1) and within the applicable period prescribed in section 1034, the taxpayer purchases a new principal residence, then paragraph (1) shall not apply and the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which the new principal residence is purchased is increased to the extent the amount of the credit that could be claimed under this section on the purchase of the new residence (were such residence the first residence purchased during the eligibility period) is less than the amount of credit claimed by the taxpayer under this section.

"(3) DEATH OF OWNER; CASUALTY LOSS; INVOLUNTARY CONVERSION; ETC.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to—

"(A) a disposition of a residence made on account of the death of any individual having a legal or equitable interest therein occurring during the 36-month period referred to in paragraph (1),

"(B) a disposition of the old residence if it is substantially or completely destroyed by a casualty described in section 165(c)(3) or compulsorily or involuntarily converted (within the meaning of section 1033(a)), or

"(C) a disposition pursuant to a settlement in a divorce or legal separation proceeding where the residence is sold or the other spouse retains the residence as a principal residence."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 22 the following new item:

"Sec. 23. Purchase of principal residence by first-time homebuyer."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending on or after July 28, 1992.

Subpart D—Discharge of Indebtedness

SEC. 2131. EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME FOR INCOME FROM DISCHARGE OF QUALIFIED REAL PROPERTY BUSINESS INDEBTEDNESS.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (1) of section 108(a) (relating to income from discharge of indebtedness) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) in the case of an individual, the indebtedness discharged is qualified real property business indebtedness."

(b) Qualified Real Property Business Indebtedness.—Section 108 is amended by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) Treatment of Discharge of Qualified Real Property Business Indebtedness.—

"(1) Basis reduction.—

"(A) In general.—The amount excluded from gross income under subparagraph (D) of subsection (a)(1) shall be applied to reduce the basis of the depreciable real property of the taxpayer.

"(B) Cross reference.—For provisions making the reduction described in subparagraph (A), see section 1017.

"(2) Limitations.—

"(A) Indebtedness in excess of value.—The amount excluded under subparagraph (D) of subsection (a)(1) with respect to any qualified real property business indebtedness shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the outstanding principal amount of such indebtedness (immediately before the discharge), over

"(ii) the fair market value of the real property described in paragraph (3)(A) (as of such time), reduced by the outstanding principal amount of any other qualified real property business indebtedness secured by such property (as of such time).

"(B) Overall limitation.—The amount excluded under subparagraph (D) of subsection (a)(1) shall not exceed the aggregate adjusted bases of depreciable real property (determined after any reductions under subsections (b) and (g)) held by the taxpayer immediately before the discharge (other than depreciable real property acquired in contemplation of such discharge).

"(3) Qualified real property business indebtedness.—The term 'qualified real property business indebtedness' means indebtedness which—

"(A) was incurred or assumed by an individual in connection with real property used in a trade or business and is secured by such real property,

"(B) was incurred or assumed before July 30, 1992, or if incurred or assumed on or after such date, is qualified acquisition indebtedness, and

"(C) with respect to which such taxpayer makes an election to have this paragraph apply.

Such term shall not include qualified farm indebtedness. Indebtedness under subparagraph (B) shall include indebtedness resulting from the refinancing of indebtedness under subparagraph (B) (or this sentence), but only to the extent it does not exceed the amount of the indebtedness being refinanced.

"(4) Qualified acquisition indebtedness.—For purposes of paragraph (3)(B), the term 'qualified acquisition indebtedness' means, with respect to any real property described in paragraph (3)(A), indebtedness incurred or assumed to acquire, construct, reconstruct, or substantially improve such property.

"(5) Regulations.—The Secretary shall issue such regulations as are necessary to carry out this subsection, including regulations preventing the abuse of this subsection through cross-collateralization or other means."

(c) Technical Amendments.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 108(a)(2) is amended by striking "and (C)" and inserting ", (C), and (D)".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 108(a)(2) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) Insolvency exclusion takes precedence over qualified farm exclusion and qualified real property business exclusion.—Subparagraphs (C) and (D) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to a discharge to the extent the taxpayer is insolvent."

(3) Subsection (d) of section 108 is amended by striking "Subsections (a), (b), and (g)" each place it appears in the heading thereof and in the text and headings of paragraphs (6) and (7)(A) and inserting "Subsections (a), (b), (c), and (g)".

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 108(d)(7) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to any discharge to the extent that subsection (a)(1)(D) applies to such discharge."

(5) Subparagraph (A) of section 108(d)(9) is amended by inserting "or under paragraph (3)(B) of subsection (c)" after "subsection (b)".

(6) Paragraph (2) of section 1017(a) is amended by striking "or (b)(5)" and inserting ", (b)(5), or (c)(1)".

(7) Subparagraph (A) of section 1017(b)(3) is amended by inserting "or (c)(1)" after "subsection (b)(5)".

(8) Section 1017(b)(3) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(F) Special rules for qualified real property business indebtedness.—In the case of any amount which under section 108(c)(1) is to be applied to reduce basis—

"(i) depreciable property shall only include depreciable real property for purposes of subparagraphs (A) and (C),

"(ii) subparagraph (E) shall not apply, and

"(iii) in the case of property taken into account under section 108(c)(2)(B), the reduction with respect to such property shall be made as of the time immediately before disposition if earlier than the time under subsection (a)."

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to discharges after December 31, 1991, in taxable years ending after such date.

"(K) a long-term unemployed individual."

(2) LONG-TERM UNEMPLOYED.—Section 51(d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(17) LONG-TERM UNEMPLOYED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'long-term unemployed individual' means an individual—

"(i) who has been receiving unemployment compensation at all times during the 6-month period ending with the last day of the month preceding the hiring date, or

"(ii) who—

"(I) was receiving unemployment compensation but exhausted all rights to such compensation, and

"(II) has remained unemployed during the period beginning on the date such rights were exhausted and ending on the day before the hiring date.

"(B) EFFECTIVE PERIOD.—Notwithstanding subsection (c)(4), in the case of a long-term unemployed individual, the term 'wages' shall include amounts paid or received for individuals who begin work for the employer during the 6-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this paragraph, or during any subsequent 6-month period, if, for any month during the preceding 6-month period, the national average rate of total unemployment as determined by the Secretary of Labor exceeds 7 percent.

"(C) UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'unemployment compensation' has the meaning given such term by section 85(b).

"(D) SPECIAL RULE FOR DETERMINING AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—For purposes of applying this subpart to wages paid or incurred to any long-term unemployed individual subsection (b)(3) shall be applied by substituting '$3,000' for '$6,000'."

(3) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS ELIGIBLE.—Section 51(i) (relating to certain individuals ineligible) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) SPECIAL RULES FOR LONG-TERM UNEMPLOYED.—No wages shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to any long-term unemployed individual (as defined in subsection (d)(17)) unless—

"(A) notwithstanding paragraph (3), the individual is employed by the employer at least 120 days, and

"(B) the employer certifies on the return of tax for the taxable year for which credit is claimed that the individual was hired after the employer took reasonable actions to specifically recruit long-term unemployed individuals."

(d) MINIMUM EMPLOYMENT PERIOD.—Paragraph (3) of section 51(i) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) INDIVIDUALS NOT MEETING MINIMUM EMPLOYMENT PERIOD.—No wages shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to any individual unless—

"(A) such individual is employed by the employer at least 90 days, or

"(B) in the case of an individual described in subsection (d)(12) either—

"(i) is employed by the employer at least 14 days, or

"(ii) has completed at least 20 hours of services performed for the employer."

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after June 30, 1992.

(2) LONG-TERM UNEMPLOYED AND MINIMUM PERIOD.—The amendments made by subsections (c) and (d) shall apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) STUDY.—The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall conduct a study of—

(1) the estimated amount that will be paid from the Vaccine Injury Compensation Trust Fund with respect to vaccines administered after September 30, 1988, and before October 1, 1994,

(2) the rates of vaccine-related injury or death with respect to the various types of such vaccines,

(3) new vaccines and immunization practices being developed or used for which amounts may be paid from such Trust Fund,

(4) whether additional vaccines should be included in the vaccine injury compensation program, and

(5) the appropriate treatment of vaccines produced by State governmental entities.

The report of such study shall be submitted not later than January 1, 1994, to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

SEC. 2151. CERTAIN TRANSFERS TO RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACCOUNT.

Subsection (c)(1)(A) of section 224 of the Railroad Retirement Solvency Act of 1983 (relating to section 72(r) revenue increase transferred to certain railroad accounts) is amended by striking "with respect to benefits received before October 1, 1992".

PART III—OTHER INCENTIVES

SEC. 2161. SPECIAL DEPRECIATION ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1992.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 168 (relating to accelerated cost recovery system) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1992.—

"(1) ADDITIONAL ALLOWANCE.—In the case of any qualified equipment—

"(A) the depreciation deduction provided by section 167(a) for the taxable year in which such equipment is placed in service shall include an allowance equal to 15 percent of the adjusted basis of the qualified equipment, and

"(B) the adjusted basis of the qualified equipment shall be reduced by the amount of such deduction before computing the amount otherwise allowable as a depreciation deduction under this chapter for such taxable year and any subsequent taxable year.

"(2) QUALIFIED EQUIPMENT.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified equipment' means property to which this section applies—

"(i) which is section 1245 property (within the meaning of section 1245(a)(3)),

"(ii) the original use of which commences with the taxpayer on or after August 1, 1992,

"(iii) which is—

"(I) acquired by the taxpayer on or after August 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1993, but only if no written binding contract for the acquisition was in effect before August 1, 1992, or

"(II) acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to a written binding contract which was entered into on or after August 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1993, and

"(iv) which is placed in service by the taxpayer before January 1, 1994.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(i) ALTERNATIVE DEPRECIATION PROPERTY.—The term 'qualified equipment' shall not include any property to which the alternative depreciation system under subsection (g) applies, determined—

"(I) without regard to paragraph (7) of subsection (g) (relating to election to have system apply), and

"(II) after application of section 280F(b) (relating to listed property with limited business use).

"(ii) ELECTION OUT.—If a taxpayer makes an election under this clause with respect to any class of property for any taxable year, this subsection shall not apply to all property in such class placed in service during such taxable year.

"(iii) REPAIRED OR RECONSTRUCTED PROPERTY.—Except as otherwise provided in regulations, the term 'qualified equipment' shall not include any repaired or reconstructed property.

"(C) SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO ORIGINAL USE.—

"(i) SELF-CONSTRUCTED PROPERTY.—In the case of a taxpayer manufacturing, constructing, or producing property for the taxpayer's own use, the requirements of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A) shall be treated as met if the taxpayer begins manufacturing, constructing, or producing the property on and after August 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1993.

"(ii) SALE-LEASEBACKS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), if property—

"(I) is originally placed in service on or after August 1, 1992, by a person, and

"(II) is sold and leased back by such person within 3 months after the date such property was originally placed in service, such property shall be treated as originally placed in service not earlier than the date on which such property is used under the leaseback referred to in subclause (II).

"(D) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 280F.—For purposes of section 280F—

"(i) AUTOMOBILES.—In the case of a passenger automobile (as defined in section 280F(d)(5)) which is qualified equipment, the Secretary shall increase the limitation under section 280F(a)(1)(A)(i), and decrease each other limitation under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 280F(a)(1), to appropriately reflect the amount of the deduction allowable under paragraph (1).

"(ii) LISTED PROPERTY.—The deduction allowable under paragraph (1) shall be taken into account in computing any recapture amount under section 280F(b)(2)."

(b) ALLOWANCE AGAINST ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 56(a)(1)(A) (relating to depreciation adjustment for alternative minimum tax) is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) ADDITIONAL ALLOWANCE FOR EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1992.—The deduction under section 168(j) shall be allowed."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Clause (i) of section 56(a)(1)(A) is amended by inserting "or (iii)" after "(ii)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to property placed in service on or after August 1, 1992, in taxable years ending on or after such date.

SEC. 2162. ELIMINATION OF ACE DEPRECIATION ADJUSTMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Clause (i) of section 56(g)(4)(A) (relating to depreciation adjustments for computing adjusted current earnings) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to property placed in service in taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1992, and the depreciation deduction with respect to such property shall be determined under the rules of subsection (a)(1)(A)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to property placed in service in taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) COORDINATION WITH TRANSITIONAL RULES.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any property to which paragraph (1) of section 56(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 does not apply by reason of subparagraph (C)(i) of such paragraph (1).

Subtitle C—Repeal of Certain Luxury Excise Taxes; Imposition of Tax on Diesel Fuel Used In Noncommercial Boats

SEC. 2201. REPEAL OF LUXURY EXCISE TAXES OTHER THAN ON PASSENGER VEHICLES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter A of chapter 31 (relating to retail excise taxes) is amended to read as follows:

"Subchapter A—Luxury Passenger Automobiles

"Sec. 4001. Imposition of tax.
"Sec. 4002. 1st retail sale; uses, etc. treated as sales; determination of price.
"Sec. 4003. Special rules.

"SEC. 4001. IMPOSITION OF TAX.

"(a) IMPOSITION OF TAX.—There is hereby imposed on the 1st retail sale of any passenger vehicle a tax equal to 10 percent of the price for which so sold to the extent such price exceeds $30,000.

"(b) PASSENGER VEHICLE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subchapter, the term 'passenger vehicle' means any 4-wheeled vehicle—

"(A) which is manufactured primarily for use on public streets, roads, and highways, and

"(B) which is rated at 6,000 pounds unloaded gross vehicle weight or less.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(A) TRUCKS AND VANS.—In the case of a truck or van, paragraph (1)(B) shall be applied by substituting 'gross vehicle weight' for 'unloaded gross vehicle weight'.

"(B) LIMOUSINES.—In the case of a limousine, paragraph (1) shall be applied without regard to subparagraph (B) thereof.

"(c) EXCEPTIONS FOR TAXICABS, ETC.—The tax imposed by this section shall not apply to the sale of any passenger vehicle for use by the purchaser exclusively in the active conduct of a trade or business of transporting persons or property for compensation or hire.

"(d) EXEMPTION FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT USES, ETC.—No tax shall be imposed by this section on the sale of any passenger vehicle—

"(1) to the Federal Government, or a State or local government, for use exclusively in police, firefighting, search and rescue, or other law enforcement or public safety activities, or in public works activities, or

"(2) to any person for use exclusively in providing emergency medical services.

"(e) INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any calendar year after 1991, the $30,000 amount in subsection (a) and section 4003(a) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

"(A) $30,000, multiplied by

"(B) the cost-of-living adjustment under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year, determined by substituting 'calendar year 1990' for 'calendar year 1989' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

"(2) ROUNDING.—If any amount as adjusted under paragraph (1) is not a multiple of $100, such amount shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $100 (or, if such amount is a multiple of $50 and not of $100, such amount shall be rounded to the next highest multiple of $100).

"(f) TERMINATION.—The tax imposed by this section shall not apply to any sale or use after December 31, 1999.

"SEC. 4002. 1ST RETAIL SALE; USES, ETC. TREATED AS SALES; DETERMINATION OF PRICE.

"(a) 1ST RETAIL SALE.—For purposes of this subchapter, the term '1st retail sale' means the 1st sale, for a purpose other than resale, after manufacture, production, or importation.

"(b) USE TREATED AS SALE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If any person uses a passenger vehicle (including any use after importation) before the 1st retail sale of such vehicle, then such person shall be liable for tax under this subchapter in the same manner as if such vehicle were sold at retail by him.

"(2) EXEMPTION FOR FURTHER MANUFACTURE.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to use of a vehicle as material in the manufacture or production of, or as a component part of, another vehicle taxable under this subchapter to be manufactured or produced by him.

"(3) EXEMPTION FOR DEMONSTRATION USE.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any use of a passenger vehicle as a demonstrator for a potential customer.

"(4) EXCEPTION FOR USE AFTER IMPORTATION OF CERTAIN VEHICLES.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the use of a vehicle after importation if the user or importer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the 1st use of the vehicle occurred before January 1, 1991, outside the United States.

"(5) COMPUTATION OF TAX.—In the case of any person made liable for tax by paragraph (1), the tax shall be computed on the price at which similar vehicles are sold at retail in the ordinary course of trade, as determined by the Secretary.

"(c) LEASES CONSIDERED AS SALES.—For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the lease of a vehicle (including any renewal or any extension of a lease or any subsequent lease of such vehicle) by any person shall be considered a sale of such vehicle at retail.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR LONG-TERM LEASES.—

"(A) TAX NOT IMPOSED ON SALE FOR LEASING IN A QUALIFIED LEASE.—The sale of a passenger vehicle to a person engaged in a passenger vehicle leasing or rental trade or business for leasing by such person in a long-term lease shall not be treated as the 1st retail sale of such vehicle.

"(B) LONG-TERM LEASE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'long-term lease' means any long-term lease (as defined in section 4052).

"(C) SPECIAL RULES.—In the case of a long-term lease of a vehicle which is treated as the 1st retail sale of such vehicle—

"(i) DETERMINATION OF PRICE.—The tax under this subchapter shall be computed on the lowest price for which the vehicle is sold by retailers in the ordinary course of trade.

"(ii) PAYMENT OF TAX.—Rules similar to the rules of section 4217(e)(2) shall apply.

"(iii) NO TAX WHERE EXEMPT USE BY LESSEE.—No tax shall be imposed on any lease payment under a long-term lease if the lessee's use of the vehicle under such lease is an exempt use (as defined in section 4003(b)) of such vehicle.

"(d) DETERMINATION OF PRICE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining price for purposes of this subchapter—

"(A) there shall be included any charge incident to placing the article in condition ready for use,

"(B) there shall be excluded—

"(i) the amount of the tax imposed by this subchapter,

"(ii) if stated as a separate charge, the amount of any retail sales tax imposed by any State or political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia, whether the liability for such tax is imposed on the vendor or vendee, and

"(iii) the value of any component of such article if—

"(I) such component is furnished by the 1st user of such article, and

"(II) such component has been used before such furnishing, and

"(C) the price shall be determined without regard to any trade-in.

"(2) OTHER RULES.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (2) and (4) of section 4052(b) shall apply for purposes of this subchapter.

"SEC. 4003. SPECIAL RULES.

"(a) SEPARATE PURCHASE OF VEHICLE AND PARTS AND ACCESSORIES THEREFOR.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), if—

"(A) the owner, lessee, or operator of any passenger vehicle installs (or causes to be installed) any part or accessory on such vehicle, and

"(B) such installation is not later than the date 6 months after the date the vehicle was 1st placed in service, then there is hereby imposed on such installation a tax equal to 10 percent of the price of such part or accessory and its installation.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The tax imposed by paragraph (1) on the installation of any part or accessory shall not exceed 10 percent of the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the sum of—

"(i) the price of such part or accessory and its installation,

"(ii) the aggregate price of the parts and accessories (and their installation) installed before such part or accessory, plus

"(iii) the price for which the passenger vehicle was sold, over

"(B) $30,000.

"(3) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply if—

"(A) the part or accessory installed is a replacement part or accessory,

"(B) the part or accessory is installed to enable or assist an individual with a disability to operate the vehicle, or to enter or exit the vehicle, by compensating for the effect of such disability, or

"(C) the aggregate price of the parts and accessories (and their installation) described in paragraph (1) with respect to the vehicle does not exceed $200 (or such other amount or amounts as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe).

"(4) INSTALLERS SECONDARILY LIABLE FOR TAX.—The owners of the trade or business installing the parts or accessories shall be secondarily liable for the tax imposed by this subsection.

"(b) IMPOSITION OF TAX ON SALES, ETC., WITHIN 2 YEARS OF VEHICLES PURCHASED TAX-FREE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(A) no tax was imposed under this subchapter on the 1st retail sale of any passenger vehicle by reason of its exempt use, and

"(B) within 2 years after the date of such 1st retail sale, such vehicle is resold by the purchaser or such purchaser makes a substantial nonexempt use of such vehicle, then such sale or use of such vehicle by such purchaser shall be treated as the 1st retail sale of such vehicle for a price equal to its fair market value at the time of such sale or use.

"(2) EXEMPT USE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'exempt use' means any use of a vehicle if the 1st retail sale of such vehicle is not taxable under this subchapter by reason of such use.

"(c) PARTS AND ACCESSORIES SOLD WITH TAXABLE ARTICLE.—Parts and accessories sold on, in connection with, or with the sale of any passenger vehicle shall be treated as part of the vehicle.

"(d) PARTIAL PAYMENTS, ETC.—In the case of a contract, sale, or arrangement described in paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of section 4216(c), rules similar to the rules of section 4217(e)(2) shall apply for purposes of this subchapter."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (c) of section 4221 is amended by striking "4002(b), 4003(c), 4004(a)" and inserting "4001(d)".

(2) Subsection (d) of section 4222 is amended by striking "4002(b), 4003(c), 4004(a)" and inserting "4001(d)".

(3) The table of subchapters for chapter 31 is amended by striking the item relating to subchapter A and inserting the following:

"Subchapter A. Luxury passenger vehicles."

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Paragraph (3) of section 4004(b) (relating to separate purchase of article and parts and accessories therefor), as in effect before the date described in subsection (d)(1), is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A),

(2) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (C), and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) the part or accessory is installed on a passenger vehicle to enable or assist an individual with a disability to operate the vehicle, or to enter or exit the vehicle, by compensating for the effect of such disability, or".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amendments made by this section shall take effect on January 1, 1992.

(2) INDEXING FOR INFLATION.—Subsection (e) of section 4001 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to inflation adjustment), as added by this section, shall apply with respect to passenger vehicles (as defined in such section 4001) purchased on or after July 1, 1992.

(3) DEMONSTRATOR VEHICLES.—Subsection (b)(3) of section 4002 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemption for demonstration use), as added by this section, shall apply with respect to passenger vehicles (as defined in such section 4001) the use of which begins on or after July 1, 1992.

(4) CERTAIN EQUIPMENT FOR USE BY DISABLED INDIVIDUALS.—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 11221(a) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

SEC. 2202. TAX ON DIESEL FUEL USED IN NONCOMMERCIAL BOATS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 4092(a) (defining diesel fuel) is amended by striking "or a diesel-powered train" and inserting ", a diesel-powered train, or a diesel-powered boat".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 4041(a) is amended—

(A) by striking "diesel-powered highway vehicle" each place it appears and inserting "diesel-powered highway vehicle or diesel-powered boat", and

(B) by striking "such vehicle" and inserting "such vehicle or boat".

(3) Subparagraph (B) of section 4092(b)(1) is amended by striking "commercial and noncommercial vessels" each place it appears and inserting "vessels for use in an off-highway business use (as defined in section 6421(e)(2)(B))".

(b) EXEMPTION FOR USE IN FISHERIES OR COMMERCIAL NAVIGATION.—Subparagraph (B) of section 6421(e)(2) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) USES IN BOATS.—The term 'off-highway business use' does not include any use in a motorboat; except that such term shall include any use in—

"(i) a vessel employed in the fisheries or in the whaling business, and

"(ii) in the case of diesel fuel, a boat employed in the active conduct of—

"(I) a trade or business of commercial fishing or transporting persons or property for compensation or hire, or

"(II) any other trade or business unless the boat is used predominantly in any activity which is of a type generally considered to constitute entertainment, amusement, or recreation."

(c) RETENTION OF TAXES IN GENERAL FUND.—

(1) TAXES IMPOSED AT HIGHWAY TRUST FUND FINANCING RATE.—Paragraph (4) of section 9503(b) (relating to transfers to Highway Trust Fund) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A),

(B) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", and", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) there shall not be taken into account the taxes imposed by sections 4041 and 4091 on diesel fuel sold for use or used as fuel in a diesel-powered boat."

(2) TAXES IMPOSED AT LEAKING UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANK TRUST FUND FINANCING RATE.—Subsection (b) of section 9508 (relating to transfers to Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following flush sentence:

"For purposes of this subsection, there shall not be taken into account the taxes imposed by sections 4041 and 4091 on diesel fuel sold for use or used as fuel in a diesel-powered boat."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to fuel sold or used after September 30, 1992, and before October 1, 1997.

TITLE III—OFFSETTING REVENUE INCREASES

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 3001. MARK TO MARKET ACCOUNTING METHOD FOR SECURITIES DEALERS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subpart D of part II of subchapter E of chapter 1 (relating to inventories) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 475. MARK TO MARKET ACCOUNTING METHOD FOR DEALERS IN SECURITIES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, the following rules shall apply to securities held by a dealer in securities:

"(1) Any security which is inventory in the hands of the dealer shall be included in inventory at its fair market value.

"(2) In the case of any security which is not inventory in the hands of the dealer and which is held at the close of any taxable year—

"(A) the dealer shall recognize gain or loss as if such security were sold for its fair market value on the last business day of such taxable year, and

"(B) any gain or loss shall be taken into account for such taxable year.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence. The Secretary may provide by regulations for the application of this paragraph at times other than the times provided in this paragraph.

"(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(A) any security held for investment,

"(B) any security described in subsection (c)(2)(C) which is acquired (including originated) by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of a trade or business of the taxpayer and which is not held for sale,

"(C) any security acquired—

"(i) by a floor specialist (as defined in section 1236(d)(2)) in connection with the specialist's duties as a specialist on an exchange, but only if the security is one in which the specialist is registered with the exchange, or

"(ii) by a taxpayer who is a market maker in connection with the taxpayer's duties as a market maker, but only if—

"(I) the security is included on the National Association of Security Dealers Automated Quotation System,

"(II) the taxpayer is registered as a market maker in such security with the National Association of Security Dealers, and

"(III) as of the last day of the taxable year, the taxpayer has been actively and regularly engaged as a market maker in such security for the 2-year period ending on such date (or, if shorter, the period beginning 61 days after the security was listed in such quotation system and ending on such date), and

"(D) any security which is a hedge with respect to—

"(i) a security to which subsection (a) does not apply, or

"(ii) a position, right to income, or a liability which is not a security in the hands of the taxpayer.

To the extent provided in regulations, subparagraph (D) shall not apply to any security held by a person in its capacity as a dealer in securities.

"(2) IDENTIFICATION REQUIRED.—A security shall not be treated as described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (1), as the case may be, unless such security is clearly identified in the dealer's records as being described in such subparagraph before the close of the day on which it was acquired, originated, or entered into (or such other time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe).

"(3) SECURITIES SUBSEQUENTLY NOT EXEMPT.—If a security ceases to be described in paragraph (1) at any time after it was identified as such under paragraph (2), subsection (a) shall apply to any changes in value of the security occurring after the cessation.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE FOR PROPERTY HELD FOR INVESTMENT.—To the extent provided in regulations, subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to any security described in subparagraph (D) or (E) of subsection (c)(2) which is held by a dealer in such securities.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) DEALER IN SECURITIES DEFINED.—The term 'dealer in securities' means a taxpayer who—

"(A) regularly purchases securities from or sells securities to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business; or

"(B) regularly offers to enter into, assume, offset, assign or otherwise terminate positions in securities with customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

"(2) SECURITY DEFINED.—The term 'security' means any—

"(A) share of stock in a corporation;

"(B) partnership or beneficial ownership interest in a widely held or publicly traded partnership or trust;

"(C) note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness;

"(D) interest rate, currency, or equity notional principal contract;

"(E) evidence of an interest in, or a derivative financial instrument in, any security described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D), or any currency, including any option, forward contract, short position, and any similar financial instrument in such a security or currency; and

"(F) position which—

"(i) is not a security described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E),

"(ii) is a hedge with respect to such a security, and

"(iii) is clearly identified in the dealer's records as being described in this subparagraph before the close of the day on which it was acquired or entered into (or such other time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe).

Subparagraph (E) shall not include any contract to which section 1256(a) applies.

"(3) HEDGE.—The term 'hedge' means any position which reduces the dealer's risk of interest rate or price changes or currency fluctuations, including any position which is reasonably expected to become a hedge within 60 days after the acquisition of the position.

"(d) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) COORDINATION WITH CERTAIN RULES.—The rules of sections 263(g), 263A, and 1256(a) shall not apply to securities to which subsection (a) applies, and section 1091 shall not apply (and section 1092 shall apply) to any loss recognized under subsection (a).

"(2) IMPROPER IDENTIFICATION.—If a taxpayer—

"(A) identifies any security under subsection (b)(2) as being described in subsection (b)(1) and such security is not so described, or

"(B) fails under subsection (c)(2)(F)(iii) to identify any position which is described in subsection (c)(2)(F) (without regard to clause (iii) thereof) at the time such identification is required, the provisions of subsection (a) shall apply to such security or position, except that any loss under this section prior to the disposition of the security or position shall be recognized only to the extent of gain previously recognized under this section (and not previously taken into account under this paragraph) with respect to such security or position.

"(3) CHARACTER OF GAIN OR LOSS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B) or section 1236(b)—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Any gain or loss with respect to a security under subsection (a)(2) shall be treated as ordinary income or loss.

"(ii) SPECIAL RULE FOR DISPOSITIONS.—If—

"(I) gain or loss is recognized with respect to a security before the close of the taxable year, and

"(II) subsection (a)(2) would have applied if the security were held as of the close of the taxable year, such gain or loss shall be treated as ordinary income or loss.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any gain or loss which is allocable to a period during which—

"(i) the security is described in subsection (b)(1)(D) (without regard to subsection (b)(2)),

"(ii) the security is held by a person other than in its capacity as a dealer in securities, or

"(iii) the security is improperly identified (within the meaning of subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (2)).

"(e) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including rules—

"(1) to prevent the use of year-end transfers, related parties, or other arrangements to avoid the provisions of this section, and

"(2) to provide for the application of this section to any security which is a hedge which cannot be identified with a specific security, position, right to income, or liability."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 988(d) is amended—

(A) by striking "section 1256" and inserting "section 475 or 1256", and

(B) by striking "1092 and 1256" and inserting "475, 1092, and 1256".

(2) The table of sections for subpart D of part II of subchapter E of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 475. Mark to market accounting method for dealers in securities."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to all taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1992.

(2) CHANGE IN METHOD OF ACCOUNTING.—In the case of any taxpayer required by this section to change its method of accounting for any taxable year—

(A) such change shall be treated as initiated by the taxpayer,

(B) such change shall be treated as made with the consent of the Secretary, and

(C) the net amount of the adjustments required to be taken into account by the taxpayer under section 481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be taken into account ratably over the 10-taxable year period beginning with the first taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1992.

If the net amount determined under subparagraph (C) exceeds the net amount which would have been determined under subparagraph (C) if the taxpayer had been required by this section to change its method of accounting for its last taxable year beginning before March 20, 1992, subparagraph (C) shall be applied with respect to such excess by substituting "4-taxable year" for "10-taxable year".

(3) UNDERPAYMENT OF ESTIMATED TAX.—In the case of any required installment the due date for which occurs before the date of the enactment of this Act, no addition to tax shall be made under section 6654 or 6655 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to any underpayment to the extent such underpayment was created or increased by any amendment made by, or provision of, this section. All reductions in installments by reason of the preceding sentence shall be recaptured by increasing the amount of the 1st required installment occurring on or after the date of the enactment of this Act by the amount of such reductions.

SEC. 3002. INDIVIDUAL ESTIMATED TAX PROVISIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (1) of section 6654(d) (relating to amount of required installment) is amended—

(1) by striking "100 percent" in subparagraph (B)(ii) and inserting "120 percent", and

(2) by striking subparagraphs (C), (D), (E), and (F).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

SEC. 3004. DISALLOWANCE OF INTEREST ON CERTAIN OVERPAYMENTS OF TAX.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (e) of section 6611 is amended to read as follows:

"(e) DISALLOWANCE OF INTEREST ON CERTAIN OVERPAYMENTS.—

"(1) REFUNDS WITHIN 45 DAYS AFTER RETURN IS FILED.—If any overpayment of tax imposed by this title is refunded within 45 days after the last day prescribed for filing the return of such tax (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing the return) or, in the case of a return filed after such last date, is refunded within 45 days after the date the return is filed, no interest shall be allowed under subsection (a) on such overpayment.

"(2) REFUNDS AFTER CLAIM FOR CREDIT OR REFUND.—If—

"(A) the taxpayer files a claim for a credit or refund for any overpayment of tax imposed by this title, and

"(B) such overpayment is refunded within 45 days after such claim is filed, no interest shall be allowed on such overpayment from the date the claim is filed until the day the refund is made.

"(3) IRS INITIATED ADJUSTMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision, if an adjustment, initiated by or on behalf of the Secretary, results in a refund or credit of an overpayment, interest on such overpayment shall be computed by subtracting 45 days from the number of days interest would otherwise be allowed with respect to such overpayment."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6611(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by subsection (a)) shall apply in the case of returns the due date for which (determined without regard to extensions) is on or after October 1, 1992.

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6611(e) of such Code (as so amended) shall apply in the case of claims for credit or refund of any overpayment filed on or after October 1, 1992, regardless of the taxable period to which such refund relates.

(3) Paragraph (3) of section 6611(e) of such Code (as so amended) shall apply in the case of any refund paid on or after October 1, 1992, regardless of the taxable period to which such refund relates.

SEC. 3005. CLARIFICATION OF TREATMENT OF CERTAIN FSLIC FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986—

(1) any FSLIC assistance with respect to any loss of principal, capital, or similar amount upon the disposition of any asset shall be taken into account as compensation for such loss for purposes of section 165 of such Code, and

(2) any FSLIC assistance with respect to any debt shall be taken into account for purposes of section 166, 585, or 593 of such Code in determining whether such debt is worthless (or the extent to which such debt is worthless) and in determining the amount of any addition to a reserve for bad debts arising from the worthlessness or partial worthlessness of such debts.

(b) FSLIC ASSISTANCE.—For purposes of this section, the term "FSLIC assistance" means any assistance (or right to assistance) with respect to a domestic building and loan association (as defined in section 7701(a)(19) of such Code without regard to subparagraph (C) thereof) under section 406(f) of the National Housing Act or section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (or under any similar provision of law).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection—

(A) The provisions of this section shall apply to taxable years ending after March 4, 1991, but only with respect to FSLIC assistance not credited before March 4, 1991.

(B) If any FSLIC assistance not credited before March 4, 1991, is with respect to a loss sustained or charge-off in a taxable year ending before March 4, 1991, for purposes of determining the amount of any net operating loss carryover to a taxable year ending after on or after March 4, 1991, the provisions of this section shall apply to such assistance for purposes of determining the amount of the net operating loss for the taxable year in which such loss was sustained or debt written off. Except as provided in the preceding sentence, this section shall not apply to any FSLIC assistance with respect to a loss sustained or charge-off in a taxable year ending before March 4, 1991.

(2) EXCEPTIONS.—The provisions of this section shall not apply to any assistance to which the amendments made by section 1401(a)(3) of the Financial Institution Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 apply.

(3) UNDERPAYMENT OF ESTIMATED TAX.—In the case of any required installment the due date for which occurs before the date of the enactment of this Act, no addition to tax shall be made under section 6654 or 6655 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to any underpayment to the extent such underpayment was created or increased by the treatment of FSLIC assistance credited before such date in a manner other than the manner described in subsection (a). All reductions in installments by reason of the preceding sentence shall be recaptured by increasing the amount of the 1st required installment occurring on or after the date of the enactment of this Act by the amount of such reductions.

SEC. 3006. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN APPORTIONED REAL ESTATE TAXES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (4) of section 6045(e) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION REQUIRED.—In the case of a real estate transaction involving a residence, the real estate reporting person shall include the following information on the return under subsection (a) and on the statement under subsection (b):

"(A) The portion of any real property tax which is treated as a tax imposed on the purchaser by reason of section 164(d)(1)(B).

"(B) Whether or not the financing (if any) of the seller was federally-subsidized indebtedness (as defined in section 143(m)(3))."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to transactions after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 3007. REPEAL OF SPECIAL RULES FOR RENTAL USE OF DWELLING FOR LESS THAN 15 DAYS PER YEAR.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (g) of section 280A (relating to disallowance of certain expenses in connection with business use of home, rental of vacation homes, etc.) is amended to read as follows:

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including regulations providing such de minimis rules as the Secretary may deem appropriate."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3008. INCREASE IN RECOVERY PERIOD FOR NONRESIDENTIAL REAL PROPERTY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (1) of section 168(c) (relating to applicable recovery period) is amended by striking the item relating to nonresidential real property and inserting the following:

"Nonresidential real property .... 40 years.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to property placed in service by the taxpayer on or after July 28, 1992.

(2) EXCEPTION.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to property placed in service by the taxpayer before January 1, 1995, if—

(A) the taxpayer or a qualified person entered into a binding written contract to purchase or construct such property before July 28, 1992, or

(B) the construction of such property was commenced by or for the taxpayer or a qualified person before July 28, 1992.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term "qualified person" means any person who transfers his rights in such a contract or such property to the taxpayer but only if the property is not placed in service by such person before such rights are transferred to the taxpayer.

SEC. 3009. INFORMATION REPORTING OF REAL PROPERTY TAXES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 6050E (relating to State and local income tax refunds) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) REQUIREMENT OF REPORTING.—Every person who, with respect to any individual, during any calendar year—

"(1) makes payments of refunds of State or local income taxes or real property taxes (or allows credits or offsets with respect to such taxes) aggregating $10 or more, or

"(2) receives payments of State or local real property taxes aggregating $10 or more, shall make a return according to forms or regulations prescribed by the Secretary setting forth the amount of such payments, credits, or offsets, and the name, address, and TIN of the individual with respect to whom a payment described in paragraph (1), credit, or offset was made or from whom a payment described in paragraph (2) was received."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (b) of section 6050E is amended—

(A) by inserting "and of payments received from the individual" before the period at the end of paragraph (2), and

(B) by inserting "or, in the case of payments described in paragraph (2), will not claim itemized deductions under chapter 1 for the taxable year during which such payments are paid or incurred by the individual" before the period at the end of such subsection.

(2) Subsection (c) of section 6050E is amended to read as follows:

"(c) PERSON.—For purposes of this section, the term 'person' means—

"(1) the officer or employee—

"(A) having control of the payments of the refunds (or the allowance of the credits or offsets), or

"(B) receiving the payments described in subsection (a)(2), or

"(2) the person or persons appropriately designated for purposes of this section."

(3) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—Section 6050E is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section in cases where real property taxes are paid by a person on behalf of another person."

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The section heading for section 6050E is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6050E. CERTAIN STATE AND LOCAL TAX PAYMENTS AND REFUNDS."

(2) The table of sections for subpart B of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 is amended by striking the item relating to section 6050E and inserting the following:

"Sec. 6050E. Certain State and local tax payments and refunds."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to payments made or received in calendar years after 1993.

SEC. 3010. MODIFICATIONS TO DEDUCTIONS FOR CERTAIN MOVING EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) RESIDENCE SALE, PURCHASE, OR LEASE EXPENSES.—Section 217(b)(1) (defining moving expenses) is amended—

(A) by striking subparagraph (E),

(B) by striking ", or" at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting a period, and

(C) by inserting "or" at the end of subparagraph (C).

(2) MEAL EXPENSES.—Section 217(b)(1) is amended—

(A) by striking "meals and" in subparagraphs (B) and (C), and

(B) by striking "of meals and lodging" in subparagraph (D) and inserting "of lodging (but not meals)".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 217(b) (defining moving expenses) is amended—

(A) by striking paragraph (2),

(B) by striking the second sentence in paragraph (3)(A), and

(C) by striking ", and by substituting '$1,500' for '$3,000'" in paragraph (3)(B).

(2) Section 217 is amended by striking subsection (e).

(3) Section 217(h) (relating to special rules for foreign moves) is amended—

(A) by striking "and by substituting '$6,000' for '$3,000'" in paragraph (1)(B), and

(B) by striking ", and by substituting '$3,000' for '$6,000'" in paragraph (1)(C).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 3011. INCREASE IN EXCISE TAX ON WAGERING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 4401 (relating to tax on wagers) is amended by striking "0.25 percent" in paragraph (1) and inserting "1 percent".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to wagers placed after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3012. CLASSIFICATION OF CERTAIN INTEREST AS STOCK OR INDEBTEDNESS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 385 (relating to treatment of certain interests in corporations as stock or indebtedness) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) EFFECT OF CLASSIFICATION BY ISSUER.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The characterization (as of the time of issuance) by the issuer as to whether an interest in a corporation is stock or indebtedness shall be binding on such issuer and on all holders of such interest (but shall not be binding on the Secretary).

"(2) NOTIFICATION OF INCONSISTENT TREATMENT.—Except as provided in regulations, paragraph (1) shall not apply to any holder of an interest if such holder on his return discloses that he is treating such interest in a manner inconsistent with the characterization referred to in paragraph (1).

"(3) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary is authorized to require such information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to instruments issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3013. RECOGNITION OF PRECONTRIBUTION GAIN IN CASE OF CERTAIN DISTRIBUTION TO CONTRIBUTING PARTNER.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subpart C of part II of subchapter K of chapter 1 (relating to distributions by a partnership) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 737. RECOGNITION OF PRECONTRIBUTION GAIN IN CASE OF CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS TO CONTRIBUTING PARTNER.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of any distribution by a partnership to a partner, such partner shall be treated as recognizing gain in an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(1) the excess (if any) of (A) the fair market value of property (other than money) received in the distribution over (B) the adjusted basis of such partner's interest in the partnership immediately before the distribution reduced (but not below zero) by the amount of money received in the distribution, or

"(2) the net precontribution gain of the partner.

Gain recognized under the preceding sentence shall be in addition to any gain recognized under section 731. The character of such gain shall be determined by reference to the proportionate character of the net precontribution gain.

"(b) NET PRECONTRIBUTION GAIN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'net precontribution gain' means the net gain (if any) which would have been recognized by the distributee partner under section 704(c)(1)(B) if all property which—

"(1) had been contributed to the partnership by the distributee partner within 5 years of the distribution, and

"(2) is held by such partnership immediately before the distribution, had been distributed by such partnership to another partner.

"(c) BASIS RULES.—

"(1) PARTNER'S INTEREST.—The adjusted basis of a partner's interest in a partnership shall be increased by the amount of any gain recognized by such partner under subsection (a). Except for purposes of determining the amount recognized under subsection (a), such increase shall be treated as occurring immediately before the distribution.

"(2) PARTNERSHIP'S BASIS IN CONTRIBUTED PROPERTY.—Appropriate adjustments shall be made to the adjusted basis of the partnership in the contributed property referred to in subsection (b) to reflect gain recognized under subsection (a).

"(d) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(1) DISTRIBUTIONS OF PREVIOUSLY CONTRIBUTED PROPERTY.—If any portion of the property distributed consists of property which had been contributed by the distributee partner to the partnership, such property shall not be taken into account under subsection (a)(1) and shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of the net precontribution gain. If the property distributed consists of an interest in an entity, the preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent that the value of such interest is attributable to property contributed to such entity after such interest had been contributed to the partnership.

"(2) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 751.—This section shall not apply to the extent section 751(b) applies to such distribution."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 704(c)(1) is amended by striking out "is distributed" in the material preceding clause (i) and inserting "is distributed (directly or indirectly)".

(2) Subsection (c) of section 731 is amended—

(A) by striking "and section 751" and inserting ", section 751", and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", and section 737 (relating to recognition of precontribution gain in case of certain distributions)".

(3) The table of sections for subpart B of part II of subchapter K of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 737. Recognition of precontribution gain in case of certain distributions to contributing partner."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions on or after June 25, 1992.

SEC. 3014. DENIAL OF DEDUCTION RELATING TO TRAVEL EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 274(m) (relating to additional limitations on travel expenses) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TRAVEL EXPENSES OF SPOUSE, DEPENDENT, OR OTHERS.—No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for travel expenses paid or incurred with respect to a spouse, dependent, or other individual accompanying the taxpayer (or an officer or employee of the taxpayer) on business travel, unless—

"(A) the spouse, dependent, or other individual is an employee of the taxpayer,

"(B) the travel of the spouse, dependent, or other individual is for a bona fide business purpose, and

"(C) such expenses would otherwise be deductible by the spouse, dependent, or other individual."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 3015. INCREASED BASE TAX RATE ON OZONE-DEPLETING CHEMICALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 4681(b) (relating to amount of tax) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) ADDITIONAL BASE TAX AMOUNT.—The base tax amount for purposes of subparagraph (A) with respect to any sale or use of an ozone-depleting chemical for any calendar year (determined without regard to this subparagraph) shall be increased by the amount determined under the following table for such calendar year:

"For calendar year:	The base tax amount is increased by:
1992	$0.15
1993	0.25
1994	0.35
1995 and each calendar year thereafter	0.45."

(b) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN HALONS.—The table contained in subparagraph (A) of section 4682(g)(2) (relating to halons) is amended to read as follows:

"In the case of:	The applicable percentage is:
	For sales or use during 1992	For sales or use during 1993
Halon-1211	4.58	2.78
Halon-1301	1.38	0.83
Halon-2404	2.29	1.39".

(c) RATES RETAINED FOR CHEMICALS USED IN RIGID FOAM INSULATION.—The table in subparagraph (B) of section 4682(g)(2) (relating to chemicals used in rigid foam insulation) is amended—

(A) by striking "15" and inserting "13.76", and

(B) by striking "10" and inserting "8.33".

(d) CHEMICALS USED FOR STERILIZING MEDICAL DEVICES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (g) of section 4682 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) CHEMICALS USED FOR STERILIZING MEDICAL DEVICES.—

"(A) RATE OF TAX.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of—

"(I) any use after September 30, 1992, and before January 1, 1994, of any substance to sterilize medical devices, or

"(II) any qualified sale during such period by the manufacturer, producer, or importer of any substance, the tax imposed by section 4681 shall be the applicable percentage (determined in accordance with the following table) of the amount of such tax which would (but for this subparagraph) be imposed:

"In the case of sales or use during:	The applicable percentage is:
1992	91.76
1993	55.67.

"(ii) QUALIFIED SALE.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'qualified sale' means any sale by the manufacturer, producer, or importer of any substance described in clause (i)—

"(I) for use by the purchaser to sterilize medical devices, or

"(II) for resale by the purchaser to a 2d purchaser for such use by the 2d purchaser.

The preceding sentence shall apply only if the manufacturer, producer, and importer, and the 1st and 2d purchasers (if any) meet such registration requirements as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

"(B) OVERPAYMENTS.—If any substance on which tax was paid under this subchapter is used after September 30, 1992, and before January 1, 1994, by any person to sterilize medical devices, credit or refund without interest shall be allowed to such person in an amount equal to the excess of—

"(i) the tax paid under this subchapter on such substance, over

"(ii) the tax (if any) which would be imposed by section 4681 if such substance were used for such use by the manufacture, producer, or importer thereof on the date of its use by such person.

Amounts payable under the preceding sentence with respect to uses during the taxable year shall be treated as described in section 34(a) for such year unless claim thereof has been timely filed under this subparagraph."

(e) FLOOR STOCK TAXES.—

(A) Subparagraph (C) of section 4682(h)(2) (relating to other tax-increase dates) is amended by striking "January 1 of 1991, 1992, 1993, and 1994" and inserting "January 1 of 1991 and 1992, October 1, 1992, and January 1 of 1993 and each calendar year thereafter".

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 4682(h) (relating to due date) is amended—

(i) by inserting "or October 1" after "January 1", and

(ii) by inserting "or March 31 of the succeeding calendar year, respectively," after "such year".

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable chemicals sold or used on or after October 1, 1992.

Subtitle B—Extension of Existing Provisions

SEC. 3101. EXTENSION OF TOP ESTATE AND GIFT TAX RATES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 2001(c)(2) (relating to rate schedule) is amended by striking "1993" and inserting "1998".

(2) Subparagraph (D) of section 2001(c)(2) is amended by striking "1993" each place it appears (including in the subparagraph heading) and inserting "1998".

(3) Paragraph (3) of section 2001(c) is amended by striking "1992" and inserting "1997".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply in the case of decedents dying, and gifts made, after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 3102. EXTENSION OF PHASEOUT OF PERSONAL EXEMPTION FOR HIGH-INCOME TAXPAYERS.

Section 151(d)(3) (relating to phaseout of personal exemption) is amended by striking subparagraph (E).

SEC. 3103. EXTENSION OF OVERALL LIMITATION ON ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS FOR HIGH-INCOME TAXPAYERS.

Section 68 (relating to overall limitations on itemized deductions) is amended by striking subsection (f).

Subtitle C—Alternative Taxable Years

SEC. 3201. ELECTION OF TAXABLE YEAR OTHER THAN REQUIRED TAXABLE YEAR.

(a) Limitations on Taxable Years Which May Be Elected.—Subsection (b) of section 444 (relating to limitations on taxable years which may be elected) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Taxable Year Must Be Same as Reporting Period.—If an entity has annual reports or statements—

"(1) which ascertain income, profit, or loss of the entity, and

"(2) which are—

"(A) provided to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or

"(B) used for credit purposes, the entity may make an election under subsection (a) only if the taxable year elected covers the same period as such reports or statements."

(b) Period of Election.—Section 444(d)(2) (relating to period of election) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Period of Election.—

"(A) In general.—An election under subsection (a) shall remain in effect until the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation terminates the election and adopts the required taxable year.

"(B) Change not treated as termination.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), a change from a taxable year which is not a required taxable year to another such taxable year shall not be treated as a termination."

(c) Exception for Trusts.—Section 444(d)(3) (relating to tiered structures) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Exception for certain structures that include trusts.—An entity shall not be considered to be part of a tiered structure to which subparagraph (A) applies solely because a trust owning an interest in such entity is a trust all of the beneficiaries of which use a calendar year for their taxable year."

(d) Regulations.—Subsection (g) of section 444 (relating to regulations) is amended to read as follows:

"(g) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, including regulations—

"(1) to prevent the avoidance of the provisions of this section through a change in entity or form of an entity,

"(2) to prevent the carryback to any preceding taxable year of a net operating loss (or similar item) arising in any short taxable year created pursuant to an election or termination of an election under this section, and

"(3) to provide for the termination of an election under subsection (a) if an entity does not continue to meet the requirements of subsection (b)."

SEC. 3202. REQUIRED PAYMENTS FOR ENTITIES ELECTING NOT TO HAVE REQUIRED TAXABLE YEAR.

(a) Additional Required Payment.—

(1) In General.—Section 7519(b) (defining required payment) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Required Payment.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In General.—The term 'required payment' means, with respect to any applicable election year of a partnership or S corporation, an amount equal to the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the adjusted highest section 1 rate, multiplied by the net base year income of the entity, over

"(B) the net required payment balance.

For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the term 'adjusted highest section 1 rate' means the highest rate of tax in effect under section 1 as of the close of the first required taxable year ending within such year, plus 2 percentage points.

"(2) Additional Payment for New Applicable Election Years.—

"(A) In General.—In the case of a new applicable election year, the required payment shall include, in addition to any amount determined under paragraph (1), the amount determined under subparagraph (C).

"(B) New Applicable Election Year.—For purposes of this section, the term 'new applicable election year' means any applicable election year—

"(i) with respect to which the preceding taxable year was not an applicable election year, or

"(ii) which covers a different period than the preceding taxable year by reason of a change described in section 444(d)(2)(B).

If any year described in the preceding sentence is a short taxable year which does not include the last day of the required taxable year, the new applicable election year shall be the taxable year following the short taxable year.

"(C) Additional Amount.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the amount determined under this subparagraph shall be—

"(i) in the case of a year described in subparagraph (B)(i), 75 percent of the required payment for the year, and

"(ii) in the case of a year described in subparagraph (B)(ii), 75 percent of the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the required payment for the year, over

"(II) the required payment for the year which would have been computed if the change described in subparagraph (B)(ii) had not occurred.

"(D) Required Payment.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'required payment' means the payment required by this section (determined without regard to this paragraph)."

(2) Due Date.—Paragraph (2) of section 7519(f) (defining due date) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Due Date.—

(1) by striking "$1,000" in clause (i) and inserting "twice the amount described in paragraph (4)(A)(ii)(I)", and

(2) by amending subclause (II) of clause (ii) to read as follows:

"(II) for each such child, 15 percent of the lesser of the amount described in paragraph (4)(A)(ii)(I) or the excess of the gross income of such child over the amount so described, and".

(c) MINIMUM TAX.—Subparagraph (B) of section 59(j)(1) is amended by striking "$1,000" and inserting "twice the amount in effect for the taxable year under section 63(c)(5)(A)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4103. SIMPLIFIED FOREIGN TAX CREDIT LIMITATION FOR INDIVIDUALS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 904 (relating to limitations on foreign tax credit) is amended by redesignating subsection (j) as subsection (k) and by inserting after subsection (i) the following new subsection:

"(j) SIMPLIFIED LIMITATION FOR CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an individual to whom this subsection applies for any taxable year, the limitation of subsection (a) shall be the lesser of—

"(A) 25 percent of such individual's gross income for the taxable year from sources without the United States, or

"(B) the amount of the creditable foreign taxes paid or accrued by the individual during the taxable year (determined without regard to subsection (c)).

No taxes paid or accrued by the individual during such taxable year may be deemed paid or accrued in any other taxable year under subsection (c).

"(2) INDIVIDUALS TO WHOM SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection shall apply to an individual for any taxable year if—

"(A) the entire amount of such individual's gross income for the taxable year from sources without the United States consists of qualified passive income,

"(B) the amount of the creditable foreign taxes paid or accrued by the individual during the taxable year does not exceed $200 ($400 in the case of a joint return), and

"(C) such individual elects to have this subsection apply for the taxable year.

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) QUALIFIED PASSIVE INCOME.—The term 'qualified passive income' means any item of gross income if—

"(i) such item of income is passive income (as defined in subsection (d)(2)(A) without regard to clause (iii) thereof), and

"(ii) such item of income is shown on a payee statement furnished to the individual.

"(B) CREDITABLE FOREIGN TAXES.—The term 'creditable foreign taxes' means any taxes for which a credit is allowable under section 901; except that such term shall not include any tax unless such tax is shown on a payee statement furnished to such individual.

"(C) PAYEE STATEMENT.—The term 'payee statement' has the meaning given to such term by section 6724(d)(2).

"(D) ESTATES AND TRUSTS NOT ELIGIBLE.—This subsection shall not apply to any estate or trust."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4104. TREATMENT OF PERSONAL TRANSACTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS UNDER FOREIGN CURRENCY RULES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (e) of section 988 (relating to application to individuals) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) APPLICATION TO INDIVIDUALS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The preceding provisions of this section shall not apply to any section 988 transaction entered into by an individual which is a personal transaction.

"(2) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN PERSONAL TRANSACTIONS.—If—

"(A) nonfunctional currency is disposed of by an individual in any transaction, and

"(B) such transaction is a personal transaction, no gain shall be recognized for purposes of this subtitle by reason of changes in exchange rates after such currency was acquired by such individual and before such disposition. The preceding sentence shall not apply if the gain which would otherwise be recognized exceeds $200.

"(3) PERSONAL TRANSACTIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'personal transaction' means any transaction entered into by an individual, except that such term shall not include any transaction to the extent that expenses properly allocable to such transaction meet the requirements of section 162 or 212 (other than that part of section 212 dealing with expenses incurred in connection with taxes)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4105. EXCLUSION OF COMBAT PAY FROM WITHHOLDING LIMITED TO AMOUNT EXCLUDABLE FROM GROSS INCOME.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 3401(a) (defining wages) is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: "to the extent remuneration for such service is excludable from gross income under such section".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4106. EXPANDED ACCESS TO SIMPLIFIED INCOME TAX RETURNS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall take such actions as may be appropriate to expand access to simplified individual income tax returns and to otherwise simplify the individual income tax returns, including—

(1) (if appropriate) allowing taxpayers who itemize deductions to file their return on Form 1040A, and

(2) removing or raising the taxable income limitations on taxpayers who may file Form 1040A.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than the date 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall submit a report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate, a report on his actions under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

(c) REPEAL OF INTERACTION WITH DEPENDENT CARE CREDIT.—Subparagraph (D) of section 32(b)(1) (relating to supplemental young child credit) is amended by striking the second sentence.

Subtitle B—Pension Simplification

PART I—SIMPLIFIED DISTRIBUTION RULES

SEC. 4201. REPEAL OF 5-YEAR INCOME AVERAGING FOR LUMP-SUM DISTRIBUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 402 (relating to taxability of beneficiary of employees' trust) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) TAXABILITY OF BENEFICIARY OF CERTAIN FOREIGN SITUS TRUSTS.—For purposes of subsections (a), (b), and (c), a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing trust which would qualify for exemption from tax under section 501(a) except for the fact that it is a trust created or organized outside the United States shall be treated as if it were a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subparagraph (D) of section 402(e)(4) (relating to other rules applicable to exempt trusts) is amended to read as follows:

"(D) LUMP SUM DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'lump sum distribution' means the distribution or payment within one taxable year of the recipient of the balance to the credit of an employee which becomes payable to the recipient—

"(I) on account of the employee's death,

"(II) after the employee attains age 59½,

"(III) on account of the employee's separation from service, or

"(IV) after the employee has become disabled (within the meaning of section 72(m)(7)), from a trust which forms a part of a plan described in section 401(a) and which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) or from a plan described in section 403(a). Subclause (III) of this clause shall be applied only with respect to an individual who is an employee without regard to section 401(c)(1), and subclause (IV) shall be applied only with respect to an employee within the meaning of section 401(c)(1). For purposes of this clause, a distribution to two or more trusts shall be treated as a distribution to one recipient. For purposes of this paragraph, the balance to the credit of the employee does not include the accumulated deductible employee contributions under the plan (within the meaning of section 72(o)(5)).

"(ii) AGGREGATION OF CERTAIN TRUSTS AND PLANS.—For purposes of determining the balance to the credit of an employee under clause (i)—

"(I) all trusts which are part of a plan shall be treated as a single trust, all pension plans maintained by the employer shall be treated as a single plan, all profit-sharing plans maintained by the employer shall be treated as a single plan, and all stock bonus plans maintained by the employer shall be treated as a single plan, and

"(II) trusts which are not qualified trusts under section 401(a) and annuity contracts which do not satisfy the requirements of section 404(a)(2) shall not be taken into account.

"(iii) COMMUNITY PROPERTY LAWS.—The provisions of this paragraph shall be applied without regard to community property laws.

"(iv) AMOUNTS SUBJECT TO PENALTY.—This paragraph shall not apply to amounts described in subparagraph (A) of section 72(m)(5) to the extent that section 72(m)(5) applies to such amounts.

"(v) BALANCE TO CREDIT OF EMPLOYEE NOT TO INCLUDE AMOUNTS PAYABLE UNDER QUALIFIED DOMESTIC RELATIONS ORDER.—For purposes of this paragraph, the balance to the credit of an employee shall not include any amount payable to an alternate payee under a qualified domestic relations order (within the meaning of section 414(p)).

"(vi) TRANSFERS TO COST-OF-LIVING ARRANGEMENT NOT TREATED AS DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the balance to the credit of an employee under a defined contribution plan shall not include any amount transferred from such defined contribution plan to a qualified cost-of-living arrangement (within the meaning of section 415(k)(2)) under a defined benefit plan.

"(vii) LUMP-SUM DISTRIBUTIONS OF ALTERNATE PAYEES.—If any distribution or payment of the balance to the credit of an employee would be treated as a lump-sum distribution, then, for purposes of this paragraph, the payment under a qualified domestic relations order (within the meaning of section 414(p)) of the balance to the credit of an alternate payee who is the spouse or former spouse of the employee shall be treated as a lump-sum distribution. For purposes of this clause, the balance to the credit of the alternate payee shall not include any amount payable to the employee."

(2) Section 402(c) (relating to rules applicable to rollovers from exempt trusts) is amended by striking paragraph (10).

(3) Paragraph (1) of section 55(c) (defining regular tax) is amended by striking "shall not include any tax imposed by section 402(d) and".

(4) Paragraph (8) of section 62(a) (relating to certain portion of lump-sum distributions from pension plans taxed under section 402(d)) is hereby repealed.

(5) Section 401(a)(28)(B) (relating to coordination with distribution rules) is amended by striking clause (v).

(6) Subparagraph (B)(ii) of section 401(k)(10) (relating to distributions that must be lump-sum distributions) is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) LUMP SUM DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'lump sum distribution' means any distribution of the balance to the credit of an employee immediately before the distribution."

(7) Section 406(c) (relating to termination of status as deemed employee not to be treated as separation from service for purposes of limitation of tax) is hereby repealed.

(8) Section 407(c) (relating to termination of status as deemed employee not to be treated as separation from service for purposes of limitation of tax) is hereby repealed.

(9) Section 691(c) (relating to deduction for estate tax) is amended by striking paragraph (5).

(10) Paragraph (1) of section 871(b) (relating to imposition of tax) is amended by striking "section 1, 55, or 402(d)(1)" and inserting "section 1 or 55".

(11) Subsection (b) of section 877 (relating to alternative tax) is amended by striking "section 1, 55, or 402(d)(1)" and inserting "section 1 or 55".

(12) Section 4980A(c)(4) is amended—

(A) by striking "to which an election under section 402(e)(4)(B) applies" and inserting "(as defined in section 402(e)(4)(D)) with respect to which the individual elects to have this paragraph apply", and

(B) by adding at the end the following new flush sentence:

"An individual may elect to have this paragraph apply to only one lump-sum distribution."

(13) Section 402(e) is amended by striking paragraph (5).

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

(2) RETENTION OF CERTAIN TRANSITION RULES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to any distribution for which the taxpayer elects the benefits of section 1122 (h)(3) or (h)(5) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the rules of sections 402(c)(10) and 402(d) (as in effect after the amendments made by the Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 1992 and before the amendments made by this Act) shall apply.

SEC. 4202. REPEAL OF $5,000 EXCLUSION OF EMPLOYEES' DEATH BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 101 is hereby repealed.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4203. SIMPLIFIED METHOD FOR TAXING ANNUITY DISTRIBUTIONS UNDER CERTAIN EMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (d) of section 72 (relating to annuities; certain proceeds of endowment and life insurance contracts) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR QUALIFIED EMPLOYER RETIREMENT PLANS.—

"(1) SIMPLIFIED METHOD OF TAXING ANNUITY PAYMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any amount received as an annuity under a qualified employer retirement plan—

"(i) subsection (b) shall not apply, and

"(ii) the investment in the contract shall be recovered as provided in this paragraph.

"(B) METHOD OF RECOVERING INVESTMENT IN CONTRACT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Gross income shall not include so much of any monthly annuity payment under a qualified employer retirement plan as does not exceed the amount obtained by dividing—

"(I) the investment in the contract (as of the annuity starting date), by

"(II) the number of anticipated payments determined under the table contained in clause (iii) (or, in the case of a contract to which subsection (c)(3)(B) applies, the number of monthly annuity payments under such contract).

"(ii) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph.

"(iii) NUMBER OF ANTICIPATED PAYMENTS.—

"If the age of the primary annuitant on the annuity starting date is:	The number of anticipated payments is:
Not more than 55	300
More than 55 but not more than 60	260
More than 60 but not more than 65	240
More than 65 but not more than 70	170
More than 70	120

"(C) ADJUSTMENT FOR REFUND FEATURE NOT APPLICABLE.—For purposes of this paragraph, investment in the contract shall be determined under subsection (c)(1) without regard to subsection (c)(2).

"(D) SPECIAL RULE WHERE LUMP SUM PAID IN CONNECTION WITH COMMENCEMENT OF ANNUITY PAYMENTS.—If, in connection with the commencement of annuity payments under any qualified employer retirement plan, the taxpayer receives a lump sum payment—

"(i) such payment shall be taxable under subsection (e) as if received before the annuity starting date, and

"(ii) the investment in the contract for purposes of this paragraph shall be determined as if such payment had been so received.

"(E) EXCEPTION.—This paragraph shall not apply in any case where the primary annuitant has attained age 75 on the annuity starting date unless there are fewer than 5 years of guaranteed payments under the annuity.

"(F) ADJUSTMENT WHERE ANNUITY PAYMENTS NOT ON MONTHLY BASIS.—In any case where the annuity payments are not made on a monthly basis, appropriate adjustments in the application of this paragraph shall be made to take into account the period on the basis of which such payments are made.

"(G) QUALIFIED EMPLOYER RETIREMENT PLAN.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified employer retirement plan' means any plan or contract described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of section 4974(c).

"(2) TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEE CONTRIBUTIONS UNDER DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLANS.—For purposes of this section, employee contributions (and any income allocable thereto) under a defined contribution plan may be treated as a separate contract."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply in cases where the annuity starting date is after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4204. REQUIRED DISTRIBUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 401(a)(9)(C) (defining required beginning date) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) REQUIRED BEGINNING DATE.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'required beginning date' means April 1 of the calendar year following the later of—

"(I) the calendar year in which the employee attains age 70½,

"(II) the calendar year in which the employee retires.

"(ii) EXCEPTION.—Subclause (II) of clause (i) shall not apply—

"(I) except as provided in section 409(d), in the case of an employee who is a 5-percent owner (as defined in section 416) with respect to the plan year ending in the calendar year in which the employee attains age 70½, or

"(II) for purposes of section 408(a)(6) or (b)(3).

"(iii) ACTUARIAL ADJUSTMENT.—In the case of an employee to whom clause (i)(II) applies who retires in a calendar year after the calendar year in which the employee attains age 70½, the employee's accrued benefit shall be actuarially increased to take into account the period after age 70½ in which the employee was not receiving any benefits under the plan.

"(iv) EXCEPTION FOR GOVERNMENTAL AND CHURCH PLANS.—Clauses (ii) and (iii) shall not apply in the case of a governmental plan or church plan. For purposes of this clause, the term 'church plan' means a plan maintained by a church for church employees, and the term 'church' means any church (as defined in section 3121(w)(3)(A)) or qualified church-controlled organization (as defined in section 3121(w)(3)(B))."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

PART II—INCREASED ACCESS TO PENSION PLANS

SEC. 4211. MODIFICATIONS OF SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSIONS.

(a) INCREASE IN NUMBER OF ALLOWABLE PARTICIPANTS FOR SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENTS.—Section 408(k)(6)(B) is amended by striking "25" each place it appears in the text and heading thereof and inserting "100".

(b) MODIFICATION OF PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS.—Section 408(k)(2)(B) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) has at least 1 year of service (as determined under section 411(a)(5)) with the employer, and".

(c) REPEAL OF PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENT.—Section 408(k)(6)(A) is amended by striking clause (ii) and by redesignating clauses (iii) and (iv) as clauses (ii) and (iii), respectively.

(d) ALTERNATIVE TEST.—Clause (iii) of section 408 (k)(6)(A) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new flush sentence:

"The requirements of the preceding sentence are met if the employer makes contributions to the simplified employee pension meeting the requirements of sections 401(k)(11) (B) or (C), 401(k)(11)(D), and 401(m)(10)(B)."

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 4212. PRIME ACCOUNTS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PRIVATE RETIREMENT INCENTIVES MATCHED BY EMPLOYERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 408 (relating to individual retirement accounts) is amended by redesignating subsection (p) as subsection (q) and by inserting after subsection (o) the following new subsection:

"(p) PRIME ACCOUNTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, the term 'PRIME account' means an individual retirement plan—

"(A) with respect to which the requirements of paragraphs (3), (4), (5), and (6) are met; and

"(B) with respect to which the only contributions allowed are contributions under a qualified salary reduction arrangement.

"(2) QUALIFIED SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified salary reduction arrangement' means a written arrangement of an eligible employer under which—

"(i) an employee may elect to have the employer make payments—

"(I) as elective employer contributions to the PRIME account on behalf of the employee, or

"(II) to the employee directly in cash,

"(ii) the amount which an employee may elect under clause (i) for any year is required to be expressed as a percentage of compensation and may not exceed a total of $3,000 for any year, and

"(iii) the employer—

"(I) is required to make a matching contribution to the PRIME account for any year in an amount equal to so much of the amount the employee elects under clause (i)(I) as does not exceed 3 percent of compensation, and

"(II) may make no other matching contribution.

"(B) ELIGIBLE EMPLOYER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'eligible employer' means an employer who normally employs fewer than 100 employees on any day during the year.

"(C) ARRANGEMENT MUST BE ONLY PLAN OF EMPLOYER.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An arrangement shall not be treated as a qualified salary reduction arrangement for any year if the employer (or any predecessor employer) maintained a qualified plan with respect to which contributions were made, or amounts were accrued, for any year in the period beginning with the year such arrangement became effective and ending with the year for which the determination is being made.

"(ii) SERVICE CREDIT.—A qualified plan maintained by an employer shall provide that, in computing the accrued benefit of any employee, no credit shall be given for service during a year for which such employee was eligible to participate in a qualified salary reduction arrangement of such employer.

"(iii) QUALIFIED PLAN.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'qualified plan' means a plan, contract, pension, or trust described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 219(g)(5).

"(3) VESTING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to a PRIME account if the employee's rights to any contribution to the PRIME account are nonforfeitable. For purposes of this paragraph, the rules of subsection (k)(4) shall apply.

"(4) PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any PRIME account for a year only if, under the qualified salary reduction arrangement, all employees of the employer who are reasonably expected to work at least 1,200 hours during such year are eligible to make the election under paragraph (2)(A)(i). Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, an arrangement may provide that an employee is not eligible to make such election until the employee has completed a year in which the employee worked at least 1,200 hours.

"(5) ADMINISTRATIVE REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any PRIME account if, under the qualified salary reduction arrangement—

"(A) an employer must make the elective employer contributions under paragraph (2)(A)(i) and the employer matching contributions under paragraph (2)(A)(iii) not later than the close of the 30-day period following the last day of the month with respect to which the contributions are to be made,

"(B) an employee may elect to terminate participation in such arrangement at any time during the year, except that if an employee so elects, the employee may not elect to resume participation until the beginning of the next year, and

"(C) each employee eligible to participate for any year may elect, during the 60-day period before the beginning of such year, to participate in the arrangement, or to modify the amounts subject to such arrangement, for such year.

"(6) SPOUSAL CONSENT.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if requirements similar to the requirements of section 401(a)(11) are met. For purposes of applying section 401(a)(11)(B)(iii), the arrangement shall be treated in the same manner as a defined contribution plan.

"(7) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) EMPLOYEE.—The term 'employee' includes an employee as defined in section 401(c)(1).

"(B) YEAR.—The term 'year' means the calendar year."

(2) COMMON FUNDS.—Any common trust fund or common investment fund of PRIME account assets shall be treated as if it were a common trust fund or common investment fund of assets of a trust exempt from taxation under section 501(a) which is described in section 401(a).

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

(b) TAX TREATMENT OF PRIME ACCOUNTS.—

(1) DEDUCTIBILITY OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(A) Section 219(b) (relating to maximum amount of deduction) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) SPECIAL RULE FOR PRIME ACCOUNTS.—This section shall not apply with respect to any amount contributed to a PRIME account established under section 408(p)."

(B) Section 219(g)(5)(A) (defining active participant) is amended by striking "or" at the end of clause (iv) and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(vi) any PRIME account (within the meaning of section 408(p)), or".

(2) CONTRIBUTIONS AND DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(A) Section 402 (relating to taxability of beneficiary of employees' trust) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k) TREATMENT OF PRIME ACCOUNTS.—The rules of paragraphs (1) and (3) of subsection (h) shall apply to contributions and distributions with respect to a PRIME account under section 408(p)."

(B) Section 408(d)(3) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) PRIME ACCOUNTS.—This paragraph shall not apply to any amount paid or distributed out of a PRIME account (as defined in section 408(p)) unless it is paid into another PRIME account."

(C) Clause (i) of section 457(c)(2)(B) is amended by striking "section 402(h)(1)(B)" and inserting "section 402(h)(1)(B) or (k)".

(3) PENALTIES.—

(A) EARLY WITHDRAWALS.—Section 72(t) (relating to additional tax in early distributions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) SPECIAL RULES FOR PRIME ACCOUNTS.—If an employer establishes a PRIME account (within the meaning of section 408(p)) on behalf of an employee, and such employee receives any amount from such account during the 3-calendar-year period beginning with the calendar year for which elective contributions under section 408(p)(2) were first made by such employer on behalf of such employee, paragraph (1) shall be applied to such amount by substituting '25 percent' for '10 percent'."

(B) FAILURES TO REPORT.—Section 6693 is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) PENALTIES RELATING TO PRIME ACCOUNTS.—

"(1) EMPLOYER PENALTIES.—An employer who fails to provide 1 or more notices required by section 408(l)(2)(C) shall pay a penalty of $100 for each day on which such failures continue.

"(2) TRUSTEE PENALTIES.—A trustee who fails—

"(A) to provide 1 or more statements required by the last sentence of section 408(i) shall pay a penalty of $100 for each day on which such failures continue, or

"(B) to provide 1 or more summary descriptions required by section 408(l)(2)(B) shall pay a penalty of $100 for each day on which such failures continue.

"(3) EXCEPTION.—Paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not apply to any failure due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect."

(4) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(A)(i) Section 408(l) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) PRIME ACCOUNTS.—

"(A) NO EMPLOYER REPORTS.—Except as provided in this paragraph, no report shall be required under this section by an employer maintaining a qualified salary reduction arrangement under subsection (p).

"(B) SUMMARY DESCRIPTION.—The trustee of any PRIME account established pursuant to a qualified salary reduction arrangement under subsection (p) shall prepare, and provide to the employer maintaining the arrangement, each year a description containing the following information:

"(i) The name and address of the employer and the trustee.

"(ii) The requirements for eligibility for participation.

"(iii) The benefits generally available under the arrangement.

"(iv) The time and method of making elections with respect to the arrangement.

"(v) The procedures for, and effects of, withdrawals from the arrangement.

"(C) EMPLOYEE NOTIFICATION.—The employer shall notify each employee immediately before the period for which an election described in subsection (p)(5)(C) may be made of the employee's opportunity to make such election. Such notice shall include a copy of the description described in subparagraph (B)."

(ii) Section 408(l) is amended by striking "An employer" and inserting—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An employer".

(B) Section 408(i) is amended by adding at the end the following new flush sentence:

"In the case of a PRIME account under subsection (p), only one report under this subsection shall be required to be submitted to the Secretary (at the time provided under paragraph (2)) but, in addition to the report under this subsection, there shall be furnished, within 30 days after each calendar quarter, to the individual on whose behalf the account is maintained a statement with respect to the account balance as of the close of, and the account activity during, such calendar quarter."

(5) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Section 280G(b)(6) is amended by striking the "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting ", or" and by adding after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) a PRIME account described in section 408(p)."

(B) Section 402(g)(3) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting ", and", and by adding after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) any employer contribution under section 408(p)(2)(A)."

(C) Subsections (b) and (c) of section 414 are each amended by inserting "408(p)," after "408(k),".

(D)(i) Section 415(a)(2) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by inserting "or" at the end of subparagraph (C), and by adding after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) a PRIME account described in section 408(p),"

(ii) Section 415(a)(2) is amended—

(I) by striking "or pension" and inserting "pension, or account", and

(II) by striking "or 408(k)" and inserting "408(k), or 408(p)".

(iii) The second last sentence of section 415(c)(2) is amended—

(I) by inserting a comma after "408(d)(3))", and

(II) by inserting ", and without regard to contributions to a PRIME account which are excludable from gross income under section 408(p)" after "408(k)(6)".

(iv) Section 415(e)(5) is amended by inserting "or PRIME account" after "simplified employee pension".

(v) Section 415(k)(1) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (E), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (F) and inserting ", or", and by inserting after subparagraph (F) the following new subparagraph:

"(G) a PRIME account described in section 408(p)."

(E) Section 4972(d)(1)(A) is amended by striking "and" at the end of clause (ii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting ", and", and by adding after clause (iii) the following new clause:

"(iv) any PRIME account (within the meaning of section 408(p))."

(6) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 4213. TAX EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS ELIGIBLE UNDER SECTION 401(k).

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subparagraph (B) of section 401(k)(4) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS NOT ELIGIBLE.—A cash or deferred arrangement shall not be treated as a qualified cash or deferred arrangement if it is part of a plan maintained by a State or local government or political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality thereof. This subparagraph shall not apply to a rural cooperative plan."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to plan years beginning on or after December 31, 1992, but shall not apply to any cash or deferred arrangement to which clause (i) of section 1116(f)(2)(B) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 applies.

SEC. 4214. DUTIES OF SPONSORS OF CERTAIN PROTOTYPE PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury may, as a condition of sponsorship, prescribe rules defining the duties and responsibilities of sponsors of master and prototype plans, regional prototype plans, and other Internal Revenue Service preapproved plans.

(b) DUTIES RELATING TO PLAN AMENDMENT, NOTIFICATION OF ADOPTERS, AND PLAN ADMINISTRATION.—The duties and responsibilities referred to in subsection (a) may include—

(1) the maintenance of lists of persons adopting the sponsor's plans, including the updating of such lists not less frequently than annually,

(2) the furnishing of notices at least annually to such persons and to the Secretary or his delegate, in such form and at such time as the Secretary shall prescribe,

(3) duties relating to administrative services to such persons in the operation of their plans, and

(4) other duties that the Secretary considers necessary to ensure that—

(A) the master and prototype, regional prototype, and other preapproved plans of adopting employers are timely amended to meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or of any rule or regulation of the Secretary, and

(B) adopting employers receive timely notification of amendments and other actions taken by sponsors with respect to their plans.

PART III—NONDISCRIMINATION PROVISIONS

SEC. 4221. DEFINITION OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 414(q) (defining highly compensated employee) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'highly compensated employee' means any employee who—

"(A) was a 5-percent owner at any time during the year or the preceding year, or

"(B) had compensation for the preceding year from the employer in excess of $50,000.

The Secretary shall adjust the $50,000 amount under subparagraph (B) at the same time and in the same manner as under section 415(d)."

(b) SPECIAL RULE WHERE NO EMPLOYEES TREATED AS HIGHLY COMPENSATED.—Paragraph (2) of section 414(q) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) SPECIAL RULE IF NO EMPLOYEE DESCRIBED IN PARAGRAPH (1).—If no employee is treated as a highly compensated employee under paragraph (1), the highest paid officer for the year shall be treated as a highly compensated employee. The preceding sentence shall not apply for purposes of section 401 (k) or (m) and shall not apply with respect to employees of an employer described in section 457(e)(1)."

(c) TREATMENT OF FAMILY MEMBERS.—Paragraph (6) of section 414(q) is hereby repealed.

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraphs (4), (5), (8), and (12) of section 414(q) are hereby repealed.

(2)(A) Section 414(r) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) EXCLUDED EMPLOYEES.—For purposes of this subsection, the following employees shall be excluded:

"(A) Employees who have not completed 6 months of service.

"(B) Employees who normally work less than 17½ hours per week.

"(C) Employees who normally work not more than 6 months during any year.

"(D) Employees who have not attained the age of 21.

"(E) Except to the extent provided in regulations, employees who are included in a unit of employees covered by an agreement which the Secretary of Labor finds to be a collective bargaining agreement between employee representatives and the employer.

Except as provided by the Secretary, the employer may elect to apply subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) by substituting a shorter period of service, smaller number of hours or months, or lower age for the period of service, number of hours or months, or age (as the case may be) specified in such subparagraph."

(B) Subparagraph (A) of section 414(r)(2) is amended by striking "subsection (q)(8)" and inserting "paragraph (9)".

(3) Paragraph (17) of section 401(a) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(4) Subsection (l) of section 404 is amended by striking the last sentence.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993, except that an employer may elect not to have such amendments apply to years beginning in 1994.

SEC. 4222. ELECTION TO TREAT BASE PAY AS COMPENSATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 414(s) is amended by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5) and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) ELECTION TO USE BASE PAY.—An employer may elect to determine an employee's compensation solely by reference to that portion of the employee's compensation attributable to such employee's base pay. Such election shall apply for purposes of all applicable provisions and to all employees and, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 4223. MODIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 401(a)(26)(A) (relating to additional participation requirements) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a trust which is a part of a defined benefit plan, such trust shall not constitute a qualified trust under this subsection unless on each day of the plan year such trust benefits at least the lesser of—

"(i) 25 employees of the employer, or

"(ii) the greater of—

"(I) 40 percent of all employees of the employer, or

"(II) 2 employees (or if there is only 1 employee, such employee)."

(b) SEPARATE LINE OF BUSINESS TEST.—Section 401(a)(26)(G) (relating to separate line of business) is amended by striking "paragraph (7)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(A) or (7)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1991.

(2) ELECTION.—A plan may elect to have the amendment made by this section apply as if such amendment was included in the amendment made by section 1112(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Such election shall be made at such time, and in such form, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 4224. NONDISCRIMINATION RULES FOR QUALIFIED CASH OR DEFERRED ARRANGEMENTS AND MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) ALTERNATIVE METHODS OF SATISFYING SECTION 401(k) NONDISCRIMINATION TESTS.—Section 401(k) (relating to cash or deferred arrangements) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(11) ALTERNATIVE METHODS OF MEETING NONDISCRIMINATION REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A cash or deferred arrangement shall be treated as meeting the requirements of paragraph (3)(A)(ii) if such arrangement—

"(i) meets the contribution requirements of subparagraph (B) or (C), and

"(ii) meets the notice requirements of subparagraph (D).

"(B) MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met if, under the arrangement, the employer makes matching contributions on behalf of each employee who is not a highly compensated employee in an amount equal to—

"(I) 100 percent of the elective contributions of the employee to the extent such elective contributions do not exceed 3 percent of the employee's compensation, and

"(II) 50 percent of the elective contributions of the employee to the extent that such elective contributions exceed 3 percent but do not exceed 5 percent of the employee's compensation.

"(ii) RATE FOR HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—The requirements of this subparagraph are not met if, under the arrangement, the matching contribution with respect to any elective contribution of a highly compensated employee at any level of compensation is greater than that with respect to an employee who is not a highly compensated employee.

"(iii) ALTERNATIVE PLAN DESIGNS.—If the matching contribution with respect to any elective contribution at any specific level of compensation is not equal to the percentage required under clause (i), an arrangement shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of clause (i) if—

"(I) the level of an employer's matching contribution does not increase as an employee's elective contributions increase, and

"(II) the aggregate amount of matching contributions with respect to elective contributions not in excess of such level of compensation is at least equal to the amount of matching contributions which would be made if matching contributions were made on the basis of the percentages described in clause (i).

"(C) NONELECTIVE CONTRIBUTIONS.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met if, under the arrangement, the employer is required, without regard to whether the employee makes an elective contribution or employee contribution, to make a contribution to a defined contribution plan on behalf of each employee who is not a highly compensated employee and who is eligible to participate in the arrangement in an amount equal to at least 3 percent of the employee's compensation.

"(D) NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—An arrangement meets the requirements of this paragraph if, under the arrangement, each employee eligible to participate is, within a reasonable period before any year, given written notice of the employee's rights and obligations under the arrangement which—

"(i) is sufficiently accurate and comprehensive to appraise the employee of such rights and obligations, and

"(ii) is written in a manner calculated to be understood by the average employee eligible to participate.

"(E) OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) WITHDRAWAL AND VESTING RESTRICTIONS.—An arrangement shall not be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B) or (C) unless the requirements of subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (2) are met with respect to all employer contributions (including matching contributions).

"(ii) SOCIAL SECURITY AND SIMILAR CONTRIBUTIONS NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—An arrangement shall not be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B) or (C) unless such requirements are met without regard to subsection (l), and, for purposes of subsection (l), employer contributions under subparagraph (B) or (C) shall not be taken into account.

"(F) OTHER PLANS.—An arrangement shall be treated as meeting the requirements under subparagraph (A)(i) if any other plan maintained by the employer meets such requirements with respect to employees eligible under the arrangement."

(b) ALTERNATIVE METHODS OF SATISFYING SECTION 401(m) NONDISCRIMINATION TESTS.—Section 401(m) (relating to nondiscrimination test for matching contributions and employee contributions) is amended by redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (11) and by adding after paragraph (9) the following new paragraph:

"(10) ALTERNATIVE METHOD OF SATISFYING TESTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A defined contribution plan shall be treated as meeting the requirements of paragraph (2) with respect to matching contributions if the plan—

"(i) meets the contribution requirements of subparagraph (B) or (C) of subsection (k)(11),

"(ii) meets the notice requirements of subsection (k)(11)(D), and

"(iii) meets the requirements of subparagraph (B).

"(B) LIMITATION ON MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met if—

"(i) matching contributions on behalf of any employee may not be made with respect to an employee's contributions or elective deferrals in excess of 6 percent of the employee's compensation,

"(ii) the level of an employer's matching contribution does not increase as an employee's contributions or elective deferrals increase, and

"(iii) the matching contribution with respect to any highly compensated employee at a specific level of compensation is not greater than that with respect to an employee who is not a highly compensated employee."

(c) YEAR FOR COMPUTING NONHIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEE PERCENTAGE.—

(1) CASH OR DEFERRED ARRANGEMENTS.—Clause (ii) of section 401(k)(3)(A) is amended—

(A) by striking "such year" and inserting "the plan year", and

(B) by striking "for such plan year" and inserting "the preceding plan year".

(2) MATCHING AND EMPLOYEE CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 401(m)(2)(A) is amended—

(A) by inserting "for such plan year" after "highly compensated employee", and

(B) by inserting "for the preceding plan year" after "eligible employees" each place it appears in clause (i) and clause (ii).

(d) SPECIAL RULE FOR DETERMINING AVERAGE DEFERRAL PERCENTAGE FOR FIRST PLAN YEAR, ETC.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 401(k) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) For purposes of this paragraph, in the case of the first plan year of any plan, the amount taken into account as the actual deferral percentage of nonhighly compensated employees for the preceding plan year shall be—

"(i) 3 percent, or

"(ii) if the employer makes an election under this subclause, the actual deferral percentage of nonhighly compensated employees determined for such first plan year."

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 401(m) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Rules similar to the rules of subsection (k)(3)(E) shall apply for purposes of this subsection.".

(e) DISTRIBUTION OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) Subparagraph (C) of section 401(k)(8) (relating to arrangement not disqualified if excess contributions distributed) is amended by striking "on the basis of the respective portions of the excess contributions attributable to each of such employees" and inserting "on the basis of the amount of contributions by, or on behalf of, each of such employees".

(2) Subparagraph (C) of section 401(m)(6) (relating to method of distributing excess aggregate contributions) is amended by striking "on the basis of the respective portions of such amounts attributable to each of such employees" and inserting "on the basis of the amount of contributions on behalf of, or by, each such employee".

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

PART IV—MISCELLANEOUS SIMPLIFICATION

SEC. 4233. MODIFICATIONS OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 415(d) (relating to cost-of-living adjustments) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall adjust annually—

"(A) the $90,000 amount in subsection (b)(1)(A), and

"(B) in the case of a participant who separated from service, the amount taken into account under subsection (b)(1)(B), for increases in the cost-of-living in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(2) METHOD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) shall provide for adjustment procedures which are similar to the procedures used to adjust benefit amounts under section 215(i)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act.

"(B) PERIODS FOR ADJUSTMENT OF DOLLAR AMOUNT.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(A)—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The adjustment with respect to any calendar year shall be based on the increase in the applicable index as of the close of the calendar quarter ending September 30 of the preceding calendar year over such index as of the close of the base period.

"(ii) BASE PERIOD.—For purposes of clause (i), the base period is the calendar quarter beginning October 1, 1986.

"(C) BASE PERIOD FOR SEPARATIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the base period is the last calendar quarter of the calendar year preceding the calendar year in which the participant separated from service.

"(3) ROUNDING.—Any amount determined under paragraph (1) (or by reference to this subsection) shall be rounded to the nearest $1,000, except that the amounts under sections 402(g)(1) and 408(k)(2)(C) shall be rounded to the nearest $100."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section apply to adjustments with respect to calendar years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4234. PLANS COVERING SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.

(a) AGGREGATION RULES.—Section 401(d) (relating to additional requirements for qualification of trusts and plans benefiting owner-employees) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) CONTRIBUTION LIMIT ON OWNER-EMPLOYEES.—A trust forming part of a pension or profit-sharing plan which provides contributions or benefits for employees some or all of whom are owner-employees shall constitute a qualified trust under this section only if, in addition to meeting the requirements of subsection (a), the plan provides that contributions on behalf of any owner-employee may be made only with respect to the earned income of such owner-employee which is derived from the trade or business with respect to which such plan is established."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4235. FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION OF MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION.—Section 412(c)(7)(C) (relating to full-funding limitation) is amended—

(1) by inserting "or in the case of a multiemployer plan," after "paragraph (6)(B),", and

(2) by inserting "AND MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS" after "PARAGRAPH (6)(B)" in the heading thereof.

(b) VALUATION.—Section 412(c)(9) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(3 years in the case of a multiemployer plan)" after "year", and

(2) by striking "ANNUAL VALUATION" in the heading and inserting "VALUATION".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4236. ALTERNATIVE FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (c) of section 412 (relating to minimum funding standards) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (8) through (11) as paragraphs (9) through (12), respectively, and by adding after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) ALTERNATIVE FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION.—

"(A) GENERAL RULE.—An employer may elect the full-funding limitation under this paragraph with respect to any defined benefit plan of the employer in lieu of the full-funding limitation determined under paragraph (7) if the requirements of subparagraphs (C) and (D) are met.

"(B) ALTERNATIVE FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION.—The full-funding limitation under this paragraph is the full-funding limitation determined under paragraph (7) without regard to subparagraph (A)(i)(I) thereof.

"(C) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO PLAN ELIGIBILITY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met with respect to a defined benefit plan if—

"(I) as of the 1st day of the election period, the average accrued liability of participants accruing benefits under the plan for the 5 immediately preceding plan years is at least 80 percent of the plan's total accrued liability,

"(II) the plan is not a top-heavy plan (as defined in section 416(g)) for the 1st plan year of the election period or either of the 2 preceding plan years, and

"(III) each defined benefit plan of the employer (and each defined benefit plan of each employer who is a member of any controlled group which includes such employer) meets the requirements of subclauses (I) and (II).

"(ii) FAILURE TO CONTINUE TO MEET REQUIREMENTS.—

"(I) If any plan fails to meet the requirement of clause (i)(I) for any plan year during an election period, the benefits of the election under this paragraph shall be phased out under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(II) If any plan fails to meet the requirement of clause (i)(II) for any plan year during an election period, such plan shall be treated as not meeting the requirements of clause (i) for the remainder of the election period.

If there is a failure described in subclause (I) or (II) with respect to any plan, such plan (and each plan described in clause (i)(III) with respect to such plan) shall be treated as not meeting the requirements of clause (i) for any of the 10 plan years beginning after the election period.

"(D) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO ELECTION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subparagraph are met with respect to an election if—

"(I) FILING DATE.—Notice of such election is filed with the Secretary (in such form and manner and containing such information as the Secretary may provide) by January 1 of any calendar year, and is effective as of the 1st day of the election period beginning on or after January 1 of the following calendar.

"(II) CONSISTENT ELECTION.—Such an election is made for all defined benefit plans maintained by the employer or by any member of a controlled group which includes the employer.

"(ii) TRANSITION PERIOD.—In the case of any election period beginning on and after July 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1994, the requirements of clause (i) shall not apply and the requirements of this subparagraph are met with respect to such election period if—

"(I) FILING DATE.—Notice of election is filed with the Secretary by October 1, 1992.

"(II) INFORMATION.—The notice sets forth the name and tax identification number of the plan sponsor, the names and tax identification numbers of the plans to which the election applies, the limitation under paragraph (7) (determined with and without regard to this paragraph), and a signed certification by an officer of the employer stating that the requirements of this paragraph have been met.

"(iii) REVENUE OFFSET PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall, by January 1, 1993, notify defined benefit plans that have not made an election under this paragraph for the transition period described in clause (ii) of the adjustment required by subparagraph (H). The revenue offset for the transition period shall apply to plan years beginning on or after July 1, 1992, and before January 1, 1994.

"(iv) EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS MADE BY NONELECTING PLANS.—To the extent a defined benefit plan sponsor makes a contribution to a defined benefit plan with respect to the transition period described in clause (ii) which exceeds the limitation of paragraph (7), as adjusted by the Secretary for the transition period, the sponsor shall offset the excess contribution against allowable contributions to the plan in subsequent quarters in the taxable year of the sponsor. If no subsequent contributions may be made for the taxable year, the trustee of the defined benefit plan shall return the excess contribution to the sponsor in that taxable year or the following taxable year. Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, no deduction shall be allowed for any contribution made in excess of the limitation of paragraph (7), as adjusted by the Secretary for the transition period, and no penalty shall apply with respect to contributions made in excess of such limitation to the extent such excess contributions are either used to offset subsequent contributions, or returned to the plan sponsor, as provided in this clause.

"(E) TERM OF ELECTION.—Any election made under this paragraph shall apply for the election period.

"(F) OTHER CONSEQUENCES OF ELECTION.—

"(i) NO FUNDING WAIVERS.—In the case of a plan with respect to which an election is made under this paragraph, no waiver may be granted under subsection (d) for any plan year beginning after the date the election was made and ending at the close of the election period with respect thereto.

"(ii) FAILURE TO MAKE SUCCESSIVE ELECTIONS.—If an election is made under this paragraph with respect to any plan and such an election does not apply for each successive plan year of such plan, such plan shall be treated as not meeting the requirements of subparagraph (C) for the period of 10 plan years beginning after the close of the last election period for such plan.

"(G) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) ELECTION PERIOD.—The term 'election period' means the period of 5 consecutive plan years beginning with the 1st plan year for which the election is made.

"(ii) CONTROLLED GROUP.—The term 'controlled group' means all persons who are treated as a single employer under subsection (b), (c), (m), or (o) of section 414.

"(H) PROCEDURES IF ALTERNATIVE FUNDING LIMITATION REDUCES NET FEDERAL REVENUES.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—At least once with respect to each fiscal year, the Secretary shall estimate whether the application of this paragraph will result in a net reduction in Federal revenues for such fiscal year.

"(ii) ADJUSTMENT OF FULL-FUNDING LIMITATION IF REVENUE SHORTFALL.—If the Secretary estimates that the application of this paragraph will result in a more than insubstantial net reduction in Federal revenues for any fiscal year, the Secretary—

"(I) shall make the adjustment described in clause (iii), and

"(II) to the extent such adjustment is not sufficient to reduce such reduction to an insubstantial amount, shall make the adjustment described in clause (iv).

Such adjustments shall apply only to defined benefit plans with respect to which an election under this paragraph is not in effect.

"(iii) REDUCTION IN LIMITATION BASED ON 150 PERCENT OF CURRENT LIABILITY.—The adjustment described in this clause is an adjustment which substitutes a percentage (not lower than 140 percent) for the percentage described in paragraph (7)(A)(i)(I) determined by reducing the percentage of current liability taken into account with respect to participants who are not accruing benefits under the plan.

"(iv) REDUCTION IN LIMITATION BASED ON ACCRUED LIABILITY.—The adjustment described in this clause is an adjustment which reduces the percentage of accrued liability taken into account under paragraph (7)(A)(i)(II). In no event may the amount of accrued liability taken into account under such paragraph after the adjustment be less than 140 percent of current liability."

(b) ALTERATION OF DISCRETIONARY REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—Subparagraph (D) of section 412(c)(7) is amended by striking "provide—" and all that follows through "(iii) for" and inserting "provide for".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4237. DISTRIBUTIONS UNDER RURAL COOPERATIVE PLANS.

(a) DISTRIBUTIONS AFTER CERTAIN AGE.—Section 401(k)(7) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS.—A rural cooperative plan which includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement shall not be treated as violating the requirements of section 401(a) merely by reason of a distribution to a participant after attainment of age 59½."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1011(k)(9) of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

SEC. 4238. TREATMENT OF GOVERNMENTAL PLANS UNDER SECTION 415.

(a) DEFINITION OF COMPENSATION.—Subsection (k) of section 415 (regarding limitations on benefits and contributions under qualified plans) is amended by adding immediately after paragraph (2) thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) DEFINITION OF COMPENSATION FOR GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—For purposes of this section, in the case of a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)), the term 'compensation' includes, in addition to the amounts described in subsection (c)(3)—

"(A) any elective deferral (as defined in section 402(g)(3)), and

"(B) any amount which is contributed by the employer at the election of the employee and which is not includible in the gross income of an employee under section 125 or 457."

(b) COMPENSATION LIMIT.—Subsection (b) of section 415 is amended by adding immediately after paragraph (10) the following new paragraph:

"(11) SPECIAL LIMITATION RULE FOR GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—In the case of a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)), subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall not apply."

(c) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN EXCESS BENEFIT PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 415 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(m) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED GOVERNMENTAL EXCESS BENEFIT ARRANGEMENTS.—

"(1) GOVERNMENTAL PLAN NOT AFFECTED.—In determining whether a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)) meets the requirements of this section, benefits provided under a qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement shall not be taken into account. Income accruing to a governmental plan (or to a trust that is maintained solely for the purpose of providing benefits under a qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement) in respect of a qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement shall constitute income derived from the exercise of an essential governmental function upon which such governmental plan (or trust) shall be exempt from tax under section 115.

"(2) TAXATION OF PARTICIPANT.—For purposes of this chapter—

"(A) the taxable year or years for which amounts in respect of a qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement are includible in gross income by a participant, and

"(B) the treatment of such amounts when so includible by the participant, shall be determined as if such qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement were treated as a plan for the deferral of compensation which is maintained by a corporation not exempt from tax under this chapter and which does not meet the requirements for qualification under section 401.

"(3) QUALIFIED GOVERNMENTAL EXCESS BENEFIT ARRANGEMENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement' means a portion of a governmental plan if—

"(A) such portion is maintained solely for the purpose of providing to participants in the plan that part of the participant's annual benefit otherwise payable under the terms of the plan that exceeds the limitations on benefits imposed by this section,

"(B) under such portion no election is provided at any time to the participant (directly or indirectly) to defer compensation, and

"(C) benefits described in subparagraph (A) are not paid from a trust forming a part of such governmental plan unless such trust is maintained solely for the purpose of providing such benefits."

(2) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 457.—Subsection (e) of section 457 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(15) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED GOVERNMENTAL EXCESS BENEFIT ARRANGEMENTS.—Subsections (b)(2) and (c)(1) shall not apply to any qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement (as defined in section 415(m)(3)), and benefits provided under such an arrangement shall not be taken into account in determining whether any other plan is an eligible deferred compensation plan."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (2) of section 457(f) is amended by striking the word "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking the period after subparagraph (D) and inserting the words ", and", and by inserting immediately thereafter the following new subparagraph:

"(E) a qualified governmental excess benefit arrangement described in section 415(m)."

(d) EXEMPTION FOR SURVIVOR AND DISABILITY BENEFITS.—Paragraph (2) of section 415(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(I) EXEMPTION FOR SURVIVOR AND DISABILITY BENEFITS PROVIDED UNDER GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—Subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1), subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, and paragraph (5) shall not apply to—

"(i) income received from a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)) as a pension, annuity, or similar allowance as the result of the recipient becoming disabled by reason of personal injuries or sickness, or

"(ii) amounts received from a governmental plan by the beneficiaries, survivors, or the estate of an employee as the result of the death of the employee."

(e) REVOCATION OF GRANDFATHER ELECTION.—Subparagraph (C) of section 415(b)(10) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "An election made pursuant to the preceding sentence to have the provisions of this paragraph applied to the plan may be revoked not later than the last day of the 3rd plan year beginning after the date of enactment with respect to all plan years as to which such election has been applicable and all subsequent plan years; provided that any amount paid by the plan in a taxable year ending after revocation of such election in respect of benefits attributable to a taxable year during which such election was in effect shall be includible in income by the recipient in accordance with the rules of this chapter in the taxable year in which such amount is received (except that such amount shall be treated as received for purposes of the limitations imposed by this section in the earlier taxable year or years to which such amount is attributable)."

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d) shall apply to taxable years beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act. The amendments made by subsection (e) shall apply with respect to election revocations adopted after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) TREATMENT FOR YEARS BEGINNING BEFORE DATE OF ENACTMENT.—In the case of a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), such plan shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of section 415 of such Code for all taxable years beginning before the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4239. USE OF EXCESS ASSETS OF BLACK LUNG BENEFIT TRUSTS FOR HEALTH CARE BENEFITS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (21) of section 501(c) is amended to read as follows:

"(21)(A) A trust or trusts established in writing, created or organized in the United States, and contributed to by any person (except an insurance company) if—

"(i) the purpose of such trust or trusts is exclusively—

"(I) to satisfy, in whole or in part, the liability of such person for, or with respect to, claims for compensation for disability or death due to pneumoconiosis under Black Lung Acts,

"(II) to pay premiums for insurance exclusively covering such liability,

"(III) to pay administrative and other incidental expenses of such trust in connection with the operation of the trust and the processing of claims against such person under Black Lung Acts, and

"(IV) to pay accident or health benefits for retired miners and their spouses and dependents (including administrative and other incidental expenses of such trust in connection therewith) or premiums for insurance exclusively covering such benefits, and

"(ii) no part of the assets of the trust may be used for, or diverted to, any purpose other than—

"(I) the purposes described in clause (i),

"(II) investment (but only to the extent that the trustee determines that a portion of the assets is not currently needed for the purposes described in clause (i)) in qualified investments, or

"(III) payment into the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund established under section 9501, or into the general fund of the United States Treasury (other than in satisfaction of any tax or other civil or criminal liability of the person who established or contributed to the trust).

"(B) No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for any payment described in subparagraph (A)(i)(IV) from such trust.

"(C) Payments described in subparagraph (A)(i)(IV) may be made from such trust during a taxable year only to the extent that the aggregate amount of such payments during such taxable year does not exceed the lesser of—

"(i) the excess (if any) (as of the close of the preceding taxable year) of—

"(I) the fair market value of the assets of the trust, over

"(II) 110 percent of the present value of the liability described in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) of such person, or

"(ii) the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the sum of a similar excess determined as of the close of the last taxable year ending before the date of the enactment of this subparagraph plus earnings thereon as of the close of the taxable year preceding the taxable year involved, over

"(II) the aggregate payments described in subparagraph (A)(i)(IV) made from the trust during all taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this subparagraph.

The determinations under the preceding sentence shall be made by an independent actuary using actuarial methods and assumptions (not inconsistent with the regulations prescribed under section 192(c)(1)(A)) each of which is reasonable and which are reasonable in the aggregate.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) The term 'Black Lung Acts' means part C of title IV of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977, and any State law providing compensation for disability or death due to pneumoconiosis.

"(ii) The term 'qualified investments' means—

"(I) public debt securities of the United States,

"(II) obligations of a State or local government which are not in default as to principal or interest, and

"(III) time or demand deposits in a bank (as defined in section 581) or an insured credit union (within the meaning of section 101(6) of the Federal Credit Union Act, 12 U.S.C. 1752(6)) located in the United States.

"(iii) The term 'miner' has the same meaning as such term has when used in section 402(d) of the Black Lung Benefits Act (30 U.S.C. 902(d)).

"(iv) The term 'incidental expenses' includes legal, accounting, actuarial, and trustee expenses."

(b) EXCEPTION FROM TAX ON SELF-DEALING.—Section 4951(f) is amended by striking "clause (i) of section 501(c)(21)(A)" and inserting "subclause (I) or (IV) of section 501(c)(21)(A)(i)".

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (4) of section 192(c) is amended by striking "clause (ii) of section 501(c)(21)(B)" and inserting "subclause (II) of section 501(c)(21)(A)(ii)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4240. REPORTS OF PENSION AND ANNUITY PAYMENTS.

(a) AMENDMENTS RELATED TO DEFINITION OF INFORMATION RETURN.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 6724(d)(1) is amended—

(A) by redesignating clauses (iv) through (vii) as clauses (vi) through (ix),

(B) by inserting after clause (iii) the following new clause:

"(v) section 6047(d) (relating to reports by employers, plan administrators, etc.),",

(C) by redesignating clauses (i) through (iii) as clauses (ii) through (iv), and

(D) by inserting before clause (ii) (as so redesignated) the following new clause:

"(i) section 408(i) (relating to individual retirement account and simplified employee pension reports),".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 6724(d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of clauses (i) and (v) of subparagraph (A), such term shall include only those statements filed with the Secretary with respect to information required to be supplied to both the Secretary and the recipient of the payment."

(b) Amendments Related to Definition of Payee Statement.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 6724(d) is amended—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (H) through (S) as subparagraphs (J) through (U),

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (G) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) section 6047(d) (relating to reports by employers, plan administrators, etc.),",

(C) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) through (G) as subparagraphs (B) through (H), and

(D) by inserting before subparagraph (B) (as so redesignated) the following new subparagraph:

"(A) section 408(i) (relating to individual retirement account and simplified employee pension reports),".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6724(d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of subparagraphs (A) and (I), such term shall only include statements with respect to information required to be supplied to both the Secretary and the recipient of the payment."

(c) Amendments Related to Reports of Designated Distribution.—

(1) Subsection (i) of section 408 is amended by inserting "aggregating $10 or more" after distributions".

(2) Section 6047(d)(1) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "However, no returns or reports shall be required with respect to payments of designated distributions aggregating less than $10 to any person in any year."

(d) Technical Amendments.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6047(f) is amended by striking "section 6652(e)" and inserting "sections 6652(e), 6721, and 6722".

(2) Subsection (e) of section 6652 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "However, failures to file returns and statements also described in section 6724(d)(1) or 6724(d)(2) shall be subject to penalties under part II of chapter 68B of this subtitle, and not under this section."

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to returns and statements required to be filed after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4241. CONTRIBUTIONS ON BEHALF OF DISABLED EMPLOYEES.

(a) All Disabled Participants Receiving Contributions.—Section 415(c)(3)(C) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "If a defined contribution plan provides for the continuation of contributions on behalf of all participants described in clause (i) for a fixed or determinable period, this subparagraph shall be applied without regard to clauses (ii) and (iii)."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4242. AFFILIATED EMPLOYERS.

(a) In General.—For purposes of Treasury Regulations section 1.501(c)(9)–2(a)(1), employers shall be deemed to be affiliated if they satisfy the requirements of subsection (b).

(b) Affiliation.—The requirements of subsection (b) shall be satisfied with respect to employers if—

(1) the employers are in the same line of business,

(2) the employers act jointly to perform tasks that are integral to the activities of each of the employers,

(3) the employers act jointly to such an extent that the joint maintenance of a voluntary employees' beneficiary association is not a major part of the employers' joint activities, and

(4) a substantial number of the employers are exempt from tax under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this section.

SEC. 4243. DISAGGREGATION OF UNION PLANS.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (3) of section 410(b) (relating to exclusion of certain employees) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "At the election of an employer, subparagraph (A) (and the exclusion of employees described in subparagraph (A) for purposes of section 401(a)(4) and 414(r)) shall not apply to a unit of employees who benefit under the plan on the same terms."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Paragraph (4) of section 401(a) is amended by inserting "and except as provided in section 410(b)(3)," after "paragraph,".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4244. UNIFORM RETIREMENT AGE.

(a) Discrimination Testing.—Paragraph (5) of section 401(a) (relating to special rules relating to nondiscrimination requirements) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) Social Security Retirement Age.—For purposes of testing for discrimination under paragraph (4)—

"(i) the social security retirement age (as defined in section 415(b)(8)) shall be treated as a uniform retirement age, and

"(ii) subsidized early retirement benefits and joint and survivor annuities which are based in whole or in part on an employee's social security retirement age (as so defined) shall be treated as being available to employees on the same terms."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4245. SPECIAL RULES FOR PLANS COVERING PILOTS.

(a) General Rule.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 410(b)(3) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) in the case of a plan established or maintained by one or more employers to provide contributions or benefits for air pilots employed by one or more common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce or air pilots employed by carriers transporting mail for or under contract with the United States Government, all employees who are not air pilots."

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 410(b) is amended by striking the last sentence and inserting the following new sentence: "Subparagraph (B) shall not apply in the case of a plan which provides contributions or benefits for employees who are not air pilots or for air pilots whose principal duties are not customarily performed aboard aircraft in flight."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4246. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON PRIVATE PENSION PLANS.

(a) In General.—Chapter 77 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 7524. NATIONAL COMMISSION ON PRIVATE PENSION PLANS.

"(a) Establishment.—There is hereby established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Private Pension Plans (in this section referred to as the 'Commission').

"(b) Membership.—

"(1) The Commission shall consist of—

"(A) 6 members to be appointed by the President;

"(B) 6 members to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

"(C) 6 members to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate.

"(2) The appointments made pursuant to subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1) shall be made in consultation with the chairmen of the committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate, respectively, having jurisdiction over relevant Federal pension programs.

"(c) Duties and Functions of Commission; Public Hearings in Different Geographical Areas; Broad Spectrum of Witnesses and Testimony.—

"(1) It shall be the duty and function of the Commission to conduct the studies and issue the report required by subsection (d).

"(2) The Commission (and any committees that it may form) may conduct public hearings in order to receive the views of a broad spectrum of the public on the status of the Nation's private retirement system.

"(d) Report to the President and Congress; Recommendations.—The Commission shall submit to the President, to the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader of the Senate, and to the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives a report no later than September 1, 1994, reviewing existing Federal incentives and programs that encourage and protect private retirement savings. The final report shall also set forth recommendations where appropriate for increasing the level and security of private retirement savings.

"(e) Time of Appointment of Members; Vacancies; Election of Chairman; Quorum; Calling of Meetings; Number of Meetings; Voting; Compensation and Expenses.—

"(1)(A) Members of the Commission shall be appointed during the period beginning February 1, 1993, and ending March 1, 1993, for terms ending on September 1, 1994.

"(B) A vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the same manner as the vacant position was first filled.

"(2) The Commission shall elect 1 of its members to serve as Chairman of the Commission.

"(3) A majority of the members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

"(4) The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman.

"(5) Decisions of the Commission shall be according to the vote of a simple majority of those present and voting at a properly called meeting.

"(6) Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation, but shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties as members of the Commission.

"(f) Executive Director and Additional Personnel; Appointment and Compensation; Consultants.—

"(1) The Commission shall appoint an Executive Director of the Commission. In addition to the Executive Director, the Commission may appoint and fix the compensation of such personnel as it deems advisable. Such appointments and compensation may be made without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, that govern appointments in the competitive service, and the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title that relate to classifications and the General Schedule pay rates.

"(2) The Commission may procure such temporary and intermittent services of consultants under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, as the Commission determines to be necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

"(g) TIME AND PLACE OF HEARINGS AND NATURE OF TESTIMONY AUTHORIZED.—In carrying out its duties, the Commission, or any duly organized committee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, with respect to matters for which it has a responsibility under this section, as the Commission or committee may deem advisable.

"(h) DATA AND INFORMATION FROM OTHER AGENCIES AND DEPARTMENTS.—

"(1) The Commission may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States such data and information as may be necessary to carry out its responsibilities.

"(2) Upon request of the Commission, any such department or agency shall furnish any such data or information.

"(i) SUPPORT SERVICES BY GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION.—The General Services Administration shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, such administrative support services as the Commission may request.

"(j) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 1993 and 1994, such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

"(k) DONATIONS ACCEPTED AND DEPOSITED IN TREASURY IN SEPARATE FUND; EXPENDITURES.—

"(1) The Commission is authorized to accept donations of money, property, or personal services. Funds received from donations shall be deposited in the Treasury in a separate fund created for this purpose. Funds appropriated for the Commission and donated funds may be expended for such purposes as official reception and representation expenses, public surveys, public service announcements, preparation of special papers, analyses, and documentaries, and for such other purposes as determined by the Commission to be in furtherance of its mission to review national issues affecting private pension plans.

"(2) Expenditures of appropriated and donated funds shall be subject to such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the Commission and shall not be subject to Federal procurement requirements.

"(l) PUBLIC SURVEYS.—The Commission is authorized to conduct such public surveys as it deems necessary in support of its review of national issues affecting private pension plans and, in conducting such surveys, the Commission shall not be deemed to be an "agency" for the purpose of section 3502 of title 44, United States Code."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 77 of such Code is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 7524. National Commission on Private Pension Plans."

SEC. 4247. CHURCH PLANS.

(a) VESTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 411(e) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR CHURCH PLANS.—A plan described in paragraph (1)(B) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of this section for purposes of section 401(a) if the plan satisfies the requirements of subparagraph (A) and either of the requirements of subparagraph (B) or (C):

"(A) EMPLOYEE CONTRIBUTIONS ARE NONFORFEITABLE.—An employee's rights in the employee's accrued benefit derived from the employee's own contributions are nonforfeitable.

"(B) 10-YEAR VESTING.—A plan satisfies the requirements of this paragraph if an employee who has at least 10 years of service has a nonforfeitable right to 100 percent of his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions.

"(C) 5- TO 15-YEAR VESTING.—A plan satisfies the requirements of this paragraph if an employee who has completed at least 5 years of service has a nonforfeitable right to a percentage of his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions which percentage is not less than the percentage determined under the following table:

"Years of Service	Nonforfeitable percentage
6	30
7	35
8	40
9	45
10	50
11	60
12	70
13	80
14	90
15 or more	100.

"(D) YEARS OF SERVICE.—For purposes of this paragraph, an employee's years of service shall be determined in accordance with any reasonable method selected by the plan."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 411(e) is amended—

(A) by inserting "or (3)" after "(2)" in paragraph (1), and

(B) by inserting "(other than paragraph (1)(B))" after "paragraph (1)" in paragraph (2).

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1993.

(b) RULES GENERALLY APPLICABLE TO CHURCH PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 414(e) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) SPECIAL RULES APPLICABLE TO CHURCH PLANS.—For purposes of sections 401 and 403, the following rules shall apply:

"(A) FAILURE OF ONE ORGANIZATION MAINTAINING PLAN NOT TO DISQUALIFY PLAN.—If one or more organizations maintaining a church plan fail to satisfy the requirements of section 401 (or in the case of a contract described in section 403), such plan shall not be treated as failing to satisfy the requirements of section 401 or 403, whichever is applicable, with respect to other organizations maintaining such plan.

"(B) CERTAIN EMPLOYEES NOT CONSIDERED HIGHLY COMPENSATED AND EXCLUDED EMPLOYEES.—No employee shall be considered an officer, person whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly compensated employee with respect to a church plan if—

"(i) such employee during the year or the preceding year received compensation from the employer of less than $50,000, or

"(ii) such employee is an employee described in section 410(b)(3)(A).

The Secretary shall adjust the $50,000 amount under this paragraph at the same time and in the same manner as under section 415(d).

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall be effective for years beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1991.

(c) PARTICIPATION BY MINISTERS.—

(1) ANNUITY CONTRACTS.—Section 403(b) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(13) PARTICIPATION BY MINISTERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'employee' shall include a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry who is a self-employed individual (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)(B)) or any duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry who is employed by an organization other than an organization described in section 501(c)(3).

"(B) TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of this subsection, an individual treated as an employee under subparagraph (A) shall be treated as an employee of an organization described in section 501(c)(3) and which is exempt from tax under section 501(a).

"(C) COMPENSATION AND YEARS OF SERVICE.—

"(i) COMPENSATION.—In determining the compensation of a minister to whom subparagraph (A) applies who is a self-employed minister, such minister's earned income (within the meaning of section 401(c)(2)) shall be substituted for compensation received from an employer under paragraph (3).

"(ii) YEARS OF SERVICE.—In determining the years of service of a minister to whom subparagraph (A) applies who is a self-employed minister, the years (and portions of years) in which such minister was a self-employed individual (within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)(B)) shall be included for purposes of paragraph (4)."

(2) MINISTERS EXCLUDED FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.—Section 414(e) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) EXCLUSION OF MINISTERS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, if a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry participates in a church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e)), then such minister shall be excluded from consideration for purposes of applying sections 401(a)(3), 401(a)(4), and 401(a)(5), as such sections in effect on September 1, 1974, and sections 401(a)(4), 401(a)(5), 401(a)(26), 401(k)(3), 401(m), 403(b)(1)(D) (including section 403(b)(12)), and 410, to any stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan (including an annuity described in section 403(b) or a retirement income account described in section 403(b)(9)) described in this part. For purposes of this part, the church plan in which such minister participates shall be treated as a plan or contract meeting the requirements of section 401(a), or 403(b) (including section 403(b)(9)) with respect to such minister's participation."

(3) DEDUCTIBILITY.—Section 404(a) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) CONTRIBUTIONS BY CERTAIN MINISTERS TO RETIREMENT INCOME ACCOUNTS.—If contributions are made by a minister described in section 403(b)(13)(A) to a retirement income account described in section 403(b)(9) and not by a person other than such minister, such contributions shall be treated as made to a trust which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) which is a part of a plan which is described in section 401(a) and shall be deductible under this subsection to the extent such contributions do not exceed the exclusion allowance of such minister determined under section 403(b)(2).".

(4) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall be effective for years beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1991, except that the amendment made by paragraph (3) shall be effective for years beginning after December 31, 1991.

(d) DISTRIBUTION REQUIREMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) of section 403(b)(11) is amended by inserting "or, in the case of a retirement income account described in paragraph (9), within the meaning of section 401(k)(2)" after "section 72(m)(7)".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this subsection shall apply to years beginning after December 31, 1988.

(e) BEGINNING DATE FOR DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Clause (iv) of section 401(a)(9)(C) is amended by striking the last sentence and inserting the following new sentence: "For purposes of this clause, the term 'church plan' has the meaning given such term by section 414(e)."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—In the case of years beginning before January 1, 1994, to which the amendments made by section 1121(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 apply, the required beginning date under section 401(a)(9)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for any employee of a church plan (as defined in section 414(e) of such Code) shall not begin before April 1 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the employee retires (or, if later, the date determined without regard to this paragraph).

(f) CHURCH PLAN MODIFICATION TO SEPARATE ACCOUNT REQUIREMENT OF SECTION 401(h).—

(1) EXCEPTION TO SEPARATE ACCOUNT REQUIREMENT.—Section 401(h) is amended by adding the following new sentence at the end thereof: "Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, in the case of a pension or annuity plan that is a church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e)) which is maintained by more than one employer, paragraph (6) shall not apply to an employee who is a key employee for purposes of section 416 solely because such employee is described in section 416(i)(1)(A)(i) (relating to officers having an annual compensation greater than 150 percent of the amount in effect under section 415(c)(1)(A)).".

(2) APPLICATION OF SECTION 415(l).—Section 415(l)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the following shall be treated as an annual addition to a defined contribution plan for purposes of subsection (c):

"(A) contributions allocated to any individual medical account which is part of a pension or annuity plan; and

"(B) the actuarially determined amount of prefunding for the insurance value of benefits which are—

"(i) described in section 401(h);

"(ii) paid under a pension or annuity plan that is a church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e));

"(iii) paid under a plan maintained by more than one employer; and

"(iv) payable solely to an employee who is a key employee for purposes of section 415 solely because such employee is described in section 416(i)(1)(A)(i) (relating to officers having an annual compensation greater than 150 percent of the amount in effect under section 415(c)(1)(A)), his spouse, or his dependents.

Subparagraph (B) of section (c)(1) shall not apply to any amount treated as an annual addition under the preceding sentence.".

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this subsection shall apply to years beginning after March 31, 1984.

(g) REPEAL OF ELECTIVE DEFERRAL CATCH-UP LIMITATION FOR RETIREMENT INCOME ACCOUNTS—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Clause (iii) of section 402(g)(8)(A) is amended to read as follows:

"(iii) except in the case of elective deferrals under a retirement income account described in section 403(b)(9), the excess of $5,000 multiplied by the number of years of service of the employee with the qualified organization over the employer contributions described in paragraph (3) made by the organization on behalf of such employee for prior taxable years (determined in the manner prescribed by the Secretary).".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this subsection shall be effective as if included in the provision of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 to which such amendment relates.

(h) CHURCH PLANS MAY INCREASE BENEFIT PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A retirement income account described in section 403(b)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or a church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e) of such Code) that is a plan described in section 401(a) of such Code, shall not fail to be described in such sections merely because it provides additional benefit payments to participants (and their beneficiaries)—

(A) on an annual basis, to take into account favorable interest and mortality experience in a plan year, or

(B) in an amount not in excess of 5 percent per year.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This subsection shall be effective for years beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4248. COORDINATION OF ELECTIVE DEFERRAL AND SECTION 457 LIMITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The first sentence of paragraph (2) of section 457(c) (relating to coordination with certain deferrals) is amended to read as follows: "The limitation under paragraph (1) for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—

"(A) the limitation applicable to the individual for the taxable year under section 402(g)(1), over

"(B) the sum of—

"(i) any amount excluded from gross income under section 403(b) for the taxable year, plus

"(ii) any amount excluded from gross income under section 402(a)(8) or section 402(h)(1)(B) for the taxable year, plus

"(iii) any amount with respect to which a deduction is allowable by reason of a contribution to an organization described in section 501(c)(18) for the taxable year."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The last sentence of paragraph (2) of section 457(c) is amended by striking "Subparagraph (B)" and inserting "Clauses (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (B)".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 457(c) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "In determining under paragraph (1) the maximum amount which may be deferred under subsection (a) for any taxable year to which subsection (b)(3) applies, the plan ceiling for such taxable year shall be reduced in an amount equal to the amounts described in subparagraph (B)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4249. DATE FOR ADOPTION OF PLAN AMENDMENTS.

If any amendment made by this Act requires an amendment to any plan, such plan amendment shall not be required to be made before the first day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1995, if—

(1) during the period after such amendment takes effect and before such first plan year, the plan is operated in accordance with the requirements of such amendment, and

(2) such plan amendment applies retroactively to such period.

Subtitle C—Treatment of Large Partnerships

PART I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 4301. SIMPLIFIED FLOW-THROUGH FOR LARGE PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subchapter K (relating to partners and partnerships) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"PART IV—SPECIAL RULES FOR LARGE PARTNERSHIPS

"Sec. 771. Application of subchapter to large partnerships.

"Sec. 772. Simplified flow-through.

"Sec. 773. Computations at partnership level.

"Sec. 774. Other modifications.

"Sec. 775. Large partnership defined.

"Sec. 776. Special rules for partnerships holding oil and gas properties.

"Sec. 777. Regulations.

"SEC. 771. APPLICATION OF SUBCHAPTER TO LARGE PARTNERSHIPS.

"The preceding provisions of this subchapter to the extent inconsistent with the provisions of this part shall not apply to a large partnership and its partners.

"SEC. 772. SIMPLIFIED FLOW-THROUGH.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In determining the income tax of a partner of a large partnership, such partner shall take into account separately such partner's distributive share of the partnership's—

"(1) taxable income or loss from passive loss limitation activities,

"(2) taxable income or loss from other activities,

"(3) net capital gain (or net capital loss)—

"(A) to the extent allocable to passive loss limitation activities, and

"(B) to the extent allocable to other activities,

"(4) tax-exempt interest,

"(5) applicable net AMT adjustment separately computed for—

"(A) passive loss limitation activities, and

"(B) other activities,

"(6) general credits,

"(7) low-income housing credit determined under section 42,

"(8) rehabilitation credit determined under section 47,

"(9) foreign income taxes, and

"(10) the credit allowable under section 29.

"(b) SEPARATE COMPUTATIONS.—In determining the amounts required under subsection (a) to be separately taken into account by any partner, this section and section 773 shall be applied separately with respect to such partner by taking into account such partner's distributive share of the items of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit of the partnership.

"(c) TREATMENT AT PARTNER LEVEL.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in this subsection, rules similar to the rules of section 702(b) shall apply to any partner's distributive share of the amounts referred to in subsection (a).

"(2) INCOME OR LOSS FROM PASSIVE LOSS LIMITATION ACTIVITIES.—For purposes of this chapter, any partner's distributive share of any income or loss described in subsection (a)(1) shall be treated as an item of income or loss (as the case may be) from the conduct of a trade or business which is a single passive activity (as defined in section 469). A similar rule shall apply to a partner's distributive share of amounts referred to in paragraphs (3)(A) and (5)(A) of subsection (a).

"(3) INCOME OR LOSS FROM OTHER ACTIVITIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this chapter, any partner's distributive share of any income or loss described in subsection (a)(2) shall be treated as an item of income or expense (as the case may be) with respect to property held for investment.

"(B) DEDUCTIONS FOR LOSS NOT SUBJECT TO SECTION 67.—The deduction under section 212 for any loss described in subparagraph (A) shall not be treated as a miscellaneous itemized deduction for purposes of section 67.

"(4) TREATMENT OF NET CAPITAL GAIN OR LOSS.—For purposes of this chapter, any partner's distributive share of any gain or loss described in subsection (a)(3) shall be treated as a long-term capital gain or loss, as the case may be.

"(5) MINIMUM TAX TREATMENT.—In determining the alternative minimum taxable income of any partner, such partner's distributive share of any applicable net AMT adjustment shall be taken into account in lieu of making the separate adjustments provided in sections 56, 57, and 58 with respect to the items of the partnership. Except as provided in regulations, the applicable net AMT adjustment shall be treated, for purposes of section 53, as an adjustment or item of tax preference not specified in section 53(d)(1)(B)(ii).

"(6) GENERAL CREDITS.—A partner's distributive share of the amount referred to in paragraph (6) of subsection (a) shall be taken into account as a current year business credit.

"(d) OPERATING RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) PASSIVE LOSS LIMITATION ACTIVITY.—The term 'passive loss limitation activity' means—

"(A) any activity which involves the conduct of a trade or business, and

"(B) any rental activity.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'trade or business' includes any activity treated as a trade or business under paragraph (5) or (6) of section 469(c).

"(2) TAX-EXEMPT INTEREST.—The term 'tax-exempt interest' means interest excludable from gross income under section 103.

"(3) APPLICABLE NET AMT ADJUSTMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The applicable net AMT adjustment is—

"(i) with respect to taxpayers other than corporations, the net adjustment determined by using the adjustments applicable to individuals, and

"(ii) with respect to corporations, the net adjustment determined by using the adjustments applicable to corporations.

"(B) NET ADJUSTMENT.—The term 'net adjustment' means the net adjustment in the items attributable to passive loss activities or other activities (as the case may be) which would result if such items were determined with the adjustments of sections 56, 57, and 58.

"(4) TREATMENT OF CAPITAL GAINS AND LOSSES.—

"(A) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.—In determining the amounts referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a), any net capital gain or net capital loss (as the case may be) shall be excluded.

"(B) ALLOCATION RULES.—The net capital gain shall be treated—

"(i) as allocable to passive loss limitation activities to the extent the net capital gain does not exceed the net capital gain determined by only taking into account gains and losses from sales and exchanges of property used in connection with such activities, and

"(ii) as allocable to other activities to the extent such gain exceeds the amount allocated under clause (i).

A similar rule shall apply for purposes of allocating any net capital loss.

"(C) NET CAPITAL LOSS.—The term 'net capital loss' means the excess of the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the gains from sales or exchange of capital assets.

"(5) GENERAL CREDITS.—The term 'general credits' means any credit other than the low-income housing credit, the rehabilitation credit, the foreign tax credit, and the credit allowable under section 29.

"(6) FOREIGN INCOME TAXES.—The term 'foreign income taxes' means taxes described in section 901 which are paid or accrued to foreign countries and to possessions of the United States.

"(e) SPECIAL RULE FOR UNRELATED BUSINESS TAX.—In the case of a partner which is an organization subject to tax under section 511, such partner's distributive share of any items shall be taken into account separately to the extent necessary to comply with the provisions of section 512(c)(1).

"(f) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLYING PASSIVE LOSS LIMITATIONS.—If any person holds an interest in a large partnership other than as a limited partner—

"(1) paragraph (2) of subsection (c) shall not apply to such partner, and

"(2) such partner's distributive share of the partnership items allocable to passive loss limitation activities shall be taken into account separately to the extent necessary to comply with the provisions of section 469.

The preceding sentence shall not apply to any items allocable to an interest held as a limited partner.

"SEC. 773. COMPUTATIONS AT PARTNERSHIP LEVEL.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—

"(1) TAXABLE INCOME.—The taxable income of a large partnership shall be computed in the same manner as in the case of an individual except that—

"(A) the items described in section 772(a) shall be separately stated, and

"(B) the modifications of subsection (b) shall apply.

"(2) ELECTIONS.—All elections affecting the computation of the taxable income of a large partnership or the computation of any credit of a large partnership shall be made by the partnership; except that the election under section 901 shall be made by each partner separately.

"(3) LIMITATIONS, ETC.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), all limitations and other provisions affecting the computation of the taxable income of a large partnership or the computation of any credit of a large partnership shall be applied at the partnership level (and not at the partner level).

"(B) CERTAIN LIMITATIONS APPLIED AT PARTNER LEVEL.—The following provisions shall be applied at the partner level (and not at the partnership level):

"(i) Section 68 (relating to overall limitation on itemized deductions).

"(ii) Sections 49 and 465 (relating to at risk limitations).

"(iii) Section 469 (relating to limitation on passive activity losses and credits).

"(iv) Any other provision specified in regulations.

"(4) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROVISIONS.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall apply notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter other than this part.

"(b) MODIFICATIONS TO DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining the taxable income of a large partnership—

"(1) CERTAIN DEDUCTIONS NOT ALLOWED.—The following deductions shall not be allowed:

"(A) The deduction for personal exemptions provided in section 151.

"(B) The net operating loss deduction provided in section 172.

"(C) The additional itemized deductions for individuals provided in part VII of subchapter B (other than section 212 thereof).

"(2) CHARITABLE DEDUCTIONS.—In determining the amount allowable under section 170, the limitation of section 170(b)(2) shall apply.

"(3) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 67.—In lieu of applying section 67, 70 percent of the amount of the miscellaneous itemized deductions shall be disallowed.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES FOR INCOME FROM DISCHARGE OF INDEBTEDNESS.—If a large partnership has income from the discharge of any indebtedness—

"(1) such income shall be excluded in determining the amounts referred to in section 772(a), and

"(2) in determining the income tax of any partner of such partnership—

"(A) such income shall be treated as an item required to be separately taken into account under section 772(a), and

"(B) the provisions of section 108 shall be applied without regard to this part.

"SEC. 774. OTHER MODIFICATIONS.

"(a) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN OPTIONAL ADJUSTMENTS, ETC.—In the case of a large partnership—

"(1) computations under section 773 shall be made without regard to any adjustment under section 743(b) or 108(b), but

"(2) a partner's distributive share of any amount referred to in section 772(a) shall be appropriately adjusted to take into account any adjustment under section 743(b) or 108(b) with respect to such partner.

"(b) DEFERRED SALE TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTED PROPERTY.—

"(1) TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP.—In the case of any contribution of property to which this subsection applies—

"(A) the basis of such property to the partnership shall be its fair market value as of the time of such contribution,

"(B) section 704(c) shall not apply to such property, and

"(C) section 737 shall not apply.

"(2) TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTING PARTNER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any partner who makes a contribution of property to which this subsection applies—

"(i) such partner shall recognize the precontribution gain or loss from such property as provided in this paragraph, and

"(ii) appropriate adjustments to the basis of such partner's interest in the partnership shall be made for the amounts recognized under this paragraph.

"(B) CHARACTER.—The character of any gain or loss recognized under this paragraph shall be determined by reference to the character which would have resulted if the property had been sold to the partnership at the time of the contributions; except that any gain or loss recognized under subparagraph (C)(i) shall be treated as ordinary income or loss, as the case may be.

"(C) TRANSACTIONS AT PARTNERSHIP LEVEL.—

"(i) DEPRECIATION, ETC.—If any partnership deduction for depreciation, depletion, or amortization is increased by reason of an increase in the basis of any property under paragraph (1), the contributing partner shall recognize so much of the precontribution gain with respect to such property as does not exceed the increase in such deduction. If there is a precontribution loss, a similar rule shall apply to any decrease in such a deduction.

"(ii) DISPOSITIONS.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this clause, any precontribution gain or loss with respect to any property (to the extent not previously taken into account under this paragraph) shall be recognized by the contributing partner if the partnership makes any disposition of the property.

"(II) DISTRIBUTIONS TO CONTRIBUTING PARTNER.—No gain or loss shall be recognized under subclause (I) by reason of any distribution of the contributed property to the contributing partner (and subparagraph (D)(ii) shall not apply to any such distribution). In any such case, no adjustment shall be made under section 734 on account of such distribution and the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the contributing partner shall be its adjusted basis immediately before the contribution properly adjusted for gain or loss previously recognized under this paragraph. If the property distributed consists of an interest in an entity, this subclause shall not apply to the extent that the value of such interest is attributable to property contributed to such entity after such interest had been contributed to the partnership.

"(iii) YEAR FOR WHICH AMOUNT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—Any amount recognized under this subparagraph shall be taken into account for the partner's taxable year in which or with which ends the partnership taxable year of the deduction or disposition.

''(D) TRANSACTIONS AT PARTNER LEVEL.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—If the contributing partner makes a disposition of any portion of his interest in the partnership, a corresponding portion of any precontribution gain or loss which was not previously taken into account under this paragraph shall be recognized for the partner's taxable year in which the disposition occurs. The preceding sentence shall not apply to a disposition at death.

''(ii) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DISTRIBUTIONS.—If—

''(I) the amount of cash and the fair market value of property distributed to a partner, exceeds

''(II) the adjusted basis of such partner's interest in the partnership immediately before the distribution (determined without regard to any adjustment under subparagraph (A)(ii) resulting from such distribution), the contributing partner shall recognize so much of any precontribution gain as does not exceed such excess.

''(iii) SPECIAL RULE.—Except as provided in clause (ii)(II), any basis adjustment under subparagraph (A)(ii) resulting from any gain or loss recognized under this subparagraph shall be treated as occurring immediately before the disposition or distribution involved.

''(E) SECTION 267 AND 707(b) PRINCIPLES TO APPLY.—No loss shall be recognized under subparagraph (C)(ii) or (D) by reason of any disposition (directly or indirectly) to a person related (within the meaning of section 267(b) or 707(b)(1)) to the contributing partner.

''(F) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN NONTAXABLE EXCHANGES.—

''(i) SECTION 1031 AND 1033 TRANSACTIONS.—If the disposition referred to in subclause (I) of subparagraph (C)(ii) is an exchange described in section 1031 or a compulsory or involuntary conversion within the meaning of section 1033—

''(I) the amount of gain or loss recognized by the contributing partner under such subclause (I) shall not exceed the gain or loss recognized by the partnership on the disposition, and

''(II) the replacement property shall be treated as the contributed property for purposes of this paragraph.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'replacement property' means the property the basis of which is determined under section 1031(d) or 1033(b), whichever is applicable.

''(ii) CONTRIBUTIONS TO CONTROLLED PARTNERSHIP.—If the disposition referred to in subclause (I) of subparagraph (C)(ii) is a contribution of the property to another partnership which is a controlled partnership—

''(I) the rules of subclause (I) of clause (i) shall apply, and

''(II) the partnership shall be treated as continuing to hold the contributed property so long as the other partnership continues to be a controlled partnership and continues to hold such property.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'controlled partnership' means any partnership in which the partnership making the disposition owns more than 50 percent of the capital interest or profits interest.

''(3) PRECONTRIBUTION GAIN OR LOSS.—For purposes of this subsection—

''(A) PRECONTRIBUTION GAIN.—The term 'precontribution gain' means the excess (if any) of—

''(i) the fair market value of the contributed property as of the time of the contribution, over

''(ii) the adjusted basis of such property immediately before such contribution.

''(B) PRECONTRIBUTION LOSS.—The term 'precontribution loss' means the excess (if any) of the amount referred to in clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) over the amount referred to in clause (i) of subparagraph (A).

''(4) CONTRIBUTIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection shall apply to any contribution of property (other than cash) which is made by any partner to a partnership if—

''(A) as of the time of such contribution, such partnership is a large partnership, or

''(B) such contribution is to a partnership reasonably expected to become a large partnership.

This subsection shall not apply to any contribution made before the date of the enactment of this part.

''(c) CREDIT RECAPTURE DETERMINED AT PARTNERSHIP LEVEL.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a large partnership—

''(A) any credit recapture shall be taken into account by the partnership, and

''(B) the amount of such recapture shall be determined as if the credit with respect to which the recapture is made had been fully utilized to reduce tax.

''(2) METHOD OF TAKING RECAPTURE INTO ACCOUNT.—A large partnership shall take into account a credit recapture by reducing the amount of the appropriate current year credit to the extent thereof, and if such recapture exceeds the amount of such current year credit, the partnership shall be liable to pay such excess.

''(3) DISPOSITIONS NOT TO TRIGGER RECAPTURE.—No credit recapture shall be required by reason of any transfer of an interest in a large partnership.

''(4) CREDIT RECAPTURE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'credit recapture' means any increase in tax under section 42(j) or 50(a).

''(d) PARTNERSHIP NOT TERMINATED BY REASON OF CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP.—Subparagraph (B) of section 708(b)(1) shall not apply to a large partnership.

''(e) PARTNERSHIP ENTITLED TO CERTAIN CREDITS.—The following shall be allowed to a large partnership and shall not be taken into account by the partners of such partnership:

''(1) The credit provided by section 34.

''(2) Any credit or refund under section 852(b)(3)(D).

''(f) TREATMENT OF REMIC RESIDUALS.—For purposes of applying section 860E(e)(6) to any large partnership—

''(1) all interests in such partnership shall be treated as held by disqualified organizations,

''(2) in lieu of applying subparagraph (C) of section 860E(e)(6), the amount subject to tax under section 860E(e)(6) shall be excluded from the gross income of such partnership, and

''(3) subparagraph (D) of section 860E(e)(6) shall not apply.

''(g) SPECIAL RULES FOR APPLYING CERTAIN INSTALLMENT SALE RULES.—In the case of a large partnership—

''(1) the provisions of sections 453(l)(3) and 453A shall be applied at the partnership level, and

''(2) in determining the amount of interest payable under such sections, such partnership shall be treated as subject to tax under this chapter at the highest rate of tax in effect under section 1 or 11.

"SEC. 775. LARGE PARTNERSHIP.

''(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this part—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section or section 776, the term 'large partnership' means, with respect to any partnership taxable year, any partnership if the number of persons who were partners in such partnership in such taxable year or any preceding partnership taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1993, equaled or exceeded 250. To the extent provided in regulations, a partnership shall cease to be treated as a large partnership for any partnership taxable year if in such taxable year fewer than 100 persons were partners in such partnership.

''(2) ELECTION FOR PARTNERSHIPS WITH AT LEAST 100 PARTNERS.—If a partnership makes an election under this paragraph, paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting '100' for '250'. Such an election shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

''(b) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN SERVICE PARTNERSHIPS.—

''(1) CERTAIN PARTNERS NOT COUNTED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'partner' does not include any individual performing substantial services in connection with the activities of the partnership and holding an interest in such partnership, or an individual who formerly performed substantial services in connection with such activities and who held an interest in such partnership at the time the individual performed such services.

''(2) EXCLUSION.—For purposes of this part, the term 'large partnership' does not include any partnership if substantially all the partners of such partnership—

''(A) are individuals performing substantial services in connection with the activities of such partnership or are personal service corporations (as defined in section 269A(b)) the owner-employees (as defined in section 269A(b)) of which perform such substantial services,

''(B) are retired partners who had performed such substantial services, or

''(C) are spouses of partners who are performing (or had previously performed) such substantial services.

''(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR LOWER TIER PARTNERSHIPS.—For purposes of this subsection, the activities of a partnership shall include the activities of any other partnership in which the partnership owns directly an interest in the capital and profits of at least 80 percent.

''(c) EXCLUSION OF COMMODITY POOLS.—For purposes of this part, the term 'large partnership' does not include any partnership the principal activity of which is the buying and selling of commodities (not described in section 1221(1)), or options, futures, or forwards with respect to such commodities.

''(d) SECRETARY MAY RELY ON TREATMENT ON RETURN.—If, on the partnership return of any partnership, such partnership is treated as a large partnership, such treatment shall be binding on such partnership and all partners of such partnership but not on the Secretary.

"SEC. 776. SPECIAL RULES FOR PARTNERSHIPS HOLDING OIL AND GAS PROPERTIES.

''(a) EXCEPTION FOR PARTNERSHIPS HOLDING SIGNIFICANT OIL AND GAS PROPERTIES.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this part, the term 'large partnership' shall not include any partnership if the average percentage of assets (by value) held by such partnership during the taxable year which are oil or gas properties is at least 25 percent. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any interest held by a partnership in another partnership shall be disregarded, except that the partnership shall be treated as holding its proportionate share of the assets of such other partnership.

''(2) ELECTION TO WAIVE EXCEPTION.—Any partnership may elect to have paragraph (1) not apply. Such an election shall apply to the partnership taxable year for which made and all subsequent partnership taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

''(b) SPECIAL RULES WHERE PART APPLIES.—

''(1) COMPUTATION OF PERCENTAGE DEPLETION.—In the case of a large partnership, except as provided in paragraph (2)—

''(A) the allowance for depletion under section 611 with respect to any partnership oil or gas property shall be computed at the partnership level without regard to any provision of section 613A requiring such allowance to be computed separately by each partner,

"(B) such allowance shall be determined without regard to the provisions of section 613A(c) limiting the amount of production for which percentage depletion is allowable and without respect to paragraph (1) of section 613A(d), and

"(C) paragraph (3) of section 705(a) shall not apply.

"(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PARTNERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a disqualified person, the treatment under this chapter of such person's distributive share of any item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit attributable to any partnership oil or gas property shall be determined without regard to this part. Such person's distributive share of any such items shall be excluded for purposes of making determinations under sections 772 and 773.

"(B) DISQUALIFIED PERSON.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'disqualified person' means, with respect to any partnership taxable year—

"(i) any person referred to in paragraph (2) or (4) of section 613A(d) for such person's taxable year in which such partnership taxable year ends, and

"(ii) any other person if such person's average daily production of domestic crude oil and natural gas for such person's taxable year in which such partnership taxable year ends exceeds 500 barrels.

"(C) AVERAGE DAILY PRODUCTION.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), a person's average daily production of domestic crude oil and natural gas for any taxable year shall be computed as provided in section 613A(c)(2)—

"(i) by taking into account all production of domestic crude oil and natural gas (including such person's proportionate share of any production of a partnership),

"(ii) by treating 6,000 cubic feet of natural gas as a barrel of crude oil, and

"(iii) by treating as 1 person all persons treated as 1 taxpayer under section 613A(c)(8) or among whom allocations are required under such section.

"SEC. 777. REGULATIONS.

"The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of this part."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of parts for subchapter K of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Part IV. Special rules for large partnerships."

SEC. 4302. SIMPLIFIED AUDIT PROCEDURES FOR LARGE PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Chapter 63 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER D—TREATMENT OF LARGE PARTNERSHIPS

"Part I. Treatment of partnership items and adjustments.

"Part II. Partnership level adjustments.

"Part III. Definitions and special rules.

"PART I—TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP ITEMS AND ADJUSTMENTS

"Sec. 6240. Application of subchapter.

"Sec. 6241. Partner's return must be consistent with partnership return.

"Sec. 6242. Procedures for taking partnership adjustments into account.

"SEC. 6240. APPLICATION OF SUBCHAPTER.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—This subchapter shall only apply to large partnerships and partners in such partnerships.

"(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PARTNERSHIP AUDIT PROCEDURES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter C of this chapter shall not apply to any large partnership other than in its capacity as a partner in another partnership which is not a large partnership.

"(2) TREATMENT WHERE PARTNER IN OTHER PARTNERSHIP.—If a large partnership is a partner in another partnership which is not a large partnership—

"(A) subchapter C of this chapter shall apply to items of such large partnership which are partnership items with respect to such other partnership, but

"(B) any adjustment under such subchapter C shall be taken into account in the manner provided by section 6242.

"SEC. 6241. PARTNER'S RETURN MUST BE CONSISTENT WITH PARTNERSHIP RETURN.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—A partner of any large partnership shall, on the partner's return, treat each partnership item attributable to such partnership in a manner which is consistent with the treatment of such partnership item on the partnership return.

"(b) UNDERPAYMENT DUE TO INCONSISTENT TREATMENT ASSESSED AS MATH ERROR.—Any underpayment of tax by a partner by reason of failing to comply with the requirements of subsection (a) shall be assessed and collected in the same manner as if such underpayment were on account of a mathematical or clerical error appearing on the partner's return. Paragraph (2) of section 6213(b) shall not apply to any assessment of an underpayment referred to in the preceding sentence.

"(c) ADJUSTMENTS NOT TO AFFECT PRIOR YEAR OF PARTNERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), subsections (a) and (b) shall apply without regard to any adjustment to the partnership item under part II.

"(2) CERTAIN CHANGES IN DISTRIBUTIVE SHARE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT BY PARTNER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—To the extent that any adjustment under part II involves a change under section 704 in a partner's distributive share of the amount of any partnership item shown on the partnership return, such adjustment shall be taken into account in applying this title to such partner for the partner's taxable year for which such item was required to be taken into account.

"(B) COORDINATION WITH DEFICIENCY PROCEDURES.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter B shall not apply to the assessment or collection of any underpayment of tax attributable to an adjustment referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(ii) ADJUSTMENT NOT PRECLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other law or rule of law, nothing in subchapter B (or in any proceeding under subchapter B) shall preclude the assessment or collection of any underpayment of tax (or the allowance of any credit or refund of any overpayment of tax) attributable to an adjustment referred to in subparagraph (A) and such assessment or collection or allowance (or any notice thereof) shall not preclude any notice, proceeding, or determination under subchapter B.

"(C) PERIOD OF LIMITATIONS.—The period for—

"(i) assessing any underpayment of tax, or

"(ii) filing a claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of tax, attributable to an adjustment referred to in subparagraph (A) shall not expire before the close of the period prescribed by section 6248 for making adjustments with respect to the partnership taxable year involved.

"(D) TIERED STRUCTURES.—If the partner referred to in subparagraph (A) is another partnership or an S corporation, the rules of this paragraph shall also apply to persons holding interests in such partnership or S corporation (as the case may be); except that, if such partner is a large partnership, the adjustment referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be taken into account in the manner provided by section 6242.

"(d) ADDITION TO TAX FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH SECTION.—

"For addition to tax in case of partner's disregard of requirements of this section, see part II of subchapter A of chapter 68.

"SEC. 6242. PROCEDURES FOR TAKING PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENTS INTO ACCOUNT.

"(a) ADJUSTMENTS FLOW THROUGH TO PARTNERS FOR YEAR IN WHICH ADJUSTMENT TAKES EFFECT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If any partnership adjustment with respect to any partnership item takes effect (within the meaning of subsection (d)(2)) during any partnership taxable year and if an election under paragraph (2) does not apply to such adjustment, such adjustment shall be taken into account in determining the amount of such item for the partnership taxable year in which such adjustment takes effect. In applying this title to any person who is (directly or indirectly) a partner in such partnership during such partnership taxable year, such adjustment shall be treated as an item actually arising during such taxable year.

"(2) PARTNERSHIP LIABLE IN CERTAIN CASES.—If—

"(A) a partnership elects under this paragraph to not take an adjustment into account under paragraph (1),

"(B) a partnership does not make such an election but in filing its return for any partnership taxable year fails to take fully into account any partnership adjustment as required under paragraph (1), or

"(C) any partnership adjustment involves a reduction in a credit which exceeds the amount of such credit determined for the partnership taxable year in which the adjustment takes effect, the partnership shall pay to the Secretary an amount determined by applying the rules of subsection (b)(4) to the adjustments not so taken into account and any excess referred to in subparagraph (C).

"(3) OFFSETTING ADJUSTMENTS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—If a partnership adjustment requires another adjustment in a taxable year after the adjusted year and before the partnership taxable year in which such partnership adjustment takes effect, such other adjustment shall be taken into account under this subsection for the partnership taxable year in which such partnership adjustment takes effect.

"(4) COORDINATION WITH PART II.—Amounts taken into account under this subsection for any partnership taxable year shall continue to be treated as adjustments for the adjusted year for purposes of determining whether such amounts may be readjusted under part II.

"(b) PARTNERSHIP LIABLE FOR INTEREST AND PENALTIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a partnership adjustment takes effect during any partnership taxable year and such adjustment results in an imputed underpayment for the adjusted year, the partnership—

"(A) shall pay to the Secretary interest computed under paragraph (2), and

"(B) shall be liable for any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount as provided in paragraph (3).

"(2) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF INTEREST.—The interest computed under this paragraph with respect to any partnership adjustment is the interest which would be determined under chapter 67—

"(A) on the imputed underpayment determined under paragraph (4) with respect to such adjustment, or

"(B) for the period beginning on the day after the return due date for the adjusted year and ending on the return due date for the partnership taxable year in which such adjustment takes effect (or, if earlier, in the case of any adjustment to which subsection (a)(2) applies, the date on which the payment under subsection (a)(2) is made).

Proper adjustments in the amount determined under the preceding sentence shall be made for adjustments required for partnership taxable years after the adjusted year and before the year in which the partnership adjustment takes effect by reason of such partnership adjustment.

"(3) PENALTIES.—A partnership shall be liable for any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount for which it would have been liable if such partnership had been an individual subject to tax under chapter 1 for the adjusted year and the imputed underpayment determined under paragraph (4) were an actual underpayment (or understatement) for such year.

"(4) IMPUTED UNDERPAYMENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the imputed underpayment determined under this paragraph with respect to any partnership adjustment is the underpayment (if any) which would result—

"(A) by netting all adjustments to items of income, gain, loss, or deduction and—

"(i) if such netting results in a net increase in income, by treating such net increase as an underpayment equal to the amount of such net increase multiplied by the highest rate of tax in effect under section 1 or 11 for the adjusted year, or

"(ii) if such netting results in a net decrease in income, by treating such net decrease as an overpayment equal to such net decrease multiplied by such highest rate, and

"(B) by taking adjustments to credits into account as increases or decreases (whichever is appropriate) in the amount of tax.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, any net decrease in a loss shall be treated as an increase in income and a similar rule shall apply to a net increase in a loss.

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any payment required by subsection (a)(2) or (b)(1)(A)—

"(A) shall be assessed and collected in the same manner as if it were a tax imposed by subtitle C, and

"(B) shall be paid on or before the return due date for the partnership taxable year in which the partnership adjustment takes effect.

"(2) INTEREST.—For purposes of determining interest, any payment required by subsection (a)(2) or (b)(1)(A) shall be treated as an underpayment of tax.

"(3) PENALTIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any failure by any partnership to pay on the date prescribed therefor any amount required by subsection (a)(2) or (b)(1)(A), there is hereby imposed on such partnership a penalty of 10 percent of the underpayment. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'underpayment' means the excess of any payment required under this section over the amount (if any) paid on or before the date prescribed therefor.

"(B) ACCURACY-RELATED AND FRAUD PENALTIES MADE APPLICABLE.—For purposes of part II of subchapter A of chapter 68, any payment required by subsection (a)(2) shall be treated as an underpayment of tax.

"(d) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENT.—The term 'partnership adjustment' means any adjustment in the amount of any partnership item of a large partnership.

"(2) WHEN ADJUSTMENT TAKES EFFECT.—A partnership adjustment takes effect—

"(A) in the case of an adjustment pursuant to the decision of a court in a proceeding brought under part II, when such decision becomes final,

"(B) in the case of an adjustment pursuant to any administrative adjustment request under section 6251, when such adjustment is allowed by the Secretary, or

"(C) in any other case, when such adjustment is made.

"(3) ADJUSTED YEAR.—The term 'adjusted year' means the partnership taxable year to which the item being adjusted relates.

"(4) RETURN DUE DATE.—The term 'return due date' means, with respect to any taxable year, the date prescribed for filing the partnership return for such taxable year (determined without regard to extensions).

"(5) ADJUSTMENTS INVOLVING CHANGES IN CHARACTER.—Under regulations, appropriate adjustments in the application of this section shall be made for purposes of taking into account partnership adjustments which involve a change in the character of any item of income, gain, loss, or deduction.

"(e) PAYMENTS NONDEDUCTIBLE.—No deduction shall be allowed under subtitle A for any payment required to be made by a large partnership under this section.

"PART II—PARTNERSHIP LEVEL ADJUSTMENTS

"Subpart A. Adjustments by Secretary.

"Subpart B. Claims for adjustments by partnership.

"Subpart A—Adjustments by Secretary

"Sec. 6245. Secretarial authority.

"Sec. 6246. Restrictions on partnership adjustments.

"Sec. 6247. Judicial review of partnership adjustment.

"Sec. 6248. Period of limitations for making adjustments.

"SEC. 6245. SECRETARIAL AUTHORITY.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary is authorized and directed to make adjustments at the partnership level in any partnership item to the extent necessary to have such item be treated in the manner required.

"(b) NOTICE OF PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary determines that a partnership adjustment is required, the Secretary is authorized to send notice of such adjustment to the partnership by certified mail or registered mail. Such notice shall be sufficient if mailed to the partnership at its last known address even if the partnership has terminated its existence.

"(2) FURTHER NOTICES RESTRICTED.—If the Secretary mails a notice of a partnership adjustment to any partnership for any partnership taxable year and the partnership files a petition under section 6247 with respect to such notice, in the absence of a showing of fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact, the Secretary shall not mail another such notice to such partnership with respect to such taxable year.

"(3) AUTHORITY TO RESCIND NOTICE WITH PARTNERSHIP CONSENT.—The Secretary may, with the consent of the partnership, rescind any notice of a partnership adjustment mailed to such partnership. Any notice so rescinded shall not be treated as a notice of a partnership adjustment, for purposes of this section, section 6246, and section 6247, and the taxpayer shall have no right to bring a proceeding under section 6247 with respect to such notice. Nothing in this subsection shall affect any suspension of the running of any period of limitations during any period during which the rescinded notice was outstanding.

"SEC. 6246. RESTRICTIONS ON PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, no adjustment to any partnership item may be made (and no levy or proceeding in any court for the collection of any amount resulting from such adjustment may be made, begun or prosecuted) before—

"(1) the close of the 90th day after the day on which a notice of a partnership adjustment was mailed to the partnership, and

"(2) if a petition is filed under section 6247 with respect to such notice, the decision of the court has become final.

"(b) PREMATURE ACTION MAY BE ENJOINED.—Notwithstanding section 7421(a), any action which violates subsection (a) may be enjoined in the proper court, including the Tax Court. The Tax Court shall have no jurisdiction to enjoin any action under this subsection unless a timely petition has been filed under section 6247 and then only in respect of the adjustments that are the subject of such petition.

"(c) EXCEPTIONS TO RESTRICTIONS ON ADJUSTMENTS.—

"(1) ADJUSTMENTS ARISING OUT OF MATH OR CLERICAL ERRORS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If the partnership is notified that, on account of a mathematical or clerical error appearing on the partnership return, an adjustment to a partnership item is required, rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 6213(b) shall apply to such adjustment.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE.—If a large partnership is a partner in another large partnership, any adjustment on account of such partnership's failure to comply with the requirements of section 6241(a) with respect to its interest in such other partnership shall be treated as an adjustment referred to in subparagraph (A), except that paragraph (2) of section 6213(b) shall not apply to such adjustment.

"(2) PARTNERSHIP MAY WAIVE RESTRICTIONS.—The partnership shall at any time (whether or not a notice of partnership adjustment has been issued) have the right, by a signed notice in writing filed with the Secretary, to waive the restrictions provided in subsection (a) on the making of any partnership adjustment.

"(d) LIMIT WHERE NO PROCEEDING BEGUN.—If no proceeding under section 6247 is begun with respect to any notice of a partnership adjustment during the 90-day period described in subsection (a), the amount for which the partnership is liable under section 6242 (and any increase in any partner's liability for tax under chapter 1 by reason of any adjustment under section 6242(a)) shall not exceed the amount determined in accordance with such notice.

"SEC. 6247. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENT.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Within 90 days after the date on which a notice of a partnership adjustment is mailed to the partnership with respect to any partnership taxable year, the partnership may file a petition for a readjustment of the partnership items for such taxable year with—

"(1) the Tax Court,

"(2) the district court of the United States for the district in which the partnership's principal place of business is located, or

"(3) the Claims Court.

"(b) JURISDICTIONAL REQUIREMENT FOR BRINGING ACTION IN DISTRICT COURT OR CLAIMS COURT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A readjustment petition under this section may be filed in a district court of the United States or the Claims Court only if the partnership filing the petition deposits with the Secretary, on or before the date the petition is filed, the amount for which the partnership would be liable under section 6242(b) (as of the date of the filing of the petition) if the partnership items were adjusted as provided by the notice of partnership adjustment. The court may by order provide that the jurisdictional requirements of this paragraph are satisfied where there has been a good faith attempt to satisfy such requirement and any shortfall of the amount required to be deposited is timely corrected.

"(2) INTEREST PAYABLE.—Any amount deposited under paragraph (1), while deposited, shall not be treated as a payment of tax for purposes of this title (other than chapter 67).

"(c) SCOPE OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—A court with which a petition is filed in accordance with this section shall have jurisdiction to determine all partnership items of the partnership for the partnership taxable year to which the notice of partnership adjustment relates and the proper allocation of such items among the partners (and the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount for which the partnership may be liable under section 6242(b)).

"(d) DETERMINATION OF COURT REVIEWABLE.—Any determination by a court under this section shall have the force and effect of a decision of the Tax Court or a final judgment or decree of the district court or the Claims Court, as the case may be, and shall be reviewable as such. The date of any such determination shall be treated as being the date of the court's order entering the decision.

"(e) EFFECT OF DECISION DISMISSING ACTION.—If an action brought under this section is dismissed other than by reason of a rescission under section 6245(b)(3), the decision of the court dismissing the action shall be considered as its decision that the notice of partnership adjustment is correct, and an appropriate order shall be entered in the records of the court.

"SEC. 6248. PERIOD OF LIMITATIONS FOR MAKING ADJUSTMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, no adjustment under this subpart to any partnership item for any partnership taxable year may be made after the date which is 3 years after the later of—

"(1) the date on which the partnership return for such taxable year was filed, or

"(2) the last day for filing such return for such year (determined without regard to extensions).

"(b) EXTENSION BY AGREEMENT.—The period described in subsection (a) (including an extension period under this subsection) may be extended by an agreement entered into by the Secretary and the partnership before the expiration of such period.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE IN CASE OF FRAUD, ETC.—

"(1) FALSE RETURN.—In the case of a false or fraudulent partnership return with intent to evade tax, the adjustment may be made at any time.

"(2) SUBSTANTIAL OMISSION OF INCOME.—If any partnership omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein which is in excess of 25 percent of the amount of gross income stated in its return, subsection (a) shall be applied by substituting '6 years' for '3 years'.

"(3) NO RETURN.—In the case of a failure by a partnership to file a return for any taxable year, the adjustment may be made at any time.

"(4) RETURN FILED BY SECRETARY.—For purposes of this section, a return executed by the Secretary under subsection (b) of section 6020 on behalf of the partnership shall not be treated as a return of the partnership.

"(d) SUSPENSION WHEN SECRETARY MAILS NOTICE OF ADJUSTMENT.—If notice of a partnership adjustment with respect to any taxable year is mailed to the partnership, the running of the period specified in subsection (a) (as modified by the other provisions of this section) shall be suspended—

"(1) for the period during which an action may be brought under section 6247 (and, if a petition is filed under section 6247 with respect to such notice, until the decision of the court becomes final), and

"(2) for 1 year thereafter.

"Subpart B—Claims for Adjustments by Partnership

"Sec. 6251. Administrative adjustment requests.

"Sec. 6252. Judicial review where administrative adjustment request is not allowed in full.

"SEC. 6251. ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT REQUESTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—A partnership may file a request for an administrative adjustment of partnership items for any partnership taxable year at any time which is—

"(1) within 3 years after the later of—

"(A) the date on which the partnership return for such year is filed, or

"(B) the last day for filing the partnership return for such year (determined without regard to extensions), and

"(2) before the mailing to the partnership of a notice of a partnership adjustment with respect to such taxable year.

"(b) SECRETARIAL ACTION.—If a partnership files an administrative adjustment request under subsection (a), the Secretary may allow any part of the requested adjustments.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE IN CASE OF EXTENSION UNDER SECTION 6248.—If the period described in section 6248(a) is extended pursuant to an agreement under section 6248(b), the period prescribed by subsection (a)(1) shall not expire before the date 6 months after the expiration of the extension under section 6248(b).

"SEC. 6252. JUDICIAL REVIEW WHERE ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT REQUEST IS NOT ALLOWED IN FULL.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—If any part of an administrative adjustment request filed under section 6251 is not allowed by the Secretary, the partnership may file a petition for an adjustment with respect to the partnership items to which such part of the request relates with—

"(1) the Tax Court,

"(2) the district court of the United States for the district in which the principal place of business of the partnership is located, or

"(3) the Claims Court.

"(b) PERIOD FOR FILING PETITION.—A petition may be filed under subsection (a) with respect to partnership items for a partnership taxable year only—

"(1) after the expiration of 6 months from the date of filing of the request under section 6251, and

"(2) before the date which is 2 years after the date of such request.

The 2-year period set forth in paragraph (2) shall be extended for such period as may be agreed upon in writing by the partnership and the Secretary.

"(c) COORDINATION WITH SUBPART A.—

"(1) NOTICE OF PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENT BEFORE FILING OF PETITION.—No petition may be filed under this section after the Secretary mails to the partnership a notice of a partnership adjustment for the partnership taxable year to which the request under section 6251 relates.

"(2) NOTICE OF PARTNERSHIP ADJUSTMENT AFTER FILING BUT BEFORE HEARING OF PETITION.—If the Secretary mails to the partnership a notice of a partnership adjustment for the partnership taxable year to which the request under section 6251 relates after the filing of a petition under this subsection but before the hearing of such petition, such petition shall be treated as an action brought under section 6247 with respect to such notice, except that subsection (b) of section 6247 shall not apply.

"(3) NOTICE MUST BE BEFORE EXPIRATION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—A notice of a partnership adjustment for the partnership taxable year shall be taken into account under paragraphs (1) and (2) only if such notice is mailed before the expiration of the period prescribed by section 6248 for making adjustments to partnership items for such taxable year.

"(d) SCOPE OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Except in the case described in paragraph (2) of subsection (c), a court with which a petition is filed in accordance with this section shall have jurisdiction to determine only those partnership items to which the part of the request under section 6251 not allowed by the Secretary relates and those items with respect to which the Secretary asserts adjustments as offsets to the adjustments requested by the partnership.

"(e) DETERMINATION OF COURT REVIEWABLE.—Any determination by a court under this subsection shall have the force and effect of a decision of the Tax Court or a final judgment or decree of the district court or the Claims Court, as the case may be, and shall be reviewable as such. The date of any such determination shall be treated as being the date of the court's order entering the decision.

"PART III—DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES

"Sec. 6255. Definitions and special rules.

"SEC. 6255. DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) LARGE PARTNERSHIP.—The term 'large partnership' has the meaning given to such term by section 775 without regard to section 776(a).

"(2) PARTNERSHIP ITEM.—The term 'partnership item' has the meaning given to such term by section 6231(a)(3).

"(b) PARTNERS BOUND BY ACTIONS OF PARTNERSHIP, ETC.—

"(1) DESIGNATION OF PARTNER.—Each large partnership shall designate (in the manner prescribed by the Secretary) a partner (or other person) who shall have the sole authority to act on behalf of such partnership under this subchapter. In any case in which such a designation is not in effect, the Secretary may select any partner as the partner with such authority.

"(2) BINDING EFFECT.—A large partnership and all partners of such partnership shall be bound—

"(A) by actions taken under this subchapter by the partnership, and

"(B) by any decision in a proceeding brought under this subchapter.

"(c) PARTNERSHIPS HAVING PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—For purposes of sections 6247 and 6252, a principal place of business located outside the United States shall be treated as located in the District of Columbia.

"(d) TREATMENT WHERE PARTNERSHIP CEASES TO EXIST.—If a partnership ceases to exist before a partnership adjustment under this subchapter takes effect, such adjustment shall be taken into account by the former partners of such partnership under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(e) DATE DECISION BECOMES FINAL.—For purposes of this subchapter, the principles of section 7481(a) shall be applied in determining the date on which a decision of a district court or the Claims Court becomes final.

"(f) PARTNERSHIPS IN CASES UNDER TITLE 11 OF THE UNITED STATES CODE.—The running of any period of limitations provided in this subchapter on making a partnership adjustment (or provided by section 6501 or 6502 on the assessment or collection of any amount required to be paid under section 6242) shall, in a case under title 11 of the United States Code, be suspended during the period during which the Secretary is prohibited by reason of such case from making the adjustment (or assessment or collection) and—

"(1) for adjustment or assessment, 60 days thereafter, and

"(2) for collection, 6 months thereafter.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subchapter, including regulations—

"(1) to prevent abuse through manipulation of the provisions of this subchapter, and

"(2) providing that this subchapter shall not apply to any case described in section 6231(c)(1) (or the regulations prescribed thereunder) where the application of this subchapter to such a case would interfere with the effective and efficient enforcement of this title.

In any case to which this subchapter does not apply by reason of paragraph (2), rules similar to the rules of sections 6229(f) and 6255(f) shall apply."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of subchapters for chapter 63 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

SEC. 4303. DUE DATE FOR FURNISHING INFORMATION TO PARTNERS OF LARGE PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (b) of section 6031 (relating to copies to partners) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In the case of a large partnership (as defined in sections 775 and 776(a)), such information shall be furnished on or before the first March 15 following the close of such taxable year."

(b) TREATMENT AS INFORMATION RETURN.—Section 6724 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN PARTNERSHIP RETURNS.—If any partnership return under section 6031(a) is required under section 6011(e) to be filed on magnetic media or in other machine-readable form, for purposes of this part, each schedule required to be included with such return with respect to each partner shall be treated as a separate information return."

SEC. 4304. RETURNS MAY BE REQUIRED ON MAGNETIC MEDIA.

Paragraph (2) of section 6011(e) (relating to returns on magnetic media) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"The preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of the partnership return of a large partnership (as defined in sections 775 and 776(a)) or any other partnership with 250 or more partners."

SEC. 4305. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), the amendments made by this part shall apply to partnership taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1993.

(b) SPECIAL RULE FOR SECTION 4304.—In the case of a partnership which is not a large partnership (as defined in sections 775 and 776(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by this part), the amendment made by section 4304 shall only apply to partnership taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1998.

PART II—PROVISIONS RELATED TO TEFRA PARTNERSHIP PROCEEDINGS

SEC. 4311. TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP ITEMS IN DEFICIENCY PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter C of chapter 63 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 6234. DECLARATORY JUDGMENT RELATING TO TREATMENT OF ITEMS OTHER THAN PARTNERSHIP ITEMS WITH RESPECT TO AN OVERSHELTERED RETURN.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—If—

"(1) a taxpayer files an oversheltered return for a taxable year,

"(2) the Secretary makes a determination with respect to the treatment of items (other than partnership items) of such taxpayer for such taxable year, and

"(3) the adjustments resulting from such determination do not give rise to a deficiency (as defined in section 6211) but would give rise to a deficiency if there were no net loss from partnership items, the Secretary is authorized to send a notice of adjustment reflecting such determination to the taxpayer by certified or registered mail.

"(b) OVERSHELTERED RETURN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'oversheltered return' means an income tax return which—

"(1) shows no taxable income for the taxable year, and

"(2) shows a net loss from partnership items.

"(c) JUDICIAL REVIEW IN THE TAX COURT.—Within 90 days, or 150 days if the notice is addressed to a person outside the United States, after the day on which the notice of adjustment authorized in subsection (a) is mailed to the taxpayer, the taxpayer may file a petition with the Tax Court for redetermination of the adjustments. Upon the filing of such a petition, the Tax Court shall have jurisdiction to make a declaration with respect to all items (other than partnership items and affected items which require partner level determinations as described in section 6230(a)(2)(A)(i)) for the taxable year to which the notice of adjustment relates, in accordance with the principles of section 6214(a). Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a decision of the Tax Court and shall be reviewable as such.

"(d) FAILURE TO FILE PETITION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), if the taxpayer does not file a petition with the Tax Court within the time prescribed in subsection (c), the determination of the Secretary set forth in the notice of adjustment that was mailed to the taxpayer shall be deemed to be correct.

"(2) EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply after the date that the taxpayer—

"(A) files a petition with the Tax Court within the time prescribed in subsection (c) with respect to a subsequent notice of adjustment relating to the same taxable year, or

"(B) files a claim for refund of an overpayment of tax under section 6511 for the taxable year involved.

If a claim for refund is filed by the taxpayer, then solely for purposes of determining (for the taxable year involved) the amount of any computational adjustment in connection with a partnership proceeding under this subchapter (other than under this section) or the amount of any deficiency attributable to affected items in a proceeding under section 6230(a)(2), the items that are the subject of the notice of adjustment shall be presumed to have been correctly reported on the taxpayer's return during the pendency of the refund claim (and, if within the time prescribed by section 6532 the taxpayer commences a civil action for refund under section 7422, until the decision in the refund action becomes final).

"(e) LIMITATIONS PERIOD.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any notice to a taxpayer under subsection (a) shall be mailed before the expiration of the period prescribed by section 6501 (relating to the period of limitations on assessment).

"(2) SUSPENSION WHEN SECRETARY MAILS NOTICE OF ADJUSTMENT.—If the Secretary mails a notice of adjustment to the taxpayer for a taxable year, the period of limitations on the making of assessments shall be suspended for the period during which the Secretary is prohibited from making the assessment (and, in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the notice of adjustment is placed on the docket of the Tax Court, until the decision of the Tax Court becomes final), and for 60 days thereafter.

"(3) RESTRICTIONS ON ASSESSMENT.—Except as otherwise provided in section 6851, 6852, or 6861, no assessment of a deficiency with respect to any tax imposed by subtitle A attributable to any item (other than a partnership item or any item affected by a partnership item) shall be made—

"(A) until the expiration of the applicable 90-day or 150-day period set forth in subsection (c) for filing a petition with the Tax Court, or

"(B) if a petition has been filed with the Tax Court, until the decision of the Tax Court has become final.

"(f) FURTHER NOTICES OF ADJUSTMENT RESTRICTED.—If the Secretary mails a notice of adjustment to the taxpayer for a taxable year and the taxpayer files a petition with the Tax Court within the time prescribed in subsection (c), the Secretary may not mail another such notice to the taxpayer with respect to the same taxable year in the absence of a showing of fraud, malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact.

"(g) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROCEEDINGS UNDER THIS SUBCHAPTER.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The treatment of any item that has been determined pursuant to subsection (c) or (d) shall be taken into account in determining the amount of any computational adjustment that is made in connection with a partnership proceeding under this subchapter (other than under this section), or the amount of any deficiency attributable to affected items in a proceeding under section 6230(a)(2), for the taxable year involved. Notwithstanding any other law or rule of law pertaining to the period of limitations on the making of assessments, for purposes of the preceding sentence, any adjustment made in accordance with this section shall be taken into account regardless of whether any assessment has been made with respect to such adjustment.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE IN CASE OF COMPUTATIONAL ADJUSTMENT.—In the case of a computational adjustment that is made in connection with a partnership proceeding under this subchapter (other than under this section), the provisions of paragraph (1) shall apply only if the computational adjustment is made within the period prescribed by section 6229 for assessing any tax under subtitle A which is attributable to any partnership item or affected item for the taxable year involved.

"(3) CONVERSION TO DEFICIENCY PROCEEDING.—If—

"(A) after the notice referred to in subsection (a) is mailed to a taxpayer for a taxable year but before the expiration of the period for filing a petition with the Tax Court under subsection (c) (or, if a petition is filed with the Tax Court, before the Tax Court makes a declaration for that taxable year), the treatment of any partnership item for the taxable year is finally determined, or any such item ceases to be a partnership item pursuant to section 6231(b), and

"(B) as a result of that final determination or cessation, a deficiency can be determined with respect to the items that are the subject of the notice of adjustment, the notice of adjustment shall be treated as a notice of deficiency under section 6212 and any petition filed in respect of the notice shall be treated as an action brought under section 6213.

"(4) FINALLY DETERMINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the treatment of partnership items shall be treated as finally determined if—

"(A) the Secretary enters into a settlement agreement (within the meaning of section 6224) with the taxpayer regarding such items,

"(B) a notice of final partnership administrative adjustment has been issued and—

"(i) no petition has been filed under section 6226 and the time for doing so has expired, or

"(ii) a petition has been filed under section 6226 and the decision of the court has become final, or

"(C) the period within which any tax attributable to such items may be assessed against the taxpayer has expired.

"(h) SPECIAL RULES IF SECRETARY INCORRECTLY DETERMINES APPLICABLE PROCEDURE.—

"(1) SPECIAL RULE IF SECRETARY ERRONEOUSLY MAILS NOTICE OF ADJUSTMENT.—If the Secretary erroneously determines that subchapter B does not apply to a taxable year of a taxpayer and consistent with that determination timely mails a notice of adjustment to the taxpayer pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, the notice of adjustment shall be treated as a notice of deficiency under section 6212 and any petition that is filed in respect of the notice shall be treated as an action brought under section 6213.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE IF SECRETARY ERRONEOUSLY MAILS NOTICE OF DEFICIENCY.—If the Secretary erroneously determines that subchapter B applies to a taxable year of a taxpayer and consistent with that determination timely mails a notice of deficiency to the taxpayer pursuant to section 6212, the notice of deficiency shall be treated as a notice of adjustment under subsection (a) and any petition that is filed in respect of the notice shall be treated as an action brought under subsection (c)."

(b) TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP ITEMS IN DEFICIENCY PROCEEDINGS.—Section 6211 (defining deficiency) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) COORDINATION WITH SUBCHAPTER C.—In determining the amount of any deficiency for purposes of this subchapter, adjustments to partnership items shall be made only as provided in subchapter C."

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subchapter C of chapter 63 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 6234. Declaratory judgment relating to treatment of items other than partnership items with respect to an oversheltered return.".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to partnership taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4312. PARTNERSHIP RETURN TO BE DETERMINATIVE OF AUDIT PROCEDURES TO BE FOLLOWED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6231 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) PARTNERSHIP RETURN TO BE DETERMINATIVE OF WHETHER SUBCHAPTER APPLIES.—

"(1) DETERMINATION THAT SUBCHAPTER APPLIES.—If, on the basis of a partnership return for a taxable year, the Secretary reasonably determines that this subchapter applies to such partnership for such year but such determination is erroneous, then the provisions of this subchapter are hereby extended to such partnership (and its items) for such taxable year and to partners of such partnership.

"(2) DETERMINATION THAT SUBCHAPTER DOES NOT APPLY.—If, on the basis of a partnership return for a taxable year, the Secretary reasonably determines that this subchapter does not apply to such partnership for such year but such determination is erroneous, then the provisions of this subchapter shall not apply to such partnership (and its items) for such taxable year or to partners of such partnership."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to partnership taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4313. PROVISIONS RELATING TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

(a) SUSPENSION OF STATUTE WHERE UNTIMELY PETITION FILED.—Paragraph (1) of section 6229(d) (relating to suspension where Secretary makes administrative adjustment) is amended by striking all that follows "section 6226" and inserting the following: "(and, if a petition is filed under section 6226 with respect to such administrative adjustment, until the decision of the court becomes final), and".

(b) SUSPENSION OF STATUTE DURING BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDING.—Section 6229 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) SUSPENSION DURING PENDENCY OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDING.—If a petition is filed naming a partner as a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding under title 11 of the United States Code, the running of the period of limitations provided in this section with respect to such partner shall be suspended—

"(1) for the period during which the Secretary is prohibited by reason of such bankruptcy proceeding from making an assessment, and

"(2) for 60 days thereafter."

(c) TAX MATTERS PARTNER IN BANKRUPTCY.—Section 6229(b) is amended by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3) and by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) SPECIAL RULE WITH RESPECT TO DEBTORS IN TITLE 11 CASES.—Notwithstanding any other law or rule of law, if an agreement is entered into under paragraph (1)(B) and the agreement is signed by a person who would be the tax matters partner but for the fact that, at the time that the agreement is executed, the person is a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding under title 11 of the United States Code, such agreement shall be binding on all partners in the partnership unless the Secretary has been notified of the bankruptcy proceeding in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) SUBSECTIONS (a) AND (b).—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to partnership taxable years with respect to which the period under section 6229 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for assessing tax has not expired on or before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) SUBSECTION (c).—The amendment made by subsection (c) shall apply to agreements entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4314. EXPANSION OF SMALL PARTNERSHIP EXCEPTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Clause (i) of section 6231(a)(1)(B) (relating to exception for small partnerships) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'partnership' shall not include any partnership having 10 or fewer partners each of whom is an individual (other than a nonresident alien), a C corporation, or an estate of a deceased partner. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a husband and wife (and their estates) shall be treated as 1 partner."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to partnership taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4315. EXCLUSION OF PARTIAL SETTLEMENTS FROM 1 YEAR LIMITATION ON ASSESSMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (f) of section 6229 (relating to items becoming nonpartnership items) is amended—

(1) by striking "(f) ITEMS BECOMING NONPARTNERSHIP ITEMS.—If" and inserting the following:

"(f) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) ITEMS BECOMING NONPARTNERSHIP ITEMS.—If",

(2) by moving the text of such subsection 2 ems to the right, and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR PARTIAL SETTLEMENT AGREEMENTS.—If a partner enters into a settlement agreement with the Secretary with respect to the treatment of some of the partnership items in dispute for a partnership taxable year but other partnership items for such year remain in dispute, the period of limitations for assessing any tax attributable to the settled items shall be determined as if such agreement had not been entered into."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to settlements entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4316. EXTENSION OF TIME FOR FILING A REQUEST FOR ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6227 (relating to administrative adjustment requests) is amended by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) SPECIAL RULE IN CASE OF EXTENSION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATIONS UNDER SECTION 6229.—The period prescribed by subsection (a)(1) for filing of a request for an administrative adjustment shall be extended—

"(1) for the period within which an assessment may be made pursuant to an agreement (or any extension thereof) under section 6229(b), and

"(2) for 6 months thereafter."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

SEC. 4317. AVAILABILITY OF INNOCENT SPOUSE RELIEF IN CONTEXT OF PARTNERSHIP PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 6230 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE IN CASE OF ASSERTION BY PARTNER'S SPOUSE OF INNOCENT SPOUSE RELIEF.—

"(A) Notwithstanding section 6404(b), if the spouse of a partner asserts that section 6013(e) applies with respect to a liability that is attributable to any adjustment to a partnership item, then such spouse may file with the Secretary within 60 days after the notice of computational adjustment is mailed to the spouse a request for abatement of the assessment specified in such notice. Upon receipt of such request, the Secretary shall abate the assessment. Any reassessment of the tax with respect to which an abatement is made under this subparagraph shall be subject to the deficiency procedures prescribed by subchapter B. The period for making any such reassessment shall not expire before the expiration of 60 days after the date of such abatement.

"(B) If the spouse files a petition with the Tax Court pursuant to section 6213 with respect to the request for abatement described in subparagraph (A), the Tax Court shall only have jurisdiction pursuant to this section to determine whether the requirements of section 6013(e) have been satisfied. For purposes of such determination, the treatment of partnership items under the settlement, the final partnership administrative adjustment, or the decision of the court (whichever is appropriate) that gave rise to the liability in question shall be conclusive.

"(C) Rules similar to the rules contained in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (2) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph."

(b) CLAIMS FOR REFUND.—Subsection (c) of section 6230 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) RULES FOR SEEKING INNOCENT SPOUSE RELIEF.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The spouse of a partner may file a claim for refund on the ground that the Secretary failed to relieve the spouse under section 6013(e) from a liability that is attributable to an adjustment to a partnership item.

"(B) TIME FOR FILING CLAIM.—Any claim under subparagraph (A) shall be filed within 6 months after the day on which the Secretary mails to the spouse the notice of computational adjustment referred to in subsection (a)(3)(A).

"(C) SUIT IF CLAIM NOT ALLOWED.—If the claim under subparagraph (B) is not allowed, the spouse may bring suit with respect to the claim within the period specified in paragraph (3).

"(D) PRIOR DETERMINATIONS ARE BINDING.—For purposes of any claim or suit under this paragraph, the treatment of partnership items under the settlement, the final partnership administrative adjustment, or the decision of the court (whichever is appropriate) that gave rise to the liability in question shall be conclusive."

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6230(a) is amended by striking "paragraph (2)" and inserting "paragraph (2) or (3)".

(2) Subsection (a) of section 6503 is amended by striking "section 6230(a)(2)(A)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(A) or (3) of section 6230(a)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

SEC. 4318. DETERMINATION OF PENALTIES AT PARTNERSHIP LEVEL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6221 (relating to tax treatment determined at partnership level) is amended by striking "item" and inserting "item (and the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount which relates to an adjustment to a partnership item)".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (f) of section 6226 is amended—

(A) by striking "relates and" and inserting "relates,", and

(B) by inserting before the period ", and the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount which relates to an adjustment to a partnership item".

(2) Clause (i) of section 6230(a)(2)(A) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) affected items which require partner level determinations (other than penalties, additions to tax, and additional amounts that relate to adjustments to partnership items), or".

(3)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 6230(a)(3), as added by section 4317, is amended by inserting "(including any liability for any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount relating to such adjustment)" after "partnership item".

(B) Subparagraph (B) of such section is amended by inserting "(and the applicability of any penalties, additions to tax, or additional amounts)" after "partnership items".

(C) Subparagraph (A) of section 6230(c)(5), as added by section 4317, is amended by inserting before the period "(including any liability for any penalties, additions to tax, or additional amounts relating to such adjustment)".

(D) Subparagraph (D) of section 6230(c)(5), as added by section 3317, is amended by inserting "(and the applicability of any penalties, additions to tax, or additional amounts)" after "partnership items".

(4) Paragraph (1) of section 6230(c) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

(5) So much of subparagraph (A) of section 6230(c)(2) as precedes "shall be filed" is amended to read as follows:

"(A) UNDER PARAGRAPH (1) (A) OR (C).—Any claim under subparagraph (A) or (C) of paragraph (1)".

(6) Paragraph (4) of section 6230(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "In addition, the determination under the final partnership administrative adjustment or under the decision of the court (whichever is appropriate) concerning the applicability of any penalty, addition to tax, or additional amount which relates to an adjustment to a partnership item shall also be conclusive.

Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the partner shall be allowed to assert any partner level defenses that may apply or to challenge the amount of the computational adjustment."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to partnership taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4319. PROVISIONS RELATING TO COURT JURISDICTION, ETC.

(a) TAX COURT JURISDICTION TO ENJOIN PREMATURE ASSESSMENTS OF DEFICIENCIES ATTRIBUTABLE TO PARTNERSHIP ITEMS.—Subsection (b) of section 6225 is amended by striking "the proper court." and inserting "the proper court, including the Tax Court. The Tax Court shall have no jurisdiction to enjoin any action or proceeding under this subsection unless a timely petition for a readjustment of the partnership items for the taxable year has been filed and then only in respect of the adjustments that are the subject of such petition."

(b) JURISDICTION TO CONSIDER STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS WITH RESPECT TO PARTNERS.—Paragraph (1) of section 6226(d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"Notwithstanding subparagraph (B), any person treated under subsection (c) as a party to an action shall be permitted to participate in such action (or file a readjustment petition under subsection (b) or paragraph (2) of this subsection) solely for the purpose of asserting that the period of limitations for assessing any tax attributable to partnership items has expired with respect to such person, and the court having jurisdiction of such action shall have jurisdiction to consider such assertion."

(c) TAX COURT JURISDICTION TO DETERMINE OVERPAYMENTS ATTRIBUTABLE TO AFFECTED ITEMS.—

(1) Paragraph (6) of section 6230(d) is amended by striking "(or an affected item)".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 6512(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"In the case of a credit or refund relating to an affected item (within the meaning of section 6231(a)(5)), the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting the periods under sections 6229 and 6230(d) for the periods under section 6511(b)(2), (c), and (d)."

(d) VENUE ON APPEAL.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 7482(b) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (D), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (E) and inserting ", or", and by inserting after subparagraph (E) the following new subparagraph:

"(F) in the case of a petition under section 6234(c)—

"(i) the legal residence of the petitioner if the petitioner is not a corporation, and

"(ii) the place or office applicable under subparagraph (B) if the petitioner is a corporation."

(2) The last sentence of section 7482(b) is amended by striking "or 6228(a)" and inserting ", 6228(a), or 6234(c)".

(e) OTHER PROVISIONS.—

(1) Subsection (c) of section 7459 is amended by striking "or section 6228(a)" and inserting ", 6228(a), or 6234(c)".

(2) Subsection (o) of section 6501 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) For declaratory judgment relating to treatment of items other than partnership items with respect to an oversheltered return, see section 6234."

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to partnership taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4320. TREATMENT OF PREMATURE PETITIONS FILED BY NOTICE PARTNERS OR 5-PERCENT GROUPS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 6226 (relating to judicial review of final partnership administrative adjustments) is amended by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (6) and by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) TREATMENT OF PREMATURE PETITIONS.—If—

"(A) a petition for a readjustment of partnership items for the taxable year involved is filed by a notice partner (or a 5-percent group) during the 90-day period described in subsection (a), and

"(B) no action is brought under paragraph (1) during the 60-day period described therein with respect to such taxable year which is not dismissed, such petition shall be treated for purposes of paragraph (1) as filed on the last day of such 60-day period."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to petitions filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4321. BONDS IN CASE OF APPEALS FROM TEFRA PROCEEDING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 7485 (relating to bonds to stay assessment of collection) is amended—

(c) Treatment of Certain Service Contracts Under Subpart F.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 954(c) (defining foreign personal holding company income) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) Personal service contracts.—

"(i) Amounts received under a contract under which the corporation is to furnish personal services, if some person other than the corporation has the right to designate (by name or by description) the individual who is to perform the services, or if the individual who is to perform the services is designated (by name or by description) in the contract.

"(ii) Amounts received from the sale or other disposition of such contract.

This subparagraph shall apply with respect to amounts received for services under a particular contract only if at some time during the taxable year 25 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual who has performed, is to perform, or may be designated (by name or by description) as the one to perform, such services. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the attribution rules of section 544 shall apply, determined as if any reference to section 543(a)(7) were a reference to this subparagraph."

(2) Clause (iii) of section 904(d)(2)(A) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subclause (III), by striking the period at the end of subclause (IV) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subclause:

"(V) any income described in section 954(c)(1)(F) (relating to personal service contracts)."

SEC. 4402. REPLACEMENT FOR PASSIVE FOREIGN INVESTMENT COMPANY RULES.

(a) General Rule.—Part VI of subchapter P of chapter 1 (relating to treatment of certain passive foreign investment companies) is amended to read as follows:

"PART VI—TREATMENT OF PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

"Subpart A. Current taxation rules.

"Subpart B. Interest on holdings to which subpart A does not apply.

"Subpart C. General provisions.

"Subpart A—Current Taxation Rules

"Sec. 1291. Stock in certain passive foreign corporations marked to market.

"Sec. 1292. Inclusion of income of certain passive foreign corporations.

"SEC. 1291. STOCK IN CERTAIN PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATIONS MARKED TO MARKET.

"(a) General Rule.—In the case of marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation which is owned (or treated under subsection (g) as owned) by a United States person at the close of any taxable year of such person—

"(1) If the fair market value of such stock as of the close of such taxable year exceeds its adjusted basis, such United States person shall include in gross income for such taxable year an amount equal to the amount of such excess.

"(2) If the adjusted basis of such stock exceeds the fair market value of such stock as of the close of such taxable year, such United States person shall be allowed a deduction for such taxable year equal to the lesser of—

"(A) the amount of such excess, or

"(B) the unreversed inclusions with respect to such stock.

"(b) Basis Adjustments.—

"(1) In general.—The adjusted basis of stock in a passive foreign corporation—

"(A) shall be increased by the amount included in the gross income of the United States person under subsection (a)(1) with respect to such stock, and

"(B) shall be decreased by the amount allowed as a deduction to the United States person under subsection (a)(2) with respect to such stock.

"(2) Special rule for stock constructively owned.—In the case of stock in a passive foreign corporation which the United States person is treated as owning under subsection (g)—

"(A) the adjustments under paragraph (1) shall apply to such stock in the hands of the person actually holding such stock but only for purposes of determining the subsequent treatment under this chapter of the United States person with respect to such stock, and

"(B) similar adjustments shall be made to the adjusted basis of the property by reason of which the United States person is treated as owning such stock.

"(c) Character and Source Rules.—

"(1) Ordinary treatment.—

"(A) Gain.—Any amount included in gross income under subsection (a)(1), and any gain on the sale or other disposition of marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation, shall be treated as ordinary income.

"(B) Loss.—Any—

"(i) amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a)(2), and

"(ii) loss on the sale or other disposition of marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation to the extent that the amount of such loss does not exceed the unreversed inclusions with respect to such stock, shall be treated as an ordinary loss. The amount so treated shall be treated as a deduction allowable in computing adjusted gross income.

"(2) Source.—The source of any amount included in gross income under subsection (a)(1) (or allowed as a deduction under subsection (a)(2)) shall be determined in the same manner as if such amount were gain or loss (as the case may be) from the sale of stock in the passive foreign corporation.

"(d) Unreversed Inclusions.—For purposes of this section, the term 'unreversed inclusions' means, with respect to any stock in a passive foreign corporation, the excess (if any) of—

"(1) the amount included in gross income of the taxpayer under subsection (a)(1) with respect to such stock for prior taxable years, over

"(2) the amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a)(2) with respect to such stock for prior taxable years.

The amount referred to in paragraph (1) shall include any amount which would have been included in gross income under subsection (a)(1) with respect to such stock for any prior taxable year but for section 1293.

"(e) Coordination With Section 1292.—This section shall not apply with respect to any stock in a passive foreign corporation—

"(1) which is U.S. controlled,

"(2) which is a qualified electing fund with respect to the United States person for the taxable year, or

"(3) in which the United States person is a 25-percent shareholder.

"(f) Treatment of Controlled Foreign Corporations Which are Shareholders in Passive Foreign Corporations.—In the case of a foreign corporation which is a controlled foreign corporation (or is treated as a controlled foreign corporation under section 1292) and which owns (or is treated under subsection (g) as owning) stock in a passive foreign corporation—

"(1) this section (other than subsection (c)(2) thereof) shall apply to such foreign corporation in the same manner as if such corporation were a United States person, and

"(2) for purposes of subpart F of part III of subchapter N—

"(A) any amount included in gross income under subsection (a)(1) shall be treated as foreign personal holding company income described in section 954(c)(1)(A), and

"(B) any amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a)(2) shall be treated as a deduction allocable to foreign personal holding company income so described.

"(g) Stock Owned Through Certain Foreign Entities.—Except as provided in regulations—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this section, stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a foreign partnership or foreign trust or foreign estate shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its partners or beneficiaries. Stock considered to be owned by a person by reason of the application of the preceding sentence shall, for purposes of applying such sentence, be treated as actually owned by such person.

"(2) Treatment of certain dispositions.—In any case in which a United States person is treated as owning stock in a passive foreign corporation by reason of paragraph (1)—

"(A) any disposition by the United States person or by any other person which results in the United States person being treated as no longer owning such stock, and

"(B) any disposition by the person owning such stock, shall be treated as a disposition by the United States person of the stock in the passive foreign corporation.

"(h) Coordination With Section 851(b).—For purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 851(b), any amount included in gross income under subsection (a) shall be treated as a dividend.

"(i) Transition Rules.—

"(1) Individuals becoming subject to U.S. tax.—If any individual becomes a United States person in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1992, solely for purposes of this section, the adjusted basis (before adjustments under subsection (b)) of any marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation owned (or treated as owned under subsection (g)) by such individual on the first day of such taxable year shall be treated as being the greater of its fair market value on such first day or its adjusted basis on such first day.

"(2) Marketable stock held before effective date.—

"(A) In general.—If any marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation is owned (or treated under subsection (g) as owned) by a United States person on the first day of such person's first taxable year, beginning after December 31, 1992—

"(i) paragraph (2) of section 1294(a) shall apply to such stock as if it became marketable during such first taxable year; except that—

"(I) section 1293 shall not apply to the amount included in gross income under subsection (a) to the extent such amount is attributable to increases in fair market value during such first taxable year, and

"(II) the taxpayer's holding period shall be treated as having ended on the last day of the preceding taxable year for purposes of allocating amounts under section 1293(a)(1)(A), and

"(ii) such person may elect to extend the time for the payment of the applicable section 1293 deferred tax as provided in subparagraph (B).

"(B) ELECTION TO EXTEND TIME FOR PAYMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—At the election of the taxpayer, the time for the payment of the applicable section 1293 deferred tax shall be extended to the extent and subject to the limitations provided in this subparagraph.

"(ii) TERMINATION OF EXTENSION.—

"(I) DISTRIBUTIONS.—If any distribution is received with respect to any stock to which an extension under clause (i) relates and such distribution would be an excess distribution within the meaning of section 1293 if such section applied to such stock, then the extension under clause (i) for the appropriate portion (as determined under regulations) of the applicable section 1293 deferred tax shall expire on the last day prescribed by law (determined without regard to extensions) for filing the return of tax for the taxable year in which the distribution is received.

"(II) REVERSAL OF INCLUSION.—If an amount is allowable as a deduction under subsection (a)(2) with respect to any stock to which an extension under clause (i) relates and the amount so allowable is allocable to the amount which gave rise to the applicable section 1293 deferred tax, then the extension under clause (i) for the appropriate portion (as determined under regulations) of the applicable section 1293 deferred tax shall expire on the last day prescribed by law (determined without regard to extensions) for filing the return of the tax for the taxable year for which such deduction is allowed.

"(III) DISPOSITIONS, ETC.—If stock in a passive foreign corporation is disposed of during the taxable year, all extensions under clause (i) for payment of the applicable section 1293 deferred tax attributable to such stock which have not expired before the date of such disposition shall expire on the last date prescribed by law (determined without regard to extensions) for filing the return of tax for the taxable year in which such disposition occurs. To the extent provided in regulations, the preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of a disposition in a transaction with respect to which gain or loss is not recognized (in whole or in part), and the person acquiring such stock in such transaction shall succeed to the treatment under this section of the person making such disposition.

"(iii) OTHER RULES.—

"(I) ELECTION.—The election under clause (i) shall be made not later than the time prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of tax imposed by this chapter for the first taxable year referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(II) TREATMENT OF LOANS TO SHAREHOLDER.—For purposes of this subparagraph, any loan by a passive foreign corporation (directly or indirectly) to a shareholder of such corporation shall be treated as a distribution to such shareholder.

"(C) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For provisions providing for interest for the period of the extension under this paragraph, see section 6601.

"(D) APPLICABLE SECTION 1293 DEFERRED TAX.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'applicable section 1293 deferred tax' means the deferred tax amount determined under section 1293 with respect to the amount which, but for section 1293, would have been included in gross income for the first taxable year referred to in subparagraph (A). Such term also includes the tax imposed by this chapter for such first taxable year to the extent attributable to the amounts allocated under section 1293(a)(1)(A) to a period described in section 1293(a)(1)(B)(ii).

"(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If any marketable stock in a passive foreign corporation is owned (or treated under subsection (g) as owned) by a regulated investment company on the first day of such company's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1992—

"(i) section 1293 shall not apply to such stock with respect to any distribution or disposition during, or amount included in gross income under this section for, such first taxable year, but

"(ii) such company's tax under this chapter for such first taxable year shall be increased by the aggregate amount of interest which would have been determined under section 1293(c)(3) if section 1293 were applied without regard to this subparagraph.

"(B) DISALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION.—No deduction shall be allowed to any regulated investment company for the increase in tax under subparagraph (A)(ii).

"SEC. 1292. CURRENT INCLUSION OF INCOME OF CERTAIN PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

"(a) PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATIONS WHICH ARE U.S. CONTROLLED.—

"(1) TREATMENT UNDER SUBPART F.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If a passive foreign corporation is United States controlled, then for purposes of subpart F of part III of subchapter N—

"(i) such corporation, if not otherwise a controlled foreign corporation, shall be treated as a controlled foreign corporation,

"(ii) the term 'United States shareholder' means, with respect to such corporation, any United States person who owns (within the meaning of section 958(a)) any stock in such corporation,

"(iii) the entire gross income of such corporation shall, after being reduced under the principles of paragraph (5) of section 954(b), be treated as foreign base company income, and

"(iv) sections 970 and 971 shall not apply.

Except as provided in regulations, the preceding sentence shall also apply for purposes of section 904(d).

"(B) SPECIAL RULES.—If any taxpayer is treated as being a United States shareholder in a controlled foreign corporation solely by reason of this section—

"(i) section 954(b)(4) (relating to exception for certain income subject to high foreign taxes) shall not apply for purposes of determining the amount included in the gross income of such taxpayer under section 951 by reason of being so treated with respect to such corporation, and

"(ii) the amount so included in the gross income of such taxpayer under section 951 with respect to such corporation shall be treated as long-term capital gain to the extent attributable to the net capital gain of such corporation.

"(2) U.S. CONTROLLED.—For purposes of this subpart, a passive foreign corporation is United States controlled if—

"(A) such corporation is a controlled foreign corporation determined without regard to this subsection, or

"(B) at any time during the taxable year more than 50 percent of—

"(i) the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of such corporation entitled to vote, or

"(ii) the total value of the stock of such corporation, is owned directly or indirectly by 5 or fewer United States persons.

"(3) CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP RULES FOR PURPOSES OF PARAGRAPH (2)(B).—For purposes of paragraph (2)(B), the attribution rules provided in section 544 shall apply, determined as if any reference to a personal holding company were a reference to a corporation described in paragraph (2)(B) (and any reference to the stock ownership requirement provided in section 542(a)(2) were a reference to the requirement of paragraph (2)(B)); except that—

"(A) subsection (a)(4) of such section shall be applied by substituting 'Paragraphs (1), (2), and (3)' for 'Paragraphs (2) and (3)',

"(B) stock owned by a nonresident alien individual shall not be considered by reason of attribution through family membership as owned by a citizen or resident alien individual who is not the spouse of the nonresident alien individual and who does not otherwise own stock in the foreign corporation (determined after the application of such attribution rules other than attribution through family membership), and

"(C) stock of a corporation owned by any foreign person shall not be considered by reason of attribution through partners as owned by a citizen or resident of the United States who does not otherwise own stock in the foreign corporation (determined after the application of such attribution rules and subparagraph (A), other than attribution through partners).

"(b) TAXPAYERS ELECTING CURRENT INCLUSION AND 25-PERCENT SHAREHOLDERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a passive foreign corporation which is not United States controlled is a qualified electing fund with respect to any taxpayer or the taxpayer is a 25-percent shareholder in such corporation, then for purposes of subpart F of part III of subchapter N—

"(A) such passive foreign corporation shall be treated as a controlled foreign corporation with respect to such taxpayer,

"(B) such taxpayer shall be treated as a United States shareholder in such corporation, and

"(C) the modifications of clauses (iii) and (iv) of subsection (a)(1)(A) and of subparagraph (B) of subsection (a)(1) shall apply in determining the amount included under such subpart F in the gross income of such taxpayer (and the character of the amount so included).

For purposes of section 904(d), any amount included in the gross income of the taxpayer under the preceding sentence shall be treated as a dividend from a foreign corporation which is not a controlled foreign corporation.

"(2) QUALIFIED ELECTING FUND.—For purposes of this subpart, the term 'qualified electing fund' means any passive foreign corporation if—

"(A) an election by the taxpayer under paragraph (3) applies to such corporation for the taxable year of the taxpayer, and

"(B) such corporation complies with such requirements as the Secretary may prescribe for purposes of carrying out the purposes of this subpart.

"(3) ELECTION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer may make an election under this paragraph with respect to any passive foreign corporation for any taxable year of the taxpayer. Such an election, once made with respect to any corporation, shall apply to all subsequent taxable years of the taxpayer with respect to such corporation unless revoked by the taxpayer with the consent of the Secretary.

"(B) WHEN MADE.—An election under this subsection may be made for any taxable year of the taxpayer at any time on or before the due date (determined with regard to extensions) for filing the return of the tax imposed by this chapter for such taxable year. To the extent provided in regulations, such an election may be made later than as required in the preceding sentence where the taxpayer fails to make a timely election because the taxpayer reasonably believes that the corporation was not a passive foreign corporation.

"(4) 25-PERCENT SHAREHOLDER.—For purposes of this subpart, the term '25-percent shareholder' means, with respect to any passive foreign corporation, any United States person who owns (within the meaning of section 958(a)), or is considered as owning by applying the rules of section 958(b), 25 percent or more (by vote or value) of the stock of such corporation.

"SUBPART B—INTEREST ON HOLDINGS TO WHICH SUBPART A DOES NOT APPLY

"Sec. 1293. Interest on tax deferral.

"Sec. 1294. Definitions and special rules.

"SEC. 1293. INTEREST ON TAX DEFERRAL.

"(a) TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS AND STOCK DISPOSITIONS.—

"(1) DISTRIBUTIONS.—If a United States person receives an excess distribution in respect of stock to which this section applies, then—

"(A) the amount of the excess distribution shall be allocated ratably to each day in the taxpayer's holding period for the stock,

"(B) with respect to such excess distribution, the taxpayer's gross income for the current year shall include (as ordinary income) only the amounts allocated under subparagraph (A) to—

"(i) the current year, or

"(ii) any period in the taxpayer's holding period before the first day of the first taxable year of the corporation which begins after December 31, 1986, and for which it was a passive foreign corporation, and

"(C) the tax imposed by this chapter for the current year shall be increased by the deferred tax amount (determined under subsection (c)).

"(2) DISPOSITIONS.—If the taxpayer disposes of stock to which this section applies, then the rules of paragraph (1) shall apply to any gain recognized on such disposition in the same manner as if such gain were an excess distribution.

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subpart—

"(A) HOLDING PERIOD.—The taxpayer's holding period shall be determined under section 1223; except that—"(i) for purposes of applying this section to an excess distribution, such holding period shall be treated as ending on the date of such distribution, and

"(ii) if section 1291 applied to such stock with respect to the taxpayer for any prior taxable year, such holding period shall be treated as beginning on the first day of the first taxable year beginning after the last taxable year for which section 1291 so applied.

"(B) CURRENT YEAR.—The term 'current year' means the taxable year in which the excess distribution or disposition occurs.

"(b) EXCESS DISTRIBUTION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term 'excess distribution' means any distribution in respect of stock received during any taxable year to the extent such distribution does not exceed its ratable portion of the total excess distribution (if any) for such taxable year.

"(2) TOTAL EXCESS DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'total excess distribution' means the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the amount of the distributions in respect of the stock received by the taxpayer during the taxable year, over

"(ii) 125 percent of the average amount received in respect of such stock by the taxpayer during the 3 preceding taxable years (or, if shorter, the portion of the taxpayer's holding period before the taxable year).

For purposes of clause (ii), any excess distribution received during such 3-year period shall be taken into account only to the extent it was included in gross income under subsection (a)(1)(B).

"(B) NO EXCESS FOR FIRST YEAR.—The total excess distributions with respect to any stock shall be zero for the taxable year in which the taxpayer's holding period in such stock begins.

"(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(A) determinations under this subsection shall be made on a share-by-share basis, except that shares with the same holding period may be aggregated,

"(B) proper adjustments shall be made for stock splits and stock dividends,

"(C) if the taxpayer does not hold the stock during the entire taxable year, distributions received during such year shall be annualized,

"(D) if the taxpayer's holding period includes periods during which the stock was held by another person, distributions received by such other person shall be taken into account as if received by the taxpayer,

"(E) if the distributions are received in a foreign currency, determinations under this subsection shall be made in such currency and the amount of any excess distribution determined in such currency shall be translated into dollars,

"(F) proper adjustment shall be made for amounts not includible in gross income by reason of section 959(a) or for which a deduction is allowable under section 245(c), and

"(G) if a charitable deduction was allowable under section 642(c) to a trust for any distribution of its income, proper adjustments shall be made for the deduction so allowable to the extent allocable to distributions or gain in respect of stock in a passive foreign corporation.

For purposes of subparagraph (F), any amount not includible in gross income by reason of section 551(d) (as in effect on January 1, 1992) or 1293(c) (as so in effect) shall be treated as an amount not includible in gross income by reason of section 959(a).

"(c) DEFERRED TAX AMOUNT.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'deferred tax amount' means, with respect to any distribution or disposition to which subsection (a) applies, an amount equal to the sum of—

"(A) the aggregate increases in taxes described in paragraph (2), plus

"(B) the aggregate amount of interest (determined in the manner provided under paragraph (3)) on such increases in tax.

Any increase in the tax imposed by this chapter for the current year under subsection (a) to the extent attributable to the amount referred to in subparagraph (B) shall be treated as interest paid under section 6601 on the due date for the current year.

"(2) AGGREGATE INCREASES IN TAXES.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the aggregate increases in taxes shall be determined by multiplying each amount allocated under subsection (a)(1)(A) to any taxable year (other than the current year) by the highest rate of tax in effect for such taxable year under section 1 or 11, whichever applies.

"(3) COMPUTATION OF INTEREST.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount of interest referred to in paragraph (1)(B) on any increase determined under paragraph (2) for any taxable year shall be determined for the period—

"(i) beginning on the due date for such taxable year, and

"(ii) ending on the due date for the taxable year with or within which the distribution or disposition occurs, by using the rates and method applicable under section 6621 for underpayments of tax for such period.

"(B) DUE DATE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'due date' means the date prescribed by law (determined without regard to extensions) for filing the return of the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE.—For purposes of determining the amount of interest referred to in paragraph (1)(B), the amount of any increase in tax determined under paragraph (2) shall be determined without regard to any reduction under section 1294(d) for a tax described in paragraph (2)(A)(ii) thereof.

"SEC. 1294. DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.

"(a) STOCK TO WHICH SECTION 1293 APPLIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, section 1293 shall apply to any stock in a passive foreign corporation unless—

"(A) such stock is marketable stock as of the time of the distribution or disposition involved, or

"(B)(i) with respect to each of such corporation's taxable years which begin after December 31, 1992, and include any portion of the taxpayer's holding period in such stock—

"(I) such corporation was U.S. controlled (within the meaning of section 1292(a)(2)), or

"(II) such corporation was treated as a controlled foreign corporation under section 1292(b) with respect to the taxpayer, and

"(ii) with respect to each of such corporation's taxable years which begin after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1993, and include any portion of the taxpayer's holding period in such stock, such corporation was treated as a qualified electing fund under this part (as in effect on January 1, 1992) with respect to the taxpayer.

"(2) TREATMENT WHERE STOCK BECOMES MARKETABLE.—If any stock in a passive foreign corporation becomes marketable stock after the beginning of the taxpayer's holding period in such stock, section 1293 shall apply to—

"(A) any distributions with respect to, or disposition of, such stock in the taxable year of the taxpayer in which it becomes so marketable, and

"(B) any amount which, but for section 1293, would have been included in gross income under section 1291(a) with respect to such stock for such taxable year in the same manner as if such amount were gain on the disposition of such stock.

"(3) ELECTION TO RECOGNIZE GAIN WHERE COMPANY BECOMES SUBJECT TO CURRENT INCLUSIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) a passive foreign corporation first meets the requirements of clause (i) of paragraph (1)(B) with respect to the taxpayer for a taxable year of such taxpayer which begins after December 31, 1992,

"(ii) the taxpayer holds stock in such company on the first day of such taxable year, and

"(iii) the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary the fair market value of such stock on such first day, the taxpayer may elect to recognize gain as if he sold such stock on such first day for such fair market value.

"(B) ADDITIONAL ELECTION FOR SHAREHOLDER OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(I) a passive foreign corporation first meets the requirements of subclause (I) of paragraph (1)(B)(i) with respect to the taxpayer for a taxable year of such taxpayer which begins after December 31, 1992,

"(II) the taxpayer holds stock in such corporation on the first day of such taxable year, and

"(III) such corporation is a controlled foreign corporation without regard to this part, the taxpayer may elect to be treated as receiving a dividend on such first day in an amount equal to the portion of the post-1986 earnings and profits of such corporation attributable (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to the stock in such corporation held by the taxpayer on such first day. The amount treated as a dividend under the preceding sentence shall be treated as an excess distribution and shall be allocated under section 1293(a)(1)(A) only two days during periods taken into account in determining the post-1986 earnings and profits so attributable.

"(ii) POST-1986 EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'post-1986 earnings and profits' means earnings and profits which were accumulated in taxable years of the corporation beginning after December 31, 1986, and during the period or periods the stock was held by the taxpayer while the corporation was a passive foreign corporation.

"(iii) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 959(e).—For purposes of section 959(e), any amount treated as a dividend under this subparagraph shall be treated as included in gross income under section 1248(a).

"(C) ADJUSTMENTS.—In the case of any stock to which subparagraph (A) or (B) applies—

"(i) the adjusted basis of such stock shall be increased by the gain recognized under subparagraph (A) or the amount treated as a dividend under subparagraph (B), as the case may be, and

"(ii) the taxpayer's holding period in such stock shall be treated as beginning on the first day referred to in such subparagraph.

"(b) RULES RELATING TO STOCK ACQUIRED FROM A DECEDENT.—

"(1) BASIS.—In the case of stock of a passive foreign corporation acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance (or by the decedent's estate), notwithstanding section 1014, the basis of such stock in the hands of the person so acquiring it shall be the adjusted basis of such stock in the hands of the decedent immediately before his death (or, if lesser, the basis which would have been determined under section 1014 without regard to this paragraph).

"(2) DEDUCTION FOR ESTATE TAX.—If stock in a passive foreign corporation is acquired from a decedent, the taxpayer shall, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, be allowed (for the taxable year of the sale or exchange) a deduction from gross income equal to that portion of the decedent's estate tax deemed paid which is attributable to the excess of (A) the value at which such stock was taken into account for purposes of determining the value of the decedent's gross estate, over (B) the basis determined under paragraph (1).

"(3) EXCEPTIONS.—This subsection shall not apply to any stock in a passive foreign corporation if—

"(A) section 1293 would not have applied to a disposition of such stock by the decedent immediately before his death, or

"(B) the decedent was a nonresident alien at all times during his holding period in such stock.

"(c) RECOGNITION OF GAIN.—Except as otherwise provided in regulations, in the case of any transfer of stock in a passive foreign company to which section 1293 applies, where (but for this subsection) there is not full recognition of gain, the excess (if any) of—

"(1) the fair market value of such stock, over

"(2) its adjusted basis, shall be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of such stock and shall be recognized notwithstanding any provision of law. Proper adjustment shall be made to the basis of property for gain recognized under the preceding sentence.

"(d) COORDINATION WITH FOREIGN TAX CREDIT RULES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If there are creditable foreign taxes with respect to any distribution in respect of stock in a passive foreign corporation—

"(A) the amount of such distribution shall be determined for purposes of section 1293 with regard to section 78,

"(B) the excess distribution taxes shall be allocated ratably to each day in the taxpayer's holding period for the stock, and

"(C) to the extent—

"(i) that such excess distribution taxes are allocated to a taxable year referred to in section 1293(a)(1)(B), such taxes shall be taken into account under section 901 for the current year, and

"(ii) that such excess distribution taxes are allocated to any other taxable year, such taxes shall reduce (subject to the principles of section 904 and not below zero) the increase in tax determined under section 1293(c)(2) for such taxable year by reason of such distribution (but such taxes shall not be taken into account under section 901).

"(2) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) CREDITABLE FOREIGN TAXES.—The term 'creditable foreign taxes' means, with respect to any distribution—

"(i) any foreign taxes deemed paid under section 902 with respect to such distribution, and

"(ii) any withholding tax imposed with respect to such distribution, but only if the taxpayer chooses the benefits of section 901 and such taxes are creditable under section 901 (determined without regard to paragraph (1)(C)(ii)).

"(B) EXCESS DISTRIBUTION TAXES.—The term 'excess distribution taxes' means, with respect to any distribution, the portion of the creditable foreign taxes with respect to such distribution which is attributable (on a pro rata basis) to the portion of such distribution which is an excess distribution.

"(C) SECTION 1248 GAIN.—The rules of this subsection also shall apply in the case of any gain which but for this section would be includible in gross income as a dividend under section 1248.

"(e) ATTRIBUTION OF OWNERSHIP.—For purposes of this subpart—

"(1) ATTRIBUTION TO UNITED STATES PERSONS.—This subsection—

"(A) shall apply to the extent that the effect is to treat stock of a passive foreign corporation as owned by a United States person, and

"(B) except as provided in paragraph (3) or in regulations, shall not apply to treat stock owned (or treated as owned under this subsection) by a United States person as owned by any other person.

"(2) CORPORATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If 50 percent or more in value of the stock of a corporation (other than an S corporation) is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for any person, such person shall be considered as owning the stock owned directly or indirectly by or for such corporation in that proportion which the value of the stock which such person so owns bears to the value of all stock in the corporation.

"(B) 50-PERCENT LIMITATION NOT TO APPLY IN CERTAIN CASES.—For purposes of determining whether a shareholder of a passive foreign corporation (or whether a United States shareholder of a controlled foreign corporation which is not a passive foreign corporation) is treated as owning stock owned directly or indirectly by or for such corporation, subparagraph (A) shall be applied without regard to the 50-percent limitation contained therein.

"(C) FAMILY AND PARTNER ATTRIBUTION FOR 50-PERCENT LIMITATION.—For purposes of determining whether the 50-percent limitation of subparagraph (A) is met, the constructive ownership rules of section 544(a)(2) shall apply in addition to the other rules of this subsection.

"(3) PARTNERSHIPS, ETC.—Except as provided in regulations, stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its partners, shareholders, or beneficiaries (as the case may be).

"(4) OPTIONS.—To the extent provided in regulations, if any person has an option to acquire stock, such stock shall be considered as owned by such person. For purposes of this paragraph, an option to acquire such an option, and each one of a series of such options, shall be considered as an option to acquire such stock.

"(5) SUCCESSIVE APPLICATION.—Stock considered to be owned by a person by reason of the application of paragraph (2), (3), or (4) shall, for purposes of applying such paragraphs, be considered as actually owned by such person.

"(f) OTHER SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subpart—

"(1) TIME FOR DETERMINATION.—Stock held by a taxpayer shall be treated as stock in a passive foreign corporation if, at any time during the holding period of the taxpayer with respect to such stock, such corporation (or any predecessor) was a passive foreign corporation. The preceding sentence shall not apply if the taxpayer elects to recognize gain (as of the last day of the last taxable year for which the company was a passive foreign corporation) under rules similar to the rules of subsection (a)(3)(A).

"(2) APPLICATION OF SUBPART WHERE STOCK HELD BY OTHER ENTITY.—Under regulations—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which a United States person is treated as owning stock in a passive foreign corporation by reason of subsection (e)—

"(i) any transaction which results in the United States person being treated as no longer owning such stock,

"(ii) any disposition of such stock by the person owning such stock, and

"(iii) any distribution of property in respect of such stock to the person holding such stock, shall be treated as a disposition by, or distribution to, the United States person with respect to the stock in the passive foreign corporation.

"(B) AMOUNT TREATED IN SAME MANNER AS PREVIOUSLY TAXED INCOME.—Rules similar to the rules of section 959(b) shall apply to any amount described in subparagraph (A) in respect of stock which the taxpayer is treated as owning under subsection (e).

"(C) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 951.—If, but for this subparagraph, an amount would be taken into account under section 1293 by reason of subparagraph (A) and such amount would also be included in the gross income of the taxpayer under section 951, such amount shall only be taken into account under section 1293.

"(3) DISPOSITIONS.—Except as provided in regulations, if a taxpayer uses any stock in a passive foreign corporation as security for a loan, the taxpayer shall be treated as having disposed of such stock.

"SUBPART C—GENERAL PROVISIONS

"Sec. 1296. Passive foreign corporation.

"Sec. 1297. Special rules.

"SEC. 1296. PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this part, except as otherwise provided in this subpart, the term 'passive foreign corporation' means any foreign corporation if—

"(1) 60 percent or more of the gross income of such corporation for the taxable year is passive income,

"(2) the average percentage of assets (by value) held by such corporation during the taxable year which produce passive income or which are held for the production of passive income is at least 50 percent, or

"(3) such corporation is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (15 U.S.C. 80a-1 to 80b-2), either as a management company or as a unit investment trust.

A foreign corporation may elect to have the determination under paragraph (2) based on the adjusted bases of its assets in lieu of their value. Such an election, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary.

"(b) Passive Income.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the term 'passive income' means any income which is of a kind which would be foreign personal holding company income as defined in section 954(c) without regard to paragraph (3) thereof.

"(2) Exceptions.—Except as provided in regulations, the term 'passive income' does not include any income—

"(A) derived in the active conduct of a banking business by an institution licensed to do business as a bank in the United States (or, to the extent provided in regulations, by any other corporation),

"(B) derived in the active conduct of an insurance business by a corporation which is predominantly engaged in an insurance business and which would be subject to tax under subchapter L if it were a domestic corporation, or

"(C) which is interest, a dividend, or a rent or royalty, which is received or accrued from a related person (within the meaning of section 954(d)(3)) to the extent such amount is properly allocable (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to income of such related person which is not passive income.

For purposes of subparagraph (C), the term 'related person' has the meaning given such term by section 954(d)(3) determined by substituting 'foreign corporation' for 'controlled foreign corporation' each place it appears in section 954(d)(3).

"(3) Treatment of income from certain assets.—To the extent that any asset is properly treated as not held for the production of passive income for purposes of subsection (a)(2), all income from such asset shall be treated as income which is not passive income.

"(4) Treatment of certain matched repurchase transactions.—

"(A) In general.—In the case of any foreign corporation engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business as a dealer in securities—

"(i) an amount properly treated as interest income by reason of a qualified matched transaction shall be netted with the amount properly treated as interest expense by reason of such transaction, and any net income resulting from such netting shall be treated as an item of gross interest income, and

"(ii) the offsetting positions which are part of such transaction shall be netted and the net position shall be treated as a single asset.

"(B) Qualified matched transaction.—For purposes of subparagraph (A) the term 'qualified matched transaction' means a sale and repurchase agreement with respect to a security and an offsetting reverse agreement with respect to the same security, entered into by the foreign corporation in the active conduct of its trade or business of being a dealer in securities, and properly treated as offsetting agreements in a matched book.

"(C) Security.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'security' has the meaning given such term by section 1236(c).

"(c) Look-Through in Case of 25-Percent Owned Corporation.—If a foreign corporation owns (directly or indirectly) at least 25 percent (by value) of the stock of another corporation, for purposes of determining whether such foreign corporation is a passive foreign corporation, such foreign corporation shall be treated as if it—

"(1) held its proportionate share of the assets of such other corporation, and

"(2) received directly its proportionate share of the income of such other corporation.

"SEC. 1297. SPECIAL RULES.

"(a) United States Person.—For purposes of this part, the term 'United States person' has the meaning given to such term by section 7701(a)(30).

"(b) Controlled Foreign Corporation.—For purposes of this part, the term 'controlled foreign corporation' has the meaning given such term by section 957(a).

"(c) Marketable Stock.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) In general.—The term 'marketable stock' means—

"(A) any stock which is regularly traded on—

"(i) a national securities exchange which is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission or the national market system established pursuant to section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934, or

"(ii) any exchange or other market which the Secretary determines has rules adequate to carry out the purposes of this part, and

"(B) to the extent provided in regulations, stock in any foreign corporation which is comparable to a regulated investment company and which offers for sale or has outstanding any stock of which it is the issuer and which is redeemable at its net asset value.

"(2) Special rule for regulated investment companies.—In the case of any regulated investment company which is offering for sale or has outstanding any stock of which it is the issuer and which is redeemable at its net asset value, all stock in a passive foreign corporation which it owns (or is treated under section 1291(g) as owning) shall be treated as marketable stock for purposes of this part. Except as provided in regulations, a similar rule shall apply in the case of any other regulated investment company.

"(d) Other Special Rules.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) Certain corporations not treated as passive.—A corporation shall not be treated as a passive foreign corporation for the 1st taxable year such corporation has gross income (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as the 'start-up year') if—

"(A) no predecessor of such corporation was a passive foreign corporation,

"(B) it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such corporation will not be a passive foreign corporation for either of the 1st 2 taxable years following the start-up year, and

"(C) such corporation is not a passive foreign corporation for either of the 1st 2 taxable years following the start-up year.

"(2) Certain corporations changing businesses.—A corporation shall not be treated as a passive foreign corporation for any taxable year if—

"(A) neither such corporation (nor any predecessor) was a passive foreign corporation for any prior taxable year,

"(B) it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

"(i) substantially all of the passive income of the corporation for the taxable year is attributable to proceeds from the disposition of 1 or more active trades or businesses, and

"(ii) such corporation will not be a passive foreign corporation for either of the 1st 2 taxable years following the taxable year, and

"(C) such corporation is not a passive foreign corporation for either of such 2 taxable years.

For purposes of section 1296(c), any passive income referred to in subparagraph (B)(i) shall be treated as income which is not passive income and any assets which produce income so described shall be treated as assets producing income other than passive income.

"(3) Treatment of certain foreign corporations owning stock in 25-percent owned domestic corporation.—

"(A) In general.—If a foreign corporation owns at least 25 percent (by value) of the stock of a domestic corporation, for purposes of determining whether such foreign corporation is a passive foreign corporation, any qualified stock held by such domestic corporation shall be treated as an asset which does not produce passive income (and is not held for the production of passive income) and any amount included in gross income with respect to such stock shall not be treated as passive income.

"(B) Qualified stock.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified stock' means any stock in a C corporation which is a domestic corporation and which is not a regulated investment company or real estate investment trust.

"(4) Treatment of corporation which was a PFIC.—A corporation shall be treated as a passive foreign corporation for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1993, if and only if such corporation was a passive foreign investment company under this part as in effect for such taxable year.

"(5) Separate interests treated as separate corporations.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, where necessary to carry out the purposes of this part, separate classes of stock (or other interests) in a corporation shall be treated as interests in separate corporations.

"(e) Treatment of Certain Leased Property.—For purposes of section 1296(a)(2)—

"(1) In general.—Any tangible personal property with respect to which the foreign corporation is the lessee under a lease with a term of at least 12 months shall be treated as an asset actually held by such corporation.

"(2) Determination of value.—

"(A) In general.—The value of any asset to which paragraph (1) applies shall be the lesser of—

"(i) the fair market value of such property, or

"(ii) the unamortized portion (as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) of the present value of the payments under the lease for the use of such property.

"(B) Present value.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the present value of payments described in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be determined in the manner provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(i) as of the beginning of the lease term, and

"(ii) except as provided in such regulations, by using a discount rate equal to the applicable Federal rate determined under section 1274(d)—

"(I) by substituting the lease term for the term of the debt instrument, and

"(II) without regard to paragraph (2) or (3) thereof.

"(3) Exceptions.—This subsection shall not apply in any case where—

"(A) the lessor is a related person (as defined in the last sentence of section 1296(b)(2)) with respect to the foreign corporation, or

"(B) a principal purpose of leasing the property was to avoid the provisions of this part.

"(f) Election by Certain Passive Foreign Corporations To Be Treated as a Domestic Corporation.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this title, if—

"(A) a passive foreign corporation would qualify as a regulated investment company under part I of subchapter M if such passive foreign corporation were a domestic corporation,

"(B) such passive foreign corporation meets such requirements as the Secretary shall prescribe to ensure that the taxes imposed by this title on such passive foreign corporation are paid, and

"(C) such passive foreign corporation makes an election to have this paragraph apply and waives all benefits which are granted by the United States under any treaty and to which such corporation would otherwise be entitled by reason of being a resident of another country, such corporation shall be treated as a domestic corporation.

"(2) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (2), (3), (4)(A), and (5) of section 953(d) shall apply with respect to any corporation making an election under paragraph (1).

"(g) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN TAXPAYERS.—

"(1) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—In the case of any organization exempt from tax under section 501—

"(A) this part shall apply to any stock in a passive foreign corporation owned (or treated as owned under section 1294(e)) by such organization only to the extent that a dividend on such stock would be taken into account in determining the unrelated business taxable income of such organization, and

"(B) to the extent that this part applies to any such stock, this part shall be applied in the same manner as if such organization were not exempt from tax under section 501(a).

"(2) TREATMENT OF STOCK HELD BY POOLED INCOME FUND.—If stock in a passive foreign corporation is owned (or treated as owned under section 1294(e)) by a pooled income fund (as defined in section 642(c)(5)) and no portion of any gain from a disposition of such stock may be allocated to income under the terms of the governing instrument of such fund—

"(A) section 1293 shall not apply to any gain on a disposition of such stock by such fund if (without regard to section 1293) a deduction would be allowable with respect to such gain under section 642(c)(3),

"(B) subpart A shall not apply with respect to such stock, and

"(C) in determining whether section 1293 applies to any distribution in respect of such stock, such stock shall be treated as failing to qualify for the exceptions under section 1294(a)(1).

"(h) INFORMATION FROM SHAREHOLDERS.—Every United States person who owns stock in any passive foreign corporation shall furnish with respect to such corporation such information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(i) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this part, including regulations—

"(1) providing that gross income shall be determined without regard to section 1293 for such purposes as may be specified in such regulations, and

"(2) to prevent avoidance of the provisions of this part through changes in citizenship or residence status."

(b) INSTALLMENT SALES TREATMENT NOT AVAILABLE.—Paragraph (2) of section 453(k) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by inserting "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) stock in a passive foreign corporation (as defined in section 1296) if section 1293 applies to such sale,".

(c) TREATMENT OF MARK-TO-MARKET GAIN UNDER SECTION 4982.—

(1) Subsection (e) of section 4982 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) TREATMENT OF GAIN RECOGNIZED UNDER SECTION 1291.—For purposes of determining a regulated investment company's ordinary income—

"(A) notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), section 1291 shall be applied as if such company's taxable year ended on October 31, and

"(B) any ordinary gain or loss from an actual disposition of stock in a passive foreign corporation during the portion of the calendar year after October 31 shall be taken into account in determining such company's ordinary income for the following calendar year.

In the case of a company making an election under paragraph (4), the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting the last day of the company's taxable year for October 31."

(2) Subsection (b) of section 852 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(10) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN LOSSES ON STOCK IN PASSIVE FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—To the extent provided in regulations, the taxable income of a regulated investment company (other than a company to which an election under section 4982(e)(4) applies) shall be computed without regard to any net reduction in the value of any stock of a passive foreign corporation to which section 1291 applies occurring after October 31 of the taxable year, and any such reduction shall be treated as occurring on the first day of the following taxable year."

(3) Subsection (c) of section 852 is amended by inserting after "October 31 of such year" the following: ", without regard to any net reduction in the value of any stock of a passive foreign corporation to which section 1291 applies occurring after October 31 of such year,".

(d) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PREVIOUSLY TAXED AMOUNTS.—Subsection (e) of section 959 is amended—

(1) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A similar rule shall apply in the case of amounts included in gross income under section 1293 (as in effect on January 1, 1992).", and

(2) by striking "AMOUNTS PREVIOUSLY TAXED UNDER SECTION 1248" in the subsection heading and inserting "CERTAIN PREVIOUSLY TAXED AMOUNTS".

PART II—TREATMENT OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

SEC. 4411. GAIN ON CERTAIN STOCK SALES BY CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS TREATED AS DIVIDENDS.

(a) General Rule.—Section 964 (relating to miscellaneous provisions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) Gain on Certain Stock Sales by Controlled Foreign Corporations Treated as Dividends.—

"(1) In general.—If a controlled foreign corporation sells or exchanges stock in any other foreign corporation, gain recognized on such sale or exchange shall be included in the gross income of such controlled foreign corporation as a dividend to the same extent that it would have been so included under section 1248(a) if such controlled foreign corporation were a United States person. For purposes of determining the amount which would have been so includible, the determination of whether such other foreign corporation was a controlled foreign corporation shall be made without regard to the preceding sentence.

"(2) Same country exception not applicable.—Clause (i) of section 954(c)(3)(A) shall not apply to any amount treated as a dividend by reason of paragraph (1).

"(3) Clarification of deemed sales.—For purposes of this subsection, a controlled foreign corporation shall be treated as having sold or exchanged any stock if, under any provision of this subtitle, such controlled foreign corporation is treated as having gain from the sale or exchange of such stock.".

(b) Amendment of Section 904(d).—Clause (i) of section 904(d)(2)(E) is amended by striking "and except as provided in regulations, the taxpayer was a United States shareholder in such corporation".

(c) Effective Dates.—

(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to gain recognized on transactions occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to distributions after the date of the enactment of this Act

SEC. 4412. AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE SIMPLIFIED METHOD FOR APPLYING SECTION 960(b)(2).

(a) General Rule.—Paragraph (2) of section 960(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The Secretary may prescribe regulations requiring the use of simplified methods set forth in such regulations for determining the amount of the increase referred to in the preceding sentence."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4413. MISCELLANEOUS MODIFICATIONS TO SUBPART F.

(a) Section 1248 Gain Taken Into Account in Determining Pro Rata Share.—

(1) In general.—Paragraph (2) of section 951(a) (defining pro rata share of subpart F income) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of subparagraph (B), any gain included in the gross income of any person as a dividend under section 1248 shall be treated as a distribution received by such person with respect to the stock involved."

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to dispositions after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Basis Adjustments In Stock Held by Foreign Corporation.—

(1) In general.—Section 961 (relating to adjustments to basis of stock in controlled foreign corporations and of other property) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Basis Adjustments in Stock Held by Foreign Corporation.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if a United States shareholder is treated under section 958(a)(2) as owning any stock in a controlled foreign corporation which is actually owned by another controlled foreign corporation, adjustments similar to the adjustments provided by subsections (a) and (b) shall be made to the basis of such stock in the hands of such other controlled foreign corporation, but only for the purposes of determining the amount included under section 951 in the gross income of such United States shareholder (or any other United States shareholder who acquires from any person any portion of the interest of such United States shareholder by reason of which such shareholder was treated as owning such stock, but only to the extent of such portion, and subject to such proof of identity of such interest as the Secretary may prescribe by regulations)."

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply for purposes of determining inclusions for taxable years of United States shareholders beginning after December 31, 1992.

(c) Determination of Previously Taxed Income In Section 304 Distributions, Etc.—

(1) In general.—Section 959 (relating to exclusion from gross income of previously taxed earnings and profits) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) Adjustments for Certain Transactions.—If by reason of—

"(1) a transaction to which section 304 applies,

"(2) the structure of a United States shareholder's holdings in controlled foreign corporations, or

"(3) other circumstances, there would be a multiple inclusion of any item in income (or an inclusion or exclusion without an appropriate basis adjustment) by reason of this subpart, the Secretary may prescribe regulations providing such modifications in the application of this subpart as may be necessary to eliminate such multiple inclusion or provide such basis adjustment, as the case may be."

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) Clarification of Treatment of Branch Tax Exemptions or Reductions.—

(1) In general.—Subsection (b) of section 952 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of this subsection, any exemption (or reduction) with respect to the tax imposed by section 884 shall not be taken into account."

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

PART III—OTHER PROVISIONS

SEC. 4421. EXCHANGE RATE USED IN TRANSLATING FOREIGN TAXES.

(a) Accrued Taxes Translated by Using Average Rate for Year to Which Taxes Relate.—

(1) In general.—Subsection (a) of section 986 (relating to translation of foreign taxes) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Foreign Income Taxes.—

"(1) Translation of accrued taxes.—

"(A) In general.—For purposes of determining the amount of the foreign tax credit, in the case of a taxpayer who takes foreign income taxes into account when accrued, the amount of any foreign income taxes (and any adjustment thereto) shall be translated into dollars by using the average exchange rate for the taxable year to which such taxes relate.

"(B) Exception for taxes not paid within following 2 years.—

"(i) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any foreign income taxes paid after the date 2 years after the close of the taxable year to which such taxes relate.

"(ii) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to taxes paid before the beginning of the taxable year to which such taxes relate.

"(C) Exception for inflationary currencies.—To the extent provided in regulations, subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any foreign income taxes the liability for which is denominated in any currency determined to be an inflationary currency under such regulations.

"(D) Cross reference.—

"For adjustments where tax is not paid within 2 years, see section 905(c).

"(2) Translation of taxes to which paragraph (1) does not apply.—For purposes of determining the amount of the foreign tax credit, in the case of any foreign income taxes to which subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) does not apply—

"(A) such taxes shall be translated into dollars using the exchange rates as of the time such taxes were paid to the foreign country or possession of the United States, and

"(B) any adjustment to the amount of such taxes shall be translated into dollars using—

"(i) except as provided in clause (ii), the exchange rate as of the time when such adjustment is paid to the foreign country or possession, or

"(ii) in the case of any refund or credit of foreign income taxes, using the exchange rate as of the time of the original payment of such foreign income taxes.

"(3) Foreign income taxes.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'foreign income taxes' means any income, war profits, or excess profits taxes paid or accrued to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States."

(2) ADJUSTMENT WHEN NOT PAID WITHIN 2 YEARS AFTER YEAR TO WHICH TAXES RELATE.—Subsection (c) of section 905 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) ADJUSTMENTS TO ACCRUED TAXES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(A) accrued taxes when paid differ from the amounts claimed as credits by the taxpayer,

"(B) accrued taxes are not paid before the date 2 years after the close of the taxable year to which such taxes relate, or

"(C) any tax paid is refunded in whole or in part, the taxpayer shall notify the Secretary, who shall redetermine the amount of the tax for the year or years affected.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR TAXES NOT PAID WITHIN 2 YEARS.—In making the redetermination under paragraph (1), no credit shall be allowed for accrued taxes not paid before the date referred to in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1). Any such taxes if subsequently paid shall be taken into account for the taxable year in which paid and no redetermination under this section shall be made on account of such payment.

"(3) ADJUSTMENTS.—The amount of tax due on any redetermination under paragraph (1) (if any) shall be paid by the taxpayer on notice and demand by the Secretary, and the amount of tax overpaid (if any) shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with subchapter B of chapter 66 (section 6511 et seq.).

"(4) BOND REQUIREMENTS.—In the case of any tax accrued but not paid, the Secretary, as a condition precedent to the allowance of the credit provided in this subpart, may require the taxpayer to give a bond, with sureties satisfactory to and approved by the Secretary, in such sum as the Secretary may require, conditioned on the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of tax found due on any such redetermination. Any such bond shall contain such further conditions as the Secretary may require.

"(5) OTHER SPECIAL RULES.—In any redetermination under paragraph (1) by the Secretary of the amount of tax due from the taxpayer for the year or years affected by a refund, the amount of the taxes refunded for which credit has been allowed under this section shall be reduced by the amount of any tax described in section 901 imposed by the foreign country or possession of the United States with respect to such refund; but no credit under this subpart, or deduction under section 164, shall be allowed for any taxable year with respect to any such tax imposed on the refund. No interest shall be assessed or collected on any amount of tax due on any redetermination by the Secretary, resulting from a refund to the taxpayer, for any period before the receipt of such refund, except to the extent interest was paid by the foreign country or possession of the United States on such refund for such period."

(b) AUTHORITY TO USE AVERAGE RATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 986 (relating to foreign taxes) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) AUTHORITY TO PERMIT USE OF AVERAGE RATES.—To the extent prescribed in regulations, the average exchange rate for the period (specified in such regulations) during which the taxes or adjustment is paid may be used instead of the exchange rate as of the time of such payment."

(2) DETERMINATION OF AVERAGE RATES.—Subsection (c) of section 989 is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) setting forth procedures for determining the average exchange rate for any period."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subsection (b) of section 989 is amended by striking "weighted" each place it appears.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by subsections (a)(1) and (b) shall apply to taxes paid or accrued in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

(2) SUBSECTION (a)(2).—The amendment made by subsection (a)(2) shall apply to taxes which relate to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4422. ELECTION TO USE SIMPLIFIED SECTION 904 LIMITATION FOR ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (a) of section 59 (relating to alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) ELECTION TO USE SIMPLIFIED SECTION 904 LIMITATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In determining the alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit for any taxable year to which an election under this paragraph applies—

"(i) subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall not apply, and

"(ii) the limitation of section 904 shall be based on the proportion which—

"(I) the taxpayer's taxable income (as determined for purposes of the regular tax) from sources without the United States (but not in excess of the taxpayer's entire alternative minimum taxable income), bears to

"(II) the taxpayer's entire alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year.

"(B) ELECTION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An election under this paragraph may be made only for the taxpayer's first taxable year which begins after December 31, 1992, and for which the taxpayer claims an alternative minimum tax foreign tax credit.

"(ii) ELECTION REVOCABLE ONLY WITH CONSENT.—An election under this paragraph, once made, shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4423. MODIFICATION OF SECTION 1491.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—So much of chapter 5 (relating to tax on transfers to avoid income tax) as precedes section 1492 is amended to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 5—TREATMENT OF TRANSFERS TO AVOID INCOME TAX

"Sec. 1491. Recognition of gain.

"Sec. 1492. Exceptions.

"SEC. 1491. RECOGNITION OF GAIN.

"In the case of any transfer of property by a United States person to a foreign corporation as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, to a foreign estate or trust, or to a foreign partnership, for purposes of this subtitle, such transfer shall be treated as a sale or exchange for an amount equal to the fair market value of the property transferred, and the transferor shall recognize as gain the excess of—

"(1) the fair market value of the property so transferred, over

"(2) the adjusted basis (for purposes of determining gain) of such property in the hands of the transferor."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 1057 is hereby repealed.

(2) Section 1492 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1492. EXCEPTIONS.

"The provisions of section 1491 shall not apply—

"(1) If the transferee is an organization exempt from income tax under part I of subchapter F of chapter 1 (other than an organization described in section 401(a)),

"(2) To a transfer described in section 367, or

"(3) To any other transfer, to the extent provided in regulations in accordance with principles similar to the principles of section 367 or otherwise consistent with the purpose of section 1491."

(3) Section 1494 is hereby repealed.

(4) The table of sections for part IV of subchapter O of chapter 1 is amended by striking the item relating to section 1057.

(5) The table of chapters for subtitle A is amended by striking "Tax on" in the item relating to chapter 5 and inserting "Treatment of".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transfers after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4424. MODIFICATION OF SECTION 367(b).

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (1) of section 367(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any transaction described in section 332, 351, 354, 355, 356, or 361 in which the status of a foreign corporation as a corporation is a general condition for nonrecognition by 1 or more of the parties to the transaction, income shall be required to be recognized to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary which are necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of Federal income taxes. This subsection shall not apply to a transaction in which the foreign corporation is not treated as a corporation under subsection (a)(1)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to transfers after December 31, 1993.

Subtitle E—Other Income Tax Provisions

PART I—PROVISIONS RELATING TO SUBCHAPTER S CORPORATIONS

SEC. 4501. DETERMINATION OF WHETHER CORPORATION HAS 1 CLASS OF STOCK.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (4) of section 1361(c) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) DETERMINATION OF WHETHER CORPORATION HAS 1 CLASS OF STOCK.—For purposes of subsection (b)(1)(D), a corporation shall be treated as having 1 class of stock if all outstanding shares of stock of the corporation confer identical rights to distributions and liquidation proceeds. The preceding sentence shall apply whether or not there are differences in voting rights among such shares."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

SEC. 4502. AUTHORITY TO VALIDATE CERTAIN INVALID ELECTIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (f) of section 1362 (relating to inadvertent terminations) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) INADVERTENT INVALID ELECTIONS OR TERMINATIONS.—If—

"(1) an election under subsection (a) by any corporation—

"(A) was not effective for the taxable year for which made (determined without regard to subsection (b)(2)) by reason of a failure to meet the requirements of section 1361(b) or to obtain shareholder consents, or

"(B) was terminated under paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (d),

"(2) the Secretary determines that the circumstances resulting in such ineffectiveness or termination were inadvertent,

"(3) no later than a reasonable period of time after discovery of the circumstances resulting in such ineffectiveness or termination, steps were taken—

"(A) so that the corporation is a small business corporation, or

"(B) to acquire the required shareholder consents, and

"(4) the corporation, and each person who was a shareholder in the corporation at any time during the period specified pursuant to this subsection, agrees to make such adjustments (consistent with the treatment of the corporation as an S corporation) as may be required by the Secretary with respect to such period, then, notwithstanding the circumstances resulting in such ineffectiveness or termination, such corporation shall be treated as an S corporation during the period specified by the Secretary."

(b) LATE ELECTIONS.—Subsection (b) of section 1362 is amended by adding at the end thereof of the following new paragraph:

"(5) AUTHORITY TO TREAT LATE ELECTIONS AS TIMELY.—If—

"(A) an election under subsection (a) is made for any taxable year (determined without regard to paragraph (3)) after the date prescribed by this subsection for making such election for such taxable year, and

"(B) the Secretary determines that there was reasonable cause for the failure to timely make such election, the Secretary may treat such election as timely made for such taxable year (and paragraph (3) shall not apply)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to elections for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

SEC. 4503. TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS DURING LOSS YEARS.

(a) ADJUSTMENTS FOR DISTRIBUTIONS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT BEFORE LOSSES.—

(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 1366(d)(1) is amended by striking "paragraph (1)" and inserting "paragraphs (1) and (2)(A)".

(2) Subsection (d) of section 1368 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"In the case of any distribution made during any taxable year, the adjusted basis of the stock shall be determined with regard to the adjustments provided in paragraph (1) of section 1367(a) for the taxable year."

(b) ACCUMULATED ADJUSTMENTS ACCOUNT.—Paragraph (1) of section 1368(e) (relating to accumulated adjustments account) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) NET LOSS FOR YEAR DISREGARDED.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In applying this section to distributions made during any taxable year, the amount in the accumulated adjustments account as of the close of such taxable year shall be determined without regard to any net negative adjustment for such taxable year.

"(ii) NET NEGATIVE ADJUSTMENT.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'net negative adjustment' means, with respect to any taxable year, the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the reductions in the account for the taxable year (other than for distributions), over

"(II) the increases in such account for such taxable year."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subparagraph (A) of section 1368(e)(1) is amended—

(1) by striking "as provided in subparagraph (B)" and inserting "as otherwise provided in this paragraph", and

(2) by striking "section 1367(b)(2)(A)" and inserting "section 1367(a)(2)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4504. OTHER MODIFICATIONS.

(a) TREATMENT OF S CORPORATIONS UNDER SUBCHAPTER C.—Subsection (a) of section 1371 (relating to application of subchapter C rules) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) APPLICATION OF SUBCHAPTER C RULES.—Except as otherwise provided in this title, and except to the extent inconsistent with this subchapter, subchapter C shall apply to an S corporation and its shareholders."

(b) S CORPORATIONS PERMITTED TO HOLD SUBSIDIARIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2) of section 1361(b) (defining ineligible corporation) is amended by striking subparagraph (A) and by redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D), respectively.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Subsection (c) of section 1361 is amended by striking paragraph (6).

(B) Subsection (b) of section 1504 (defining includible corporation) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) An S corporation."

(c) ELIMINATION OF PRE-1983 EARNINGS AND PROFITS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

(A) a corporation was an electing small business corporation under subchapter S of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983, and

(B) such corporation is an S corporation under subchapter S of chapter 1 of such Code for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1991, the amount of such corporation's accumulated earnings and profits (as of the beginning of such first taxable year) shall be reduced by an amount equal to the portion (if any) of such accumulated earnings and profits which were accumulated in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983, for which such corporation was an electing small business corporation under such subchapter S.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Paragraph (3) of section 1362(d) is amended—

(i) by striking "subchapter C" in the paragraph heading and inserting "accumulated",

(ii) by striking "subchapter C" in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) and inserting "accumulated", and

(iii) by striking subparagraph (B) and redesignating the following subparagraphs accordingly.

(B)(i) Subsection (a) of section 1375 is amended by striking "subchapter C" in paragraph (1) and inserting "accumulated".

(ii) Paragraph (3) of section 1375(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) PASSIVE INVESTMENT INCOME, ETC.—The terms 'passive investment income' and 'gross receipts' have the same respective meanings as when used in paragraph (3) of section 1362(d)."

(iii) The section heading for section 1375 is amended by striking "SUBCHAPTER C" and inserting "ACCUMULATED".

(iv) The table of sections for part III of subchapter S of chapter 1 is amended by striking "subchapter C" in the item relating to section 1375 and inserting "accumulated".

(C) Clause (i) of section 1042(c)(4)(A) is amended by striking "section 1362(d)(3)(D)" and inserting "section 1362(d)(3)(C)".

(d) ADJUSTMENTS TO BASIS OF INHERITED S STOCK TO REFLECT CERTAIN ITEMS OF INCOME.—Subsection (b) of section 1367 (relating to adjustments to basis of stock of shareholders, etc.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) ADJUSTMENTS IN CASE OF INHERITED STOCK.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If any person acquires stock in an S corporation by reason of the death of a decedent or by bequest, devise, or inheritance, section 691 shall be applied with respect to any item of income of the S corporation in the same manner as if the decedent had held directly his pro rata share of such item.

"(B) ADJUSTMENTS TO BASIS.—The basis determined under section 1014 of any stock in an S corporation shall be reduced by the portion of the value of the stock which is attributable to items constituting income in respect of the decedent."

(e) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

(2) SUBSECTION (d).—The amendment made by subsection (d) shall apply in the case of decedents dying after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4505. CERTAIN TRUSTS PERMITTED TO BE SHAREHOLDERS IN S CORPORATIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subparagraph (A) of section 1361(c)(2) (relating to certain trusts permitted as shareholders) is amended by inserting after clause (iv) the following new clause:

"(v) An electing small business trust."

(b) CURRENT BENEFICIARIES TREATED AS SHAREHOLDERS.—Subparagraph (B) of section 1361(c)(2) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(v) In the case of a trust described in clause (v) of subparagraph (A), each potential current beneficiary of such trust shall be treated as a shareholder; except that, if for any period there is no potential current beneficiary of such trust, such trust shall be treated as the shareholder during such period."

(c) ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUST DEFINED.—Section 1361 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUST DEFINED.—

"(1) ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUST.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'electing small business trust' means any trust if "(i) such trust does not have as a beneficiary any person other than an individual or estate,

"(ii) no interest in such trust was acquired by purchase, and

"(iii) an election under this subsection applies to such trust.

"(B) CERTAIN TRUSTS NOT ELIGIBLE.—The term 'electing small business trust' shall not include—

"(i) any qualified subchapter S trust (as defined in subsection (d)(3)) if an election under subsection (d)(2) applies to any corporation the stock of which is held by such trust, and

"(ii) any employees' trust described in section 401(a) and exempt from tax under section 501(a).

"(C) PURCHASE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'purchase' means any acquisition if the basis of the property acquired is determined under section 1012.

"(2) POTENTIAL CURRENT BENEFICIARY.—For purposes of this section, the term 'potential current beneficiary' means, with respect to any period, any person who at any time during such period is entitled to, or at the discretion of any person may receive, a distribution from the principal or income of the trust. If a trust disposes of all of the stock which it holds in an S corporation, with respect to such corporation, the term 'potential current beneficiary' does not include any person who first met the requirements of the preceding sentence during the 60-day period ending on the date of such disposition.

"(3) ELECTION.—An election under this subsection shall be made by the trustee. Any such election shall apply to the taxable year of the trust for which made and all subsequent taxable years of such trust unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

"(4) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For special treatment of electing small business trusts, see section 641(d)."

(d) TAXATION OF ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUSTS.—Section 641 (relating to imposition of tax on trusts) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) SPECIAL RULES FOR TAXATION OF ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUSTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this chapter—

"(A) the portion of any electing small business trust which consists of stock in 1 or more S corporations shall be treated as a separate trust, and

"(B) the amount of the tax imposed by this chapter on such separate trust shall be determined with the modifications of paragraph (2).

"(2) MODIFICATIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the modifications of this paragraph are the following:

"(A) Except as provided in subsection (l)(h), the amount of the tax imposed by section 1(e) shall be determined by using the highest rate of tax set forth in section 1(e).

"(B) The exemption amount under section 55(d) shall be zero.

"(C) The only items of income, loss, deduction, or credit to be taken into account are the following:

"(i) The items required to be taken into account under section 1366.

"(ii) Any gain or loss from the disposition of stock in an S corporation.

"(iii) To the extent provided in regulations, State or local income taxes or administrative expenses to the extent allocable to items described in clauses (i) and (ii).

No deduction or credit shall be allowed for any amount not described in this paragraph, and no item described in this paragraph shall be apportioned to any beneficiary.

"(D) No amount shall be allowed under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 1211(b).

"(3) TREATMENT OF REMAINDER OF TRUST AND DISTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of determining—

"(A) the amount of the tax imposed by this chapter on the portion of any electing small business trust not treated as a separate trust under paragraph (1), and

"(B) the distributable net income of the entire trust, the items referred to in paragraph (2)(C) shall be excluded. Except as provided in the preceding sentence, this subsection shall not affect the taxation of any distribution from the trust.

"(4) TREATMENT OF UNUSED DEDUCTIONS WHERE TERMINATION OF SEPARATE TRUST.—If a portion of an electing small business trust ceases to be treated as a separate trust under paragraph (1), any carryover or excess deduction of the separate trust which is referred to in section 642(h) shall be taken into account by the entire trust.

"(5) ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUST.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'electing small business trust' has the meaning given such term by section 1361(e)(1)."

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

PART II—ACCOUNTING PROVISIONS

SEC. 4511. MODIFICATIONS TO LOOK-BACK METHOD FOR LONG-TERM CONTRACTS.

(a) LOOK-BACK METHOD NOT TO APPLY IN CERTAIN CASES.—Subsection (b) of section 460 (relating to percentage of completion method) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) ELECTION TO HAVE LOOK-BACK METHOD NOT APPLY IN DE MINIMIS CASES.—

"(A) AMOUNTS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT AFTER COMPLETION OF CONTRACT.—Paragraph (1)(B) shall not apply with respect to any taxable year (beginning after the taxable year in which the contract is completed) if—

"(i) the cumulative taxable income (or loss) under the contract as of the close of such taxable year, is within

"(ii) 10 percent of the cumulative look-back taxable income (or loss) under the contract as of the close of the most recent taxable year to which paragraph (1)(B) applied (or would have applied but for subparagraph (B)).

"(B) DE MINIMIS DISCREPANCIES.—Paragraph (1)(B) shall not apply in any case to which it would otherwise apply if—

"(i) the cumulative taxable income (or loss) under the contract as of the close of each prior contract year, is within

"(ii) 10 percent of the cumulative look-back income (or loss) under the contract as of the close of such prior contract year.

"(C) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) CONTRACT YEAR.—The term 'contract year' means any taxable year for which income is taken into account under the contract.

"(ii) LOOK-BACK INCOME OR LOSS.—The look-back income (or loss) is the amount which would be the taxable income (or loss) under the contract if the allocation method set forth in paragraph (2)(A) were used in determining taxable income.

"(iii) DISCOUNTING NOT APPLICABLE.—The amounts taken into account after the completion of the contract shall be determined without regard to any discounting under the 2nd sentence of paragraph (2).

"(D) CONTRACTS TO WHICH PARAGRAPH APPLIES.—This paragraph shall only apply if the taxpayer makes an election under this subparagraph. Unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary, such an election shall apply to all long-term contracts completed during the taxable year for which such election is made or during any subsequent taxable year."

(b) MODIFICATION OF INTEREST RATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (C) of section 460(b)(2) is amended by striking "the overpayment rate established by section 6621" and inserting "the adjusted overpayment rate (as defined in paragraph (7))".

(2) ADJUSTED OVERPAYMENT RATE.—Subsection (b) of section 460 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) ADJUSTED OVERPAYMENT RATE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The adjusted overpayment rate for any interest accrual period is the overpayment rate in effect under section 6621 for the calendar quarter in which such interest accrual period begins.

"(B) INTEREST ACCRUAL PERIOD.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'interest accrual period' means the period—

"(i) beginning on the day after the return due date for any taxable year of the taxpayer, and

"(ii) ending on the return due date for the following taxable year.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'return due date' means the date prescribed for filing the return of the tax imposed by this chapter (determined without regard to extensions)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contracts completed in taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4512. SIMPLIFIED METHOD FOR CAPITALIZING CERTAIN INDIRECT COSTS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (i) of section 263A (relating to regulations) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(3) regulations providing that allocations of costs of any administrative, service, or support function or department may be made on the basis of the base period percentage of the current costs of such function or department.

For purposes of paragraph (3), the term 'base period percentage' means, with respect to any function or department, the percentage of the costs of such function or department during a base period specified in regulations which were allocable to property to which this section applies."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4513. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN AMOUNTS RECEIVED BY OPERATORS OF LICENSED COTTON WAREHOUSES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 451 (relating to general rule for taxable year of inclusion) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) SPECIAL RULES FOR OPERATORS OF LICENSED COTTON WAREHOUSES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any taxpayer which is the operator of a licensed cotton warehouse and the taxable income of which is computed under an accrual method of accounting, such taxpayer shall not be required to accrue any amounts to be received for processing and storing cotton at such warehouse until such amounts are actually received.

"(2) INTEREST ON DEFERRED TAX LIABILITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If any deferred amount is received during any taxable year, the tax imposed by this chapter for such taxable year shall be increased by the amount of the interest determined under subparagraph (B) with respect to such deferred amount.

"(B) AMOUNT OF INTEREST.—The amount of interest determined under this subparagraph with respect to any deferred amount shall be determined—

"(i) on the amount of the tax for such taxable year which is attributable to such deferred amount,

"(ii) for the period beginning on the due date for the taxable year of the deferral and ending on the due date for the taxable year in which such deferred amount is received, and

"(iii) by using the Federal short-term rate in effect under section 1274 as of the due date for the taxable year in which such deferred amount is received, compounded semiannually.

"(3) TREATMENT AS INTEREST.—Any amount payable under this paragraph shall be taken into account in computing the amount of any deduction allowable to the taxpayer for interest paid or accrued during the taxable year.

"(4) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) LICENSED COTTON WAREHOUSE.—The term 'licensed cotton warehouse' means any warehouse for the storage of cotton which is licensed under the United States Warehouse Act (7 U.S.C. 241, et seq.) or under any similar State law.

"(B) DEFERRED AMOUNT.—The term 'deferred amount' means any amount which is includible in gross income for the taxable year but which would have been includible in gross income for a prior taxable year but for this subsection.

"(C) TAXABLE YEAR OF DEFERRAL.—The taxable year of the deferral is the taxable year for which the deferred amount would have been includible in gross income but for this subsection.

"(D) DUE DATE.—The term 'due date' means the date prescribed for filing the return of tax imposed by this chapter, determined without regard to any extension.

"(5) ELECTION.—This subsection shall apply to a taxpayer only if such taxpayer makes an election under this paragraph. Such an election shall apply to the taxable year for which made and for all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subparagraph (N) of section 26(b)(2) is amended by striking "sections 453(l)(3)" and inserting "sections 451(h)(2), 453(l)(3),".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts accrued in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

PART III—TAX-EXEMPT BOND PROVISIONS

SEC. 4521. REPEAL OF $100,000 LIMITATION ON UNSPENT PROCEEDS UNDER 1-YEAR EXCEPTION FROM REBATE.

Subclause (I) of section 148(f)(4)(B)(ii) (relating to additional period for certain bonds) is amended by striking "the lesser of 5 percent of the proceeds of the issue or $100,000" and inserting "5 percent of the proceeds of the issue".

SEC. 4522. EXCEPTION FROM REBATE FOR EARNINGS ON BONA FIDE DEBT SERVICE FUND UNDER CONSTRUCTION BOND RULES.

Subparagraph (C) of section 148(f)(4) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(xvii) TREATMENT OF BONA FIDE DEBT SERVICE FUNDS.—If the spending requirements of clause (ii) are met with respect to the available construction proceeds of a construction issue, then paragraph (2) shall not apply to earnings on a bona fide debt service fund for such issue."

SEC. 4523. AGGREGATION OF ISSUES RULES NOT TO APPLY TO TAX OR REVENUE ANTICIPATION BONDS.

Section 150 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) TAX OR REVENUE ANTICIPATION BONDS TREATED AS SEPARATE ISSUES.—For purposes of this part, if—

"(1) all of the bonds which are part of an issue are qualified 501(c)(3) bonds or bonds which are not private activity bonds, and

"(2) any portion of such issue consists of tax or revenue anticipation bonds which are reasonably expected to meet the requirements of section 148(f)(4)(B)(iii), then such portion shall, subject to appropriate allocations specified in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, be treated as a separate issue."

SEC. 4524. ALLOCATION OF INTEREST EXPENSE OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO TAX-EXEMPT INTEREST.

(a) EXCEPTION FROM PRO RATA ALLOCATION OF INTEREST EXPENSE OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS TO TAX-EXEMPT INTEREST FOR SMALL ISSUERS INCREASED TO $25,000,000.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraphs (C) and (D) of section 265(b)(3) (relating to exception for certain tax-exempt obligations) are each amended by striking "$10,000,000" each place it appears and inserting "$25,000,000".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply to obligations issued in calendar years beginning after December 31, 1992.

(b) DEDUCTIBILITY AVAILABLE TO PARTICIPANTS IN POOLED ISSUES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) of section 265(b)(3) is amended by inserting "and any qualified tax-exempt pooled obligation acquired after December 31, 1992," after "after August 7, 1986,".

(2) QUALIFIED TAX-EXEMPT POOLED OBLIGATION DEFINED.—Section 265(b)(3) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) QUALIFIED TAX-EXEMPT POOLED OBLIGATION.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'qualified tax-exempt pooled obligation' means a tax-exempt obligation—

"(i) which is issued after December 31, 1992,

"(ii) which is not a private activity bond (as defined in section 141),

"(iii) which is designated by the issuer for purposes of this paragraph, and

"(iv) the proceeds of which are used exclusively (other than to pay the issuance costs of such obligation) to acquire from the issuer obligations—

"(I) which satisfy the requirements of this paragraph but are not designated for purposes of this paragraph, and

"(II) the weighted average maturity of which equals or exceeds the weighted average maturity of such obligation."

SEC. 4525. TAX TREATMENT OF 501(c)(3) BONDS SIMILAR TO GOVERNMENTAL BONDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 150 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by striking paragraphs (2) and (4), by redesignating paragraphs (5) and (6) as paragraphs (4) and (5), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) EXEMPT PERSON.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'exempt person' means—

"(i) a governmental unit, or

"(ii) a 501(c)(3) organization, but only with respect to its activities which do not constitute unrelated trades or businesses as determined by applying section 513(a).

"(B) GOVERNMENTAL UNIT NOT TO INCLUDE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—The term 'governmental unit' does not include the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof.

"(C) 501(c)(3) ORGANIZATION.—The term '501(c)(3) organization' means any organization described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a)."

(b) REPEAL OF QUALIFIED 501(c)(3) BOND DESIGNATION.—Section 145 (relating to qualified 501(c)(3) bonds) is repealed.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (3) of section 141(b) is amended—

(A) by striking "government use" in subparagraph (A)(ii)(I) and subparagraph (B)(ii) and inserting "exempt person use",

(B) by striking "a government use" in subparagraph (B) and inserting "an exempt person use",

(D) by striking "RELATED BUSINESS USE" in the heading of subparagraph (B) and inserting "RELATED PRIVATE BUSINESS USE", and

(E) by striking "GOVERNMENT USE" in the heading thereof and inserting "EXEMPT PERSON USE".

(2) Subparagraph (A) of section 141(b)(6) is amended by striking "a governmental unit" and inserting "an exempt person".

(3) Paragraph (7) of section 141(b) is amended—

(A) by striking "government use" and inserting "exempt person use", and

(B) by striking "GOVERNMENT USE" in the heading thereof and inserting "EXEMPT PERSON USE".

(4) Section 141(b) is amended by striking paragraph (9).

(5) Paragraph (1) of section 141(c) is amended by striking "governmental units" and inserting "exempt persons".

(6) Section 141 is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) CERTAIN ISSUES USED TO PROVIDE RESIDENTIAL RENTAL HOUSING FOR FAMILY UNITS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), for purposes of this title, the term 'private activity bond' includes any bond issued as part of an issue if any portion of the net proceeds of the issue are to be used (directly or indirectly) by an exempt person described in section 150(a)(2)(A)(ii) to provide residential rental property for family units.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR BONDS USED TO PROVIDE QUALIFIED RESIDENTIAL RENTAL PROJECTS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any bond issued as part of an issue if the portion of such issue which is to be used as described in paragraph (1) is to be used to provide—

"(A) a residential rental property for family units if the first use of such property is pursuant to such issue,

"(B) qualified residential rental projects (as defined in section 142(d)), or

"(C) property which is to be substantially rehabilitated in a rehabilitation beginning within the 2-year period ending 1 year after the date of the acquisition of such property.

"(3) SUBSTANTIAL REHABILITATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), rules similar to the rules of section 47(c)(1)(C) shall apply in determining for purposes of paragraph (2)(C) whether property is substantially rehabilitated.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), clause (ii) of section 47(c)(1)(C) shall not apply, but the Secretary may extend the 24-month period in section 47(c)(1)(C)(i) where appropriate due to circumstances not within the control of the owner.

"(4) CERTAIN PROPERTY TREATED AS NEW PROPERTY.—Solely for purposes of determining under paragraph (2)(A) whether the 1st use of property is pursuant to tax-exempt financing—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) the 1st use of property is pursuant to taxable financing,

"(ii) there was a reasonable expectation (at the time such taxable financing was provided) that such financing would be replaced by tax-exempt financing, and

"(iii) the taxable financing is in fact so replaced within a reasonable period after the taxable financing was provided, then the 1st use of such property shall be treated as being pursuant to the tax-exempt financing.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE WHERE NO OPERATING STATE OR LOCAL PROGRAM FOR TAX-EXEMPT FINANCING.—If, at the time of the 1st use of property, there was no operating State or local program for tax-exempt financing of the property, the 1st use of the property shall be treated as pursuant to the 1st tax-exempt financing of the property.

"(C) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) TAX-EXEMPT FINANCING.—The term 'tax-exempt financing' means financing provided by tax-exempt bonds.

"(ii) TAXABLE FINANCING.—The term 'taxable financing' means financing which is not tax-exempt financing."

(7) Section 141(f), as redesignated by paragraph (6), is amended—

(A) by adding "or" at the end of subparagraph (E),

(B) by striking ", or" at the end of subparagraph (F), and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and

(C) by striking subparagraph (G).

(8) The last sentence of section 144(b)(1) is amended by striking "(determined" and all that follows to the period.

(19) Paragraph (2) of section 149(d) is amended—

(A) by striking "(other than a qualified 501(c)(3) bond)", and

(B) by striking "CERTAIN PRIVATE" in the heading thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "PRIVATE".

(20) Section 149(e)(2) is amended—

(A) by striking "which is not a private activity bond" in the second sentence and inserting "which is a bond issued for an exempt person described in section 150(a)(2)(A)(i)", and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Subparagraph (D) shall not apply to any bond which is not a private activity bond but which would be such a bond if the 501(c)(3) organization using the proceeds thereof were not an exempt person."

(21) The heading of subsection (b) of section 150 is amended by striking "TAX-EXEMPT PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS" and inserting "CERTAIN TAX-EXEMPT BONDS".

(22) Paragraph (3) of section 150(b) is amended—

(A) by inserting "owned by a 501(c)(3) organization" after "any facility" in subparagraph (A),

(B) by striking "any private activity bond which, when issued, purported to be a tax-exempt qualified 501(c)(3) bond" in subparagraph (A) and inserting "any bond which, when issued, purported to be a tax-exempt bond, and which would be a private activity bond if the 501(c)(3) organization using the proceeds thereof were not an exempt person", and

(C) by striking the heading thereof and inserting "BONDS FOR EXEMPT PERSONS OTHER THAN GOVERNMENTAL UNITS.—".

(23) Paragraph (5) of section 150(b) is amended—

(A) by striking "private activity" in subparagraph (A),

(B) by inserting "and which would be a private activity bond if the 501(c)(3) organization using the proceeds thereof were not an exempt person" after "tax-exempt bond" in subparagraph (A),

(C) by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following new subparagraph:

"(B) such facility is required to be owned by an exempt person, and", and

(D) by striking "GOVERNMENTAL UNITS OR 501(C)(3) ORGANIZATIONS" in the heading thereof and inserting "EXEMPT PERSONS".

(24) Section 150, as amended by section 4525, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) CERTAIN RULES TO APPLY TO BONDS FOR EXEMPT PERSONS OTHER THAN GOVERNMENTAL UNITS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in section 103(a) or any other provision of law shall be construed to provide an exemption from Federal income tax for interest on any bond which would be a private activity bond if the 501(c)(3) organization using the proceeds thereof were not an exempt person unless such bond satisfies the requirements of subsections (b) and (f) of section 147.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR POOLED FINANCING OF 501(C)(3) ORGANIZATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—At the election of the issuer, a bond described in paragraph (1) shall be treated as meeting the requirements of section 147(b) if such bond meets the requirements of subparagraph (B).

"(B) REQUIREMENTS.—A bond meets the requirements of this subparagraph if—

"(i) 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of the issue of which such bond is a part are to be used to make or finance loans to 2 or more 501(c)(3) organizations or governmental units for acquisition of property to be used by such organizations,

"(ii) each loan described in clause (i) satisfies the requirements of section 147(b) (determined by treating each loan as a separate issue),

"(iii) before such bond is issued, a demand survey was conducted which shows a demand for financing greater than an amount equal to 120 percent of the lendable proceeds of such issue, and

"(iv) 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of such issue are to be loaned to 501(c)(3) organizations or governmental units within 1 year of issuance and, to the extent there are any unspent proceeds after such 1-year period, bonds issued as part of such issue are to be redeemed as soon as possible thereafter (and in no event later than 18 months after issuance).

A bond shall not meet the requirements of this subparagraph if the maturity date of any bond issued as part of such issue is more than 30 years after the date on which the bond was issued (or, in the case of a refunding or series of refundings, the date on which the original bond was issued)."

(25) Section 1302 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 is repealed.

(26) Subparagraph (C) of section 57(a)(5) is amended by striking clause (ii) and redesignating clauses (iii) and (iv) as clauses (ii) and (iii), respectively.

(27) Paragraph (3) of section 103(b) is amended by inserting "and section 150(f)" after "section 149".

(28) Paragraph (3) of section 265(b) is amended—

(A) by striking clause (ii) of subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

"(ii) CERTAIN BONDS NOT TREATED AS PRIVATE ACTIVITY BONDS.—For purposes of clause (i)(II), there shall not be treated as a private activity bond any obligation issued to refund (or which is part of a series of obligations issued to refund) an obligation issued before August 8, 1986, which was not an industrial development bond (as defined in section 103(b)(2) as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (or a private loan bond (as defined in section 103(o)(2)(A), as so in effect, but without regard to any exemption from such definition other than section 103(o)(2)(A)))).''; and

(B) by striking "(other than a qualified 501(c)(3) bond, as defined in section 145)" in subparagraph (C)(ii)(I).

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE; SPECIAL RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to bonds issued after December 31, 1992.

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN BONDS ISSUED AFTER DATE OF ENACTMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any bond which—

(i) is issued after the date of the enactment of this Act, and

(ii) is part of an issue which is subject to any transitional rule under subtitle B of title XIII of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(B) ELECTION OUT.—This paragraph shall not apply to any issue with respect to which the issuer elects not to have this paragraph apply.

SEC. 4526. AUTHORITY TO TERMINATE REQUIRED INCLUSION OF TAX-EXEMPT INTEREST ON RETURN.

Subsection (d) of section 6012 (relating to tax-exempt interest required to be shown on return) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The Secretary may by regulations provide that the preceding sentence shall not apply in any case in which the Secretary determines that the disclosure of such interest is not useful for tax administration."

SEC. 4527. TAX-EXEMPT FINANCING FOR UNITED NATIONS OFFICE BUILDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A bond described in subsection (b) shall be treated as described in section 141(e)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, but section 147(d) of such Code shall not apply to such bond.

(b) BOND DESCRIBED.—A bond is described in this subsection if such bond is issued as part of an issue 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of which are to be used to finance any office building (including land and space for supporting activities which are functionally related and subordinate thereto) for the United Nations or any agency or instrumentality thereof.

SEC. 4528. REPEAL OF EXPIRED PROVISIONS.

(a) Paragraph (2) of section 148(c) is amended by striking subparagraph (B) and by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraph (B), (C), and (D), respectively.

(b) Paragraph (4) of section 148(f) is amended by striking subparagraph (E).

SEC. 4529. AUTHORITY TO WAIVE YIELD RESTRICTIONS ON TAX-EXEMPT BOND ARBITRAGE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (i) of section 148 (relating to arbitrage) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(2) REGULATIONS MAY PERMIT REBATE TO SATISFY YIELD RESTRICTION.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), notwithstanding the yield restriction requirements of subsections (a), (c), and (d), the Secretary may prescribe regulations permitting any investment of the proceeds of an issue in higher yielding investments without causing any bond which is part of such issue to be an arbitrage bond if the requirements of paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (f) are met.

"(3) EXCEPTIONS.—The regulations prescribed under paragraph (2) shall not apply for purposes of—

"(A) section 149(d)(3) (relating to advance refundings), and

"(B) subsection (f)(4)(C)(viii)(II) (relating to election to terminate 1½ percent penalty)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4530. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this subtitle shall apply to bonds issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 817(d) (defining variable contract) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "or", and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) provides for funding of insurance on retired lives as described in section 807(c)(6), and".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 817(d) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", or", and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) in the case of funds held under a contract described in paragraph (2)(C), the amounts paid in, or the amounts paid out, reflect the investment return and the market value of the segregated asset account."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

SEC. 4532. TREATMENT OF MODIFIED GUARANTEED CONTRACTS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subpart E of part I of subchapter L of chapter 1 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by inserting after section 817 the following new section:

"SEC. 817A. SPECIAL RULES FOR MODIFIED GUARANTEED CONTRACTS.

"(a) COMPUTATION OF RESERVES.—In the case of a modified guaranteed contract, clause (ii) of section 807(e)(1)(A) shall not apply.

"(b) SEGREGATED ASSETS UNDER MODIFIED GUARANTEED CONTRACTS MARKED TO MARKET.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any life insurance company, for purposes of this subtitle—

"(A) Any gain or loss with respect to a segregated asset shall be treated as ordinary income or loss, as the case may be.

"(B) If any segregated asset is held by such company as of the close of any taxable year—

"(i) such company shall recognize gain or loss as if such asset were sold for its fair market value on the last business day of such taxable year, and

"(ii) any such gain or loss shall be taken into account for such taxable year.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence. The Secretary may provide by regulations for the application of this subparagraph at times other than the times provided in this subparagraph.

"(2) SEGREGATED ASSET.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'segregated asset' means any asset held as part a segregated account referred to in subsection (d)(1) under a modified guaranteed contract.

"(c) SPECIAL RULE IN COMPUTING LIFE INSURANCE RESERVES.—For purposes of applying section 816(b)(1)(A) to any modified guaranteed contract, an assumed rate of interest shall include a rate of interest determined, from time to time, with reference to a market rate of interest.

"(d) MODIFIED GUARANTEED CONTRACT DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'modified guaranteed contract' means a contract not described in section 817—

"(1) all or part of the amounts received under which are allocated to an account which, pursuant to State law or regulation, is segregated from the general asset accounts of the company and is valued from time to time with reference to market values,

"(2) which—

"(A) provides for the payment of annuities,

"(B) is a life insurance contract, or

"(C) is a pension plan contract which is not a life, accident, or health, property, casualty, or liability contract, and

"(3) for which reserves are valued at market for annual statement purposes.

"(e) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe regulations—

"(1) to provide for the treatment of market value adjustments under sections 72, 7702, 7702A, and 807(e)(1)(B),

"(2) to determine the interest rates applicable under sections 807(c)(3) and 807(d)(2)(B) with respect to a modified guaranteed contract annually, in a manner appropriate for modified guaranteed contracts and using a method that approximates the yield on the assets underlying the contract, and to the extent appropriate for such a contract, to modify or waive the applicability of section 811(d),

"(3) to provide rules to limit ordinary gain or loss treatment to assets constituting reserves for modified guaranteed contracts (and not other assets) of the company, and

"(4) as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart E of part I of subchapter L of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 817 the following new item:

"Sec. 817A. Special rules for modified guaranteed contracts."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

(2) TREATMENT OF NET ADJUSTMENTS.—In the case of any taxpayer required by the amendments made by this section to change its calculation of reserves to take into account market value adjustments and to mark segregated assets to market for any taxable year—

(A) such changes shall be treated as a change in method of accounting initiated by the taxpayer,

(B) such changes shall be treated as made with the consent of the Secretary, and

(C) the adjustments required by reason of section 481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be taken into account as ordinary income or loss by the taxpayer for the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1991.

PART V—COOPERATIVES

"(iii) from the prepayment of a loan under section 306B(b) of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subparagraph (B) of section 501(c)(12) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" in clause (iii),

(2) by striking "306B" in clause (iv),

(3) by striking the period at the end of clause (iv) and inserting ", or", and

(4) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(v) from the prepayment of a loan under section 306B(b) of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936 (as in effect on January 1, 1991)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to prepayments made after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4542. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN AMOUNTS RECEIVED BY A COOPERATIVE TELEPHONE COMPANY.

(a) NONMEMBER INCOME.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (12) of section 501(c) (relating to list of exempt organizations) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) In the case of a mutual or cooperative telephone company (hereafter in this subparagraph referred to as the 'cooperative'), 50 percent of the income received or accrued directly or indirectly from a nonmember telephone company for the performance of communication services by the cooperative shall be treated for purposes of subparagraph (A) as collected from members of the cooperative for the sole purpose of meeting the losses and expenses of the cooperative."

(2) CERTAIN BILLING AND COLLECTION SERVICE FEES NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—Subparagraph (B) of section 501(c)(12) is amended by striking "or" at the end of clause (iii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iv) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(v) from billing and collection services performed for a nonmember telephone company.".

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Clause (i) of section 501(c)(12)(B) is amended by inserting before the comma at the end thereof ", other than income described in subparagraph (E)".

(4) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to amounts received or accrued after December 31, 1992.

(5) NO INFERENCE AS TO UNRELATED BUSINESS INCOME TREATMENT OF BILLING AND COLLECTION SERVICE FEES.—Nothing in the amendments made by this subsection shall be construed to indicate the proper treatment of billing and collection service fees under part III of subchapter F of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to taxation of business income of certain exempt organizations).

(b) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN INVESTMENT INCOME OF MUTUAL OR COOPERATIVE TELEPHONE COMPANIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (12) of section 501(c) (relating to list of exempt organizations) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(F) In the case of a mutual or cooperative telephone company, subparagraph (A) shall be applied without taking into account reserve income (as defined in section 512(d)(2)) if such income, when added to other income not collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses, does not exceed 35 percent of the company's total income. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, income referred to in subparagraph (B) shall not be taken into account."

(2) PORTION OF INVESTMENT INCOME SUBJECT TO UNRELATED BUSINESS INCOME TAX.—Section 512 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) INVESTMENT INCOME OF CERTAIN MUTUAL OR COOPERATIVE TELEPHONE COMPANIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining the unrelated business taxable income of a mutual or cooperative telephone company described in section 501(c)(12)—

"(A) there shall be included, as an item of gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business, reserve income to the extent such reserve income, when added to other income not collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses, exceeds 15 percent of the company's total income, and

"(B) there shall be allowed all deductions directly connected with the portion of the reserve income which is so included.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, income referred to in section 501(c)(12)(B) shall not be taken into account.

"(2) RESERVE INCOME.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'reserve income' means income—

"(A) which would (but for this subsection) be excluded under subsection (b), and

"(B) which is derived from assets set aside for the repair or replacement of telephone system facilities of such company."

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to amounts received or accrued after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 4543. TAX TREATMENT OF COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATIONS.

(a) SECTION 277 NOT TO APPLY TO COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATIONS.—Section 277(b) (relating to exceptions) is amended by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting a comma and "or", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) which for the taxable year is a cooperative housing corporation described in section 216(b)(1) (determined without regard to section 143(k)(9)(E))."

(b) APPLICATION OF RULES RELATING TO TAX TREATMENT OF COOPERATIVES.—

(1) PATRONAGE EARNINGS MAY BE OFFSET ONLY BY PATRONAGE LOSSES.—Section 1388(a) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "In no event shall any patronage losses of an organization described in section 277(b)(5) be used to offset earnings which are not patronage earnings."

(2) PATRONAGE EARNINGS AND LOSSES OF COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATIONS.—Section 1388 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) PATRONAGE EARNINGS OR LOSSES DEFINED.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The terms 'patronage earnings' and 'patronage losses' mean earnings and losses, respectively, which are derived from business done with or for patrons of the organization.

"(A) Interest on reasonable reserves established in connection with the corporation, including reserves required by a governmental agency or lender.

"(B) Income from laundry and parking facilities to the extent attributable to use of the facilities by tenant-stockholders and their guests.

"(C) In the case of a limited equity cooperative housing corporation, rental income from other than tenant-stockholders to the extent attributable to any project operated by the corporatior..

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (2)—

"(A) COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATION.—The term 'cooperative housing corporation' has the meaning given such term by section 216(b)(1) (without regard to section 143(k)(9)(E)).

"(B) LIMITED EQUITY COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATION.—The term 'limited equity cooperative housing corporation' means a cooperative housing corporation with respect to which the requirements of clause (i) of section 143(k)(9)(D) are met at all times during the taxable year.

"(C) TENANT-STOCKHOLDER.—The term 'tenant-stockholder' has the meaning given such term by section 216(b)(2)."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1388(j) is amended by striking paragraph (4).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) NO INFERENCE.—Nothing in the provisions of this section shall be construed as a change in the treatment of income derived by any cooperative housing corporation, or any corporation operating on a cooperative basis under section 1381 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and the treatment of such income for any year to which the amendments made by this section does not apply shall be made as if this section had not been enacted.

SEC. 4544. TREATMENT OF SAFE HARBOR LEASES INVOLVING RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a rural electric cooperative described in section 1381(a)(2)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, any interest income in connection with a transaction involving qualified leased property which was treated as a lease under section 168(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as in effect before the amendments made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986) or any corresponding prior provision of law shall be offset by any rental expense in connection with such transaction before allocation of such income or expense to members and nonmembers of such cooperatives for purposes of such Code.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

PART VII—TREATMENT OF INTANGIBLES

SEC. 4551. AMORTIZATION OF GOODWILL AND CERTAIN OTHER INTANGIBLES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Part VI of subchapter B of chapter 1 (relating to itemized deductions for individuals and corporations) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 197. AMORTIZATION OF GOODWILL AND CERTAIN OTHER INTANGIBLES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—A taxpayer shall be entitled to an amortization deduction with respect to any amortizable section 197 intangible. The amount of such deduction shall be determined by amortizing the adjusted basis (for purposes of determining gain) of such intangible ratably over the 16-year period beginning with the month in which such intangible was acquired.

"(b) NO OTHER DEPRECIATION OR AMORTIZATION DEDUCTION ALLOWABLE.—Except as provided in subsection (a), no depreciation or amortization deduction shall be allowable with respect to any amortizable section 197 intangible.

"(c) AMORTIZABLE SECTION 197 INTANGIBLE.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the term 'amortizable section 197 intangible' means any section 197 intangible—

"(A) which is acquired by the taxpayer after the date of the enactment of this section, and

"(B) which is held in connection with the conduct of a trade or business or an activity described in section 212.

"(2) EXCLUSION OF SELF-CREATED INTANGIBLES, ETC.—The term 'amortizable section 197 intangible' shall not include any section 197 intangible—

"(A) which is not described in subparagraph (D), (E), or (F) of subsection (d)(1), and

"(B) which is created by the taxpayer.

This paragraph shall not apply if the intangible is created in connection with a transaction (or series of related transactions) involving the acquisition of assets constituting a trade or business or substantial portion thereof.

"(3) ANTI-CHURNING RULES.—

"For exclusion of intangibles acquired in certain transactions, see subsection (f)(9).

"(d) SECTION 197 INTANGIBLE.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the term 'section 197 intangible' means—

"(A) goodwill,

"(B) going concern value,

"(C) any of the following intangible items:

"(i) workforce in place including its composition and terms and conditions (contractual or otherwise) of its employment,

"(ii) business books and records, operating systems, or any other information base (including lists or other information with respect to current or prospective customers),

"(iii) any patent, copyright, formula, process, design, pattern, knowhow, format, or other similar item,

"(iv) any customer-based intangible,

"(v) any supplier-based intangible, and

"(vi) any other similar item,

"(D) any license, permit, or other right granted by a governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality thereof,

"(E) any covenant not to compete (or other arrangement to the extent such arrangement has substantially the same effect as a covenant not to compete) entered into in connection with an acquisition (directly or indirectly) of an interest in a trade or business or substantial portion thereof, and

"(F) any franchise, trademark, or trade name.

"(2) CUSTOMER-BASED INTANGIBLE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'customer-based intangible' means—

"(i) composition of market,

"(ii) market share, and

"(iii) any other value resulting from future provision of goods or services pursuant to relationships (contractual or otherwise) in the ordinary course of business with customers.

"(B) FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—In the case of a financial institution, the term 'customer-based intangible' includes deposit base and similar items.

"(3) SUPPLIER-BASED INTANGIBLE.—The term 'supplier-based intangible' means any value resulting from future acquisitions of goods or services pursuant to relationships (contractual or otherwise) in the ordinary course of business with suppliers of goods or services to be used or sold by the taxpayer.

"(e) EXCEPTIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'section 197 intangible' shall not include any of the following:

"(1) FINANCIAL INTERESTS.—Any interest—

"(A) in a corporation, partnership, trust, or estate, or

"(B) under an existing futures contract, foreign currency contract, notional principal contract, interest rate swap, or other similar financial contract.

"(2) LAND.—Any interest in land.

"(3) COMPUTER SOFTWARE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any—

"(i) computer software which is readily available for purchase by the general public, is subject to a nonexclusive license, and has not been substantially modified, and

"(ii) other computer software which is not acquired in a transaction (or series of related transactions) involving the acquisition of assets constituting a trade or business or substantial portion thereof.

"(B) COMPUTER SOFTWARE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'computer software' means any program designed to cause a computer to perform a desired function. Such term shall not include any data base or similar item unless the data base or item is in the public domain and is incidental to the operation of otherwise qualifying computer software.

"(4) CERTAIN INTERESTS OR RIGHTS ACQUIRED SEPARATELY.—Any of the following not acquired in a transaction (or series of related transactions) involving the acquisition of assets constituting a trade or business or substantial portion thereof:

"(A) Any interest in a film, sound recording, video tape, book, or similar property.

"(B) Any right to receive tangible property or services under a contract or granted by a governmental unit or agency or instrumentality thereof.

"(C) Any interest in a patent or copyright.

"(D) To the extent provided in regulations, any right under a contract (or granted by a governmental unit or an agency or instrumentality thereof) if such right—

"(i) has a fixed duration of less than 16 years, or

"(ii) is fixed as to amount and, without regard to this section, would be amortizable under a method similar to the unit-of-production method.

"(5) INTERESTS UNDER LEASES AND DEBT INSTRUMENTS.—Any interest under—

"(A) an existing lease of tangible property, or

"(B) except as provided in subsection (d)(2)(B), any existing indebtedness.

"(6) TREATMENT OF SPORTS FRANCHISES.—A franchise to engage in professional football, basketball, baseball, or other professional sport, and any item acquired in connection with such a franchise.

"(7) MORTGAGE SERVICING.—Any right to service indebtedness which is secured by residential real property unless such right is acquired in a transaction (or series of related transactions) involving the acquisition of assets (other than rights described in this paragraph) constituting a trade or business or substantial portion thereof.

"(8) PROPERTY ACQUIRED FROM A QUALIFIED RESEARCH ENTITY.—At the election of the taxpayer, any property acquired by the taxpayer from a qualified research entity (as defined in subsection (g)), but only if substantially all of the section 197 intangibles (determined without regard to this paragraph) acquired in the transaction (or series of related transactions) in which the property was acquired—

"(A) were created by the qualified research entity, or

"(B) were acquired by the qualified research entity in a transaction (or series of related transactions) to which this paragraph would have applied (without regard to subsection (c)(1)(A)) if an election had been made.

"(f) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS, ETC.—If there is a disposition of any amortizable section 197 intangible acquired in a transaction or series of related transactions (or any such intangible becomes worthless) and one or more other amortizable section 197 intangibles acquired in such transaction or series of related transactions are retained—

"(A) no loss shall be recognized by reason of such disposition (or such worthlessness), and

"(B) appropriate adjustments to the adjusted bases of such retained intangibles shall be made for any loss not recognized under subparagraph (A).

All persons treated as a single taxpayer under section 41(f)(1) shall be so treated for purposes of the preceding sentence.

"(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN TRANSFERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any section 197 intangible transferred in a transaction described in subparagraph (B), the transferee shall be treated as the transferor for purposes of applying this section with respect to so much of the adjusted basis in the hands of the transferee as does not exceed the adjusted basis in the hands of the transferor.

"(B) TRANSACTIONS COVERED.—The transactions described in this subparagraph are—

"(i) any transaction described in section 332, 351, 361, 721, 731, 1031, or 1033, and

"(ii) any transaction between members of the same affiliated group during any taxable year for which a consolidated return is made by such group.

"(3) TREATMENT OF AMOUNTS PAID PURSUANT TO COVENANTS NOT TO COMPETE, ETC.—Any amount paid or incurred pursuant to a covenant or arrangement referred to in subsection (d)(1)(E) shall be treated as an amount chargeable to capital account.

"(4) TREATMENT OF FRANCHISES, ETC.—

"(A) FRANCHISE.—The term 'franchise' has the meaning given to such term by section 1253(b)(1).

"(B) TREATMENT OF RENEWALS.—Any renewal of a franchise, trademark, or trade name (or of a license, a permit, or other right referred to in subsection (d)(1)(D)) shall be treated as an acquisition. The preceding sentence shall only apply with respect to costs incurred in connection with such renewal.

"(C) CERTAIN AMOUNTS NOT TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—Any amount to which section 1253(d)(1) applies shall not be taken into account under this section.

"(5) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN REINSURANCE TRANSACTIONS.—In the case of any amortizable section 197 intangible resulting from an assumption reinsurance transaction, the amount taken into account as the adjusted basis of such intangible under this section shall be the excess of—

"(A) the amount paid or incurred by the acquirer under the assumption reinsurance transaction, over

"(B) the amount required to be capitalized under section 848 in connection with such transaction.

Subsection (b) shall not apply to any amount required to be capitalized under section 848.

"(6) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN SUBLEASES.—For purposes of this section, a sublease shall be treated in the same manner as a lease of the underlying property involved.

"(7) TREATMENT AS DEPRECIABLE.—For purposes of this chapter, any amortizable section 197 intangible shall be treated as property which is of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 167.

"(8) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN INCREMENTS IN VALUE.—This section shall not apply to any increment in value if, without regard to this section, such increment is properly taken into account in determining the cost of property which is not a section 197 intangible.

"(9) ANTI-CHURNING RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'amortizable section 197 intangible' shall not include any section 197 intangible which is described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (d)(1) (or for which depreciation or amortization would not have been allowable under this chapter before the effective date of this section) and which is acquired by the taxpayer after the date of the enactment of this section, if—

"(i) the intangible was held or used at any time on or after July 25, 1991, and on or before such date of enactment by the taxpayer or a related person,

"(ii) the intangible was acquired from a person who held such intangible at any time on or after July 25, 1991, and on or before such date of enactment, and, as part of the transaction, the user of such intangible does not change, or

"(iii) the taxpayer grants the right to use such intangible to a person (or a person related to such person) who held or used such intangible at any time on or after July 25, 1991, and on or before such date of enactment.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the determination of whether the user of property changes as part of a transaction shall be determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(B) EXCEPTION WHERE GAIN RECOGNIZED.—If—

"(i) subparagraph (A) would not apply to an intangible acquired by the taxpayer but for the last sentence of subparagraph (C)(i), and

"(ii) the person from whom the taxpayer acquired the intangible elects, notwithstanding any other provision of this title—

"(I) to recognize gain on the disposition of the intangible, and

"(II) to pay a tax on such gain which, when added to any other income tax on such gain under this title, equals such gain multiplied by the highest rate of income tax applicable to such person under this title, then subparagraph (A) shall apply to the intangible only to the extent that the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the intangible exceeds the gain recognized under clause (ii)(I).

"(C) RELATED PERSON DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) RELATED PERSON.—A person (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as the 'related person') is related to any person if—

"(I) the related person bears a relationship to such person specified in section 267(b) or section 707(b)(1), or

"(II) the related person and such person are engaged in trades or businesses under common control (within the meaning of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 41(f)(1)).

For purposes of subclause (I), in applying section 267(b) or 707(b)(1), '20 percent' shall be substituted for '50 percent'.

"(ii) TIME FOR MAKING DETERMINATION.—A person shall be treated as related to another person if such relationship exists immediately before or immediately after the acquisition of the intangible involved.

"(D) ACQUISITIONS BY REASON OF DEATH.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the acquisition of any property by the taxpayer if the basis of the property in the hands of the taxpayer is determined under section 1014(a).

"(E) SPECIAL RULE FOR PARTNERSHIPS.—With respect to any increase in the basis of partnership property under section 732, 734, or 743, determinations under this paragraph shall be made at the partner level and each partner shall be treated as having owned and used such partner's proportionate share of the partnership assets.

"(F) ANTI-ABUSE RULES.—The term 'amortizable section 197 intangible' does not include any section 197 intangible acquired in a transaction, one of the principal purposes of which is to avoid the requirement of subsection (c)(1) that the intangible be acquired after the date of the enactment of this section or to avoid the provisions of subparagraph (A).

"(g) QUALIFIED RESEARCH ENTITY.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified research entity' means any person which meets—

"(A) the value requirement of paragraph (2),

"(B) the receipts and research expenditures requirements of paragraph (3), and

"(C) the ownership requirements of paragraph (4).

"(2) VALUE REQUIREMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirement of this paragraph is met with respect to any person if, as of the acquisition date, the excess of—

"(i) the fair market value of the assets of such person, over

"(ii) the aggregate amount of indebtedness of the person with a maturity of one year or less at the time of issuance, does not exceed $50,000,000.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR SOLE PROPRIETORS.—In the case of a sole proprietor, only assets and indebtedness allocable to trades or businesses of the proprietor shall be taken into account under subparagraph (A).

"(3) RECEIPTS AND RESEARCH EXPENDITURES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any person if—

"(i) the person did not have any gross receipts during any period preceding the 5-year period ending on the acquisition date, and

"(ii) during the person's entire period of existence on or before the acquisition date, the aggregate amount of expenditures for research or experimentation (within the meaning of section 174) which are technological in nature is not less than the greater of—

"(I) $500,000, and

"(II) 30 percent of the person's aggregate gross receipts during such period.

"(B) EARNINGS ON SHORT-TERM INVESTMENTS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), gross receipts shall not include earnings on any short-term investment of amounts held to meet the reasonable business needs of the person for working capital.

"(C) SPECIAL RULE FOR SOLE PROPRIETORSHIPS.—In the case of a sole proprietorship, this paragraph shall be applied only with respect to receipts and expenditures in connection with one or more trades or businesses of the sole proprietor from which the property to which the election under subsection (e)(8) applies was acquired.

"(D) GROSS RECEIPTS.—For purposes of this paragraph, a rule similar to the rule of subparagraph (C) of section 448(c)(3) shall apply.

"(4) OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this paragraph are met with respect to any person if, at all times during the period of existence of the person on or before the acquisition date—

"(i) at least 50 percent of its fair market value is held directly by 5 or fewer persons other than corporations, and

"(ii) at least 50 percent of its fair market value is held by individuals.

"(B) ATTRIBUTION RULES.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), the constructive ownership rules of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 318(a)(2) shall apply.

"(C) EXCEPTION.—This paragraph shall not apply to any sole proprietor.

"(5) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) ACQUISITION DATE.—The term 'acquisition date' means the date of the acquisition to which the election under subsection (e)(8) applies.

"(B) AGGREGATION RULES.—All persons treated as a single taxpayer under section 41(f)(1) shall be treated as 1 person for purposes of this paragraph. This subparagraph shall not apply to a sole proprietor for purposes of paragraph (3).

"(C) PREDECESSORS.—For purposes of this subsection and subsection (e)(8), a rule similar to the rule of section 448(c)(3)(D) shall apply.

"(h) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including such regulations as may be appropriate to—

"(1) prevent avoidance of the purposes of this section through related persons or otherwise, and

"(2) prevent the avoidance of the $50,000,000 limitation under subsection (g)(2) through the sale, spin-off, or other disposition of assets prior to a sale, through covenants not to compete or employment contracts, or through the manipulation of short-term indebtedness."

(b) MODIFICATIONS TO DEPRECIATION RULES.—

(1) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTY EXCLUDED FROM SECTION 197.—Section 167 (relating to depreciation deduction) is amended by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g) and by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection:

"(f) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTY EXCLUDED FROM SECTION 197.—

"(1) COMPUTER SOFTWARE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If a depreciation deduction is allowable under subsection (a) with respect to any computer software, such deduction shall be computed by using the straight line method and a useful life of 36 months.

"(B) COMPUTER SOFTWARE.—For purposes of this section, the term 'computer software' has the meaning given to such term by section 197(e)(3)(B); except that such term shall not include any such software which is an amortizable section 197 intangible or any such software acquired in a transaction to which subsection (e)(8) applies.

"(2) CERTAIN INTERESTS OR RIGHTS ACQUIRED SEPARATELY.—If a depreciation deduction is allowable under subsection (a) with respect to any property described in subparagraph (B), (C), or (D) of section 197(e)(4), such deduction shall be computed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary."

(2) ALLOCATION OF BASIS IN CASE OF LEASED PROPERTY.—Subsection (c) of section 167 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) BASIS FOR DEPRECIATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The basis on which exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence are to be allowed in respect of any property shall be the adjusted basis provided in section 1011, for the purpose of determining the gain on the sale or other disposition of such property.

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR PROPERTY SUBJECT TO LEASE.—If any property is acquired subject to a lease—

"(A) no portion of the adjusted basis shall be allocated to the leasehold interest, and

"(B) the entire adjusted basis shall be taken into account in determining the depreciation deduction (if any) with respect to the property subject to the lease."

(c) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 1253.—Subsection (d) of section 1253 is amended by striking paragraphs (2), (3), (4), and (5) and inserting the following:

"(2) OTHER PAYMENTS.—Any amount paid or incurred on account of a transfer, sale, or other disposition of a franchise, trademark, or trade name to which paragraph (1) does not apply shall be treated as an amount chargeable to capital account.

"(3) RENEWALS, ETC.—For purposes of determining the term of a transfer agreement under this section, there shall be taken into account all renewal options (and any other period for which the parties reasonably expect the agreement to be renewed)."

(d) AMENDMENT TO SECTION 848.—Subsection (g) of section 848 is amended by striking "this section" and inserting "this section or section 197".

(e) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 1060.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 1060(b) is amended by striking "goodwill or going concern value" and inserting "section 197 intangibles".

(2) Paragraph (1) of section 1060(d) is amended by striking "goodwill or going concern value (or similar items)" and inserting "section 197 intangibles".

(f) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (g) of section 167 (as redesignated by subsection (b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(g) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"(1) For additional rule applicable to depreciation of improvements in the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, see section 611.

"(2) For amortization of goodwill and certain other intangibles, see section 197."

(2) Subsection (f) of section 642 is amended by striking "section 169" and inserting "sections 169 and 197".

(3) Subsection (a) of section 1016 is amended by striking paragraph (19) and by redesignating the following paragraphs accordingly.

(4) Subparagraph (C) of section 1245(a)(2) is amended by striking "193, or 1253(d) (2) or (3)" and inserting "or 193".

(5) Paragraph (3) of section 1245(a) is amended by striking "section 185 or 1253(d) (2) or (3)".

(6) The table of sections for part VI of subchapter B of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 197. Amortization of goodwill and certain other intangibles."

(g) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to property acquired after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) ELECTION TO HAVE AMENDMENTS APPLY TO PROPERTY ACQUIRED AFTER JULY 25, 1991.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If an election under this paragraph applies to the taxpayer—

(i) the amendments made by this section shall apply to property acquired by the taxpayer after July 25, 1991,

(ii) subsection (c)(1)(A) of section 197 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) (and so much of subsection (f)(9)(A) of such section 197 as precedes clause (i) thereof) shall be applied with respect to the taxpayer by treating July 25, 1991, as the date of the enactment of such section, and

(iii) in applying subsection (f)(9) of such section, with respect to any property acquired by the taxpayer on or before the date of the enactment of this Act, only holding or use on July 25, 1991, shall be taken into account.

(B) ELECTION.—An election under this paragraph shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe. Such an election by any taxpayer, once made—

(i) may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary, and

(ii) shall apply to the taxpayer making such election and any other taxpayer under common control with the taxpayer (within the meaning of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 41(f)(1) of such Code) at any time after November 22, 1991, and on or before the date on which such election is made.

(3) ELECTION TO SETTLE TREATMENT OF PROPERTY FOR PURPOSES OF ALL OPEN YEARS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If an election under this paragraph applies to any taxpayer—

(i) in the case of—

(I) any applicable intangible acquired during a return year, 75 percent of the applicable adjusted basis of the intangible shall be treated for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for all open years in the same manner as on the taxpayer's Federal income tax return for such year, and

(II) any applicable intangible acquired during a taxable year which is not a return year, the amendments made by this section shall apply for all open years to 75 percent of the applicable adjusted basis of the intangible, and

(ii) 25 percent of the applicable adjusted basis of the intangible for all open years shall be treated for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 as goodwill with respect to which a deduction for depreciation or amortization is not allowable.

(B) APPLICABLE INTANGIBLE; OPEN YEAR.—For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) APPLICABLE INTANGIBLE.—The term "applicable intangible" means any property which is an amortizable section 197 intangible under section 197(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (without regard to paragraph (1)(A) thereof) which is amortized as an intangible asset on the taxpayer's Federal income tax return. Such term shall not include any intangible with respect to which a settlement or closing agreement, or final judicial determination, provided an irrevocable resolution of the proper Federal income tax treatment of the intangible.

(ii) OPEN YEARS.—A taxable year is an open year if—

(I) the period prescribed by section 6501 of such Code for the assessment of any tax for such taxable year has not expired before June 16, 1992 (determined without regard to subparagraph (D)(iii)), and a settlement or closing agreement, or final judicial determination, has not been entered into before the date of the election under this paragraph which provides an irrevocable resolution of the proper Federal income tax treatment for such year of all deductions attributable to applicable intangibles, or

(II) as of June 16, 1992, a claim for refund is pending with the Internal Revenue Service (or a refund suit is pending in a Federal court), but only if such claim or suit involves (or may involve) the proper Federal income tax treatment for such year of any applicable intangible.

(iii) IRREVOCABLE RESOLUTION.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the resolution of an item shall not be treated as irrevocable unless the taxpayer consents, in the election under this paragraph, to forego any right to challenge such resolution.

(C) APPLICABLE ADJUSTED BASIS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term "applicable adjusted basis" means—

(i) in the case of property acquired during a return year, the adjusted basis (for purposes of determining gain) allocated to such property as reflected on the Federal income tax return for such year (or, if different, as reflected on the Federal income tax return for the following taxable year if such year is a return year), and

(ii) in the case of property not acquired during a return year, its adjusted basis (for purposes of determining gain) as determined under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(D) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND RULES.—For purposes of this paragraph—

(i) RETURN YEARS.—A return year is a taxable year for which a Federal income tax return has been filed before June 16, 1992.

(ii) AMENDED RETURNS.—In the case of a return year, any determination under subparagraph (A)(i)(I), (B)(i), or (C)(i) as to the treatment of an item on a Federal income tax return shall be made on the basis of the return, taking into account only amendments to such return filed on or before July 25, 1991, and settlement or closing agreements entered into before the date an election is made under subparagraph (E).

(iii) EXTENSION OF STATUTE.—If the assessment of any deficiency of tax attributable to an election under this paragraph is barred on the date of the enactment of this Act, or at any time within the 2-year period beginning on the date the election is made, by any law or rule of law, such deficiency may, nevertheless, be assessed within the 2-year period.

(iv) UNDERPAYMENTS.—If an election under this paragraph results in any underpayment of tax for a return year, such election shall not be treated as valid unless the taxpayer pays such tax (and any interest thereon) before January 1, 1993.

(v) ANTI-CHURNING RULES.—In the case of property to which subparagraph (A)(i) applies which was acquired in a taxable year other than a return year—

(I) subsection (f)(9) of section 197 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) shall not apply with respect to any property acquired by the taxpayer on or before July 25, 1991, and

(II) in applying such subsection to property acquired after July 25, 1991, and before the date of the enactment of this Act, the modifications to such subsection contained in clauses (ii) and (iii) of paragraph (2)(A) shall apply.

(E) ELECTION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—An election under this paragraph shall be made before January 1, 1993, and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate may prescribe. Such an election, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary.

(ii) LIMITATION ON ELECTION.—No election may be made under this paragraph unless the election would apply to an asset acquired on or before July 25, 1991.

(iii) CONTROLLED GROUPS.—In the case of 2 or more persons under common control (within the meaning of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 41(f)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), an election under this paragraph shall be made by the common parent corporation (or equivalent person) and shall apply to all persons under such common control after February 14, 1992, and before the date on which such election is made. The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall prescribe rules for the application of the election to persons which were not under common control for all open years, including rules allowing persons to make an election under this paragraph for open years in which such persons were not under common control.

(4) ELECTIVE BINDING CONTRACT EXCEPTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any acquisition of property by the taxpayer if—

(i) such acquisition is pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, and at all times thereafter before such acquisition,

(ii) an election under paragraph (2) or (3) does not apply to the taxpayer, and

(iii) the taxpayer makes an election under this paragraph with respect to such contract.

(B) ELECTION.—An election under this paragraph shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall prescribe. Such an election, once made—

(i) may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary, and

(ii) shall apply to all property acquired pursuant to the contract with respect to which such election was made.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (c) of section 2032A (relating to tax treatment of dispositions and failures to use for qualified use) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) CERTAIN CASH RENTAL NOT TO CAUSE RECAPTURE.—For purposes of this subsection, a qualified heir shall not be treated as failing to use property in a qualified use solely because such heir rents such property on a net cash basis to a member of the decedent's family, but only if, during the period of the lease, such member of the decedent's family uses such property in a qualified use."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to with respect to rentals occurring after December 31, 1976.

SEC. 4609. INTEREST ACCRUING ON SALES BETWEEN FAMILY MEMBERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7872(f) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(13) QUALIFIED SALES BETWEEN FAMILY MEMBERS.—In the case of interest accruing after July 31, 1993, on a loan arising in connection with a qualified sale to which section 483(e) applies, the determination as to whether there is foregone interest on such loan or whether such loan is a below-market loan shall be made by substituting 6 percent for the applicable Federal rate (if 6 percent is less than such rate) to the extent the sales price does not exceed the amount to which section 483(e) applies."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 483(g) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) For treatment of qualified sales under subsection (e) for purposes of estate and gift taxes, see section 7872(f)(13)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to interest accruing after July 31, 1993, in taxable years ending after such date.

Subtitle G—Excise Tax Simplification

PART I—FUEL TAX PROVISIONS

SEC. 4701. REPEAL OF CERTAIN RETAIL AND USE TAXES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4041 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4041. SPECIAL MOTOR FUELS AND NONCOMMERCIAL AVIATION GASOLINE.

"(a) SPECIAL MOTOR FUELS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby imposed a tax on benzol, benzene, naphtha, liquefied petroleum gas, casing head and natural gasoline, or any other liquid—

"(A) sold by any person to an owner, lessee, or other operator of a motor vehicle or a motorboat for use as a fuel in such motor vehicle or motorboat, or

"(B) used by any person as a fuel in a motor vehicle or motorboat unless there was a taxable sale of such liquid under subparagraph (A).

"(2) RATE OF TAX.—The rate of the tax imposed by this subsection shall be the aggregate rate of tax in effect under section 4081 at the time of such sale or use.

"(3) CERTAIN FUELS EXEMPT FROM TAX.—The tax imposed by this subsection shall not apply to gasoline (as defined in section 4082), diesel fuel (as defined in section 4092), kerosene, gas oil, or fuel oil.

"(4) REDUCED RATES OF TAX ON CERTAIN FUELS.—

"(A) QUALIFIED METHANOL AND ETHANOL FUEL.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any qualified methanol or ethanol fuel—

"(I) the Highway Trust Fund financing rate applicable under paragraph (2) shall be 5.4 cents per gallon less than the otherwise applicable rate (6 cents per gallon less in the case of a mixture none of the alcohol in which consists of ethanol), and

"(II) the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate applicable under paragraph (2) shall be 0.05 cent per gallon.

"(ii) QUALIFIED METHANOL OR ETHANOL FUEL.—The term 'qualified methanol or ethanol fuel' means any liquid at least 85 percent of which consists of methanol, ethanol, or other alcohol produced from a substance other than petroleum or natural gas.

"(iii) TERMINATION.—Clause (i) shall not apply to any sale or use after September 30, 2000.

"(B) NATURAL GAS-DERIVED METHANOL OR ETHANOL FUEL.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of natural gas-derived methanol or ethanol fuel—

"(I) the Highway Trust Fund financing rate applicable under paragraph (2) shall be 5.75 cents per gallon, and

"(II) the deficit reduction rate applicable under paragraph (2) shall be 1.25 cents per gallon.

"(ii) NATURAL GAS-DERIVED METHANOL OR ETHANOL FUEL.—The term 'natural-gas derived methanol or ethanol fuel' means any liquid at least 85 percent of which consists of methanol, ethanol, or other alcohol produced from natural gas.

"(C) OTHER FUELS CONTAINING ALCOHOL.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, in the case of any liquid at least 10 percent of which consists of alcohol (as defined in section 4081(c)(3)), the Highway Trust Fund financing rate applicable under paragraph (2) shall be the comparable rate under section 4081.

"(ii) LATER SEPARATION.—If any person separates the liquid fuel from a mixture of the liquid fuel and alcohol to which clause (i) applies, such separation shall be treated as a sale of the liquid fuel. Any tax imposed on such sale shall be reduced by the amount (if any) of the tax imposed on the sale of such mixture.

"(iii) TERMINATION.—Clause (i) shall not apply to any sale or use after September 30, 2000.

"(D) LIQUEFIED PETROLEUM GAS.—The rate of tax applicable under paragraph (2) to liquefied petroleum gas shall be determined without regard to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate under section 4081.

"(5) EXEMPTION FOR OFF-HIGHWAY BUSINESS USE.—No tax shall be imposed by paragraph (1) on liquids sold for use or used in an off-highway business use (within the meaning of section 6420(f)).

"(b) NONCOMMERCIAL AVIATION GASOLINE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby imposed a tax on gasoline—

"(A) sold by any person to an owner, lessee, or other operator of an aircraft for use as a fuel in such aircraft in noncommercial aviation, or

"(B) used by any person as a fuel in an aircraft in noncommercial aviation unless there was a taxable sale of such gasoline under subparagraph (A).

The tax imposed by this paragraph shall be in addition to any tax imposed by section 4081.

"(2) RATE OF TAX.—The rate of the tax imposed by paragraph (1) on any gasoline is the excess of 15 cents a gallon over the sum of the Highway Trust Fund financing rate plus the deficit reduction rate at which tax was imposed on such gasoline under section 4081.

"(3) NONCOMMERCIAL AVIATION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'noncommercial aviation' means any use of an aircraft other than use in a business of transporting persons or property for compensation or hire by air. Such term includes any use of an aircraft, in a business described in the preceding sentence, which is properly allocable to any transportation exempt from the taxes imposed by sections 4261 and 4271 by reason of section 4281 or 4282.

"(4) EXEMPTION FOR FUELS CONTAINING ALCOHOL.—No tax shall be imposed by this subsection on any liquid at least 10 percent of which consists of alcohol (as defined in section 4081(c)(3)).

"(5) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN HELICOPTER USES.—No tax shall be imposed by this subsection on gasoline sold for use or used in a helicopter for purposes of providing transportation with respect to which the requirements of subsection (e) or (f) of section 4261 are met.

"(6) REGISTRATION.—Except as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if any gasoline is sold by any person for use as a fuel in an aircraft, it shall be presumed for purposes of this subsection that a tax imposed by this subsection applies to the sale of such gasoline unless the purchaser is registered in such manner (and furnished such information in respect of the use of the gasoline) as the Secretary shall by regulations provide.

"(7) GASOLINE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'gasoline' has the meaning given such term by section 4082.

"(8) TERMINATION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any sale or use after December 31, 1995.

"(c) EXEMPTION FOR FARM USE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, no tax shall be imposed under this section on any liquid sold for use or used on a farm for farming purposes (determined in accordance with paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 6420(e)).

"(2) TERMINATION.—Except with respect to so much of the tax imposed by subsection (a) as is determined by reference to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate under section 4081, paragraph (1) shall not apply after September 30, 1999.

"(d) EXEMPTIONS FOR STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS, SCHOOLS, EXPORTATION, AND SUPPLIES FOR VESSELS AND AIRCRAFT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, no tax shall be imposed under this section on any liquid sold for use, or used, in an exempt use described in paragraph (4), (5), (6), or (7) of section 6420(b).

"(2) TERMINATION.—Except with respect to so much of the tax imposed by subsection (a) as is determined by reference to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate under section 4081, after September 30, 1999, paragraph (1) shall not apply to exempt uses described in paragraph (4) and (5) of section 6420(b).

"(e) EXEMPTION FOR USE BY CERTAIN AIRCRAFT MUSEUMS.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, no tax shall be imposed under this section on any liquid sold for use or used in an exempt use described in section 6420(b)(11)."

(b) CERTAIN ADDITIONAL PURCHASERS OF FUEL TREATED AS PRODUCERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (C) of section 4092(b)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) REDUCED-TAX PURCHASERS TREATED AS PRODUCERS.—Any person to whom any fuel is sold in a sale on which the amount of tax otherwise required to be paid under section 4091 is reduced under section 4093 shall be treated as the producer of such fuel. The amount of tax imposed by section 4091 on any sale of such fuel by such person shall be reduced by the amount of tax imposed under section 4091 (and not credited or refunded) on any prior sale of such fuel."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subsection (b) of section 4093 is amended by inserting "(as defined in section 4092(b) without regard to paragraph (1)(C) thereof)" after "producer".

SEC. 4702. REVISION OF FUEL TAX CREDIT AND REFUND PROCEDURES.

(a) REFUNDS TO CERTAIN SELLERS OF DIESEL FUEL AND AVIATION FUEL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2) of section 6416(b) is amended by striking "4091 or 4121" and inserting "4121 or 4091; except that this paragraph shall apply to a person selling diesel fuel or aviation fuel for a use described in the first sentence if such person meets such requirements as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe".

(2) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT OF TAX ONLY HIGHWAY TRUST FUND FINANCING RATE TO BE REFUNDABLE.—Paragraph (2) of section 6416(b) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "This paragraph shall not apply to the taxes imposed by sections 4081 and 4091 with respect to any use to the same extent that section 6420(a) does not apply to such use by reason of paragraph (1) or (2) of section 6420(c)."

(b) CONSOLIDATION OF REFUND PROVISIONS; REPEAL OF CONSENT REQUIREMENT FOR REFUND OF FUEL TAXES TO CROPDUSTERS, ETC.—Section 6420 (relating to gasoline used on farms) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6420. CERTAIN TAXES ON FUELS USED FOR EXEMPT PURPOSES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, if any fuel on which tax was imposed under section 4041, 4081, or 4091 is used in an exempt use, the Secretary shall pay (without interest) to the ultimate purchaser of such fuel the amount equal to the aggregate tax imposed on such fuel under such sections.

"(b) EXEMPT USES.—For purposes of this section, the term 'exempt use' means—

"(1) in the case of diesel fuel, use other than as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle or a diesel-powered motorboat,

"(2) in the case of aviation fuel, use other than as a fuel in an aircraft,

"(3) in the case of gasoline or aviation fuel, use in an aircraft other than in noncommercial aviation (as defined in section 4041(b)),

"(4) use by any State, any political subdivision of a State, or the District of Columbia,

"(5) use by a nonprofit educational organization (as defined in section 4221(d)(5)),

"(6) export,

"(7) use as supplies for vessels or aircraft (within the meaning of section 4221(d)(3)),

"(8) use on a farm for farming purposes (within the meaning of subsection (e)),

"(9) use in an off-highway business use (within the meaning of subsection (f)),

"(10) use in qualified bus transportation (within the meaning of subsection (g)),

"(11) use by an aircraft museum (within the meaning of subsection (h)),

"(12) use in a nonpurpose use (within the meaning of subsection (i)),

"(13) use in a helicopter for purposes of providing transportation with respect to which the requirements of subsection (e) or (f) of section 4261 are met, and

"(14) use in producing a mixture of a fuel if at least 10 percent of such mixture consists of alcohol (as defined in section 4081(c)(3)) and if such mixture is sold or used in the trade or business of the person producing such mixture.

Paragraph (14) shall not apply with respect to any mixture sold or used after September 30, 2000.

"(c) LIMITATIONS ON AMOUNT OF PAYMENT.—

"(1) NO REFUND OF LEAKING UNDERGROUND STORAGE TANK TRUST FUND TAXES IN CERTAIN CASES.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to so much of the taxes imposed by sections 4081 and 4091 as are attributable to a Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate in the case of—

"(A) fuel used in a train, and

"(B) fuel used in any aircraft (except as supplies for vessels or aircraft within the meaning of section 4221(d)(3)).

"(2) NO REFUND OF DEFICIT REDUCTION TAX ON DIESEL FUEL USED IN TRAINS.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to so much of the tax imposed by section 4091 as is attributable to a deficit reduction rate in the case of diesel fuel used in a diesel-powered train.

"(3) NO REFUND OF PORTION OF TAX ON DIESEL FUEL USED IN CERTAIN BUSES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), the rate of tax taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to diesel fuel used in qualified bus transportation (within the meaning of subsection (g)(1)) shall be 3.1 cents per gallon less than the aggregate rate of tax imposed on such fuel by section 4091.

"(B) EXCEPTION FOR SCHOOL BUS TRANSPORTATION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to fuel used in an automobile bus while engaged in transportation described in subsection (g)(1)(B).

"(C) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN INTRACITY TRANSPORTATION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to fuel used in any automobile bus while engaged in furnishing (for compensation) intracity passenger land transportation—

"(i) which is available to the general public, and

"(ii) which is scheduled and along regular routes, but only if such bus is a qualified local bus.

"(D) QUALIFIED LOCAL BUS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified local bus' means any local bus—

"(i) which has a seating capacity of at least 20 adults (not including the driver), and

"(ii) which is under contract with (or is receiving more than a nominal subsidy from) any State or local government (as defined in section 4221(d)) to furnish such transportation.

"(4) ALCOHOL FUELS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a fuel used as described in subsection (b)(14) and on which tax was imposed at regular tax rate, the rate of tax taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to the fuel so used shall equal the excess of the regular tax rate over the incentive tax rate.

"(B) REGULAR TAX RATE.—The term 'regular tax rate' means—

"(i) in the case of gasoline, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4081 determined without regard to subsection (c) thereof,

"(ii) in the case of diesel fuel, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4091 on such fuel determined without regard to subsection (c) thereof, and

"(iii) in the case of aviation fuel, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4091 on such fuel determined without regard to subsection (d) thereof.

"(C) INCENTIVE TAX RATE.—The term 'incentive tax rate' means—

"(i) in the case of gasoline, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4081 with respect to fuel described in subsection (c)(1) thereof,

"(ii) in the case of diesel fuel, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4091 with respect to fuel described in subsection (c)(1)(B) thereof, and

"(iii) in the case of aviation fuel, the aggregate rate of tax imposed by section 4091 with respect to fuel described in subsection (d)(1)(B) thereof.

"(5) GASOHOL USED IN NONCOMMERCIAL AVIATION.—If—

"(A) tax is imposed by section 4081 at the rate determined under subsection (c) thereof on gasohol (as defined in such subsection), and

"(B) such gasohol is used as a fuel in any aircraft in noncommercial aviation (as defined in section 4041(b)), the payment under subsection (a) shall be equal to 1.4 cents (2 cents in the case of gasohol none of the alcohol in which consists of ethanol) per gallon of gasohol so used.

"(d) TIME FOR FILING CLAIMS; PERIOD COVERED.—

"(1) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), not more than one claim may be filed under this section by any person with respect to fuel used (or a qualified diesel powered highway vehicle purchased) during his taxable year; and no claim shall be allowed under this paragraph with respect to fuel used (or a qualified diesel powered highway vehicle purchased) during any taxable year unless filed by the purchaser not later than the time prescribed by law for filing a claim for credit or refund of overpayment of income tax for such taxable year. For purposes of this subsection, a person's taxable year shall be his taxable year for purposes of subtitle A.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If as of the close of any quarter of a person's taxable year, $750 or more is payable under this section to such person with respect to fuel used (or a qualified diesel powered highway vehicle purchased) during such quarter or any prior quarter of such taxable year (and for which no other claim has been filed), a claim may be filed under this section with respect to fuel so used (or qualified diesel powered highway vehicles so purchased).

"(B) TIME FOR FILING CLAIM.—No claim filed under this paragraph shall be allowed unless filed during the first quarter following the last quarter included in the claim.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR GASOHOL CREDIT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A claim may be filed for gasoline used to produce gasohol (as defined in section 4081(c)(1)) for any period—

"(i) for which $200 or more is payable by reason of subsection (b)(14), and

"(ii) which is not less than 1 week.

"(B) PAYMENT OF CLAIM.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), if the Secretary has not paid a claim filed pursuant to subparagraph (A) within 20 days of the date of the filing of such claim, the claim shall be paid with interest from such date determined by using the overpayment rate and method under section 6621.

"(e) USE ON A FARM FOR FARMING.—For purposes of subsection (b)(8)—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Fuel shall be treated as used on a farm for farming purposes only if used—

"(A) in carrying on a trade or business,

"(B) on a farm situated in the United States, and

"(C) for farming purposes.

"(2) FARM.—The term 'farm' includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, fur-bearing animal, and truck farms, plantations, ranches, nurseries, ranges, greenhouses or other similar structures used primarily for the raising of agricultural or horticultural commodities, and orchards.

"(3) FARMING PURPOSES.—Fuel shall be treated as used for farming purposes only if used—

"(A) by the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm, in connection with cultivating the soil, or in connection with raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity, including the raising, shearing, feeding, caring for, training, and management of livestock, bees, poultry, and fur-bearing animals and wildlife, on a farm of which he is the owner, tenant, or operator;

"(B) by the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm, in handling, drying, packing, grading, or storing any agricultural or horticultural commodity in its unmanufactured state; but only if such owner, tenant, or operator produced more than one-half of the commodity which he so treated during the period with respect to which claim is filed;

"(C) by the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm, in connection with—

"(i) the planting, cultivating, caring for, or cutting of trees, or

"(ii) the preparation (other than milling) of trees for market, incidental to farming operations; or

"(D) by the owner, tenant, or operator of a farm, in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment.

"(4) CERTAIN FARMING USE OTHER THAN BY OWNER, ETC.—In applying paragraph (3)(A) to a use on a farm for any purpose described in paragraph (3)(A) by any person other than the owner, tenant, or operator of such farm—

"(A) the owner, tenant, or operator of such farm shall be treated as the user and ultimate purchaser of the fuel, except that

"(B) if the person so using the fuel is an aerial or other applicator of fertilizers or other substances and is the ultimate purchaser of the fuel, then subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall not apply and the aerial or other applicator shall be treated as having used such fuel on a farm for farming purposes.

"(f) OFF-HIGHWAY BUSINESS USE.—For purposes of subsection (b)(9)—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'off-highway business use' means any use by a person in a trade or business of such person or in an activity of such person described in section 212 (relating to production of income) otherwise than as a fuel in a highway vehicle—

"(A) which (at the time of such use) is registered, or is required to be registered, for highway use under the laws of any State or foreign country, or

"(B) which, in the case of a highway vehicle owned by the United States, is used on the highway.

"(2) USES IN MOTORBOATS.—The term 'off-highway business use' does not include any use in a motorboat; except that such term shall include any use in—

"(A) a vessel employed in the fisheries or in the whaling business, and

"(B) for purposes of the tax imposed under section 4091, a motorboat in the active conduct of—

"(i) a trade or business of commercial fishing or transporting persons or property for compensation or hire, or

"(ii) any other trade or business unless the motorboat is used predominantly in any activity which is of a type generally considered to constitute entertainment, amusement or recreation.

"(g) QUALIFIED BUS TRANSPORTATION.—For purposes of subsection (b)(10)—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Fuel is used in qualified bus transportation if it is used in an automobile bus while engaged in—

"(A) furnishing (for compensation) passenger land transportation available to the general public, or

"(B) the transportation of students and employees of schools (as defined in the last sentence of section 4221(d)(7)(C)).

"(2) LIMITATION IN THE CASE OF NONSCHEDULED INTERCITY OR LOCAL BUSES.—Paragraph (1)(A) shall not apply in respect of fuel used in any automobile bus while engaged in furnishing transportation which is not along regular routes unless the seating capacity of such bus is at least 20 adults (not including the driver).

"(h) USE BY AN AIRCRAFT MUSEUM.—For purposes of subsection (b)(11)—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Fuel is used by an aircraft museum if it is used in an aircraft or vehicle owned by such museum and used exclusively for purposes set forth in paragraph (2)(C).

"(2) AIRCRAFT MUSEUM.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'aircraft museum' means an organization—

"(A) described in section 501(c)(3) which is exempt from income tax under section 501(a),

"(B) operated as a museum under charter by a State or the District of Columbia, and

"(C) operated exclusively for the procurement, care, and exhibition of aircraft of the type used for combat or transport in World War II.

"(i) USE IN A NONPURPOSE USE.—For purposes of subsection (b)(12), fuel is used in a nonpurpose use if—

"(1) tax was imposed by section 4041 on the sale thereof and the purchaser—

"(A) uses such fuel other than for the use for which it is sold, or

"(B) resells such fuel, or

"(2) tax was imposed by section 4081 on any gasoline blend stock or product commonly used as an additive in gasoline and the purchaser establishes that the ultimate use of such blend stock or product is not to produce gasoline.

"(j) ADVANCE REPAYMENT OF INCREASED DIESEL FUEL TAX TO ORIGINAL PURCHASERS OF DIESEL-POWERED AUTOMOBILES AND LIGHT TRUCKS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (d), the Secretary shall pay (without interest) to the original purchaser of any qualified diesel-powered highway vehicle an amount equal to the diesel fuel differential amount.

"(2) QUALIFIED DIESEL-POWERED HIGHWAY VEHICLE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified diesel-powered highway vehicle' means any diesel-powered highway vehicle which—

"(A) has at least 4 wheels,

"(B) has a gross vehicle weight rating of 10,000 pounds or less, and

"(C) is registered for highway use in the United States under the laws of any State.

"(3) DIESEL FUEL DIFFERENTIAL AMOUNT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'diesel fuel differential amount' means—

"(A) except as provided in subparagraph (B), $102, or

"(B) in the case of a truck or van, $198.

"(4) ORIGINAL PURCHASER.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'original purchaser' means the first person to purchase the qualified diesel-powered vehicle for use other than resale.

"(B) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PERSONS NOT SUBJECT TO FUELS TAX.—The term 'original purchaser' shall not include any State or local government (as defined in section 4221(d)(4)) or any nonprofit educational organization (as defined in section 4221(d)(5)).

"(C) TREATMENT OF DEMONSTRATION USE BY DEALER.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), use as a demonstrator by a dealer shall not be taken into account.

"(5) VEHICLES TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection shall only apply to qualified diesel-powered highway vehicles originally purchased after January 1, 1985, and before January 1, 1995.

"(6) BASIS REDUCTION.—For the purposes of subtitle A, the basis of any qualified diesel-powered highway vehicle shall be reduced by the amount payable under this subsection with respect to such vehicle.

"(k) INCOME TAX CREDIT IN LIEU OF PAYMENT; OTHER SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) INCOME TAX CREDIT IN LIEU OF PAYMENT.—

"(A) PERSONS NOT SUBJECT TO INCOME TAX.—Payment shall be made under this section only to—

"(i) the United States or an agency or instrumentality thereof, a State, a political subdivision of a State, or any agency or instrumentality of one or more States or political subdivisions, or

"(ii) an organization exempt from tax under section 501(a) (other than an organization required to make a return of the tax imposed under subtitle A for its taxable year).

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to a payment of a claim filed under paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (d).

"(C) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT AGAINST INCOME TAX.—

"For allowances of credit against the income tax imposed by subtitle A for fuel used by the purchaser in an exempt use, see section 34.

"(2) APPLICABLE LAWS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—All provisions of law, including penalties, applicable in respect of the tax with respect to which a payment is claimed under this section shall, insofar as applicable and not inconsistent with this section, apply in respect of such payment to the same extent as if such payment constituted a refund of overpayments of such tax.

"(B) EXAMINATION OF BOOKS AND WITNESSES.—For the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any claim made under this section, or the correctness of any payment made in respect of any such claim, the Secretary shall have the authority granted by paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 7602(a) (relating to examination of books and witnesses) as if the claimant were the person liable for tax.

"(3) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 6416, ETC.—No amount shall be payable under this section to any person with respect to any fuel if the Secretary determines that the amount of tax for which such payment is sought was not included in the price paid by such person for such fuel. The amount which would (but for this sentence) be payable under this section with respect to any fuel shall be reduced by any other amount which the Secretary determines is payable under this section, or is refundable under any other provision of this title, to any person with respect to such fuel.

"(4) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may by regulations prescribe the conditions, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, under which payments may be made under this section.

"(l) FUELS—For purposes of this section, the terms 'gasoline', 'diesel fuel', and 'aviation fuel' have the respective meanings given such terms by sections 4082 and 4092.

"(m) TERMINATION.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, this section shall not apply to any liquid purchased after September 30, 1999. The preceding sentence shall not apply to taxes attributable to any Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund financing rate."

SEC. 4703. AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE EXCEPTIONS FROM INFORMATION REPORTING WITH RESPECT TO DIESEL FUEL AND AVIATION FUEL.

(a) RETURNS BY PRODUCERS AND IMPORTERS.—Subparagraph (A) of section 4093(c)(4) (relating to returns by producers and importers) is amended by striking "Each producer" and inserting "Except as provided by the Secretary by regulations, each producer".

(b) RETURNS BY PURCHASERS.—Subparagraph (C) of section 4093(c)(4) (relating to returns by purchasers) is amended by striking "Each person" and inserting "Except as provided by the Secretary by regulations, each person".

SEC. 4704. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(1) Sections 6421 and 6427 are hereby repealed.

(2) Section 34 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 34. EXCISE TAXES ON FUEL USED FOR EXEMPT PURPOSES.

"There shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this subtitle for the taxable year an amount equal to the excess of—

"(1) the aggregate amount payable to the taxpayer under section 6420 (determined without regard to section 6420(k)(1)) with respect to—

"(A) exempt uses (as defined in section 6420(b)) during such taxable year, and

"(B) qualified diesel-powered highway vehicles purchased during such taxable year, over

"(2) the portion of such amount for which a claim payable under section 6420(d) is timely filed."

(3) Subsection (c) of section 40 is amended by striking "subsection (b)(2), (k), or (m)" and inserting "subsection (a)(4) or (b)(4)"

(4) Paragraph (2) of section 451(e) is amended by striking "section 6420(c)(3)" and inserting "section 6420(e)(3)".

Subtitle H—Administrative Provisions

PART I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 4801. SIMPLIFICATION OF EMPLOYMENT TAXES ON DOMESTIC SERVICES.

(a) THRESHOLD REQUIREMENT FOR SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 3121(a)(7) (defining wages) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) cash remuneration paid by an employer in any calendar year to an employee for domestic service in a private home of the employer, if the cash remuneration paid in such year by the employer to the employee for such service is less than $300. As used in this subparagraph, the term 'domestic service in a private home of the employer' does not include service described in subsection (g)(5);"

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 209(a)(6) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(B) Cash remuneration paid by an employer in any calendar year to an employee for domestic service in a private home of the employer, if the cash remuneration paid in such year by the employer to the employee for such service is less than $300. As used in this subparagraph, the term 'domestic service in a private home of the employer' does not include service described in section 210(f)(5)."

(3) The second sentence of section 3102(a) is amended—

(A) by striking "calendar quarter" each place it appears and inserting "calendar year", and

(B) by striking "$50" and inserting "$300".

(b) COORDINATION OF COLLECTION OF DOMESTIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT WITH COLLECTION OF INCOME TAXES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 25 (relating to general provisions relating to employment taxes) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 3510. COORDINATION OF COLLECTION OF DOMESTIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT TAXES WITH COLLECTION OF INCOME TAXES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as otherwise provided in this section—

"(1) returns with respect to domestic service employment taxes shall be made on a calendar year basis,

"(2) any such return for any calendar year shall be filed on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the employer's taxable year which begins in such calendar year, and

"(3) no requirement to make deposits (or to pay installments under section 6157) shall apply with respect to such taxes.

"(b) DOMESTIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT TAXES SUBJECT TO ESTIMATED TAX PROVISIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Solely for purposes of section 6654, domestic service employment taxes imposed with respect to any calendar year shall be treated as a tax imposed by chapter 2 for the taxable year of the employer which begins in such calendar year.

"(2) ANNUALIZATION.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, appropriate adjustments shall be made in the application of section 6654(d)(2) in respect of the amount treated as tax under paragraph (1).

"(3) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—For purposes of applying section 6654 to a taxable year beginning in 1992, the amount referred to in clause (ii) of section 6654(d)(1)(B) shall be increased by 90 percent of the amount treated as tax under paragraph (1) for such taxable year.

"(c) DOMESTIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—For purposes of this section, the term 'domestic service employment taxes' means—

"(1) any taxes imposed by chapter 21 or 23 on remuneration paid for domestic service in a private home of the employer, and

"(2) any amount withheld from such remuneration pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p).

For purposes of this subsection, the term 'domestic service in a private home of the employer' does not include service described in section 3121(g)(5).

"(d) EXCEPTION WHERE EMPLOYER LIABLE FOR OTHER EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—To the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, this section shall not apply to any employer for any calendar year if such employer is liable for any tax under this subtitle with respect to remuneration for services other than domestic service in a private home of the employer.

"(e) GENERAL REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section. Such regulations may treat domestic service employment taxes as taxes imposed by chapter 1 for purposes of coordinating the assessment and collection of such employment taxes with the assessment and collection of domestic employers' income taxes.

"(f) AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENTS TO COLLECT STATE UNEMPLOYMENT TAXES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is hereby authorized to enter into an agreement with any State to collect, as the agent of such State, such State's unemployment taxes imposed on remuneration paid for domestic service in a private home of the employer. Any taxes to be collected by the Secretary pursuant to such an agreement shall be treated as domestic service employment taxes for purposes of this section.

"(2) TRANSFERS TO STATE ACCOUNT.—Any amount collected under an agreement referred to in paragraph (1) shall be transferred by the Secretary to the account of the State in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

"(3) SUBTITLE F MADE APPLICABLE.—For purposes of subtitle F, any amount required to be collected under an agreement under paragraph (1) shall be treated as a tax imposed by chapter 23.

"(4) STATE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'State' has the meaning given such term by section 3306(j)(1)."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 25 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Sec. 3510. Coordination of collection of domestic service employment taxes with collection of income taxes."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid in calendar years after 1992.

SEC. 4802. USE OF REPRODUCTIONS OF RETURNS STORED IN DIGITAL IMAGE FORMAT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (2) of section 6103(p) (relating to procedure and recordkeeping) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) REPRODUCTION FROM DIGITAL IMAGES.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'reproduction' includes a reproduction from digital images."

(b) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of available digital image technology for the purpose of determining the extent to which reproductions of documents stored using that technology accurately reflect the data on the original document and the appropriate period for retaining the original document. Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, a report on the results of such study shall be submitted to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to judicial proceedings pending on, or commenced after, the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4804. REPEAL OF SPECIAL AUDIT PROVISIONS FOR SUBCHAPTER S ITEMS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subchapter D of chapter 63 (relating to tax treatment of subchapter S items) is hereby repealed.

(b) CONSISTENT TREATMENT REQUIRED.—Section 6037 (relating to return of S corporation) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) SHAREHOLDER'S RETURN MUST BE CONSISTENT WITH CORPORATE RETURN OR SECRETARY NOTIFIED OF INCONSISTENCY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A shareholder of an S corporation shall, on such shareholder's return, treat a subchapter S item in a manner which is consistent with the treatment of such item on the corporate return.

"(2) NOTIFICATION OF INCONSISTENT TREATMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any subchapter S item, if—

"(i)(I) the corporation has filed a return but the shareholder's treatment on his return is (or may be) inconsistent with the treatment of the item on the corporate return, or

"(II) the corporation has not filed a return, and

"(ii) the shareholder files with the Secretary a statement identifying the inconsistency, paragraph (1) shall not apply to such item.

"(B) SHAREHOLDER RECEIVING INCORRECT INFORMATION.—A shareholder shall be treated as having complied with clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) with respect to a subchapter S item if the shareholder—

"(i) demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the treatment of the subchapter S item on the shareholder's return is consistent with the treatment of the item on the schedule furnished to the shareholder by the corporation, and

"(ii) elects to have this paragraph apply with respect to that item.

"(3) EFFECT OF FAILURE TO NOTIFY.—In any case—

"(A) described in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) of paragraph (2), and

"(B) in which the shareholder does not comply with subparagraph (A)(ii) of paragraph (2), any adjustment required to make the treatment of the items by such shareholder consistent with the treatment of the items on the corporate return shall be treated as arising out of mathematical or clerical errors and assessed according to section 6213(b)(1). Paragraph (2) of section 6213(b) shall not apply to any assessment referred to in the preceding sentence.

"(4) SUBCHAPTER S ITEM.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'subchapter S item' means any item of an S corporation to the extent that regulations prescribed by the Secretary provide that, for purposes of this subtitle, such item is more appropriately determined at the corporation level than at the shareholder level.

"(5) ADDITION TO TAX FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH SECTION.—

"For addition to tax in the case of a shareholder's negligence in connection with, or disregard of, the requirements of this section, see part II of subchapter A of chapter 68."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 1366 is amended by striking subsection (g).

(2) Subsection (b) of section 6233 is amended to read as follows:

"(b) SIMILAR RULES IN CERTAIN CASES.—If a partnership return is filed for any taxable year but it is determined that there is no entity for such taxable year, to the extent provided in regulations, rules similar to the rules of subsection (a) shall apply."

(3) The table of subchapters for chapter 63 is amended by striking the item relating to subchapter D.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

"(ii) which is contingent on a minimum catch; and

"(iii) which is paid solely for additional duties (such as mate, engineer, or cook) for which additional cash remuneration is traditional in the industry,".

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 6050A(a) (relating to reporting requirements of certain fishing boat operators) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting "; and" and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) any cash remuneration described in section 3121(b)(20)(A)."

(b) AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT.—

(1) DETERMINATION OF SIZE OF CREW.—Subsection (a) of section 210 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"For purposes of paragraph (20), the operating crew of a boat shall be treated as normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals if the average size of the operating crew on trips made during the preceding 4 calendar quarters consisted of fewer than 10 individuals."

(2) CERTAIN CASH REMUNERATION PERMITTED.—Subparagraph (A) of section 210(a)(20) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(A) such individual does not receive any additional compensation other than as provided in subparagraph (B) and other than cash remuneration—

"(i) which does not exceed $100 per trip;

"(ii) which is contingent on a minimum catch; and

"(iii) which is paid solely for additional duties (such as mate, engineer, or cook) for which additional cash remuneration is traditional in the industry,".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1992.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall also apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984, and before January 1, 1993, unless the payor treated such remuneration (when paid) as being subject to tax under chapter 21 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

TITLE V—TAXPAYER BILL OF RIGHTS 2

SEC. 5000. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Taxpayer Bill of Rights 2".

Subtitle A—Taxpayer Advocate

SEC. 5001. ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION OF TAXPAYER ADVOCATE WITHIN INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 7802 (relating to Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Assistant Commissioner (Employee Plans and Exempt Organizations)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) OFFICE OF TAXPAYER ADVOCATE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established in the Internal Revenue Service an office to be known as the 'Office of the Taxpayer Advocate'. Such office, including all problem resolution officers, shall be under the supervision and direction of an official to be known as the 'Taxpayer Advocate' who shall report directly to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The Taxpayer Advocate shall be entitled to compensation at the same rate as the Chief Counsel for the Internal Revenue Service.

"(2) FUNCTIONS OF OFFICE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—It shall be the function of the Office of Taxpayer Advocate to—

"(i) assist taxpayers in resolving problems with the Internal Revenue Service,

"(ii) identify areas in which taxpayers have problems in dealings with the Internal Revenue Service,

"(iii) to the extent possible, propose changes in the administrative practices of the Internal Revenue Service to mitigate problems identified under clause (ii), and

"(iv) identify potential legislative changes which may be appropriate to mitigate such problems.

"(B) ANNUAL REPORTS.—

"(i) OBJECTIVES.—Not later than October 31 of each calendar year after 1992, the Taxpayer Advocate shall report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate on the objectives of the Taxpayer Advocate for the following calendar year. Any such report shall contain full and substantive analysis, in addition to statistical information.

"(ii) ACTIVITIES.—Not later than June 30 of each calendar year after 1992, the Taxpayer Advocate shall report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate on the activities of the Taxpayer Advocate during the fiscal year ending during such calendar year. Any such report shall contain full and substantive analysis, in addition to statistical information, and shall—

"(I) identify the initiatives the Taxpayer Advocate has taken on improving taxpayer services and Internal Revenue Service responsiveness,

"(II) contain recommendations received from individuals with the authority to issue taxpayer assistance orders under section 7811,

"(III) contain a summary of at least 20 of the most serious problems encountered by taxpayers, including a description of the nature of such problems,

"(IV) contain an inventory of the items described in subclauses (I), (II), and (III) for which action has been taken and the result of such action,

"(V) contain an inventory of the items described in subclauses (I), (II), and (III) for which action remains to be completed and the period during which each item has remained on such inventory,

"(VI) contain an inventory of the items described in subclauses (II) and (III) for which no action has been taken, the period during which each item has remained on such inventory, the reasons for the inaction, and identify any Internal Revenue Service official who is responsible for such inaction,

"(VII) identify any Taxpayer Assistance Order which was not honored by the Internal Revenue Service in a timely manner, as specified under section 7811(b),

"(VIII) contain recommendations for such administrative and legislative action as may be appropriate to resolve problems encountered by taxpayers, and

"(IX) include such other information as the Taxpayer Advocate may deem advisable.

"(3) RESPONSIBILITIES OF COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall establish procedures requiring a formal response to all recommendations submitted to the Commissioner by the Taxpayer Advocate."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 7811 (relating to taxpayer assistance orders) is amended—

(A) by striking "the Office of Ombudsman" in subsection (a) and inserting "the Office of the Taxpayer Advocate", and

(B) by striking "Ombudsman" each place it appears (including in the headings of subsections (e) and (f)) and inserting "Taxpayer Advocate".

(2) The heading for section 7802 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 7802. COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE; ASSISTANT COMMISSIONERS; TAXPAYER ADVOCATE."

(3) The table of sections for subchapter A of chapter 80 of subtitle F is amended by striking the item relating to section 7802 and inserting the following new item:

"Sec. 7802. Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Assistant Commissioners; Taxpayer Advocate."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5002. EXPANSION OF AUTHORITY TO ISSUE TAXPAYER ASSISTANCE ORDERS.

(a) TERMS OF ORDERS.—Subsection (b) of section 7811 (relating to terms of taxpayer assistance orders) is amended—

(1) by inserting "within a specified time period" after "the Secretary", and

(2) by inserting "take any action as permitted by law," after "cease any action,".

(b) LIMITATION ON AUTHORITY TO MODIFY OR RESCIND.—Section 7811(c) (relating to authority to modify or rescind) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) AUTHORITY TO MODIFY OR RESCIND.—Any Taxpayer Assistance Order issued by the Taxpayer Advocate under this section may be modified or rescinded only by the Taxpayer Advocate, the Commissioner, or any superior of either."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Modifications to Installment Agreement Provisions

SEC. 5101. NOTIFICATION OF REASONS FOR TERMINATION OR DENIAL OF INSTALLMENT AGREEMENTS.

(a) TERMINATIONS.—Subsection (b) of section 6159 (relating to extent to which agreements remain in effect) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may not take any action under paragraph (2), (3), or (4) unless—

"(A) a notice of such action is provided to the taxpayer not later than the day 30 days before the date of such action, and

"(B) such notice includes an explanation why the Secretary intends to take such action.

The preceding sentence shall not apply in any case in which the Secretary believes that collection of any tax to which an agreement under this section relates is in jeopardy."

(b) DENIALS.—Section 6159 (relating to agreements for payment of tax liability in installments) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS FOR DENIALS.—The Secretary may not deny any request for an installment agreement under this section unless—

"(1) a notice of the proposed denial is provided to the taxpayer not later than the day 30 days before the date of such denial, and

"(2) such notice includes an explanation why the Secretary intends to deny such request.

The preceding sentence shall not apply in any case in which the Secretary believes that collection of any tax to which a request for an agreement under this section relates is in jeopardy."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (3) of section 6159(b) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) SUBSEQUENT CHANGE IN FINANCIAL CONDITIONS.—If the Secretary makes a determination that the financial condition of a taxpayer with whom the Secretary has entered into an agreement under subsection (a) has significantly changed, the Secretary may alter, modify, or terminate such agreement."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5102. ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW OF DENIAL OF REQUEST FOR, OR TERMINATION OF, INSTALLMENT AGREEMENT.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 6159 (relating to agreements for payment of tax liability in installments), as amended by section 5101, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—The Secretary shall establish procedures for an independent administrative review of denials of requests for, or terminations of, installment agreements under this section."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on January 1, 1993.

Subtitle C—Interest

SEC. 5201. EXPANSION OF AUTHORITY TO ABATE INTEREST.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (1) of section 6404(e) (relating to abatement of interest in certain cases) is amended—

(1) by striking "In the case" and inserting "With respect to any eligible taxpayer, in the case",

(2) by striking "in performing a ministerial act" in subparagraph (A),

(3) by striking "being erroneous or dilatory in performing a ministerial act" in subparagraph (B),

(4) by inserting "unreasonable" before "error" each place it appears, and

(5) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For purposes of this paragraph, a taxpayer is eligible if such taxpayer meets the requirements referenced in section 7430(c)(4)(C)."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The subsection heading for subsection (e) of section 6404 is amended by striking "Assessments" and inserting "Abatement".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to interest accruing with respect to deficiencies or payments for taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5202. EXTENSION OF INTEREST-FREE PERIOD FOR PAYMENT OF TAX AFTER NOTICE AND DEMAND.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (3) of section 6601(e) (relating to payments made within 10 days after notice and demand) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) PAYMENTS MADE WITHIN SPECIFIED PERIOD AFTER NOTICE AND DEMAND.—If notice and demand is made for payment of any amount and if such amount is paid within 21 days (10 days if the amount for which such notice and demand is made equals or exceeds $100,000) after the date of such notice and demand, interest under this section on the amount so paid shall not be imposed for the period after the date of such notice and demand."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (3) of section 6651(a) (relating to addition to tax for failure to file tax return or pay tax) is amended by striking "10 days" and inserting "21 days".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply in the case of any notice and demand given after the date 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle D—Joint Returns

SEC. 5301. DISCLOSURE OF COLLECTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (e) of section 6103 (relating to disclosure to persons having material interest) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) DISCLOSURE OF COLLECTION ACTIVITIES WITH RESPECT TO JOINT RETURN.—If any deficiency of tax with respect to a joint return is assessed and the individuals filing such return are no longer married or no longer reside in the same household, upon request in writing of either of such individuals, the Secretary may disclose in writing to the individual making the request whether the Secretary has attempted to collect such deficiency from such other individual, the general nature of such collection activities, and the amount collected."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5302. JOINT RETURN MAY BE MADE AFTER SEPARATE RETURNS WITHOUT FULL PAYMENT OF TAX.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (2) of section 6013(b) (relating to limitations on filing of joint return after filing separate returns) is amended by striking subparagraph (A) and redesignating the following subparagraphs accordingly.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle E—Collection Activities

SEC. 5401. MODIFICATIONS TO LIEN AND LEVY PROVISIONS.

(a) WITHDRAWAL OF CERTAIN NOTICES.—Section 6323 (relating to validity and priority against certain persons) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) WITHDRAWAL OF NOTICE IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may withdraw a notice of a lien filed under this section and this chapter shall be applied as if the withdrawn notice had not been filed, if the Secretary determines that—

"(A) the filing of such notice was premature or otherwise not in accordance with administrative procedures of the Secretary,

"(B) the taxpayer has entered into an agreement under section 6159 to satisfy the tax liability for which the lien was imposed by means of installment payments, unless such agreement provides otherwise,

"(C) the withdrawal of such notice will facilitate the collection of the tax liability, or

"(D) with the consent of the taxpayer or the Taxpayer Advocate, the withdrawal of such notice would be in the best interests of the taxpayer (as determined by the Taxpayer Advocate) and the United States.

Any such withdrawal shall be made by filing notice thereof at the same office as the withdrawn notice. A copy of such notice shall be provided to the taxpayer.

"(2) NOTICE TO CREDIT AGENCIES, ETC.—Upon written request by the taxpayer with respect to whom a notice of a lien was withdrawn under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall promptly make reasonable efforts to notify credit reporting agencies, and any financial institution or creditor whose name and address is specified in such request, of the withdrawal of such notice. Any such request shall be in such form as the Secretary may prescribe.".

(b) RETURN OF LEVIED PROPERTY IN CERTAIN CASES.—Section 6343 (relating to authority to release levy and return property) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) RETURN OF PROPERTY IN CERTAIN CASES.—If—

"(1) any property has been levied upon, and

"(2) the Secretary determines that—

"(A) the levy on such property was premature or otherwise not in accordance with administrative procedures of the Secretary,

"(B) the taxpayer has entered into an agreement under section 6159 to satisfy the tax liability for which the levy was imposed by means of installment payments, unless such agreement provides otherwise,

"(C) the return of such property will facilitate the collection of the tax liability, or

"(D) with the consent of the taxpayer or the Taxpayer Advocate, the return of such property would be in the best interests of the taxpayer (as determined by the Taxpayer Advocate) and the United States, the provisions of subsection (b) shall apply in the same manner as if such property had been wrongly levied upon, except that no interest shall be allowed under subsection (c)."

(c) MODIFICATIONS IN CERTAIN LEVY EXEMPTION AMOUNTS.—

(1) FUEL, ETC.—Paragraph (2) of section 6334(a) (relating to fuel, provisions, furniture, and personal effects exempt from levy) is amended—

(A) by striking "If the taxpayer is the head of a family, so" and inserting "So", and

(B) by striking "$1,650 ($1,500 in the case of levies issued during 1989)" and inserting "$1,700".

(2) BOOKS, ETC.—Paragraph (3) of section 6334(a) (relating to books and tools of a trade, business, or profession exempt from levy) is amended by striking "$1,100 ($1,050 in the case of levies issued during 1989)" and inserting "$1,200".

(3) INDEXED FOR INFLATION.—Section 6334 (relating to property exempt from levy) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) INFLATION ADJUSTMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any calendar year beginning after 1992, each dollar amount referred to in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

"(A) such dollar amount, multiplied by

"(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year, by substituting 'calendar year 1992' for 'calendar year 1989' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

"(2) ROUNDING.—If any dollar amount after being increased under paragraph (1) is not a multiple of $10, such dollar amount shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $10 (or, if such dollar amount is a multiple of $5, such dollar amount shall be increased to the next higher multiple of $10)."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) EXEMPT AMOUNTS.—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall take effect with respect to levies issued after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 5402. OFFERS-IN-COMPROMISE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (a) of section 7122 (relating to compromises) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The Secretary may make such a compromise in any case where the Secretary determines that such compromise would be in the best interests of the United States.".

(b) REVIEW REQUIREMENTS.—Subsection (b) of section 7122 (relating to records) is amended by striking "$500." and inserting "$50,000. However, such compromise shall be subject to continuing quality review by the Secretary.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5403. NOTIFICATION OF EXAMINATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7605 (relating to restrictions on examination of taxpayer) is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENT.—No examination described in subsection (a) shall be made unless the Secretary notifies the taxpayer in writing by mail to an address determined under section 6212(b) that the taxpayer is under examination and provides the taxpayer with an explanation of the process as described in section 7521(b)(1). The preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of any examination if the Secretary determines that—

"(1) such examination is in connection with a criminal investigation or is with respect to a tax the collection of which is in jeopardy, or

"(2) the application of the preceding sentence would be inconsistent with national security needs or would interfere with the effective conduct of a confidential law enforcement or foreign counterintelligence activity.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (1) of section 7521(b) (relating to safeguards) is amended by striking "or at".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5404. MODIFICATION OF CERTAIN LIMITS ON RECOVERY OF CIVIL DAMAGES FOR UNAUTHORIZED COLLECTION ACTIONS.

(a) STANDARDS OF CONDUCT.—Subsection (a) of section 7433 (relating to civil damages for certain unauthorized collection actions) is amended by striking "recklessly or intentionally" and inserting "negligently, or recklessly or intentionally."

(b) DOLLAR LIMITS WITH RESPECT TO STANDARD OF CONDUCT.—Section 7433(b) (relating to damages) is amended—

(1) by inserting ($1,000,000, in the case of reckless or intentional disregard)" after "$100,000", and

(2) by inserting "negligent, or" before "reckless or intentional" in paragraph (1).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to actions by officers or employees of the Internal Revenue Service after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5405. SAFEGUARDS RELATING TO DESIGNATED SUMMONS.

(a) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—Subparagraph (A) of section 6503(k)(2) (defining designated summons) is amended by redesignating clauses (i) and (ii) as clauses (ii) and (iii), respectively, and by inserting before clause (ii) (as so redesignated) the following new clause:

"(i) the issuance of such summons is preceded by a review of such issuance by the regional counsel of the Office of Chief Counsel for the region in which the examination of the corporation is being conducted,".

(b) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS FOR ISSUANCE.—Section 6503(k) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.—With respect to any summons referred to in paragraph (1)(A) issued to any person other than the corporation, the Secretary shall promptly notify the corporation, in writing, that such summons has been issued with respect to such corporation's return of tax."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to summons issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5502. CIVIL DAMAGES FOR FRAUDULENT FILING OF INFORMATION RETURNS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subchapter B of chapter 76 (relating to proceedings by taxpayers and third parties) is amended by redesignating section 7434 as section 7435 and by inserting after section 7433 the following new section:

"SEC. 7434. CIVIL DAMAGES FOR FRAUDULENT FILING OF INFORMATION RETURNS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—If any person willfully files a false or fraudulent information return with respect to payments purported to be made to any other person, such other person may bring a civil action for damages against the person so filing such return.

"(b) DAMAGES.—In any action brought under subsection (a), upon a finding of liability on the part of the defendant, the defendant shall be liable to the plaintiff in an amount equal to the greater of $5,000 or the sum of—

"(1) any actual damages sustained by the plaintiff as a proximate result of the filing of the false or fraudulent information return (including any costs attributable to resolving deficiencies asserted as a result of such filing), and

"(2) the costs of the action.

"(c) PERIOD FOR BRINGING ACTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an action to enforce the liability created under this section may be brought without regard to the amount in controversy and may be brought only within the later of—

"(1) 4 years after the date of the filing of the false or fraudulent information return, or

"(2) 1 year after the date such false or fraudulent information return would have been discovered by exercise of reasonable care.

"(d) COPY OF COMPLAINT FILED WITH IRS.—Any person bringing an action under subsection (a) shall provide a copy of the complaint to the Internal Revenue Service upon the filing of such complaint with the court.

"(e) FINDING OF COURT TO INCLUDE CORRECT AMOUNT OF PAYMENT.—The judgment of the court in an action brought under subsection (a) shall include a finding of the correct amount which should have been reported in the information return.

"(f) INFORMATION RETURN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'information return' means any statement described in section 6724(d)(1)(A)."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 76 is amended by striking the item relating to section 7434 and inserting the following:

"Sec. 7434. Civil damages for fraudulent filing of information returns.

"Sec. 7435. Cross references."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to false or fraudulent information returns filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 6201 (relating to assessment authority) is amended by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e) and by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d) REQUIRED REASONABLE VERIFICATION OF INFORMATION RETURNS.—In any court proceeding, if a taxpayer asserts a reasonable dispute with respect to any item of income reported on an information return filed with the Secretary under subpart B of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 by a third party and the taxpayer has fully cooperated with the Secretary (including providing, within a reasonable period of time, access to and inspection of all witnesses, information, and documents within the control of the taxpayer as reasonably requested by the Secretary), the Secretary shall present reasonable and probative information concerning such deficiency in addition to such information return."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle G—Modifications To Penalty for Failure to Collect and Pay Over Tax

SEC. 5601. PRELIMINARY NOTICE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6672 (relating to failure to collect and pay over tax, or attempt to evade or defeat tax) is amended by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c) and by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) PRELIMINARY NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No penalty shall be imposed under subsection (a) unless the Secretary notifies the taxpayer in writing by mail to an address as determined under section 6212(b) that the taxpayer shall be subject to an assessment of such penalty.

"(2) TIMING OF NOTICE.—The mailing of the notice described in paragraph (1) shall precede any notice and demand of any penalty under subsection (a) by at least 60 days.

"(3) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—If a notice described in paragraph (1) with respect to any penalty is mailed before the expiration of the period provided by section 6501 for the assessment of such penalty (determined without regard to this paragraph), the period provided by such section for the assessment of such penalty shall not expire before the date 90 days after the date on which such notice was mailed.

"(4) EXCEPTION FOR JEOPARDY.—This subsection shall not apply if the Secretary finds that the collection of the penalty is in jeopardy."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply in the case of failures after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5602. NO PENALTY IF PROMPT NOTIFICATION OF THE SECRETARY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6672 (relating to failure to collect and pay over tax, or attempt to evade or defeat tax) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) PENALTY NOT APPLICABLE WHERE PROMPT NOTIFICATION OF FAILURE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A person shall not be liable for any penalty under subsection (a) by reason of any failure referred to in subsection (a) if—

"(A) such person is not a significant owner of the trade or business with respect to which such failure occurred,

"(B) such person notifies the Secretary (in such manner as he may prescribe) that such failure has occurred within 21 days after the date of such failure,

"(C) such notification was before any notice by the Secretary to any person with respect to such failure, and

"(D) such failure is not a part of a plan to defraud the Federal Government.

"(2) SIGNIFICANT OWNER DEFINED.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'significant owner' means—

"(A) any person holding an interest as a proprietor in a trade or business carried on as a proprietorship, and

"(B) in the case of a trade or business conducted by a corporation or partnership, any person who is a 5-percent owner (as defined in section 416(i)(1)) in such corporation or partnership, as the case may be.

"(3) SPECIAL RULES.—

"(A) ONE-TIME RELIEF.—This subsection shall apply only once with respect to—

"(i) any person, and

"(ii) any trade or business with respect to which the failure described in subsection (a) occurred.

"(B) APPLICATION OF SUBSECTION.—This subsection shall not apply if it results in no person being held liable for the penalty described in subsection (a)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply in the case of failures after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5603. DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION WHERE MORE THAN 1 PERSON SUBJECT TO PENALTY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (e) of section 6103 (relating to disclosure to persons having material interest), as amended by section 5301, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9) DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION WHERE MORE THAN 1 PERSON SUBJECT TO PENALTY UNDER SECTION 6672.—If the Secretary determines that a person is liable for a penalty under section 6672(a) with respect to any failure, upon request in writing of such person, the Secretary shall disclose in writing to such person—

"(A) the name of any other person whom the Secretary has determined to be liable for such penalty with respect to such failure, and

"(B) whether the Secretary has attempted to collect such penalty from such other person, the general nature of such collection activities, and the amount collected."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5604. PENALTIES UNDER SECTION 6672.

(a) PUBLIC INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary's delegate (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall take such actions as may be appropriate to ensure that employees are aware of their responsibilities under the Federal tax depository system, the circumstances under which employees may be liable for the penalty imposed by section 6672 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and the responsibility to promptly report to the Internal Revenue Service any failure referred to in subsection (a) of such section 6672. Such actions shall include—

(1) printing of a warning on deposit coupon booklets and the appropriate tax returns that certain employees may be liable for the penalty imposed by such section 6672, and

(2) the development of a special information packet.

(b) BOARD MEMBERS OF TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—

(1) VOLUNTARY BOARD MEMBERS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The penalty under section 6672 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not be imposed on unpaid, volunteer members of any board of trustees or directors of an organization referred to in section 501 of such Code to the extent such members are solely serving in an honorary capacity, do not participate in the day-to-day or financial operations of the organization, and do not have actual knowledge of the failure on which such penalty is imposed.

(B) APPLICATION OF PARAGRAPH.—This paragraph shall not apply if it results in no person being held liable for the penalty described in section 6672(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(2) DEVELOPMENT OF EXPLANATORY MATERIALS.—The Secretary shall develop materials explaining the circumstances under which board members of tax-exempt organizations (including voluntary and honorary members) may be subject to penalty under section 6672 of such Code. Such materials shall be made available to tax-exempt organizations.

(3) IRS INSTRUCTIONS.—The Secretary shall clarify the instructions to Internal Revenue Service employees on the application of the penalty under section 6672 of such Code with regard to voluntary members of boards of trustees or directors of tax-exempt organizations.

(c) PROMPT NOTIFICATION.—To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall notify all persons who have failed to make timely and complete deposit of any taxes described in section 6672 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of such failure within 30 days after the return was filed reflecting such failure or after the date on which the Secretary is first aware of such failure. If the person failing to make the deposit is not an individual, the Secretary shall notify the entity subject to such deposit requirement and that entity shall notify, within 15 days of the notification by the Secretary, all officers, general partners, trustees, or other managers of the failure.

Subtitle H—Awarding of Costs and Certain Fees

SEC. 5701. MOTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION.

Paragraph (4) of section 7430(c) (defining prevailing party) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) MOTION FOR DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION.—Once a taxpayer substantially prevails as described in subparagraph (A)(ii), the taxpayer may file a motion for an order requiring the disclosure (within a reasonable period of time) of all information and copies of relevant records in the possession of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to such taxpayer's case and the substantial justification for the position taken by the Internal Revenue Service."

SEC. 5702. INCREASED LIMIT ON ATTORNEY FEES.

SEC. 5802. TREATMENT OF SUBSTITUTE RETURNS UNDER SECTION 6651.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 6651 (relating to failure to file tax return or to pay tax) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) TREATMENT OF RETURNS PREPARED BY SECRETARY UNDER SECTION 6020(b).—In the case of any return made by the Secretary under section 6020(b)—

"(1) such return shall be disregarded for purposes of determining the amount of the addition under paragraph (1) of subsection (a), but

"(2) such return shall be treated as the return filed by the taxpayer for purposes of determining the amount of the addition under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply in the case of any return the due date for which (determined without regard to extensions) is after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5803. RELIEF FROM RETROACTIVE APPLICATION OF TREASURY DEPARTMENT REGULATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 7805 (relating to rules and regulations) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) RETROACTIVITY OF REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, no temporary, proposed, or final regulation relating to the internal revenue laws shall apply to any taxable period ending before the earliest of the following dates:

"(A) The date on which such regulation is filed with the Federal Register.

"(B) In the case of any final regulation, the date on which any proposed or temporary regulation to which such final regulation relates was filed with the Federal Register.

"(C) The date on which any notice substantially describing the expected contents of any temporary, proposed, or final regulation is issued to the public.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR PROMPTLY ISSUED REGULATIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to regulations issued within 12 months of the date of the enactment of the statutory provision to which the regulation relates.

"(3) PREVENTION OF ABUSE.—The Secretary may provide that any regulation may take effect or apply retroactively to prevent abuse of a statute to which the regulation relates.

"(4) CORRECTION OF PROCEDURAL DEFECTS.—The Secretary may provide that any regulation may apply retroactively to correct a procedural defect in the issuance of any prior regulation.

"(5) INTERNAL REGULATIONS.—The limitations of paragraph (1) shall not apply to any regulation relating to internal Treasury Department policies, practices or procedures.

"(6) CONGRESSIONAL AUTHORIZATION.—The limitation of paragraph (1) may be superseded by a legislative grant from Congress authorizing the Secretary to prescribe the effective date with respect to any regulation.

"(7) ELECTION TO APPLY RETROACTIVELY.—The Secretary may provide for any taxpayer to elect to apply any regulation before the dates specified in paragraph (1).

"(8) APPLICATION TO RULINGS.—The Secretary may prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling (including any judicial decision or any administrative determination other than by regulation) relating to the internal revenue laws shall be applied without retroactive effect."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to—

(A) any temporary or proposed regulation filed on or after July 28, 1992, and

(B) any temporary or proposed regulation filed before July 28, 1992, and filed as a final regulation after such date.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Section 7805(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply only to statutes enacted on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) REGULATIONS RELATING TO EXCHANGE RATES.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall not apply to any regulation issued pursuant to paragraph (1)(C) or (4) of section 986(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 4421.

SEC. 5804. REQUIRED NOTICE OF CERTAIN PAYMENTS.

If any payment is received by the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary's delegate (hereafter in the section referred to as the "Secretary") from any taxpayer and the Secretary cannot associate such payment with any outstanding tax liability of such taxpayer, the Secretary shall make reasonable efforts to notify the taxpayer of such inability within 60 days after the receipt of such payment.

SEC. 5805. UNAUTHORIZED ENTICEMENT OF INFORMATION DISCLOSURE.

(a) USE OF INFORMATION LIMITED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 77 (relating to miscellaneous provisions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 7524. UNAUTHORIZED ENTICEMENT OF INFORMATION DISCLOSURE.

"If any officer or employee of the United States intentionally compromises the determination or collection of any tax due from an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent representing a taxpayer in exchange for information conveyed by the taxpayer to the attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent for purposes of obtaining advice concerning the taxpayer's tax liability, any information so obtained shall not be admissible as evidence in any judicial proceeding to which the taxpayer is a party, except to rebut a false representation made by such taxpayer."

"Sec. 7524. Unauthorized enticement of information disclosure."

(b) CIVIL DAMAGES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter B of chapter 76 (relating to proceedings by taxpayers and third parties) is amended by redesignating section 7434 as section 7435 and by inserting after section 7433 the following new section:

"SEC. 7434. CIVIL DAMAGES FOR UNAUTHORIZED ENTICEMENT OF INFORMATION DISCLOSURE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—If any officer or employee of the United States intentionally compromises the determination or collection of any tax due from an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent representing a taxpayer in exchange for information conveyed by the taxpayer to the attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent for purposes of obtaining advice concerning the taxpayer's tax liability, such taxpayer may bring a civil action for damages against the United States in a district court of the United States. Such civil action shall be the exclusive remedy for recovering damages resulting from such actions.

"(b) DAMAGES.—In any action brought under subsection (a), upon a finding of liability on the part of the defendant, the defendant shall be liable to the plaintiff in an amount equal to the lesser of $500,000 or the sum of—

"(1) actual, direct economic damages sustained by the plaintiff as a proximate result of the information disclosure, and

"(2) the costs of the action.

Damages shall not include the taxpayer's liability for any civil or criminal penalties, or other losses attributable to incarceration or the imposition of other criminal sanctions.

"(c) PAYMENT AUTHORITY.—Claims pursuant to this section shall be payable out of funds appropriated under section 1304 of title 31, United States Code.

"(d) PERIOD FOR BRINGING ACTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an action to enforce liability created under this section may be brought without regard to the amount in controversy and may be brought only within 2 years after the date the actions creating such liability would have been discovered by exercise of reasonable care.

"(e) MANDATORY STAY.—Upon a certification by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's delegate that there is an ongoing investigation or prosecution of the taxpayer, the district court before which an action under this section is pending, shall stay all proceedings with respect to such action pending the conclusion of the investigation or prosecution.

"(f) CRIME-FRAUD EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to information conveyed to an attorney, certified public accountant, or enrolled agent for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud or crime."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 76 is amended by striking the item relating to section 7434 and by adding at the end thereof the following new items:

"Sec. 7434. Civil damages for unauthorized enticement of information disclosure.

"Sec. 7435. Cross references."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to actions after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle J—Form Modifications; Studies

PART I—FORM MODIFICATIONS

SEC. 5901. EXPLANATION OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary shall take such actions as may be appropriate to ensure that taxpayers are aware of the provisions of the 1986 Code permitting payment of tax in installments, extensions of time for payment of tax, and compromises of tax liability. Such actions shall include revising the instructions for filing income tax returns so that such instructions include an explanation of—

(1) the procedures for requesting the benefits of such provisions, and

(2) the terms and conditions under which the benefits of such provisions are available.

(b) COLLECTION NOTICES.—In any notice of an underpayment of tax or proposed underpayment of tax sent by the Secretary to any taxpayer, the Secretary shall include a notification of the availability of the provisions of sections 6159, 6161, and 7122 of the 1986 Code.

SEC. 5902. IMPROVED PROCEDURES FOR NOTIFYING SERVICE OF CHANGE OF ADDRESS OR NAME.

The Secretary shall provide improved procedures for taxpayers to notify the Secretary of changes in names and addresses. Not later than June 30, 1993, the Secretary shall institute procedures for timely updating all Internal Revenue Service records with change-of-address information provided to the Secretary by taxpayers.

SEC. 5903. RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF DIVORCED INDIVIDUALS.

The Secretary shall include in the Internal Revenue Service publication entitled "Your Rights As A Taxpayer" a section on the rights and responsibilities of divorced individuals.

PART II—STUDIES

SEC. 5911. PILOT PROGRAM FOR APPEAL OF ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary shall establish a 1-year pilot program for appeals of enforcement actions (including lien, levy, and seizure actions) to the Appeals Division of the Internal Revenue Service—

(1) where the deficiency was assessed without actual knowledge of the taxpayer,

(2) where the deficiency was assessed without an opportunity for administrative appeal, and

(3) in other appropriate circumstances.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than June 30, 1993, the Secretary shall submit to the tax-writing Committees a report on the pilot program established under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

SEC. 5913. REPORTS ON TAXPAYER-RIGHTS EDUCATION PROGRAM.

Not later than April 1, 1993, the Secretary shall submit a report to the tax-writing Committees on the scope and content of the Internal Revenue Service's taxpayer-rights education program for its officers and employees. Not later than June 30, 1993, the Secretary shall submit a report to the tax-writing Committees on the effectiveness of the program referred to in the preceding sentence.

SEC. 5914. BIENNIAL REPORTS ON MISCONDUCT BY INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE EMPLOYEES.

During June 30, 1993 and during June of each second calendar year thereafter, the Secretary shall report to the tax-writing Committees on all cases involving complaints about misconduct of Internal Revenue Service employees and the disposition of such complaints.

SEC. 5915. STUDY OF NOTICES OF DEFICIENCY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Comptroller General shall conduct a study on—

(1) the effectiveness of current Internal Revenue Service efforts to notify taxpayers with regard to tax deficiencies under section 6212 of the 1986 Code,

(2) the number of registered or certified letters and other notices returned to the Internal Revenue Service as undeliverable,

(3) any follow-up action taken by the Internal Revenue Service to locate taxpayers who did not receive actual notice,

(4) the effect that failures to receive notice of such deficiencies have on taxpayers, and

(5) recommendations to improve Internal Revenue Service notification of taxpayers.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than June 30, 1993, the Comptroller General shall submit to the tax-writing Committees a report on the study conducted under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

SEC. 5916. NOTICE AND FORM ACCURACY STUDY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Comptroller General shall conduct annual studies of the accuracy of 25 of the most commonly used Internal Revenue Service forms, notices, and publications. In conducting any such study, the Comptroller General shall examine the suitability and usefulness of Internal Revenue Service telephone numbers on Internal Revenue Service notices and shall solicit and consider the comments of organizations representing taxpayers, employers, and tax professionals.

(b) REPORTS.—The Comptroller General shall submit to the tax-writing Committees a report on each study conducted under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable. The first such report shall be submitted not later than June 30, 1993.

SEC. 5917. INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE EMPLOYEES' SUGGESTIONS STUDY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the Internal Revenue Service employee-suggestion programs. Such study shall include a review of the suggestions which were accepted and rewarded by the Internal Revenue Service, an analysis as to how many of the suggestions were implemented, and an analysis of why other suggestions were not implemented.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than June 30, 1993, the Comptroller General shall submit to the tax-writing Committees a report on the study conducted under subsection (a), together with such recommendations as he may deem advisable.

(b) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN CONTRIBUTIONS MADE PURSUANT TO VETERANS' REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 414 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(u) SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO VETERANS' REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS.—

"(1) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN REQUIRED CONTRIBUTIONS.—If any contribution is made by an employer under an individual account plan with respect to an employee and such contribution is required by reason of such employee's rights under chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, resulting from qualified military service—

"(A) such contribution shall not be subject to any otherwise applicable limitation contained in section 402(g), 403(b), 404(a), 408, 415, or 457, and

"(B) such plan shall not be treated as failing to meet any requirement of this part or section 457 by reason of the making of such contribution and such contribution shall not be taken into account in applying the limitations referred to in subparagraph (A) to other contributions.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, any additional elective deferral made under paragraph (2) shall be treated as an employer contribution required by reason of the employee's rights under such chapter 43.

"(2) REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS WITH RESPECT TO ELECTIVE DEFERRALS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If an employee is entitled to the benefits of chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, with respect to any plan which provides for elective deferrals, such employer shall be treated as meeting the requirements of such chapter 43 with respect to such elective deferrals if such employer—

"(i) permits such employee to make additional elective deferrals under such plan (in the amount determined under subparagraph (B)) during the period (not longer than 5 years) which begins on the date of the reemployment and has the same length as the period of qualified military service which resulted in such rights, and

"(ii) makes a matching contribution in respect of any additional elective deferral made pursuant to clause (i) which would have been required had such deferral actually been made during the period of such qualified military service.

"(B) AMOUNT OF MAKEUP REQUIRED.—The amount determined under this subparagraph is the maximum amount of elective deferrals that the individual would have been permitted to make under the plan during his period of qualified military service if he had continued to be employed by the employer during such period and received compensation at the same rate as the individual received from the employer immediately before such qualified military service. Proper adjustment shall be made to the amount determined under the preceding sentence for any elective deferrals actually made during the period of such qualified military service.

"(C) ELECTIVE DEFERRAL.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'elective deferral' has the meaning given to such term by section 402(g)(3); except that such term shall include any deferral of compensation under an eligible deferred compensation plan (as defined in section 457(b)).

"(3) CERTAIN RETROACTIVE ADJUSTMENTS NOT REQUIRED.—Nothing in chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, shall be construed as requiring—

"(A) any crediting of earnings to an employee with respect to any contribution before such contribution is actually made, or

"(B) any allocation with respect to the period of qualified military service of any of the following amounts—

"(i) any forfeiture,

"(ii) any employer contribution which was voluntary, and

"(iii) any employer contribution the total amount of which was determined without reference to the number of, or compensation of, plan participants before being allocated to the accounts of participants.

(B) Section 1833(i)(2) (42 U.S.C. 1395l(i)(2)) is amended—

(i) in the second sentence of subparagraph (A) and the second sentence of subparagraph (B), by striking "and may be adjusted by the Secretary, when appropriate,"; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Notwithstanding the second sentence of subparagraph (A) or the second sentence of subparagraph (B), if the Secretary has not updated amounts established under such subparagraphs with respect to facility services furnished during a fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1994), such amounts shall be increased by the percentage increase in the consumer price index for all urban consumers (U.S. city average) for the 12-month period ending with March of the preceding fiscal year.".

(C) The second sentence of section 1833(i)(1) (42 U.S.C. 1395l(i)(1)) is amended by striking the period and inserting the following: ", in consultation with appropriate trade and professional organizations.".

(2) Section 4151(c)(3) of OBRA–1990 is amended by striking "for the insertion of an intraocular lens" and inserting "for an intraocular lens inserted".

(b) ADJUSTMENTS TO PAYMENT AMOUNTS FOR NEW TECHNOLOGY INTRAOCULAR LENSES.—(1) Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to as the "Secretary") shall develop and implement a process under which interested parties may request review by the Secretary of the appropriateness of the reimbursement amount provided under section 1833(i)(2)(A)(iii) of the Social Security Act with respect to a class of new technology intraocular lenses. For purposes of the preceding sentence, an intraocular lens may not be treated as a new technology lens unless it has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

(2) In determining whether to provide an adjustment of payment with respect to a particular lens under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall take into account whether use of the lens is likely to result in reduced risk of intraoperative or postoperative complication or trauma, accelerated postoperative recovery, reduced induced astigmatism, improved postoperative visual acuity, more stable postoperative vision, or other comparable clinical advantages.

(3) The Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register from time to time (but no less often than once each year) of a list of the requests that the Secretary has received for review under this subsection, and shall provide for a 30-day comment period on the lenses that are the subjects of the requests contained in such notice. The Secretary shall publish a notice of his determinations with respect to intraocular lenses listed in the notice within 90 days after the close of the comment period.

(4) Any adjustment of a payment amount (or payment limit) made under this subsection shall become effective not later than 30 days after the date on which the notice with respect to the adjustment is published under paragraph (3).

Subtitle B—Foster Care; Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment; and Related Programs

PART I—FOSTER CARE, ADOPTION, AND CHILD WELFARE SERVICES

SEC. 7101. INNOVATIVE CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part B of title IV is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"INNOVATIVE CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES

"SEC. 429. (a)(1) For the purpose of enabling States to plan, develop, expand, or operate innovative programs of child and family services in order to preserve and strengthen families and prevent the need for unnecessary placement in foster care, there are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, in addition to amounts otherwise appropriated under this part, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(2) In addition to the amounts authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1), there is authorized to be appropriated for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997, the sum of $8,000,000 to carry out the purposes of subsection (c)(1).

"(b)(1) From the sums appropriated therefore, the Secretary shall, subject to the provisions of this section, pay as an entitlement to each State for each quarter an amount equal to 75 percent of the total expenditures during that quarter for the purpose of planning, developing, expanding, or operating an innovative program of child and family services (in accordance with the requirements of this section) to incorporate any of the following services:

"(A) Preplacement preventive services designed to help children at risk of foster care placement remain with their families (including adoptive families), where appropriate.

"(B) Reunification services designed to help children return to the families (including adoptive families) from which they have been removed, where appropriate.

"(C) Follow up services designed to sustain and further strengthen families (including adoptive families) after a child has returned home from foster care placement.

"(D) Where appropriate, services designed to help children be placed for adoption, with a legal guardian, or, if adoption or legal guardianship is determined not to be appropriate for a child, in some other planned, permanent living arrangement.

"(E) Respite care to provide assistance for any foster care family, adoptive family, or any other family that the State agency determines needs such care in order to preserve family stability, with priority to the family of a child with a physical, mental, or emotional condition that requires special assistance (as determined by the Secretary).

"(F) Family support services to strengthen the functioning of a family (including an adoptive or foster care family), including services designed to improve parenting skills.

"(2) The total amount paid to a State under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year may not exceed the sum of—

"(A) the amount to which a State is entitled under paragraph (3) for the fiscal year; and

"(B) any unexpended portion of the amount to which a State was entitled for the preceding fiscal year.

"(3)(A) The amount to which a State is entitled under this paragraph for a fiscal year shall be determined in the manner specified in section 421(a), except that the total amount to which all States are entitled under this paragraph may not exceed—

"(i) $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1993,

"(ii) $250,000,000 for fiscal year 1994,

"(iii) $300,000,000 for fiscal year 1995,

"(iv) $350,000,000 for fiscal year 1996, and

"(v) $400,000,000 for fiscal year 1997, and each subsequent fiscal year.

"(B) The amount to which a State is entitled under this paragraph for a fiscal year shall remain available for such fiscal year and the succeeding fiscal year.

"(4) Payments to a State under this subsection for any fiscal year shall be made in accordance with the procedures described in section 423(b).

"(5) As a condition of receiving a payment under this section, a State shall provide written assurance (in such form as the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation) that the aggregate amount of funds expended by the State and its political subdivisions from non-Federal resources for the purpose of providing child welfare services (excluding foster care maintenance and adoption assistance payments) shall be maintained at a level of funding that is equal to or exceeds the level of such funding for such services for fiscal year 1991.

"(c)(1)(A) The Secretary shall conduct evaluations of programs under this section according to criteria that the Secretary shall establish.

"(B) In developing the criteria described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall consult with—

"(i) individuals who administer programs under this part and part E of this title;

"(ii) private, nonprofit organizations with an interest in child welfare; and

"(iii) other individuals and organizations with recognized expertise in the evaluation of child welfare services programs or other related programs.

"(C) The Secretary may enter into a contract with one or more independent research organizations to carry out a program evaluation under this subsection.

"(2) Funds expended by a State to conduct evaluations of programs of child and family services administered by the State shall be deemed expenditures for which payment may be made under subsection (b)(1). Such evaluations shall be conducted in accordance with requirements that the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation.

"(3) Program evaluations conducted pursuant to paragraph (1) or (2) shall—

"(A) use methodologies to measure outcomes with respect to children and families who participate in the programs under this section that enable comparison with similar outcome measurements of children and families who have not received the services offered by the programs under this section; and

"(B) include an assessment of family functioning.

"(4) In carrying out the program evaluations described in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall ensure that an appropriate portion of such evaluations shall use experimental and control groups (of a sample size determined in accordance with appropriate statistical practices).

"(5)(A) The Secretary shall develop procedures to facilitate the coordination of evaluations conducted by the Secretary and by the States.

"(B) Upon request by a State, the Secretary shall provide technical assistance to facilitate the planning and design of program evaluations under this section.

"(6) For fiscal year 1995, and annually thereafter until the programs authorized under this section are completed, the Secretary shall issue a report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives that includes—

"(A) information concerning the status of evaluations conducted by the Secretary under this subsection;

"(B) findings from the evaluations described in subparagraph (A);

"(C) information concerning the status of evaluations conducted by States under this subsection; and

"(D) a summary of the findings from the State evaluations described in subparagraph (C).

"(7) The Secretary shall, upon completion of a review of the evaluations conducted under this subsection by the Secretary and by States (but not later than December 1, 1996), submit a report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives that includes recommendations for legislation to improve child and family services provided under this title to strengthen families, to reduce the number of cases in which it is necessary to remove a child from home and place the child in foster care, to promote the reunification of families of children who have been placed in foster care, and to promote planned, permanent living arrangements for children, including adoption, where appropriate.".

(b) STATE PLANS AND REPORTS.—Section 422 (42 U.S.C. 622) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(c) Not later than January 1, 1993 (with respect to fiscal year 1993), and not later than the July 1 preceding each fiscal year thereafter, each State with an innovative program of child and family services (as described in section 429(a)) that intends to provide services that qualify for payments under section 429(b) shall submit to the Secretary for approval, as an amendment to the plan described in subsection (a), a detailed description of the services that such State intends to provide during such fiscal year.

"(d) Not later than January 1, 1993, each State with an innovative program of child and family services (as described in section 429(a)) that intends to provide services under such program that qualify for payments under section 429(b), shall submit to the Secretary a report containing a statement of goals that the State expects to achieve during the 5-year period beginning with fiscal year 1993.

"(e) Not later than January 1, 1994, and annually thereafter, each State shall submit to the Secretary a report that summarizes activities carried out with funds made available under this title. Such report shall cover the most recently completed fiscal year, and shall be in such form and contain such information as the Secretary shall require by regulation.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 423(a) (42 U.S.C. 623(a)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(a)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) For the purposes of this section, the 'amounts expended under the plan' described in paragraph (1) shall not include amounts for which payment is made under section 429(b) for services described in section 429(a).".

SEC. 7102. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS TO IMPROVE COORDINATION OF SERVICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV is amended by inserting after section 474 the following new section:

"DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS FOR THE COORDINATION OF CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES

"SEC. 474A. (a) In order to improve the coordination of child and family services, the Secretary shall authorize not more than 15 States to conduct demonstration projects, to be carried out in accordance with this section.

"(b) An application submitted by the Governor of a State shall include a description of the measures to be employed to improve the coordination of the services and benefits provided by child and family services programs carried out under the State plan under this part with programs which provide services to families and children including some or all of the following programs and services:

"(1) The program of aid and services for needy families with children carried out under the State plan pursuant to part A.

"(2) The child support and spousal support enforcement program carried out under the State plan pursuant to part D.

"(3) The job opportunities and basic skills training program carried out under the State plan pursuant to section 402(a)(19) and part F.

"(4) The special supplemental food program for woman, infants, and children (the WIC program) authorized under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 1786).

"(8) Drug treatment programs and other substance abuse programs.

"(9) Mental health services programs.

"(10) Juvenile justice programs.

"(11) Programs for developmentally disabled individuals.

"(12) Any additional services for children and families that the State determines necessary to meet the needs of all family members in order to carry out the purposes of this section that are approved by the Secretary.

"(c) A demonstration project conducted under this section may be conducted for a period of not more than 3 years.

"(d)(1) Each State that conducts a demonstration project authorized by the Secretary shall, as a part of such demonstration project, conduct an evaluation of the effectiveness of the demonstration project in improving the coordination and the funding of child and family services.

"(2) Amounts expended by the State for the purposes of conducting an evaluation under this subsection shall be deemed amounts expended pursuant to subparagraph (C) of section 474(a)(3).

"(e) Upon completion of a demonstration project under this section, each State shall submit a report concerning the results of the evaluation described in subsection (d) to the Secretary.

"(f) Each State shall submit to the Secretary at such time as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation—

"(1) a description of administrative policies and laws of the Federal Government and the State or a political subdivision of the State, identified by the State as impediments to the coordination of the delivery of the child and family services described in subsection (b); and

"(2) a description of the measures that the State has taken or intends to take to eliminate or reduce impediments described in paragraph (1) that are attributable to administrative policies and laws of the State or a political subdivision of the State.".

(b) PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.—(1) Section 474(a) (42 U.S.C. 674(a)) is amended—

(A) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) and inserting "; plus"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) if such State is authorized to conduct a demonstration project pursuant to section 474A, 50 percent of so much of such expenditures (not to exceed $750,000 for each quarter during the period of such demonstration project) to carry out the demonstration project.".

(2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply to expenditures made after September 30, 1992.

(c) Review of Administrative Policies and Regulations.—(1) The Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Education, and the Attorney General of the United States shall review the administrative policies and regulations relating to the funding and delivery of services for families and children (as described in section 474A(b) of the Social Security Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section) of the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Education, and the Department of Justice, respectively, to determine whether changes in such administrative policies and regulations may be made without statutory changes to improve the funding and delivery of such services.

(2) In conducting a review pursuant to paragraph (1), the heads of departments described in paragraph (1) shall consult with appropriate representatives of the governments of States and political subdivisions of States.

(3) Not later than July 1, 1993, the heads of the departments described in paragraph (1) shall collectively (or separately after consultation with the others) issue a report to the Congress that includes—

(A) recommendations for statutory changes, as well as changes in regulations and administrative policies, to improve the coordination of the funding and delivery of child and family services;

(B) a description of the technical assistance that the heads of the departments will make available to the States to improve the coordination of the funding and delivery of child and family services; and

(C) an analysis of the impediments identified pursuant to section 474A(f)(1) of the Social Security Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section, as such impediments relate to Federal policies and laws.

SEC. 7103. FOSTER CARE AND ADOPTION ASSISTANCE.

(a) Requirements for Documentation for Adoption Placement Procedures.—Section 475(5) (42 U.S.C. 675(5)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by inserting at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) with respect to any child who is legally eligible for adoption, a court or administrative body that conducts a case review pursuant to subparagraph (C), shall determine and document—

"(i) the specific measures taken by the State agency responsible for the placement of the child in an adoptive family to make such a placement; or

"(ii) a finding that placement of the child in an adoptive family would be inappropriate.".

(b) Disrupted Adoptions.—(1) Section 471(a) (42 U.S.C. 671(a)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting "paragraph (18) and" before "section 473";

(B) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (16);

(C) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (17) and inserting "; and"; and

(D) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(18) provides that, at the option of the State, a child whose adoption has been set aside by a court may, for purposes of sections 472 and 473, during any subsequent period of time during which such child would be eligible for assistance under this part as a child in foster care or an adoptive child (but for the adoption or the disruption of the adoption), be deemed to be eligible for such assistance.".

(2) Section 474 (42 U.S.C. 674) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) For purposes of subsection (a) of this section, a child with respect to whom a State exercises the option described in paragraph (18) of such subsection (a) shall be deemed an eligible child under sections 472 and 473 of this part.".

(c) Effective Dates.—(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to case reviews conducted on or after October 1, 1993.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to payments under part E of title IV of the Social Security Act for expenditures made after September 1992.

SEC. 7104. ADOPTION EXPENSE DEDUCTION.

(a) In General.—Part VII of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by redesignating section 221 as section 222 and by inserting after section 221 the following new section:

"SEC. 221. SPECIAL NEEDS ADOPTION EXPENSES DEDUCTION.

"(a) Allowance of Deduction.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable year the amount of the qualified adoption expenses paid or incurred by the individual for such taxable year.

"(b) Limitations.—

"(1) Maximum dollar amount.—The aggregate amount of adoption expenses which may be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to the adoption of a child shall not exceed $3,000.

"(2) Denial of double benefit.—

"(A) In general.—No deduction shall be allowable under subsection (a) for any expense for which a deduction or credit is allowable under any other provision of this chapter.

"(B) Reimbursements.—If a taxpayer is reimbursed for any qualified adoption expenses for which a deduction was allowed under subsection (a), the amount of such reimbursement shall be includable in the gross income of the taxpayer in the taxable year in which such reimbursement was received.

"(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Qualified adoption expenses.—The term 'qualified adoption expenses' means reasonable and necessary adoption fees, court costs, attorneys fees, and other expenses which—

"(A) are directly related to the legal adoption of a child with special needs by the taxpayer,

"(B) are not incurred in violation of State or Federal law, and

"(C) are of a type eligible for reimbursement under the adoption assistance program under part E of title IV of the Social Security Act.

"(2) Child with special needs.—The term 'child with special needs' means any child determined by the State to be a child described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 473(c) of the Social Security Act.".

(b) Deduction Allowed Whether or Not Taxpayer Itemizes Deductions.—Subsection (a) of section 62 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting after paragraph (13) the following new paragraph:

"(14) Adoption expenses.—The deduction allowed by section 221 (relating to deduction for expenses of adopting a child with special needs).".

(c) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections for part VII of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking the item relating to section 221 and by inserting the following new items:

"Sec. 221. Special needs adoption expenses deduction.
"Sec. 222. Cross reference.".

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to adoptions occurring in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 7105. STUDY OF REASONABLE EFFORTS REQUIREMENT BY ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

(a) In General.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this title, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall establish an Advisory Committee on Foster Care Placement (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Advisory Committee") to study and make recommendations concerning the requirements under section 471(a)(15) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 671(a)(15)) for each State plan for foster care and adoption assistance.

(b) Membership.—(1) The Advisory Committee shall consist of no fewer than 9 members. In appointing members to the Advisory Committee, the Secretary shall include representatives of the following organizations and agencies:

(A) Private, nonprofit organizations with an interest in child welfare (including such organizations that provide child protective services, foster care services, or adoption services).

(B) Hospitals that treat a significant number of boarder babies (as determined by the Secretary).

(C) Agencies of States and political subdivisions thereof responsible for child protective services, foster care services, or adoption services.

(D) Judicial bodies of States and political subdivisions thereof responsible for adjudicating issues of family law (as defined and determined by the Secretary).

(2) Members of the Advisory Committee who are not full-time Federal employees shall, while engaging in the business of the Advisory Committee (including travel time) be entitled to receive compensation at a rate fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding the daily rate specified at the time of such service under level IV of the Executive Schedule.

(3) While away from their homes or regular places of business and on the business of the Advisory Committee, such members may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons employed intermittently in Government service.

(c) Report.—Not later than January 1, 1994, the Advisory Committee shall submit a report to the Secretary and to the Congress that includes recommendations for making improvements in the implementation of the requirements under section 471(a)(15).

SEC. 7106. CASE REVIEW SYSTEM REQUIREMENT.

(a) In General.—Subparagraph (A) of section 475(5) (42 U.S.C. 675(5)) is amended by inserting "and most appropriate" after "(most family like)".

(b) Citizen Volunteer Input.—Section 475(5) (42 U.S.C. 675(5)), as amended by section 7103, is further amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (D);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (E) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by inserting at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(F) to the extent determined appropriate by the State, citizen volunteers may participate in making recommendations at either the court or administrative reviews described in subparagraph (B) or at the dispositional hearings described in subparagraph (C).".

(c) Effective Dates.—

(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect with respect to case reviews conducted on or after October 1, 1992.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (b) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7107. DEMONSTRATION PROJECT TO FACILITATE THE REUNIFICATION OF A CHILD WITH HIS OR HER FAMILY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall enter into agreements with not more than 6 States with an approved plan under section 402 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 602) (hereafter in this section referred to as the "State plan") to conduct demonstration projects under this section.

(2) The Secretary shall consider all applications received from States desiring to conduct demonstration projects under this section, and shall approve up to 6 applications involving projects which appear likely to contribute significantly to the achievement of the purpose of this section.

(3) Demonstration projects under this section shall meet such conditions and requirements as the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation. No such project shall be conducted for a period of more than 3 years, and no such project may be conducted after January 1, 1997.

(b) EFFECT OF ACCELERATED AFDC ELIGIBILITY ON FAMILY REUNIFICATION.—For each State conducting a demonstration project under this section, notwithstanding any provision of title IV of the Social Security Act, in order to test the effect on facilitating the reunification of families with children for whom out-of-home placement was determined to be necessary, the Secretary shall establish rules under which the State may deem the family of any such child (who would otherwise be considered a dependent child, as defined in section 406(a) of the Social Security Act, but for the placement of the child outside of the home of the family) to be eligible to receive aid under the State plan (including aid that the State may elect to provide for meeting any special needs) for the month immediately preceding the month during which such child is reunited with the family.

(c) DEMONSTRATION PROJECT EVALUATIONS.—Each State that conducts a demonstration project under this section, shall, after such project has been carried out for one year and again when such project is completed, submit to the Secretary a detailed evaluation of the project and of the contribution of the project to the achievement of the purpose of this section.

(d) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Title IV of the Social Security Act and the regulations promulgated under such title shall apply to demonstration projects conducted under this section to the extent such title is not inconsistent with the purposes of the demonstration projects.

SEC. 7108. DATA COLLECTION SYSTEMS.

(a) AUTOMATED DATA COLLECTION SYSTEMS.—Section 474(a)(3) (42 U.S.C. 674(a)(3)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(2) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (E); and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) 90 percent of so much of such expenditures as are for the planning, design, development, or installation of such statewide mechanized data collection and information retrieval systems (including 90 percent of the full amount of expenditures for hardware components for such systems), but only if such systems—

"(i) meet the requirements for data collection systems provided in regulations issued pursuant to 479(b)(2);

"(ii) have the capability of interfacing with, and retrieving information from, the State data collection system that collects information relating to the eligibility of individuals under part A (for the purposes of facilitating the verification of the eligibility of foster children); and

"(iii) are determined by the Secretary to be likely to provide more efficient, economical, and effective administration of the programs carried out under the State plan approved under part B or the State plan approved under this part,

"(D) 50 percent of so much of such expenditures as are for the operation of a data collection and information system for the purposes of administering programs under the State plan under this part, and".

(b) OPERATING COSTS.—Section 425(a) (42 U.S.C. 625(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Funds expended by a State for any calendar quarter with respect to the operation of a data collection and information system described in section 474(a)(3)(C) for the purposes of administering programs under this part, shall be deemed to have been expended for child welfare services.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 474A(d)(2), as added by section 7102 of this subtitle, is amended by striking "subparagraph (C)" and inserting "subparagraph (E)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to expenditures made—

(1) after January 1, 1993; and

(2) with respect to section 474(a)(3)(C) of the Social Security Act, as added by such subsection, before October 1, 1995.

SEC. 7109. INDEPENDENT LIVING.

(a) ACCUMULATION OF ASSETS.—Section 477 (42 U.S.C. 677) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (i) as subsection (j); and

(2) inserting after subsection (h) the following new subsection:

"(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title and of title XIX, with respect to a child who is included in a program established under subsection (a), an amount of the assets of the child which would otherwise be regarded as resources for the purposes of determination of eligibility for programs under this title or title XIX may be disregarded for the purpose of allowing such child to establish a household. Such amount may not exceed an amount determined by the State agency responsible for the administration of the program as reasonable for the purpose of establishing a household.".

(b) INITIATIVE PAYMENTS MADE PERMANENT.—Section 477 (42 U.S.C. 677) is amended—

(1) by striking the last sentence in subsection (a)(1),

(2) by striking "any of the fiscal years 1988 through 1992" in subsection (c) and inserting "any subsequent fiscal year",

(3) by striking "for each of the fiscal years 1987 through 1992" in subsection (e)(1)(A) and inserting "for each fiscal year",

(4) by striking "fiscal years 1991 and 1992" in subsection (e)(1)(B) and inserting "fiscal year 1991 and any subsequent fiscal year", and

(5) by striking "for fiscal year 1992" in subsection (e)(1)(C)(ii)(II) and inserting "for fiscal year 1992 and any subsequent fiscal year".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective on October 1, 1992.

SEC. 7110. TRAINING ACTIVITIES.

(a) CHILD WELFARE TRAINEESHIPS.—(1) Title IV is amended by inserting after section 426 the following new section:

"CHILD WELFARE TRAINEESHIPS

"SEC. 426A. (a) The Secretary shall approve an application for a grant to a public or nonprofit institution of higher learning to provide traineeships with stipends under section 426(a)(1)(C), only if the application—

"(1) provides assurances that each individual who receives a stipend with such traineeship (hereafter in this section referred to as a 'recipient') shall enter into an agreement with the institution of higher learning under which the recipient shall agree—

"(A) to participate in onsite training at a public or private child welfare agency on a regular basis (as determined by the Secretary) for the period of the traineeship;

"(B) to be employed for a period of years equivalent to the period of the traineeship in a public or private nonprofit child welfare agency in any State after completing the postsecondary education for which the traineeship was awarded (within such period of time as is determined by the Secretary by regulation);

"(C) to provide the institution of higher learning and the Secretary with evidence of compliance with subparagraphs (A) and (B); and

"(D) in the event that the conditions of subparagraph (A) or (B) are not complied with (except as provided in the exceptions to repayment provisions described in subsection (b)), to repay to the Secretary all or part of the amount of the stipend, plus interest, and if applicable, reasonable collection fees (in compliance with regulations that the Secretary shall promulgate);

"(2) provides that an agreement entered into with a recipient shall fully disclose the terms and conditions under which the traineeship with stipend is granted; and

"(3) provides assurances that the institution of higher learning shall—

"(A) provide appropriate support and supervision of recipients;

"(B) enter into agreements with child welfare agencies for the onsite training of recipients;

"(C) develop and implement a curriculum in the field of child welfare services that—

"(i) incorporates the most recent information concerning best practices for the delivery of child welfare services; and

"(ii) incorporates information relating to clause (i) supplied to the institution through consultation with child welfare agencies;

"(D) permit a student who is employed in the field of child welfare services (at the time such student applies for a traineeship) to apply for a traineeship with a stipend if such traineeship furthers the student's progress towards the completion of degree requirements; and

"(E) develop and implement a system that tracks for a period of 3 years, beginning on the date of completion of any student of a child welfare services program of study, the employment record of such student in the field of child welfare services (for the purpose of determining the percentage of students who secure employment in the field of child welfare services and remain employed in such field).

"(b) A recipient shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to subsection (a)(1) during any period in which the recipient satisfies repayment exceptions that may be prescribed by the Secretary by regulation.".

(2) Subparagraph (C) of section 426(a)(1) (42 U.S.C. 626(a)(1)) is amended by inserting "described in section 426A" after "including traineeships".

(3) The amendments made by this section shall apply to grants awarded on or after January 1, 1993.

(b) TRAINING FOR EMPLOYMENT IN CHILD WELFARE AGENCIES.—In order to improve the capacity of State and local child welfare agencies to administer the programs authorized under parts B and E of title IV of the Social Security Act and to provide services to families and children, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall not later than April 1, 1993—

(1) publish final regulations establishing detailed guidelines to assist States in using Federal matching funds authorized under section 474(a)(3) for the purpose of providing training for individuals who are employed or preparing for employment by such agencies; and

(2) develop and publish a model staff recruitment, training, and staff retention program for use by such agencies.

(c) EXTENSION OF FUNDING FOR TRAINING OF ADOPTIVE AND FOSTER PARENTS AND STAFF MEMBERS.—Paragraph (3) of section 8006(a) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 is amended by striking "1992" and inserting "1995".

SEC. 7111. HEALTH CARE PLANS FOR FOSTER CHILDREN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 475(1)(C) (42 U.S.C. 675(1)(C)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i) by striking "and addresses" and inserting ", addresses, and telephone numbers",

(2) in clause (vii) by striking "and", and

(3) by redesignating clause (viii) as clause (ix) and inserting after clause (vii) the following:

"(viii) a record indicating that the child's foster care provider was advised (where appropriate) of the child's eligibility for early and periodic screening, diagnostic, and treatment services under title XIX; and".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to case plans established or reviewed on or after January 1, 1993.

SEC. 7112. CHILD WELFARE DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

Part E of title IV (42 U.S.C. 470 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 480. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to grant States the flexibility and resources necessary to develop innovative policies and appropriate service networks to preserve and strengthen families with children at risk of needing placement outside their home, to reunite children with their families as promptly as possible if an out-of-home placement is found to be necessary, and to place children in adoptive homes or other permanent arrangements, including guardianships and placements with relatives, in a timely fashion if reunification with their families is impossible or is not in the best interest of any such child, and to provide for the evaluation of innovative State programs and the assessment of the impact of such programs on children and families, the Secretary may authorize not more than 10 States to conduct demonstration projects, which may be carried out throughout the State or in limited areas of the State, in accordance with this section.

"(b) CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider all applications received from States desiring to conduct demonstration projects under this section.

"(c) CONTENTS OF APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) GENERAL RULES.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section shall—

"(A) propose a project designed to—

"(i) provide, in accordance with paragraph (2), preventive services and assistance to families which have problems that may lead to the removal of a child from the family;

"(ii) promote, in accordance with paragraph (3), the treatment of family problems so as to achieve the reunification of children with their families as promptly as possible after the time it becomes necessary to remove the child from the family;

"(iii) facilitate, in accordance with paragraph (4), the timely and permanent placement of children who are in foster care or who have been abandoned at or shortly after birth;

"(iv) develop, in accordance with paragraph (5), community-based family support services that are provided by trained individuals who live in the community;

"(v) provide adult mentoring services by adult volunteers to low-income or at-risk children or young adults who are in need of additional, on-going contact with adult role models; or

"(vi) address, in accordance with paragraph (6), any combination of child welfare services issues;

"(B) specify the area or areas of the State in which the project is to be conducted;

"(C) contain a commitment by the State—

"(i) to carry out the project during a period of not less than 2 and not more than 5 consecutive fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1994; or

"(ii) if the State will not be able to properly plan the project before the beginning of fiscal year 1995, to plan the project during fiscal year 1995 and carry out the project during a period of not less than 4 consecutive fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1996;

"(D) specify the provisions of part B and this part which, but for subsection (g)(1), would prevent the State from conducting the demonstration project;

"(E) identify who will receive services under the project;

"(F) provide assurances that payments to foster families will be sufficient to ensure an adequate number of foster parents; and

"(G) contain such other information as the Secretary may require by regulation.

"(2) PROJECTS TO PREVENT FAMILY DISSOLUTION.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(i) shall outline the services and procedures the State will offer to prevent family dissolution whenever possible. In addition, each such application by a State shall include the following:

"(A) CASE PLANS.—A commitment by the State to provide each child with a case plan, developed to the extent feasible, in consultation with family members.

"(B) MEASURES TO ASSIST FAMILIES IN ADDRESSING PROBLEMS THAT MAY LEAD TO REMOVAL FROM THE HOME.—A description of the measures to be employed by the State to ensure that families are assisted in addressing the problems that may result in the removal of the child from the home.

"(C) MEASURES TO KEEP PARENTS REQUIRING DRUG OR ALCOHOL TREATMENT WITH THEIR CHILDREN.—A description of the measures to be employed by the State to keep parents and their young children together, where appropriate, while the parent participates in drug or alcohol treatment.

"(D) DRUG AND ALCOHOL TREATMENT MEASURES.—A description of the measures to be employed by the State to ensure that drug and alcohol treatment programs are made available to parents who are substance abusers.

"(E) MEASURES TO COORDINATE FAMILY WELFARE FUNDING AND SERVICES.—A description of the measures to be employed by the State to coordinate the funding of, and the services and benefits provided by, programs which provide services to families with children at risk of being placed in the care of a child welfare, mental health, or juvenile justice agency, including the following programs:

"(i) The State's child welfare services program carried out under the State plan approved under part B.

"(ii) The maternal and child health block grant program under title V.

"(iii) The job opportunities and basic skills training program carried out pursuant to section 402(a)(19) and part F.

"(iv) Medical assistance under the State plan approved under title XIX.

"(v) Drug and other substance abuse treatment programs.

"(vi) Mental health services programs.

"(vii) Any new services for children and families that the State deems necessary to meet the needs of all family members in order to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(viii) Such other programs as the State deems appropriate.

"(3) FAMILY REUNIFICATION PROJECTS.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall include the following:

"(A) DESCRIPTION OF PROPOSED PROCEDURES TO ASSIST FAMILY REUNIFICATION.—A description of how the State will—

"(i) design a treatment plan for addressing the family problems that led to removal of the child from the home;

"(ii) to the extent feasible, involve all family members in executing the plan;

"(iii) coordinate the programs and resources necessary to address the problem that led to removal of the child from the home;

"(iv) reunify the child with the family as soon as possible (consistent with the best interests of the child); and

"(v) implement improvements in laws and procedures so as to ensure timely hearings and decisions.

"(B) REASONS WHY PROPOSED PROCEDURES WOULD RESULT IN EARLIER FAMILY REUNIFICATION.—A discussion of why the particular procedures proposed in the application are likely to result in earlier or more successful family reunification than is achieved under the present policies and procedures of the State.

"(4) PERMANENT PLACEMENT PROJECTS.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(iii) shall describe how the State will improve its laws and administrative procedures so as to provide, where appropriate, more expeditious, permanent placement of children who are in foster care, are boarder babies, were abandoned at or shortly after birth, have parents addicted to drugs, or were abused.

"(5) FAMILY SUPPORT DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(iv) shall include a description of—

"(A) how the State will conduct innovative programs which train individuals who live in a community to provide family support services to other families in the community with children at risk of being placed in foster care, using services which are based on a self-help model; and

"(B) how such programs will be coordinated with other child welfare and family support services available in the area.

"(6) PROJECTS PROVIDING ADULT MENTORING.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(v) shall include a description of—

"(A) how the State will support the provision by private, nonprofit, community-based organizations of one or more projects which provide adult mentoring services through adult volunteers for low-income or at-risk children or young adults, who can benefit from the guidance, encouragement, and experience of such volunteers through frequent and regular contact with such volunteers;

"(B) the length of time, not to exceed 5 years, for which funds will be required for the provision of adult mentoring services; and

"(C) how such projects will be coordinated with other programs which provide educational services, job counseling and training services, social services, or a combination of such services for low-income or at-risk children or young adults, if such coordination is appropriate.

Funds shall be available beyond the first year of a project which provides adult mentoring services only upon successful provision of such services in the previous year.

"(7) PROJECTS ADDRESSING OTHER CHILD WELFARE ISSUES.—Each application by a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section of the type described in paragraph (1)(A)(vi) shall describe a project designed to test an innovative approach to any number of significant child welfare services issues, which may include—

"(A) avoiding out-of-home placements;

"(B) achieving, where appropriate, speedy reunification of families from which it has been necessary to remove a child;

"(C) reducing the time it takes to permanently place children who have been removed from their families when such placement is appropriate;

"(D) where appropriate, permitting children to remain with, or be quickly reunited with, their parents while their parents receive treatment for substance abuse; and

"(E) identifying risk factors which would allow child welfare agencies to identify and offer assistance to families that may need protective services.

"(d) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Within 12 months after the date of the enactment of this section—

"(A) the Secretary shall transmit to each State a detailed explanation of the requirements for participation in the demonstration program established by this section;

"(B) any State interested in conducting a demonstration project under this section shall transmit to the Secretary a letter of intent containing a tentative description of the project; and

"(C) the Secretary shall, subject to paragraph (4), approve not more than 10 applications which meet the applicable requirements of subsection (c).

"(2) DISTRIBUTION OF DEMONSTRATIONS BY STATE POPULATION.—The Secretary, to the extent feasible (in view of the number of approvable applications received), shall provide that in approving applications to conduct demonstration projects under this section that—

"(A) at least 2 and not more than 4 of such applications approved are the applications of States with populations of less than 1.5 million;

"(B) at least 3 and not more than 5 of such applications approved are the applications of States with populations between 1.5 and 7 million; and

"(C) at least 2 and not more than 4 of such applications approved are the applications of States with populations over 7 million.

"(3) DISTRIBUTION OF DEMONSTRATIONS BY REGION.—The Secretary shall provide that in approving applications to conduct demonstration projects under this section that no more than 4 of such applications shall be approved for any one geographical region (as determined by the Secretary) of the country.

"(4) FREEDOM OF STATES TO SELECT AREAS IN WHICH TO CONDUCT DEMONSTRATION.—The Secretary may not, as a condition of approval, require any State to conduct a project under this section in any area of the State not specified in the application therefor.

"(5) CERTIFICATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall not approve the application of a State to conduct a demonstration project under this section unless the State certifies that all cost savings resulting from the project will be used to provide child welfare services (within the meaning of section 425(a)(1)) to families.

"(e) GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants in accordance with this subsection to each State whose application to conduct a demonstration project under this section is approved by the Secretary, in accordance with a contract prepared by the Secretary (in consultation with the entity or entities selected pursuant to subsection (f)) which specifies the duties of the Secretary, the State, and the entity selected to evaluate the project in achieving the purpose described in subsection (a).

"(2) USE OF GRANTS.—Each State which receives funds under the demonstration program under this section may use such funds to improve the provision of child welfare, foster care, and adoption assistance services in any manner that the State deems appropriate.

"(3) ANNUAL GRANTS.—The Secretary shall make grants to States under paragraph (1) for each fiscal year for which the State is authorized to conduct a demonstration project under this section.

"(4) AMOUNT OF GRANT TO INCLUDE STATE DEMONSTRATION BONUS.—

"(A) CALCULATION OF AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The amount of the grant to be paid under paragraph (1) to a State for a fiscal year shall be an amount equal to the applicable percentage of the sum of—

"(i) the amounts paid to the State for fiscal year 1992 pursuant to sections 423 and 474 (other than for adoption assistance payments under section 473 and for expenses for the proper and efficient administration of the provisions of the State plan relating to adoption assistance);

"(ii) the portion of the amount (if any) by which the amounts appropriated for the fiscal year for payments to States under part B exceed the amounts so appropriated for fiscal year 1992, that would be payable to the State pursuant to such part if the State were not authorized to conduct a demonstration project under this section; and

"(iii) 20 percent of the amount that would have been payable to the State for the immediately preceding fiscal year pursuant to section 423 if the State were not authorized to conduct a demonstration project under this section.

"(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE DEFINED.—

"(i) As used in subparagraph (A), the term 'applicable percentage' means, with respect to a State and a fiscal year, the quotient set forth in clause (ii) as determined by the Secretary after taking into account the estimates made under subsection (f)(2)(B) for the fiscal year with respect to the State.

"(ii) The quotient set forth in this clause is—

"(I) the number of children in the areas in which the State is conducting a demonstration project under this section with respect to whom the State would have made foster care maintenance payments under section 472 for the fiscal year if the Secretary had approved the State plan under this part for the fiscal year and the State were not authorized to conduct the project; divided by

"(II) the total number of children in the State with respect to whom the State would have so made such payments for the fiscal year.

"(5) NOTIFICATION TO STATES OF AMOUNT OF GRANTS.—On the 1st day of each fiscal year for which a State is to be made a grant under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the State of the amount of the grant.

"(6) GRANTS TO BE PAID IN EQUAL QUARTERLY INSTALLMENTS.—The Secretary shall pay each grant under paragraph (1) in equal quarterly installments.

"(7) SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENT.—Within 3 months after the end of each fiscal year with respect to which estimates are made under subsection (f)(2)(B) with respect to a State, the Secretary shall—

"(A) take such estimates into account in determining the amount that would have been payable to the State under section 474 for the fiscal year (other than for adoption assistance payments under section 473 and for expenses for the proper and efficient administration of the provisions of the State plan relating to adoption assistance) if the Secretary had approved the State plan under this part for the fiscal year and the State were not authorized to conduct a demonstration project under this section; and

"(B) pay the State the amount (if any) by which—

"(i) the amount determined under subparagraph (A) exceeds

"(ii) the amount paid to the State pursuant to section 474 for fiscal year 1992 (other than for adoption assistance payments under section 473 and for expenses for the proper and efficient administration of the provisions of the State plan relating to adoption assistance).

"(f) EVALUATION OF DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.—

"(1) SELECTION OF EVALUATING ENTITY.—The Secretary shall—

"(A) publish in the Commerce Daily a request for applications from entities that are capable of, and interested in, performing the functions described in paragraph (2) in time for such an entity to participate in the development of contracts under subsection (e)(1); and

"(B) enter into a contract with 1 or more entities to perform such functions.

"(2) FUNCTIONS OF EVALUATING ENTITY.—The functions of the entity or entities selected by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1) are—

"(A) to assist the Secretary and the States in devising a detailed plan for the evaluation of demonstration projects conducted under this section;

"(B) within 30 days after the end of each fiscal year, to submit a report to the Secretary, with respect to each such project, that estimates in accordance with the data collection provisions of the contract described in subsection (e)(1)—

"(i) the number of children in the areas in which the State is conducting a demonstration project under this section with respect to whom the State would have made foster care maintenance payments under section 472 for the fiscal year if the Secretary had approved the State plan under this part for the fiscal year and the State were not authorized to conduct the project; and

"(ii) the average length of time for which such payments would have been so made with respect to such children;

"(C) prepare in accordance with paragraph (3), and submit to the Secretary, with respect to each such project, interim reports that evaluate the costs and benefits of the project; and

"(D) prepare in accordance with paragraph (3), and submit to the Secretary, with respect to each such project, a final report that—

"(i) describes in detail, and documents, the ways in which the project has changed the provision of preventive services, reunification services, adoption assistance services, and other related child welfare and foster care services in the State; and

"(ii) evaluates the costs and benefits of the project.

"(3) EVALUATION REQUIREMENTS.—In evaluating a demonstration project conducted by a State under this section, the entity or entities selected by the Secretary to perform the evaluation shall—

"(A) collect such information as may be necessary to analyze the impact of the project on—

"(i) foster care placement rates;

"(ii) child development and behavior (including academic performance, intellectual development, and health); and

"(iii) family relationships;

"(B) collect such other information on outcomes as the Secretary or the State deems appropriate; and

"(C) use methodologies to measure outcomes with respect to children and families who participate in the projects under this section that enable comparison with similar outcome measurements of children and families who have not received the services offered by the projects under this section.

In selecting evaluating entities, the Secretary shall ensure that an appropriate portion of the evaluations shall use experimental and control groups (of a sample size determined in accordance with appropriate statistical practices).

"(4) DUTY OF STATES TO PROVIDE INFORMATION.—Each State which conducts a demonstration project under this section shall provide the entity or entities selected by the Secretary to evaluate the project with such information with respect to the project and the State programs carried out pursuant to part B and this part as the entity or entities may request under the contract described in subsection (e)(1) entered into by the Secretary, the entity, and the State.

"(5) COSTS OF EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall pay the costs incurred during each fiscal year by any State in assisting the evaluation of the demonstration project conducted by the State under this section, to the extent that such costs exceed the amount (estimated by the Secretary) that the State would have expended during the fiscal year to comply with the data reporting requirements of part B and this part if the Secretary had approved the State plans under such parts for the fiscal year and the State were not authorized to conduct the project.

"(g) APPLICABILITY OF PART B AND OTHER SECTIONS OF THIS PART.—During the period in which a State is conducting a demonstration project under this section—

"(1) part B (other than section 427) and the other provisions of this part (other than section 471(a)(1) requiring the State plan to provide for adoption assistance in accordance with section 473, paragraphs (8), (12), (13), (15), and (16) of section 471(a), sections 473, 474 (as it relates to adoption assistance under section 473), and section 479) shall not apply to the State; and

"(2) the State shall, for purposes of section 402(a)(20), be deemed to have in effect a State plan approved under this part.

"(h) PROHIBITION AGAINST IMPAIRMENT OF ENTITLEMENT TO FOSTER CARE BENEFITS.—A State may not carry out a demonstration project under this section in a manner which impairs the entitlement of any qualified child to foster care benefits under a State plan approved under this part.".

SEC. 7113. HOME REBUILDERS DEMONSTRATION PROJECT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Upon written application of the State of New York (in this section referred to as the "State"), and after the Secretary of Health and Human Services approves the application as meeting the requirements set forth in subsection (b), the State may conduct a demonstration project for the purpose of testing how to enhance the practices and procedures that will expedite the discharge of children from foster care, including the appropriate reunification of children with their families, or the adoption of children by suitable adoptive parents.

(b) PROJECT REQUIREMENTS.—In an application submitted under subsection (a), the State shall provide that the following terms and conditions shall be in effect under the demonstration project:

(1) Services and assistance for reunification of children with their families or adoption may be provided to not more than 2,000 eligible children (exclusive of siblings).

(2) Services and assistance shall be provided to explore and test innovative means to facilitate expedited and appropriate discharge of children from foster care. Such services and assistance may include social services and other forms of assistance designed to ameliorate or remedy personal problems, behaviors, or home conditions.

(3) For the purpose of testing an alternative to the per diem method of provider reimbursement, payments to participating agencies for total costs associated with providing foster care maintenance, services, and assistance on behalf of children will be disbursed pursuant to an approved per capita reimbursement methodology. The per capita payment will be based on the total number of care days the eligible population of children can reasonably be expected to use during the demonstration period.

(4) Eligibility for the demonstration project shall be based on the age of the child, the length of time in foster care, the type of placement, and the permanency planning goal.

(5) If an eligible child has siblings in foster care, siblings may be regarded as eligible project participants for the purpose of estimating total reimbursements in a manner approved by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(6) The Federal Government shall pay to the State with respect to children eligible for the demonstration project who are receiving maintenance payments, services, and assistance under the demonstration project the same amounts as would have been payable with respect to such children under parts B and E of title IV of the Social Security Act as if the families were receiving benefits under the State plan in effect during the period of the demonstration and such amounts shall be in lieu of amounts otherwise payable under such parts. The State and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall agree to a methodology for determining such amounts prior to the beginning of the demonstration project.

(c) WAIVERS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services may waive compliance with requirements in part E of title IV of the Social Security Act (other than paragraphs 8, 12, 13, 15, and 16 of section 471(a)) which (if applied) would prevent the State from carrying out the demonstration project under this section or prevent the State from effectively achieving the purpose of such a project.

(d) DATE OF COMMENCEMENT.—The demonstration project under this section shall commence not later than December 31, 1993.

(e) DURATION OF DEMONSTRATION.—The demonstration project under this section shall be conducted for a period not to exceed 3 years after the date such project begins.

(f) EVALUATION OF REPORTS.—The State shall collect data and conduct an appropriate evaluation of the demonstration project so as to demonstrate the effectiveness of the project. The evaluation design shall be approved by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The State shall provide an interim and final evaluation report to the Secretary of Health and Human Services at such times and in such manner as such Secretary determines appropriate.

(g) PROHIBITION AGAINST IMPAIRMENT OF ENTITLEMENT TO FOSTER CARE BENEFITS.—The State may not carry out the demonstration project under this section in a manner which impairs the entitlement of any qualified child to foster care benefits under a State plan approved under part E of title IV of the Social Security Act.

SEC. 7114. CHILD WELFARE SERVICES PROGRAM REVIEWS.

SEC. 7115. CHILD WELFARE REVIEW SYSTEM.

(a) RECOMMENDATIONS BY SECRETARY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Before May 1, 1993, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate recommendations for legislation to establish a system for—

(A) the review of each State child welfare program for the purposes of—

(i) assessing whether the program is being carried out as required by parts B and E of title IV of the Social Security Act;

(ii) identifying any area in which the program is not being carried out as so required, and the degree to which the program is not being so carried out; and

(iii) identifying the circumstances under which financial penalties shall be imposed in cases of any failure to comply with the requirements of such parts B and E, unless action is taken to correct such failure; and

(B) the provision of technical assistance to any such program.

(2) STATE CHILD WELFARE PROGRAM DEFINED.—As used in this section, the term "child welfare program" means, with respect to a State—

(A) all activities engaged in by, or under contract with, the State for the purpose of carrying out the State plan for child welfare services developed in accordance with section 422 of the Social Security Act; and

(B) all activities engaged in by, or under contract with, the State for the purpose of carrying out the State plan approved by the Secretary under part E of such Act.

(b) CONTENT OF RECOMMENDATIONS.—The recommendations required by subsection (a) shall include provisions—

(1) requiring each State child welfare program to be reviewed periodically to determine—

(A) whether and, where appropriate, the degree to which, the program complies with the requirements of the State plans referred to in subsection (a)(2); and

(B) the extent to which the amounts claimed to have been expended by the State for foster care maintenance payments under section 472 of the Social Security Act and for adoption assistance payments under section 473 of such Act are eligible for reimbursement under part E of such Act; and

(2) specifying the criteria that are to be used to assess, with respect to each subparagraph of paragraph (1)—

(A) whether the program has complied with the requirements that apply to the matters described in such subparagraph; and

(B) the degree of such compliance.

(c) DEVELOPMENT OF RECOMMENDATIONS.—The recommendations required by subsection (a) shall be developed in consultation with—

(1) representatives of State agencies administering the State plans referred to in subsection (a)(2);

(2) representatives of private, nonprofit organizations which have an interest in child welfare; and

(3) such other individuals as the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine.

SEC. 7116. PAYMENT OF STATE CLAIMS FOR FOSTER CARE AND ADOPTION ASSISTANCE.

Section 474 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 674) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) The Secretary shall pay any State claim for reimbursement for expenditures pursuant to subsection (a) within 90 days of the receipt of such claim unless the Secretary issues a deferral or a disallowance of such claim prior to the expiration of such 90 day period.".

SEC. 7117. COMMISSION ON CHILDHOOD DISABILITY.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall appoint a Commission on the Evaluation of Disability in Children (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Commission").

(b) APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS.—(1) The Secretary shall appoint 15 members to the Commission, including—

(A) recognized experts in the field of medicine, whose work involves—

(i) the evaluation and treatment of disability in children,

(ii) the study of congenital, genetic, or perinatal disorders in children, or

(iii) the measurement of developmental milestones and developmental deficits in children; and

(B) recognized experts in the fields of—

(i) psychology,

(ii) education and rehabilitation,

(iii) law, or

(iv) the administration of disability programs, and

(v) other fields of expertise that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(2) Members shall be appointed within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments to competitive service.

(3) Members appointed under this subsection shall serve for a term equivalent to the duration of the Commission.

(4) The Secretary shall designate a member of the Commission to serve as Chairman of the Commission for a term equivalent to the duration of the Commission.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—(1) Service as a member of the Commission by an individual who is not otherwise a Federal employee shall not be considered service in an appointive or elective position in the Federal Government for the purposes of any provision of title 5, United States Code.

(2) Each member of the Commission who is not a full-time Federal employee shall be paid compensation at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the rate of basic pay in effect for Level IV of the Executive Schedule for each day (including travel time) the member attends meetings or otherwise performs the duties of the Commission.

(3) While away from their homes or regular places of business on the business of the Commission, each member who is not a full-time Federal employee may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons employed intermittently in the Government service.

(d) ASSISTANCE TO COMMISSION.—The Commission may engage such technical assistance from individuals skilled in medical and other aspects of childhood disability as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Commission. The Secretary shall make available to the Commission such secretarial, clerical, and other assistance as the Commission may require to carry out the functions of the Commission.

(e) STUDY BY THE COMMISSION.—(1) The Commission shall conduct a study, in consultation with the National Academy of Sciences, of the effects of the definition of "disability" under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1382 et seq.) in effect on the date of enactment of this Act, as such definition applies to determining whether a child under the age of 18 is eligible to receive benefits under such title XVI, the appropriateness of such definition, and the advantages and disadvantages of using any alternative definition of disability in determining whether a child under age 18 is eligible to receive benefits under title XVI.

(2) The study described in paragraph (1) shall include issues of—

(A) recommendations for revision of the Childhood Listing of Impairments under regulations promulgated under Part B of Appendix 1 to Subpart P, section 404 of title 20, Code of Federal Regulations;

(B) the validity of a presumption of disability for children under age 4 with a genetic, congenital, or perinatal disorder;

(C) whether the need by families for assistance in meeting high costs of medical care for children with serious physical or mental impairments, whether or not they are eligible for disability benefits under title XVI, might appropriately be met through expansion of Federal health assistance programs (including Medical Assistance under title XIX of this Act); and

(D) such other issues that the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(f) REPORT.—Not later than September 1, 1994, the Commission shall prepare a report and submit such report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance in the Senate which shall summarize the results of the study described in subsection (e) and include any recommendations that the Commission determines to be appropriate.

(g) TERMINATION OF COMMISSION.—The Commission shall terminate on September 30, 1994.

PART II—PROVISIONS RELATING TO COMPREHENSIVE SUBSTANCE ABUSE PROGRAMS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN AND CARETAKER PARENTS WITH CHILDREN

SEC. 7121. COMPREHENSIVE SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT PROGRAMS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN AND CARETAKER PARENTS.

Part B of title IV, as amended by section 7101, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR CERTAIN SERVICES FURNISHED UNDER COMPREHENSIVE SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT PROGRAMS

"SEC. 430. (a) For the purpose of enabling States to establish comprehensive programs of substance abuse treatment for certain low-income pregnant women, caretaker parents, and their children, there are authorized to be appropriated for each of the fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997 such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(b)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), the Secretary shall pay as an entitlement to each State for each quarter, from the sums appropriated therefor, an amount equal to the Federal medical assistance percentage (as defined in section 1905(b)) of the total amount expended by the State for that quarter in planning, developing, and operating a qualified comprehensive substance abuse treatment program, and in providing nonmedical substance abuse treatment support services for qualified individuals under such program.

"(2) The total amount paid to a State under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year may not exceed the sum of—

"(A) the amount to which a State is entitled under paragraph (3) for the fiscal year; and

"(B) any unexpended portion of the amount to which a State was entitled for the preceding fiscal year.

"(3)(A) The amount to which a State is entitled under this paragraph for a fiscal year shall be determined in the manner specified in section 421(a), except that the total amount to which all States are entitled under this paragraph may not exceed $75,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994, $100,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1997.

"(B) The amount to which a State is entitled under this paragraph for a fiscal year shall remain available for such fiscal year and the succeeding fiscal year.

"(4) Payments to a State under paragraph (1) shall be made in the manner specified in section 423(b).

"(c) As a condition of receiving payment under subsection (b)(1) for a fiscal year, a State shall provide to the Secretary (in such form as the Secretary may prescribe) written assurances that—

"(1) the total amount of funds expended by the State (and any political subdivision thereof) from non-Federal sources for the fiscal year for the purpose of providing nonmedical substance abuse treatment support services for the fiscal year will not be less than the total amount expended for such services from such sources for the immediately preceding fiscal year, and

"(2) an individual who is referred to a program receiving funds authorized under this section by a State agency described in section 422(b)(1) shall be given priority in admission to such program.

"(d) The Secretary shall require each State receiving payments under subsection (b)(1) to report (in such manner and form and at such time as the Secretary determines to be appropriate) such information as may be necessary to permit the Secretary and the Congress to evaluate the operation and effectiveness of comprehensive substance abuse treatment services under this section. Such information shall include the number of individuals participating in such program in the State, any limits imposed by the State on the number of individuals who may enroll in the program, and the number of individuals on any waiting list maintained by the State for participation in the program.

"(e) For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'nonmedical substance abuse treatment support services' means—

"(A) home visitation services, nutrition services, child care, and parenting education;

"(B) substance abuse prevention, treatment, and follow-up services (to the extent such services are not furnished under a State plan approved under title XIX); and

"(C) any other services (such as room and board at a residential substance abuse treatment facility for a qualified individual and, where appropriate, the individual's child) that are determined by the State (in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary) to be necessary and appropriate to support the participation of a qualified individual in a qualified comprehensive substance abuse treatment program.

"(2) The term 'qualified individual' means an individual who is—

"(A) a pregnant woman or caretaker parent who is eligible for medical assistance under a State plan approved under title XIX;

"(B) at the option of the State, any other pregnant woman or caretaker parent whose income does not exceed an amount specified by the State; and

"(C) where appropriate, any child of an individual specified in subparagraph (A) or (B).

"(3) The term 'qualified comprehensive substance abuse treatment program' means a program, established by a State, that—

"(A) makes available to qualified individuals (either directly or through arrangements with others) at least the following services:

"(i) substance abuse prevention, treatment, and follow up services (on an outpatient basis and, at the option of the State, in a residential facility);

"(ii) prenatal, gynecological, and pediatric medical services;

"(iii) transportation; and

"(iv) nonmedical substance abuse treatment support services;

"(B) provides for appropriate coordination of substance abuse treatment-related medical services furnished to individuals under the program (under title V or XIX) and nonmedical substance abuse support services for which payment may be made under this section; and

"(C) is administered by an agency (or agencies) designated by the Governor of the State.

"(4) The term 'caretaker parent' means a parent who personally provides (or expects to provide) care for a child.".

"(b) PROJECT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A community works progress project conducted under this section shall serve a significant public purpose in fields such as health, social service, environmental protection, education, urban and rural development and redevelopment, welfare, recreation, public facilities, public safety, and child care.

"(2) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Any organization which conducts a community works progress project under this section shall ensure that the project complies with the nonduplication and nondisplacement requirements set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of section 177 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990 and that the project does not impair any contracts for services or any collective bargaining agreements existing at the time the project commences.

"(3) FAILURE TO MEET REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may suspend or terminate payments under this section for a community works progress project if the Secretary determines that an organization conducting such project has materially failed to comply with this section, the application submitted under subsection (e), or any other terms and conditions of a grant under this section agreed to by such organization and the Secretary.

"(c) PARTICIPATION IN PROJECTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to participate in a community works progress project under this section, an individual shall be—

"(A) receiving, eligible to receive, or have exhausted (while participating in such a project), unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States,

"(B) receiving, eligible to receive, or at risk of becoming eligible to receive, aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV, or

"(C) a noncustodial parent of a child who is receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV.

"(2) PARTICIPANTS IN JOBS PROGRAM.—If an individual is receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV and participating in the job opportunities and basic skills training program under part F of such title, such individual may be assigned by the State agency to participate in a community works progress project if—

"(A) such participation does not conflict with the requirements of such part F, and

"(B) such individual is referred to participate in the community works progress project in accordance with the procedures established under such part F.

"(3) REQUIREMENTS RELATED TO PARTICIPATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In order to assure that each individual will have time to seek alternative employment or to participate in an alternative employability enhancement activity, no individual may work as a participant in a community works progress project under this section for more than 32 hours per week.

"(B) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION.—Except as provided in subparagraph (A), individuals who are receiving unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States shall agree to work as participants in a community works progress project on a weekly basis the number of hours determined by dividing—

"(I) the amount of the weekly unemployment compensation received by such individual, by

"(II) the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater.

"(ii) INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING AFDC.—In addition to the limitation set forth in subparagraph (A), individuals who are receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV may not be required to work as participants in a community works progress project on a monthly basis more than the number of hours determined by dividing—

"(I) the amount of monthly assistance the family of the individual is eligible to receive under such part, by

"(II) the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater.

"(4) TESTING AND EDUCATION REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) TESTING.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), each participant in a community works progress project shall be tested for basic reading and writing competence prior to employment under such project.

"(B) EDUCATION REQUIREMENT.—

"(i) FAILURE TO SATISFACTORILY COMPLETE TEST.—Participants who fail to complete satisfactorily the basic competency test required in subparagraph (A) shall be furnished counseling and instruction.

"(ii) LIMITED-ENGLISH.—Participants with limited-English speaking ability may be furnished such instruction as the organization conducting the project deems appropriate.

"(C) PARTICIPANTS IN JOBS PROGRAM.—Any individual who is a participant in the job opportunities and basic skills training program under part F of title IV shall not be required to be tested under subparagraph (A) if such individual has been tested under such program.

"(d) COMPENSATION FOR PARTICIPANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—

"(A) INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION OR AFDC.—Each participant in a community works progress project who is receiving unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States or receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be compensated for participation in such project on a monthly basis, an amount equal to 10 percent of the average (as estimated by the organization conducting such project) amount of—

"(i) unemployment compensation under such unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States, and

"(ii) aid to families with dependent children under such part A, paid to recipients of such benefits in the area served by such project on a monthly basis. Such amount shall be paid from grant funds awarded to the organization conducting such project and shall be in addition to the benefit received by such participant as unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States or aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV.

"(B) INDIVIDUALS NOT RECEIVING UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION OR AFDC.—Each participant in a community works progress project who is not described in subparagraph (A) shall, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be paid for each hour worked as a participant on such project an amount equal to the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater. Such amount shall be paid from grant funds awarded to the organization conducting such project.

"(2) PAYMENTS OF AFDC AND UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION.—Any State agency responsible for making a payment of benefits to a participant in a community works progress project under part A of title IV or under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States may transfer such payment to the organization conducting such project and such payment shall be made by such organization to such participant in conjunction with any payment made under subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1).

"(3) ADDITIONAL WORK HOURS.—

"(A) INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION—If an individual who is receiving unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States accepts an offer to work hours in addition to the number of hours determined under subsection (c)(3)(B)(i), such individual shall be paid for each such additional hour an amount equal to the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater.

"(B) INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING AFDC.—If an individual who is receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV accepts an offer to work hours in addition to the number of hours determined under subsection (c)(3)(B)(ii), such individual shall be paid for each such additional hour an amount equal to the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater.

"(4) ALTERNATIVE COMPENSATION METHODS.—The Secretary may approve any application submitted under subsection (e) which provides for an alternative to the method of compensation for participants in a community works progress project set forth in this section if such alternative method—

"(A) does not reduce the amount received by any participant on an hourly basis below the Federal minimum wage or the applicable State minimum wage, whichever is greater; and

"(B)(i) in the case of an individual receiving unemployment compensation under an unemployment law of a State or of the United States, results in a weekly payment which would be greater than the weekly amount the participant receives as such compensation; or

"(ii) in the case of an individual receiving aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV, results in a monthly payment which would be greater than the monthly amount the family of the participant receives as such aid.

"(5) TREATMENT OF COMPENSATION OR BENEFITS UNDER OTHER PROGRAMS.—

"(A) HIGHER EDUCATION ACT OF 1965.—In determining any grant, loan, or other form of assistance for an individual under any program under the Higher Education Act of 1965, the Secretary of Education shall not take into consideration the compensation and benefits received by such individual under this subsection for participation in a community works progress project.

"(B) RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER FEDERAL BENEFITS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any compensation or benefits received by an individual under this subsection for participation in a community works progress project shall be excluded from any determination of income for the purposes of determining eligibility for benefits under sections 402, 1612, and 1613 and title XIX.

"(6) SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—Each participant in a community works progress project conducted under this section shall be eligible to receive, out of grant funds awarded to an organization conducting such project, assistance to meet necessary costs of transportation, child care, and uniforms and other work materials.

"(e) APPLICATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An application for a grant to conduct a community works progress project under this section shall be submitted at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall require and shall include—

"(A) a description of the type of project to be carried out, including a description of the types and duration of training and work experience to be provided to participants in such project,

"(B) a comprehensive description of the objectives and performance goals for the community works progress project to be conducted,

"(C) a description of a plan for managing and funding the project,

"(D) an assurance that, prior to the placement of a participant under the project, the organization will consult with any local labor organization representing employees in the area who are engaged in the same or similar work as that proposed to be carried out by such project,

"(E) a description of any formal job training or job search arrangements to be made available to the participants, in cooperation with State agencies,

"(F) an assurance that the community works progress project will be coordinated with other Federally assisted education programs, training programs, social service programs, and other appropriate programs,

"(G) an assurance that the community works progress project will participate in cooperative efforts among community-based agencies, local educational agencies, and local government agencies (as defined in paragraphs (3), (11), and (12), respectively, of section 101 of the National and Community Service Act of 1990), businesses, and State agencies, to develop and provide supportive services,

"(H) a description of fiscal control, accounting, audit, and debt collection procedures to assure the proper disbursal of, and accounting for, funds received under this section,

"(I) a projection of the amount the organization conducting a community works progress project under this section intends to spend in each fiscal year for such project.

"(2) CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider all applications received from organizations desiring to conduct community works progress projects under this section and shall approve 3 applications for projects to be conducted in urban areas and 2 applications for projects to be conducted on a statewide basis. In selecting an organization to conduct a community works progress project under this section, the Secretary shall consider—

"(A) the unemployment rate for the area in which the project will be conducted,

"(B) the proportion of the population receiving public assistance in the area in which the project will be conducted,

"(C) the per capita income for the area in which the project will be conducted,

"(D) the degree of involvement and commitment demonstrated by public officials in the area in which the project will be conducted,

"(E) the likelihood that the project will be successful,

"(F) the contribution that the project is likely to make toward improving the quality of life of residents of the area in which the project will be conducted,

"(G) geographic distribution,

"(H) the extent to which the project will emphasize the development of projects encouraging team approaches to work on real, identifiable projects,

"(I) the extent to which private and community agencies will be involved, and

"(J) such other criteria as the Secretary deems appropriate.

"(3) APPLICATION NOTICE.—The Secretary shall publish a notice regarding applications for grants under this section no later than January 1, 1993.

"(f) COMPLETION OF PROJECTS.—An organization conducting a community works progress project under this section shall complete such project within the 4-year period beginning on the date of the approval of such organization's application.

"(g) EVALUATIONS AND REPORTS.—

"(1) BY THE ORGANIZATIONS.—Each organization conducting a community works progress project under this section shall conduct ongoing evaluations of the effectiveness of such project (including the effectiveness of such project in meeting the goals and objectives described in the application approved by the Secretary) and, for each year in which such project is conducted, shall submit an annual report to the Secretary concerning the results of such evaluations at such time, and in such manner, as the Secretary shall require. The report shall include an analysis of the interaction, if any, of project participants with employees that are not participating in the project. Up to 3 percent of the amount granted to such organization under subsection (h) may be used to conduct evaluations under this paragraph.

"(2) BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall submit an interim annual report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives concerning the effectiveness of the community works progress projects conducted under this section for each year in which such a project is conducted and a final report to such committees within 90 days after the completion of the last of the projects. Such report shall analyze the reports received by the Secretary under paragraph (1) from each participating organization.

"(h) PAYMENTS TO ORGANIZATIONS CONDUCTING PROJECTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), for each of fiscal years 1994 through 1997, the Secretary shall pay as an entitlement to each organization conducting a community works progress project under this section an amount equal to such organization's expenditures to carry out such project for such fiscal year.

"(2) LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS.—For any fiscal year, the amount any organization is entitled to receive under paragraph (1) shall be limited to an amount equal to the product of—

"(A) the total amount of funds appropriated under subsection (i) for such fiscal year; and

"(B) the amount determined by dividing—

"(i) the amount such organization projects to spend for such project during the fiscal year as set forth in such organization's application under subsection (e)(1), by

"(ii) the total amount projected to be spent during such fiscal year by all organizations conducting community works progress projects under this section as set forth in the applications submitted under such subsection.

"(3) CAPITAL COSTS.—Not more than 25 percent of the amount paid to any organization under paragraph (1) may be used for capital expenditures.

"(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, $100,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997. Any amount made available to a project for a fiscal year shall remain available to be expended in the succeeding fiscal year.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall be effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

PART VII—OTHER INCOME SECURITY PROVISIONS

SEC. 7171. MEASUREMENT AND REPORTING OF WELFARE DEPENDENCY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that welfare dependency has reached threatening levels:

(1) In the period since 1960 the average annual caseload of the aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) program under title IV of the Social Security Act has quintupled.

(2) In 1990 there were on average almost twice as many households receiving aid to families with dependent children payments as the number of households and individuals receiving unemployment compensation benefits.

(3) Nearly one-quarter of children born in the period 1967 through 1969 were dependent on welfare (AFDC) before reaching age 18. For minority children this ratio approached three-quarters.

(4) At any given time one-quarter of school children are from single parent families, or households with neither parent. The National Assessment of Educational Progress has documented the educational losses associated with single parent or no parent households.

(5) Only one-quarter of father-absent families receive full child support and over one-half receive none.

(6) The average aid to families with dependent children benefit has declined by more than one-third since 1960.

(7) The burden of welfare dependency is an issue of necessary concern to women, who in overwhelming proportion are the heads of single parent families.

(8) The rate of welfare dependency is rising. However, the statistical basis on which to assess this national issue is wholly inadequate, much as the statistical basis for addressing issues of unemployment was inadequate prior to the Employment Act of 1946, which required the creation of the annual economic report of the President and the development of unemployment rates.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL POLICY.—The Congress hereby declares that—

(1) it is the policy and responsibility of the Federal Government to reduce welfare dependency to the lowest possible level, and to assist families toward self-sufficiency, consistent with other essential national goals;

(2) it is the policy of the United States to strengthen families, to ensure that children grow up in families that are economically self-sufficient and to underscore the responsibility of parents to support their children;

(3) the Federal Government should help welfare recipients as well as individuals at risk of welfare dependency to improve their education and job skills, to obtain access to necessary support services, and to take such other steps as may assist them to meet their responsibilities to become financially independent; and

(4) it is the purpose of this section to aid in lowering welfare dependency by providing the public with generally accepted measures of welfare dependency so that it can track dependency over time and determine whether progress is being made in reducing welfare dependency and enabling families to be self-sufficient.

(c) DEVELOPMENT OF WELFARE DEPENDENCY INDICATORS, RATES, AND PREDICTORS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (referred to in this section as the "Secretary") in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture shall develop indicators, rates, and predictors of welfare dependency.

(2) DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary shall—

(A) develop—

(i) indicators and rates related to the level of welfare dependency in the United States; and

(ii) predictors that are correlated with welfare dependency;

(B) assess the data needed to report annually on the indicators, rates, and predictors, including the ability of existing data collection efforts to provide such data and any additional data collection needs; and

(C) not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this section, provide an interim report containing conclusions resulting from the development and assessment described in subparagraphs (A) and (B), to—

(i) the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives;

(ii) the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives;

(iii) the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives;

(iv) the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives;

(v) the Committee on Finance of the Senate;

(vi) the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate; and

(vii) the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

(3) CONSIDERATIONS.—In developing the indicators, rates, and predictors, the Secretary shall consider the complexity of patterns of welfare dependency and self-sufficiency attainment, and the external factors, including the economy, that affect welfare dependency.

(d) ADVISORY BOARD ON WELFARE DEPENDENCY.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established an Advisory Board on Welfare Dependency (referred to in this section as the "Board").

(2) COMPOSITION.—The Board shall be composed of 12 members with equal numbers to be appointed by the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the President. The Board shall be composed of experts in the fields of welfare research and statistical methodology, representatives of State and local welfare agencies, and organizations concerned with welfare issues.

(3) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the Board shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment for the position being vacated. The vacancy shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the duties of the Board.

(4) DUTIES.—Duties of the Board shall include—

(A) providing advice and recommendations to the Secretary on the development of indicators, rates, and predictors of welfare dependency, and the identification of data collection needs and existing data collection efforts, described in subsection (c)(2)(B); and

(B) providing advice on the development and presentation of the annual report on welfare dependency indicators, rates, and predictors required under subsection (e).

(5) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the Board shall not be compensated, but shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, for each day the member is engaged in the performance of duties away from the home or regular place of business of the member.

(6) DETAIL OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary shall detail, without reimbursement, any of the personnel of the Department of Health and Human Services to the Board to assist the Board in carrying out its duties. Any detail shall not interrupt or otherwise affect the civil service status or privileges of the Federal employee.

(7) VOLUNTARY SERVICE.—Notwithstanding section 1342 of title 31, United States Code, the Board may accept the voluntary services provided by a member of the Board.

(8) TERMINATION OF BOARD.—The Board shall be terminated at such time as the Secretary determines the duties described in subsection (d)(4) have been completed, but in any case prior to the submission of the first report required under subsection (e).

(e) ANNUAL WELFARE DEPENDENCY REPORT.—

(1) PREPARATION.—The Secretary shall prepare an annual report on welfare dependency in the United States. The report shall attempt to identify indicators, rates, and predictors of welfare dependency and trends in dependency, and provide information and analysis on the causes of dependency.

(2) COVERAGE.—The report shall include analysis of families and individuals receiving assistance under means-tested benefit programs, including the program of aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), the food stamp program under the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.), and the Supplemental Security Income program under title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.), or as general assistance under programs administered by State and local governments.

(3) CONTENTS.—Each report shall set forth—

(A) for each of the means-tested benefit programs described in paragraph (2)—

(i) current trends in the number and rates of recipients and the characteristics, including age, sex, marital status, presence of children, labor force participation, and disability, of the recipients; and

(ii) total expenditures;

(B) the proportion of the total population receiving each of the programs and patterns of multiple program participation and recipiency duration;

(C)(i) characteristics of each such program, including total expenditures broken down by Federal and State shares, gross income limit, need standards, and maximum potential benefit by State; and

(ii) a description of the interactions among the programs;

(D) in the case of the second, or a subsequent, report, changes in the information described in subparagraphs (A) through (C) from the previous year, and trends in program participation;

(E) annual numerical goals for recipients, and expenditures, within each program and within significant subgroups within the population, for the calendar year in which the report is transmitted and for each of the following 4 calendar years, which goals shall, consistent with other essential national goals, reflect the objectives of—

(i) reducing welfare dependency to the lowest possible level; and

(ii) increasing family self-sufficiency at or above the Federal poverty level to the greatest extent possible;

(F)(i) the programs and policies as the Secretary, in consultation with the Board, determines are necessary to meet the goals for each of the 5 years; and

(ii) such recommendations for legislation, which shall not include proposals to reduce eligibility levels or impose barriers to program access, as the Secretary may determine to be necessary or desirable to reduce welfare dependency; and

(G) interim goals for reducing the proportion of children, and families with children, who are recipients of aid to families with dependent children to 10 percent of families with children, adjusted for economic conditions.

(4) SUBMISSION.—The Secretary shall submit such a report not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this section, and annually thereafter, to the committees specified in subsection (c)(2)(C). The report shall be transmitted during the first 60 days of each regular session of Congress.

SEC. 7172. EXTENSION OF NATIONAL COMMISSION ON CHILDREN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1139(e)(1)(A) (42 U.S.C. 1320b–9(e)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "March 31, 1991" and inserting "December 31, 1992".

(b) AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the National Commission on Children shall terminate on December 31, 1992. The Commission shall retain the authority provided to such Commission on the date of enactment of section 1139 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1320b–9) until December 31, 1992. The Executive Director and staff of such Commission shall have a reasonable period of time, not to extend beyond March 31, 1993, to conduct those activities that have been determined by the Chairman of the Commission to be required to close down the operations of the Commission.

SEC. 7173. SECRETARIAL REPORT ON THE DIFFERENCES IN PROGRAM RULES UNDER THE FOOD STAMP, AID TO FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN, AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this section, the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Agriculture shall jointly submit to the President and the Congress a report which includes—

(1) the rules which govern the food stamp program operated under the Food Stamp Act of 1977, the program of aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act, and the program of medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act;

(2) how the rules differ across such programs;

(3) which of the rules under such programs require statutory action in order to achieve uniformity with respect to such programs (including specific statutory citations); and

(4) which of the rules could be made uniform without statutory action.

(b) RULES TO BE EVALUATED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The rules to be evaluated in the report required by subsection (a) shall include all rules related to administrative procedures (described in paragraph (2) of this subsection), definitions of countable income, and definitions of income disregards and exemptions. Income eligibility levels shall be excluded from such report.

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURES DEFINED.—The administrative procedures to be evaluated in the report required by subsection (a) include procedures governing—

(A) quality control error measurements;

(B) the effective dates by which State and local agencies must implement rule changes;

(C) verification of applicant or recipient circumstances;

(D) establishment of claims for overpayment;

(E) recipient reporting requirements;

(F) income budgeting methods for applicants and recipients;

(G) eligibility redeterminations;

(H) hearings for those aggrieved by a State or local agency decision on eligibility or benefits;

(I) determinations of citizen or alien status;

(J) time limits for processing applications;

(K) response time and other requirements with respect to notices to recipients affecting their eligibility or benefits;

(L) policies on strikers;

(M) incentives to combat fraud; and

(N) work requirements.

SEC. 7174. ADULT IN FAMILY OR HOUSEHOLD ALLOWED TO ATTEST TO CITIZENSHIP STATUS OF FAMILY OR HOUSEHOLD MEMBERS UNDER AFDC AND MEDICAID.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1137(d)(1)(A) (42 U.S.C. 1320b–7(d)(1)(A)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1)(A) The State shall require, as a condition of an individual's eligibility for benefits under any program listed in subsection (b), a declaration in writing, under penalty of perjury—

"(i) in the case of an individual who is an adult member of a family or household applying for or receiving such benefits, by such individual or another adult member of such family or household on such individual's behalf, or

"(ii) in the case of an individual who is a child, by an adult on the individual's behalf, or

"(iii) in the case of an individual born into a family or household receiving such benefits, by an adult member of such individual's family or household on the individual's behalf no later than the next redetermination of eligibility of such family or household following the birth of such individual, stating whether the individual is a citizen or national of the United States, and, if that individual is not a citizen or national of the United States, that the individual is in a satisfactory immigration status.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall become effective with respect to benefits provided on or after October 1, 1992.

SEC. 7175. EXCLUSION FROM INCOME OF $4,000 OF INCOME RECEIVED IN ANY YEAR BY INDIANS FROM INTERESTS INDIVIDUALLY HELD IN TRUST OR RESTRICTED LANDS.

(a) SSI.—Section 1612(b) (42 U.S.C. 1382a(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (19), by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (20), by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(21) the first $4,000 of income received in any year by any Indian (within the meaning of the Act of October 19, 1973) from interests individually held by the Indian in trust or restricted lands.".

(b) AFDC.—Section 402(a)(8)(A) (42 U.S.C. 602(a)(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (viii), by striking "and" after the semicolon; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(x) shall disregard the first $4,000 of income received in any year by any Indian (within the meaning of the Act of October 19, 1973) from interests individually held by the Indian in trust or restricted lands; and".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 1992.

SEC. 7176. EXTENSION OF DEMONSTRATION TO EXPAND JOB OPPORTUNITIES.

Section 505 of the Family Support Act of 1988 is amended—

(e) REMOVAL OF FORMAL DECLINATION REQUIREMENT.—Section 1140(c)(1) (42 U.S.C. 1320b–10(c)(1)) is amended by inserting "and the first sentence of subsection (c)" after "and (i)".

(f) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Section 1140 (42 U.S.C. 1320b–10) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) The Secretary shall include in the annual report submitted pursuant to section 704 a report on the operation of this section during the year covered by such annual report. Such report shall specify—

"(1) the number of complaints of violations of this section received by the Social Security Administration during the year,

"(2) the number of cases in which a notice of violation of this section was sent by the Social Security Administration during the year requesting that an individual cease activities in violation of this section,

"(3) the number of complaints of violations of this section referred by the Social Security Administration to the Inspector General in the Department of Health and Human Services during the year,

"(4) the number of investigations of violations of this section undertaken by the Inspector General during the year,

"(5) the number of cases in which a demand letter was sent during the year assessing a civil money penalty under this section,

"(6) the total amount of civil money penalties assessed under this section during the year,

"(7) the number of requests for hearings filed during the year pursuant to sections 1140(c)(1) and 1128A(c)(2),

"(8) the disposition during such year of hearings filed pursuant to sections 1140(c)(1) and 1128A(c)(2), and

"(9) the total amount of civil money penalties under this section deposited as miscellaneous receipts of the treasury of the United States during the year.".

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to violations occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Charitable Contribution Provisions

SEC. 8001. ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX TREATMENT.

(a) REPEAL OF TAX PREFERENCE.—Subsection (a) of section 57 is amended by striking paragraph (6) (relating to the appreciated property charitable deduction under the alternative minimum tax) and by redesignating paragraph (7) as paragraph (6).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subclause (II) of section 53(d)(1)(B)(ii) is amended by striking ", (5), and (6)" and inserting "and (5)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contributions made in calendar years ending on or after December 31, 1992.

(d) REPORT ON ADVANCE DETERMINATION OF VALUE OF CHARITABLE GIFTS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives on the development of a procedure under which taxpayers may elect to seek an agreement with the Secretary as to the value of tangible personal property prior to the donation of such property to a qualifying charitable organization if the time limits for the donation and other conditions contained in the agreement are satisfied. Such report shall address the setting of possible threshold amounts for claimed value (and the payment of fees) by a taxpayer in order to seek agreement under the procedure, possible limitations on applying the procedure only to items with significant artistic or cultural value, recommendations for legislative action needed to implement the proposed procedure.

SEC. 80028. ALLOCATION OF DEDUCTION FOR CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 864 (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) ALLOCATION OF DEDUCTION FOR CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of sections 861(b), 862(b), and 863(a)—

"(1) 55 percent of the deduction for charitable contributions provided by section 170 shall be allocated and apportioned to income from sources within the United States and deducted from such income in determining the amount of taxable income from sources within the United States, and

"(2) the remaining portion of such deduction shall be apportioned on the basis of gross income.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, all members of an affiliated group (as defined in subsection (e)(5)(A)) shall be treated as 1 corporation."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to contributions made on or after July 1, 1993.

SEC. 8003. SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENT FOR DEDUCTION OF CERTAIN CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENT.—Section 170(f) (providing special rules relating to the deduction of charitable contributions and gifts) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENT FOR CERTAIN CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(A) GENERAL RULE.—No deduction shall be allowed under subsection (a) for any contribution of $100 or more unless the taxpayer substantiates the contribution by a contemporaneous written acknowledgment of the contribution by the donee organization that meets the requirements of subparagraph (B).

"(B) CONTENT OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—An acknowledgment meets the requirements of this subparagraph (B) if it provides information sufficient to substantiate the amount of the deductible contribution. If the contribution was made by means of a payment part of which constituted consideration for goods or services provided by the donee organization, the acknowledgment must provide a good faith estimate of the value of such goods or services.

"(C) CONTEMPORANEOUS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), an acknowledgment shall be considered to be contemporaneous if the taxpayer obtains the acknowledgment on or before the earlier of—

"(i) the date on which the taxpayer files a return for the taxable year in which the contribution was made, or

"(ii) the due date (including extensions) for filing such return.

"(D) SUBSTANTIATION NOT REQUIRED FOR CONTRIBUTIONS REPORTED BY THE DONEE ORGANIZATION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to a contribution if the donee organization files a return, on such form and in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, which includes the information described in subparagraph (B) with respect to the contribution.

"(E) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this paragraph, including regulations that may provide that some or all of the requirements of this paragraph do not apply in appropriate cases."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall apply to contributions made on or after January 1, 1993.

SEC. 8004. DISCLOSURE RELATED TO QUID PRO QUO CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENT.—Subchapter B of chapter 61 (relating to information and returns) is amended by redesignating section 6115 as section 6116 and by inserting after section 6114 the following new section:

"SEC. 6115. DISCLOSURE RELATED TO QUID PRO QUO CONTRIBUTIONS.

"(a) DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENT.—If an organization described in section 170(c) (other than paragraph (1) thereof) receives a quid pro quo contribution, the organization shall, in connection with the solicitation or receipt of the contribution—

"(1) inform the donor that the amount of the contribution that is deductible for Federal income tax purposes is limited to the excess of the amount of any money and the value of any property other than money contributed by the donor over the value of the goods or services provided by the organization, and

"(2) provide the donor with a good faith estimate of the value of such goods or services.

"(b) QUID PRO QUO CONTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'quid pro quo contribution' means a payment made partly as a contribution and partly in consideration for goods or services provided to the payor by the donee organization."

(b) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO DISCLOSE.—Part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 (relating to assessable penalties) is amended by inserting after section 6713 the following new section:

"SEC. 6714. FAILURE TO MEET DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS APPLICABLE TO QUID PRO QUO CONTRIBUTIONS.

"(a) IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—If an organization fails to meet the disclosure requirement of section 6115 with respect to a quid pro quo contribution, such organization shall pay a penalty of $10 for each contribution in respect of which the organization fails to make the required disclosure, except that the total penalty imposed by this subsection with respect to a particular fundraising event or mailing shall not exceed $5,000.

"(b) REASONABLE CAUSE EXCEPTION.—No penalty shall be imposed under this section with respect to any failure if it is shown that such failure is due to reasonable cause."

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The table for subchapter B of chapter 61 is amended by striking the item relating to section 6115 and inserting the following new item:

"Sec. 6115. Disclosure related to quid pro quo contributions.

"Sec. 6116. Cross reference."

(2) The table for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by inserting after the item for section 6713 the following new item:

"Sec. 6714. Failure to meet disclosure requirements applicable to quid pro quo contributions."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall apply to quid pro quo contributions made on or after January 1, 1993.

SEC. 8005. EXCLUSION FROM UNRELATED BUSINESS TAXABLE INCOME FOR CERTAIN SPONSORSHIP PAYMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 513 (relating to unrelated business taxable income) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(i) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN SPONSORSHIP PAYMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'unrelated trade or business' does not include the activity of soliciting and receiving qualified sponsorship payments with respect to any qualified public event.

"(2) QUALIFIED SPONSORSHIP PAYMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified sponsorship payment' means any payment by any person engaged in a trade or business with respect to which there is no arrangement or expectation that such person will receive any substantial return benefit other than the use of the name or logo of such person's trade or business in connection with any qualified public event. For purposes of this paragraph, the use of the name or logo of such person's trade or business does not include advertising or promotion of such person's products or services.

"(3) QUALIFIED PUBLIC EVENT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified public event' means any public event conducted by an organization described in paragraph (3), (4), (5), or (6) of section 501(c) or by an organization described in section 511(a)(2)(B) if—

"(A) substantially all the activities of the organization in conducting the event are not subject to tax under section 511, and

"(B) the net proceeds from the event are used for purposes described in section 170(c)(2)(B)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to payments received in connection with events conducted after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Foreign Provisions

SEC. 8101. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DIVIDENDS OF REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES RECEIVED BY NONRESIDENT ALIENS AND FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—

(1) NONRESIDENT ALIEN INDIVIDUALS.—Section 871 (relating to tax on nonresident alien individuals) is amended by redesignating subsection (k) as subsection (l) and by inserting after subsection (j) the following new subsection:

"(k) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN DIVIDENDS OF REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—

"(1) INTEREST-RELATED DIVIDENDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no tax shall be imposed under paragraph (1)(A) of subsection (a) on any interest-related dividend received from a regulated investment company.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply—

"(i) to any interest-related dividend received from a regulated investment company by a 10-percent shareholder of such company,

"(ii) to any interest-related dividend received from a regulated investment company by a person who is not a 10-percent shareholder of such company to the extent such dividend is attributable to interest received by such company on indebtedness issued by such person or by any corporation or partnership with respect to which such person is a 10-percent shareholder,

"(iii) to any interest-related dividend with respect to stock of a regulated investment company if the person who would otherwise be required to deduct and withhold tax from such dividend under chapter 3 has not received a statement (which meets requirements similar to the requirements of subsection (h)(4)) that the beneficial owner of such stock is not a United States person, and

"(iv) to any interest-related dividend paid to any person within a foreign country (or any interest-related dividend payment addressed to, or for the account of, persons within such foreign country) during any period described in subsection (h)(5) with respect to such country.

Clause (iv) shall not apply to any dividend with respect to any stock which was acquired on or before the date of the publication of the Secretary's determination under subsection (h)(5).

"(C) INTEREST-RELATED DIVIDEND.—For purposes of this paragraph, an interest-related dividend is any dividend (or part thereof) which is designated by the regulated investment company as an interest-related dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders not later than 60 days after the close of its taxable year. If the aggregate amount so designated with respect to a taxable year of the company (including amounts so designated with respect to dividends paid after the close of the taxable year described in section 855) is greater than the qualified net interest income of the company for such taxable year, the portion of each distribution which shall be an interest-related dividend shall be only that portion of the amounts so designated which such qualified net interest income bears to the aggregate amount so designated.

"(D) QUALIFIED NET INTEREST INCOME.—For purposes of subparagraph (C), the term 'qualified net interest income' means the qualified interest income of the regulated investment company reduced by the deductions properly allocable to such income.

"(E) QUALIFIED INTEREST INCOME.—For purposes of subparagraph (D), the term 'qualified interest income' means the sum of the following amounts derived by the regulated investment company from sources within the United States:

"(i) Any amount includible in gross income as original issue discount (within the meaning of section 1273) on an obligation payable 183 days or less from the date of original issue (without regard to the period held by the company).

"(ii) Any interest (including original issue discount) on an obligation which is in registered form; except that this clause shall not apply to any interest on an obligation issued by a corporation or partnership if the regulated investment company is a 10-percent shareholder in such corporation or partnership.

"(iii) Any interest referred to in subsection (i)(2)(A).

"(F) 10-PERCENT SHAREHOLDER.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term '10-percent shareholder' has the meaning given to such term by subsection (h)(3).

"(2) SHORT-TERM CAPITAL GAIN DIVIDENDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no tax shall be imposed under paragraph (1)(A) of subsection (a) on any short-term capital gain dividend received from a regulated investment company.

"(B) EXCEPTION FOR ALIENS TAXABLE UNDER SUBSECTION (a)(2).—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply in the case of any nonresident alien individual subject to tax under subsection (a)(2).

"(C) SHORT-TERM CAPITAL GAIN DIVIDEND.—For purposes of this paragraph, a short-term capital gain dividend is any dividend (or part thereof) which is designated by the regulated investment company as a short-term capital gain dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders not later than 60 days after the close of its taxable year. If the aggregate amount so designated with respect to a taxable year of the company (including amounts so designated with respect to dividends paid after the close of the taxable year described in section 855) is greater than the qualified short-term gain of the company for such taxable year, the portion of each distribution which shall be a short-term capital gain dividend shall be only that portion of the amounts so designated which such qualified short-term gain bears to the aggregate amount so designated.

"(D) QUALIFIED SHORT-TERM GAIN.—For purposes of subparagraph (C), the term 'qualified short-term gain' means the excess of the net short-term capital gain of the regulated investment company for the taxable year over the net long-term capital loss (if any) of such company for such taxable year. The amount determined under the preceding sentence shall be reduced by any deductions of the company properly allocable to the net short-term capital gain."

(2) FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—Section 881 is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) TAX NOT TO APPLY TO CERTAIN DIVIDENDS OF REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—

"(1) INTEREST-RELATED DIVIDENDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), no tax shall be imposed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) on any interest-related dividend (as defined in section 871(k)(1)) received from a regulated investment company.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply—

"(i) to any dividend referred to in section 871(k)(1)(B), and

"(ii) to any interest-related dividend received by a controlled foreign corporation (within the meaning of section 957(a)) to the extent such dividend is attributable to interest received by the regulated investment company from a person who is a related person (within the meaning of section 864(d)(4)) with respect to such controlled foreign corporation.

"(C) TREATMENT OF DIVIDENDS RECEIVED BY CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.—The rules of subsection (c)(4)(A) shall apply to any interest-related dividend received by a controlled foreign corporation (within the meaning of section 957(a)) to the extent such dividend is attributable to interest received by the regulated investment company which is described in clause (ii) of section 871(k)(1)(E) (and not described in clause (i) or (iii) of such section).

"(2) SHORT-TERM CAPITAL GAIN DIVIDENDS.—No tax shall be imposed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) on any short-term capital gain dividend (as defined in section 871(k)(2)) received from a regulated investment company."

(3) WITHHOLDING TAXES.—

(A) Subsection (c) of section 1441 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) CERTAIN DIVIDENDS RECEIVED FROM REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—No tax shall be required to be deducted and withheld under subsection (a) from any amount exempt from the tax imposed by section 871(a)(1)(A) by reason of section 871(k).

"(B) SPECIAL RULE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), clause (ii) of section 871(k)(1)(B) shall not apply to any dividend unless the regulated investment company knows that such dividend is a dividend referred to in such clause. A similar rule shall apply with respect to the exception contained in section 871(k)(2)(B)."

(B) Subsection (a) of section 1442 is amended—

(i) by striking "and the references in section 1441(c)(10)" and inserting "the reference in section 1441(c)(10)", and

(ii) by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: ", and the references in section 1441(c)(12) to section 871(a) and 871(k) shall be treated as referring to sections 881(a) and 881(e) (except that for purposes of applying subparagraph (A) of section 1441(c)(12), as so modified, clause (ii) of section 881(e)(1)(B) shall not apply to any dividend unless the regulated investment company knows that such dividend is a dividend referred to in such clause)".

(b) TREATMENT OF REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES UNDER SECTION 897.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 897(h) is amended by striking "REIT" each place it appears and inserting "qualified investment entity".

(2) Paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 897(h) are amended to read as follows:

"(2) SALE OF STOCK IN DOMESTICALLY CONTROLLED ENTITY NOT TAXED.—The term 'United States real property interest' does not include any interest in a domestically controlled qualified investment entity.

"(3) DISTRIBUTIONS BY DOMESTICALLY CONTROLLED QUALIFIED INVESTMENT ENTITIES.—In the case of a domestically controlled qualified investment entity, rules similar to the rules of subsection (d) shall apply to the foreign ownership percentage of any gain."

(3) Subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 897(h)(4) are amended to read as follows:

"(A) QUALIFIED INVESTMENT ENTITY.—The term 'qualified investment entity' means any real estate investment trust and any regulated investment company.

"(B) DOMESTICALLY CONTROLLED.—The term 'domestically controlled qualified investment entity' means any qualified investment entity in which at all times during the testing period less than 50 percent in value of the stock was held directly or indirectly by foreign persons."

(4) Subparagraphs (C) and (D) of section 897(h)(4) are each amended by striking "REIT" and inserting "qualified investment entity".

(5) The subsection heading for subsection (h) of section 897 is amended by striking "REITS" and inserting "CERTAIN INVESTMENT ENTITIES".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to dividends with respect to taxable years of regulated investment companies beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act; except that the amendment made by subsection (b)(2) shall take effect on such date of enactment.

SEC. 8102. ELECTION TO BE EXEMPT FROM 90-PERCENT LIMITATION ON MINIMUM TAX FOREIGN TAX CREDIT.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (2) of section 59(a) (relating to limitation to 90 percent of tax) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) ELECTION TO HAVE LIMITATION NOT APPLY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any domestic corporation to which an election under this subparagraph applies.

"(ii) ELECTION.—An election under this subparagraph shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

"(iii) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For effect of election on application of subpart F, see section 965."

(b) TREATMENT OF ELECTING CORPORATIONS UNDER SUBPART F.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subpart F of part III of subchapter N of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 965. SPECIAL RULES FOR CORPORATIONS TO WHICH CERTAIN ELECTIONS APPLY.

"(a) ELECTIONS UNDER SECTION 59(a)(2)(D).—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining the amount includible under section 951 in the gross income of any domestic corporation to which this subsection applies—

"(A) sections 954, 964(a), and 964(b) shall not apply, and

"(B) section 952 shall be applied as if it read as follows:

" 'SEC. 952. SUBPART F INCOME.

" '(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this subpart, the term 'subpart F income' means the earnings and profits of the controlled foreign corporation for the taxable year computed with the following adjustments:

" '(1) There shall be excluded the amount of the earnings and profits which are attributable to income from sources within the United States which is effectively connected with the conduct by the controlled foreign corporation of a trade or business within the United States, except to the extent such income is exempt from taxation (or subject to a reduced rate of tax) pursuant to a treaty obligation of the United States. For purposes of the preceding sentence, income described in paragraph (2) or (3) of section 921(d) shall be treated as derived from sources within the United States.

" '(2) In determining earnings and profits (or the deficit in earnings and profits), the amount of any illegal bribe, kickback, or other payment (within the meaning of section 162(c)) shall not be taken into account to decrease such earnings and profits or to increase such deficit. The payments referred to in the preceding sentence are payments which would be unlawful under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 if the payor were a United States person.

" '(3) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, there shall be excluded the part of any earnings and profits if it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such part could not have been distributed by the controlled foreign corporation to United States shareholders who own (within the meaning of section 958(a)) stock of such controlled foreign corporation because of currency or other restrictions or limitations imposed under the laws of any foreign country.

" '(4) Earnings and profits shall be determined without regard to paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of section 312(n). Under regulations, the preceding sentence shall not apply to the extent it would increase earnings and profits by an amount which was previously distributed by the controlled foreign corporation.

Except as provided in this subsection and section 312(k)(4), the earnings and profits of any foreign corporation, and the deficit and earnings and profits of any foreign corporation for any taxable year shall be determined according to rules substantially similar to those applicable to domestic corporations, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

" '(b) CERTAIN DEFICITS MAY BE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—

" '(1) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PRIOR YEAR DEFICITS.—

" '(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount included in the gross income of any United States shareholder under section 951(a)(1)(A)(i) for any taxable year with respect to any controlled foreign corporation shall be reduced by the amount of such shareholder's pro rata share of any qualified deficit of such controlled foreign corporation.

" '(B) QUALIFIED DEFICIT.—For purposes of this paragraph—

" '(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified deficit' means any deficit in the earnings and profits of the controlled foreign corporation for any prior taxable year which began after December 31, 1992, and for which such corporation was a controlled foreign corporation, but only to the extent such deficit has not previously been taken into account under this paragraph.

" '(ii) SPECIAL RULE FOR DEFICITS BEFORE 1993.—The term 'qualified deficit' includes any deficit in earnings and profits for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1993, to the extent that such deficit qualified as a qualified deficit under subsection (c)(1)(B) of section 952; except that any such deficit may be taken into account under this paragraph only to offset amounts attributable to the same activity as the activity giving rise to such deficit.

" '(C) PRO RATA SHARE.—For purposes of this paragraph, the shareholder's pro rata share of any deficit shall be determined under rules similar to the rules of section 951(a)(2) for whichever of the following yields the smaller share:

" '(i) the close of the taxable year, or

" '(ii) the close of the taxable year in which the deficit arose.

" '(2) CERTAIN DEFICITS OF MEMBER OF THE SAME CHAIN OF CORPORATIONS MAY BE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—

" '(A) IN GENERAL.—A controlled foreign corporation may elect to reduce the amount of its subpart F income for any taxable year by the amount of any deficit in earnings and profits of a qualified chain member for a taxable year ending with (or within) the taxable year of such controlled foreign corporation. To the extent any deficit reduces subpart F income under the preceding sentence, such deficit shall not be taken into account under paragraph (1).

" '(B) QUALIFIED CHAIN MEMBER.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified chain member' means, with respect to any controlled foreign corporation, any other corporation which is created or organized under the laws of the same foreign country as the controlled foreign corporation but only if—

" '(i) all the stock of such other corporation (other than directors' qualifying shares) is owned at all times during the taxable year in which the deficit arose (directly or through 1 or more corporations other than the common parent) by such controlled foreign corporation, or

" '(ii) all the stock of such controlled foreign corporation (other than directors' qualifying shares) is owned at all times during the taxable year in which the deficit arose (directly or through 1 or more corporations other than the common parent) by such other corporation.

" '(C) COORDINATION.—This paragraph shall be applied after paragraph (1).

" '(3) DETERMINATION OF DEFICIT.—In determining the amount of any deficit in earnings and profits, the adjustments set forth in subsection (a) shall apply.'

"(2) CORPORATIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—This subsection shall apply to any domestic corporation if—

"(i) an election under section 59(a)(2)(D) applies to such corporation, or

"(ii) such corporation is a member of an expanded affiliated group which includes a corporation to which such an election applies.

"(B) EXPANDED AFFILIATED GROUP.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'expanded affiliated group' means any group of corporations which would be treated as members of the same affiliated group if—

"(i) section 1504(b) were applied without regard to paragraph (2) thereof,

"(ii) the exception contained in section 1504(b)(3) did not apply for purposes of determining whether any domestic corporation is a member of such group,

"(iii) the constructive ownership rules of section 1563(e) apply for purposes of section 1504(a), and

"(iv) the requirements of paragraph (2) of section 1504(a) were treated as met if the requirements of subparagraph (A) or (B) of such paragraph (2) are met (determined by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent' each place it appears)."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart F of part III of subchapter N of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 965. Special rules for corporations to which certain elections apply.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years of domestic corporations beginning after December 31, 1992, and to taxable years of controlled foreign corporations which end with or within such taxable years of domestic corporations.

SEC. 8103. ALLOCATION OF INTEREST EXPENSE IN CASE OF AFFILIATED GROUPS INCLUDING REGULATED GAS OR ELECTRIC UTILITIES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (e) of section 864 (relating to rules for allocating interest, etc.) is amended by redesignating paragraph (7) as paragraph (8) and by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) SPECIAL RULES FOR ALLOCATING INTEREST EXPENSE IN CASE OF REGULATED GAS OR ELECTRIC UTILITIES.—

"(A) ALLOCATION FORMULA.—The interest expense of a qualified utility group to which an election under this paragraph applies shall be allocated and apportioned to income from sources outside the United States to the extent that the amount of such expense does not exceed the excess (if any) of—

"(i) the foreign-sourced interest expense of the expanded group, over

"(ii) the foreign-sourced interest expense of the foreign corporations in such expanded group.

"(B) FOREIGN-SOURCED INTEREST EXPENSE.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) The foreign-sourced interest expense of the expanded group is the portion of the total interest expense of the expanded group which would be allocated and apportioned to income from sources outside the United States if all of the members of such group were a single corporation. For purposes of the preceding sentence, only the pro rata shares of the interest expense and assets of the foreign corporations which are members of such group shall be taken into account. For purposes of the preceding sentence, pro rata share shall be determined on the basis of the portion of the stock in any such foreign corporation held directly by members of the qualified utility group and shall be appropriately reduced to take into account any reduction in subpart F income under section 952(a)(3) (as modified under section 965).

"(ii) The foreign-sourced interest expense of the foreign corporations which are members of the expanded group shall be determined under the rules of clause (i) by treating all of such foreign corporations as a single corporation.

"(C) EXPANDED GROUP.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'expanded group' means the qualified utility group and any foreign regulated gas or electric utility with respect to which members of such group meet the stock ownership requirements of section 902(a).

"(D) ELECTION.—An election under this paragraph shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

"(E) QUALIFIED UTILITY GROUP.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified utility group' means any affiliated group if—

"(i) 80 percent or more of the gross income of such group is attributable to the production, transmission or distribution of electricity, or the distribution of gas,

"(ii) 65 percent or less of the average daily total capital of such group for the taxable year is in the form of debt, and

"(iii) one or more members of the group is regulated by one or more State regulatory commissions with respect to the distribution of gas or electricity.

Such term shall not include any affiliated group which is part of an expanded affiliated group (as defined in section 965(a)(2)(B)) if the requirements of the preceding sentence are not met with respect to such expanded affiliated group.

"(F) FOREIGN REGULATED GAS OR ELECTRIC UTILITY.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'foreign regulated gas or electric utility' means any foreign corporation if—

"(i) 80 percent or more of the gross income of such corporation is attributable to the production, transmission or distribution of electricity, or the distribution of gas,

"(ii) 65 percent or less of the average daily total capital of such corporation for the taxable year is in the form of debt, and

"(iii) the activities of such foreign corporation referred to in clause (i) are regulated by one or more regulatory commissions established pursuant to foreign law."

(b) TREATMENT UNDER SUBPART F.—Section 965 (as added by section 8102) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED UTILITY GROUPS TO WHICH ELECTION UNDER SECTION 864(e)(7) APPLIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining the amount includible under section 951 in the gross income of any domestic corporation to which this subsection applies—

"(A) the modifications of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (a)(1) shall apply, and

"(B) the term 'controlled foreign corporation' includes any foreign corporation with respect to which the stock ownership requirements of section 902 are met by such corporation or by corporations which are members of the expanded affiliated group which includes such corporation.

"(2) CORPORATIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection shall apply to any domestic corporation—

"(A) which is a member of a qualified utility group (as defined in section 864(e)(7)(E)) to which an election under section 864(e)(7) applies, or

"(B) which is a member of an expanded affiliated group which includes a qualified utility group referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(3) EXPANDED AFFILIATED GROUP.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'expanded affiliated group' has the meaning given to such term by subsection (a)(2)(B)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years of domestic corporations beginning after December 31, 1992, and to taxable years of foreign corporations which end with or within such taxable years of domestic corporations.

SEC. 8104. TREATMENT OF COMMODITY TRANSACTIONS UNDER SUBPART F.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Clause (ii) of section 954(c)(1)(C) (relating to commodity transactions) is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) are active business gains or losses from the sale of commodities by the controlled foreign corporation as an active producer, processor, merchant, or handler of commodities, or".

(a) IDENTIFYING INFORMATION REQUIRED.—Section 135(b)(2) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) IDENTIFYING INFORMATION REQUIRED WITH RESPECT TO INDIVIDUAL FOR WHOM EXPENSES PAID.—No amount shall be allowed as an exclusion under subsection (a) unless the taxpayer includes the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person for whom qualified higher education expenses were paid on the return on which the exclusion is claimed."

(b) ELIMINATION OF AGE RESTRICTION.—Section 135(c)(1) (defining qualified United States savings bonds) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (B),

(2) by inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (A), and

(3) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (B).

(c) EXCLUSION EXPANDED TO ALL INDIVIDUALS.—Subparagraph (A) of section 135(c)(2) (defining qualified higher education expenses) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified higher education expenses' means tuition and fees required for enrollment or attendance of any individual at an eligible educational institution."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to bonds issued after December 31, 1989, and redeemed after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 8202. TAX TREATMENT OF PAYMENTS UNDER LIFE INSURANCE CONTRACTS FOR TERMINALLY ILL INDIVIDUALS.

(a) TREATMENT AS INSURANCE.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Section 101 (relating to certain death benefits) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) TREATMENT OF AMOUNTS PAID WITH RESPECT TO TERMINALLY ILL INDIVIDUALS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, any amount paid or advanced to an individual under a life insurance contract on the life of an insured who is a terminally ill individual shall be treated as an amount paid by reason of the death of such insured.

"(2) TERMINALLY ILL INDIVIDUAL.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'terminally ill individual' means an individual who has been certified by a licensed physician as having an illness or physical condition which can reasonably be expected to result in death in 12 months or less."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this subsection shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1989.

(b) TAX TREATMENT OF COMPANIES ISSUING QUALIFIED TERMINAL ILLNESS RIDERS.—

(1) QUALIFIED TERMINAL ILLNESS RIDER TREATED AS LIFE INSURANCE.—Section 818 (relating to other definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) QUALIFIED TERMINAL ILLNESS RIDER TREATED AS LIFE INSURANCE.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any reference to life insurance shall be treated as including a reference to a qualified terminal illness rider.

"(2) QUALIFIED TERMINAL ILLNESS RIDER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified terminal illness rider' means any rider or addendum on, or other provision of, a life insurance contract which provides for payments to an individual upon the insured becoming a terminally ill individual (as defined in section 101(g)(2))."

(2) DEFINITIONS OF LIFE INSURANCE AND MODIFIED ENDOWMENT CONTRACTS.—For purposes of applying section 7702 or 7702A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to any contract (or determining whether either such section applies to such contract), the issuance of a qualified terminal illness rider (as defined in section 818(g)(2) of such Code) with respect to any contract shall not be treated as a modification or material change of such contract.

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to taxable years beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1989.

(c) APPLICANTS OR RECIPIENTS UNDER PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS NOT TO BE REQUIRED TO MAKE ELECTION RESPECTING ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFITS UNDER LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title XI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1301 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"TREATMENT OF ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFITS

"SEC. 1143. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no individual who is an applicant for or recipient of aid or assistance under a State plan approved under title IV, X, XIV, XVI, or XIX, of assistance funded by payments under title V or XX, or of benefits under the Supplemental Security Income program established by title XVI shall—

"(1) be required, as a condition of eligibility for (or of continuing to receive) such aid, assistance, or benefits, to make an election to receive an accelerated death benefit under a policy of life insurance, or

"(2) by reason of failure to make such an election, be denied (or suffer a reduction in the amount of) such aid, assistance, or benefits.

"(b) ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFIT.—For purposes of this section, the term 'accelerated death benefit' means any payment made under the terms of a life insurance policy, while the insured individual is alive, as a result of a recalculation of the insured individual's life expectancy."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this subsection shall take effect on January 1, 1990.

SEC. 8203. BASIS ADJUSTMENT FOR DISALLOWED LOSSES ON PRIOR SALES OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1016 (relating to adjustments to basis) is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) INCREASE IN BASIS FOR CERTAIN PRIOR LOSSES ON SALES OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence is sold by him, and within the period applicable under section 1034, property is purchased and used by the taxpayer as his principal residence, any loss from such sale which is not allowed as a deduction shall be applied to increase the basis of the property so purchased and used by the taxpayer.

"(2) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to the rules of subsections (c) and (f) of section 1034 shall apply for purposes of paragraph (1).

"(3) PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term, 'principal residence' has the same meaning as when used in section 1034."

(b) CROSS REFERENCE.—Subsection (l) of section 1034 is amended to read as follows:

"(l) CROSS REFERENCES.—

"(1) For one-time exclusion of gross income of gain from sale of principal residence by individual who has attained age 55, see section 121.

"(2) For increase in basis for loss on prior sale of principal residence, see section 1016(e)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to losses on sales and exchanges after the date of the enactment of this Act; except that such amendments shall not apply for purposes of determining gain on any sale or exchange before January 1, 1994.

SEC. 8204. LIMITATION ON STATE TAXATION OF CERTAIN PENSION INCOME.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 4 of title 4 of the United States Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§114. Limitation on State income taxation of pension income

"(a) No State may impose an income tax (as defined in section 110(c)) on the qualified pension income of any individual who is not a resident or domiciliary of such State.

"(b)(1) For purposes of subsection (a), the term 'qualified pension income' means any payment from a qualified plan—

"(A) which is part of a series of substantially equal periodic payments (not less frequently than annually) made for—

"(i) the life or life expectancy of the recipient or for the joint lives or joint life expectancies of the recipient and the recipient's designated beneficiary, or

"(ii) a period of not less than 10 years, or

"(B) which is not described in subparagraph (A) and which—

"(i) is received in a taxable year for which an election under this subsection is in effect, and

"(ii) is received on or after the date on which the recipient has attained the age of 59½, except that the aggregate amount of payments to which this subparagraph may apply for any taxable year shall not exceed $25,000.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'qualified plan' means—

"(A) an employees' trust described in section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code,

"(B) a simplified employee pension described in section 408(k) of such Code,

"(C) an annuity plan described in section 403(a) of such Code,

"(D) an annuity contract described in section 403(b) of such Code,

"(E) an individual retirement plan described in section 7701(a)(37) of such Code, or

"(F) an eligible deferred compensation plan under section 457 of such Code.

"(3)(A) An election under paragraph (1)(B), once made for a taxable year, may not be made for any other taxable year.

"(B) In calendar years beginning after 1992, the $25,000 amount referred to in paragraph (1)(B) shall be increased by an amount equal to such dollar amount, multiplied by the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) of such Code for such calendar year by substituting 'calendar year 1991' for 'calendar year 1989' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

"(c) For purposes of subsection (a), the term 'State' includes any political subdivision of a State, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for such chapter 4 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"114. Limitation on State income taxation of pension income."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8205. CREDIT FOR PORTION OF EMPLOYER SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES PAID WITH RESPECT TO EMPLOYEE CASH TIPS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to business related credits) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 45. CREDIT FOR PORTION OF EMPLOYER SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES PAID WITH RESPECT TO EMPLOYEE CASH TIPS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of section 38, the employer social security credit determined under this section for the taxable year is an amount equal to the excess employer social security tax paid or incurred by the taxpayer during the taxable year.

"(b) EXCESS EMPLOYER SOCIAL SECURITY TAX.—For purposes of this section, the term 'excess employer social security tax' means any tax paid by an employer under section 3111 with respect to tips received by an employee during any month, to the extent such tips—

"(1) are deemed to have been paid by the employer to the employee pursuant to section 3121(q), and

"(2) exceed the amount by which the wages (excluding tips) paid by the employer to the employee during such month are less than the total amount which would be payable (with respect to such employment) at the minimum wage rate applicable to such individual under section 6(a)(1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (determined without regard to section 3(m) of such Act).

"(c) DENIAL OF DOUBLE BENEFIT.—No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for any amount taken into account in determining the credit under this section."

(b) CREDIT TO BE PART OF GENERAL BUSINESS CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 38 (relating to current year business credit), as amended by section 1105(b), is amended by striking "plus" at the end of paragraph (7), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting ", plus", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) the employer social security credit determined under section 45(a)."

(2) LIMITATION ON CARRYBACKS.—Subsection (d) of section 39 (relating to transitional rules), as amended by section 1105(b), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) NO CARRYBACK OF SECTION 45 CREDIT BEFORE ENACTMENT.—No portion of the unused business credit for any taxable year which is attributable to the employer social security credit determined under section 45 may be carried back to a taxable year ending before the date of the enactment of section 45."

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 45. Employer social security credit."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to tips received (and wages paid) after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8206. CLARIFICATION OF TREATMENT OF VETERANS' BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 134(b)(1) (relating to qualified military benefit) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following flush sentence: "For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified military benefit' includes any allowance or benefit administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1984.

SEC. 8207. STUDY OF SEMICONDUCTOR MANUFACTURING EQUIPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall conduct a study of semiconductor manufacturing equipment to determine the appropriate recovery period and class life under section 168 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for such equipment.

(b) REPORT.—The report of such study shall be submitted before April 1, 1993, to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

SEC. 8208. NONRECOGNITION TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN TRANSFERS BY COMMON TRUST FUNDS TO REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES.

(a) General Rule.—Section 584 (relating to common trust funds) is amended by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (i) and by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) Nonrecognition Treatment for Certain Transfers to Regulated Investment Companies.—

"(1) In general.—If—

"(A) a common trust fund transfers substantially all of its assets to a regulated investment company in exchange solely for stock in such company, and

"(B) such stock is distributed by such common trust fund to participants in such common trust fund in exchange solely for their interests in such common trust fund, no gain or loss shall be recognized by such common trust fund by reason of such transfer or distribution, and no gain or loss shall be recognized by any participant in such common trust fund by reason of such exchange.

"(2) Basis rules.—

"(A) Regulated investment company.—The basis of any asset received by a regulated investment company in a transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the common trust fund.

"(B) Participants.—The basis of any stock in a regulated investment company which is received in an exchange referred to in paragraph (1)(B) shall be the same as that of the property exchanged.

"(3) Treatment of assumptions of liability.—

"(A) In general.—In determining whether the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) is in exchange solely for stock in the regulated investment company, the assumption by such company of a liability of the common trust fund, and the fact that any property transferred by the common trust fund is subject to a liability, shall be disregarded.

"(B) Special rule where assumed liabilities exceed basis.—

"(i) In general.—If in any transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) the assumed liabilities exceed the aggregate adjusted bases (in the hands of the common trust fund) of the assets transferred to the regulated investment company—

"(I) notwithstanding paragraph (1), gain shall be recognized to the common trust fund on such transfer in an amount equal to such excess,

"(II) the basis of the assets received by the regulated investment company in such transfer shall be increased by the amount so recognized, and

"(III) any adjustment to the basis of a participant's interest in the common trust fund as a result of the gain so recognized shall be treated as occurring immediately before the exchange referred to in paragraph (1)(B).

"(ii) Assumed liabilities.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'assumed liabilities' means the aggregate of—

"(I) any liability of the common trust fund assumed by the regulated investment company in connection with the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A), and

"(II) any liability to which property so transferred is subject.

"(4) Common trust fund must meet diversification rules.—This subsection shall not apply to any common trust fund which, if it were a corporation, would not meet the requirements of section 368(a)(2)(F)(ii). For purposes of the preceding sentence, clause (iv) of section 368(a)(2)(F) shall not apply and Government securities shall not be treated as securities of an issuer in applying the 25 percent and 50 percent tests.

"(5) Limitation on subsequent transfer.—This subsection shall not apply in the case of a common trust fund that received assets from a regulated investment company in a transfer to which section 852(g)(1) applied."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 584, as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) Cross Reference.—

"For transfers from a regulated investment company to a common trust fund, see section 852(g)."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) applies to transfers after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8209. NONRECOGNITION TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN TRANSFERS BY REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES TO COMMON TRUST FUNDS.

(a) General Rule.—Section 852 (relating to the taxation of regulated investment companies and their shareholders) is amended by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g) Nonrecognition Treatment for Certain Transfers to Common Trust Funds.—

"(1) In general.—If—

"(A) a regulated investment company transfers substantially all of its assets to a common trust fund (as defined in section 584) in exchange solely for participating interests in such common trust fund, and

"(B) such participating interests are distributed by such regulated investment company to the shareholders of such regulated investment company in exchange for their shares in the regulated investment company, no gain or loss shall be recognized by such regulated investment company by reason of such transfer or distribution, and no gain or loss shall be recognized by any shareholder of such regulated investment company by reason of such exchange.

"(2) Basis rules.—

"(A) Common trust fund.—The basis of any asset received by a common trust fund in a transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the regulated investment company.

"(B) Shareholders.—The basis of any participating interest in a common trust fund which is received in an exchange referred to in paragraph (1)(B) shall be the same as that of the shares exchanged.

"(3) Treatment of assumptions of liability.—

"(A) In general.—In determining whether the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) is in exchange solely for interests in the common trust fund, the assumption by such common trust fund of a liability of the regulated investment company, and the fact that any property transferred by the regulated investment company is subject to a liability, shall be disregarded.

"(B) Special rule where assumed liabilities exceed basis.—

"(i) In general.—If in any transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A) the assumed liabilities exceed the aggregate adjusted bases (in the hands of the regulated investment company) of the assets transferred to the common trust fund—

"(I) notwithstanding paragraph (1), gain shall be recognized to the regulated investment company on such transfer in an amount equal to such excess, and

"(II) the basis of the assets received by the common trust fund in such transfer shall be increased by the amount so recognized.

"(ii) Assumed liabilities.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'assumed liabilities' means the aggregate of—

"(I) any liability of the regulated investment company assumed by the common trust fund in connection with the transfer referred to in paragraph (1)(A), and

"(II) any liability to which property so transferred is subject.

"(4) Regulated investment company must meet diversification rules.—This subsection shall not apply to any regulated investment company which does not meet the requirements of section 368(a)(2)(F)(ii). For purposes of the preceding sentence, clause (iv) of section 368(a)(2)(F) shall not apply and Government securities shall not be treated as securities of an issuer in applying the 25 percent and 50 percent tests.

"(5) Limitation on subsequent transfer.—This subsection shall not apply to a regulated investment company that received assets from a common trust fund in a transfer to which section 584(h)(1) applied."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 852, as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"(h) Cross Reference.—

"For transfers from a common trust fund to a regulated investment company, see section 584(h)."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section apply to transfers after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8210. TAX-FREE SALES OF TRUCKS ASSEMBLED BY EDUCATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 4053 (relating to exemptions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) Trucks assembled by nonprofit educational organizations.—Any article described in section 4051(a) which is, or is part of, an automobile truck, truck trailer, or semitrailer which is assembled by students, and sold, as part of a program included in the regular curriculum of a nonprofit educational organization, but only if the proceeds from such sale are to be used solely for the purpose of defraying costs incurred in connection with such program."

(b) Allowance of Credit or Refund.—Section 6416(b) (relating to special cases in which tax payments considered overpayments) is amended by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) Truck chassis, bodies, and semitrailers sold by certain nonprofit educational organizations.—If—

"(A) a nonprofit educational organization has sold an automobile truck, truck trailer, or semitrailer assembled by students as part of a program included in the regular curriculum of such organization and the proceeds from such sale are to be used solely for the purpose of defraying costs incurred in connection with such program, and

"(B) the tax imposed by section 4051 has been paid with respect to such sale, such tax shall be deemed to be an overpayment by such organization."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 8211. TREATMENT OF CANCELLATION OF CERTAIN STUDENT LOANS.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (2) of section 108(f) (defining student loan) is amended by striking subparagraph (D) and inserting the following:

"(D) any educational organization so described if such loan is made—

"(i) pursuant to an agreement with any entity described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) under which the funds from which the loan was made were provided to such educational organization, or

"(ii) pursuant to a program of such educational organization designed to encourage its students to serve in occupations with unmet needs or in areas with unmet needs; except that this clause shall not apply in the case of any discharge if the discharge is on account of services performed for any employer and such employer directly or indirectly provides funds for such discharge.

The term 'student loan' includes any loan made by an educational organization so described or by an organization exempt from tax under section 501(a) to refinance a loan meeting the requirements of the preceding sentence."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to discharges of indebtedness after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8212. MOUNT RUSHMORE COMMEMORATIVE COIN ACT.

(a) DISTRIBUTION OF SURCHARGES.—Section 8 of the Mount Rushmore Commemorative Coin Act (104 Stat. 314; 31 U.S.C. 5112 note) is amended by striking paragraphs (1) and (2) and inserting the following:

"(1) the first $18,750,000 shall be paid during fiscal year 1993 by the Secretary to the Society to assist the Society's efforts to improve, enlarge, and renovate the Mount Rushmore National Memorial; and

"(2) the remainder shall be returned to the Federal Treasury for purposes of reducing the national debt.".

(b) RETROACTIVE EFFECT.—If, prior to the enactment of this Act, any amount of surcharges have been received by the Secretary of the Treasury and paid into the United States Treasury pursuant to section 8(1) of the Mount Rushmore Commemorative Coin Act, as in effect prior to the enactment of this Act, that amount shall be paid out of the Treasury to the extent necessary to comply with section 8(1) of the Mount Rushmore Commemorative Coin Act, as in effect after the enactment of this Act. Amounts paid pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be out of funds not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 8213. FRINGE BENEFITS OF AIRLINE AFFILIATE EMPLOYEES.

(a) QUALIFIED AFFILIATE.—Section 132(h)(6)(A) is amended—

(1) by inserting "or is an entity at least 80 percent of which is owned directly by one or more corporations which operate an airline," after "airline," in clause (i), and

(2) by inserting "or by an owner of such entity" after "member" in clause (ii).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 132(h)(6)(B) is amended by inserting "or other entity" after "corporation".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 8214. TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP INVESTMENT EXPENSES UNDER MINIMUM TAX.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subparagraph (A) of section 56(b)(1) (relating to limitation on deductions) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) DISALLOWANCE OF CERTAIN DEDUCTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—No deduction shall be allowed—

"(I) for any miscellaneous itemized deduction (as defined in section 67(b)), or

"(II) for any taxes described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of section 164(a).

"(ii) TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP INVESTMENT EXPENSES.—Subclause (I) of clause (i) shall not apply to the taxpayer's distributive share of the expenses described in section 212 of any partnership; except that the aggregate amount allowed as a deduction by reason of this sentence shall not exceed the lesser of (I) the aggregate adjusted investment income of the taxpayer from partnerships, or (II) the excess of the aggregate of the taxpayer's distributive shares of such expenses over 2 percent of adjusted gross income. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'adjusted investment income' means investment income (as defined in section 163(d)(4)(B)) reduced by investment interest (as defined in section 163(d)(3)).

"(iii) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN TAXES.—Subclause (II) of clause (i) shall not apply to any amount allowable in computing adjusted gross income."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 8215. TREATMENT OF UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF BAD DEBT DEDUCTION FOR PARTIALLY UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 166 (relating to deduction for bad debts) is amended by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g) and by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection:

"(f) CERTAIN UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any eligible taxpayer who has any applicable child support payments remaining unpaid as of the close of the taxable year—

"(A) subsections (a) and (d) shall not apply to such payments, and

"(B) there shall be allowed as a deduction for such taxable year an amount equal to the amount of such payments.

"(2) PER CHILD LIMITATION ON DEDUCTION.—The aggregate amount allowable as a deduction for any taxable year under paragraph (1) with respect to any child for whom applicable child support payments are required to be paid shall not exceed $5,000.

"(3) ELIGIBLE TAXPAYER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'eligible taxpayer' means an individual—

"(A) whose adjusted gross income for the taxable year does not exceed $50,000,

"(B) with respect to whom the amount of applicable child support payments remaining unpaid as of the close of the taxable year is equal to or greater than $500, and

"(C) who meets the identification requirements of paragraph (5).

"(4) APPLICABLE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'applicable child support payment' means, with respect to any taxable year of the eligible taxpayer—

"(i) any periodic payment of a fixed amount, or

"(ii) any payment of a medical or educational expense, insurance premium, or other similar item, which is required to be paid to such taxpayer during such taxable year by an individual under a support instrument meeting the requirements of paragraph (8) for the support of any qualifying child of such individual.

"(B) QUALIFYING CHILD.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualifying child' means a child of an eligible individual with respect to whom a deduction is allowable under section 151 for the taxable year (or would be so allowable but for paragraph (2) or (4) of section 152(e)) or, while eligible for such deduction, was determined to be disabled under subtitles 2 or 16 of chapter 42.

"(C) PAYMENTS MUST BE DELINQUENT FOR AT LEAST ENTIRE YEAR.—Any payment described in subparagraph (A) which is required to be made by an individual to an eligible taxpayer shall not be treated as an applicable unpaid child support payment if at least half of the payments which are required to be paid to the eligible taxpayer during the 12-month period ending on the last day of the taxable year are paid. In the case of the 1st taxable year to which this subsection applies to payments from any individual, the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting '24-month' for '12-month'.

"(D) COORDINATION WITH AFDC.—The term 'applicable child support payment' shall not include any payment the right to which has been assigned to a State under section 402(a)(26) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 602(a)(26)).

"(5) IDENTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if the eligible taxpayer includes on the return claiming the deduction under this subsection the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of—

"(A) each child with respect to whom child support payments to which this subsection applies are required to be paid, and

"(B) the individual who was required to make such child support payments.

In the case of a failure to provide the information under subparagraph (B), the preceding sentence shall not apply if the eligible taxpayer certifies that any such information is not known.

"(6) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS.—In the case of any taxable year beginning after 1992, the $5,000 amount under paragraph (2)(A), the $50,000 amount under paragraph (3)(A), and the $500 amount under paragraph (3)(B) shall each be increased by an amount equal to—

"(A) such dollar amount, multiplied by

"(B) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, except that section 1(f)(3)(B) shall be applied by substituting '1991' for '1989'.

"(7) SUBSEQUENT PAYMENTS.—If any payment with respect to which a deduction was allowed under paragraph (1) is subsequently made, such payment shall be included in gross income of the eligible taxpayer for the taxable year in which paid. This paragraph shall not apply to any amount if an individual has assigned the right to receive such amount to a State (and the State does not pay such amount to such individual).

"(8) SUPPORT INSTRUMENT.—For purposes of this subsection, a support instrument meets the requirements of this paragraph if it is—

"(A) a decree of divorce or separate maintenance or a written instrument incident to such a decree,

"(B) a written separation agreement, or

"(C) a decree (not described in subparagraph (A)) of a court or administrative agency requiring a parent to make payments for the support or maintenance of 1 or more children of such parent."

(2) DEDUCTION FOR NONITEMIZERS.—Section 62(a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(14) UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—The deduction allowed by section 166(f)."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 166(d)(2) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", or" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) a debt which is an applicable child support payment under subsection (f)."

(b) INCLUSION IN INCOME OF AMOUNT OF UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—Section 108 (relating to discharge of indebtedness income) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this chapter, any taxable unpaid child support payments of a taxpayer for any taxable year shall be treated as amounts includible in gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year by reason of the discharge of indebtedness of the taxpayer.

"(2) TAXABLE UNPAID CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'taxable unpaid child support payments' means payments—

"(A) which were applicable child support payments which the taxpayer was required to pay under a support instrument for the support of a child of the taxpayer, and

"(B) with respect to which the notice requirements of paragraph (3) are met.

"(3) NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—During January of the second calendar year following a calendar year in which there begins a taxable year for which a deduction allowed under section 166(f) was claimed, the eligible taxpayer shall send a notice (in such form as the Secretary may prescribe) to the individual who failed to make payments which contains—

"(i) the amount of the applicable child support payments for such taxable year, and

"(ii) notice that the individual is required to include such amount in gross income for the taxable year beginning in the preceding calendar year.

"(B) NOTICE BY SECRETARY.—If notice cannot be provided under subparagraph (A) because the address is not known to the eligible taxpayer, the Secretary shall send such notice if the address is available to the Secretary.

"(C) ADDRESS UNKNOWN.—If notice cannot be provided under subparagraph (A) or (B) because there is no known address, no income shall be included in gross income for any taxable year beginning before the calendar year preceding the calendar year in which such notice may be sent.

"(4) SUBSEQUENT PAYMENTS.—If any payment required to be included in gross income under paragraph (1) is subsequently made, the amount of such payment shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable year in which such payment is made.

"(5) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms 'applicable child support payments' and 'eligible taxpayer' have the meanings given such terms by section 166(f)."

(c) NO EFFECT ON RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect—

(1) the right of an individual or State to receive any child support payment; or

(2) the obligation of an individual to pay child support.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 8216. TREATMENT OF NOT-FOR-PROFIT RESIDUAL MARKET INSURANCE COMPANIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 56 (relating to alternative tax net operating loss deduction) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR NOT-FOR-PROFIT RESIDUAL MARKET INSURANCE COMPANIES.—Subparagraphs (A)(i) and (B)(ii) of paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting '100 percent' for '90 percent' with respect to any insurance company which is created by a State or an instrumentality thereof and which is operated on a not-for-profit basis for the primary purpose of providing coverage to individuals or businesses for high-risk needs where coverage is not otherwise available or affordable."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. STEVENS. If the Senator would yield, parliamentary inquiry. There is no necessity to have a motion to proceed under the agreement. We are going to be on this finance bill at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending business.

Mr. STEVENS. For debate only. When will it be open for amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At 2:15 today, it will open for amendment, after the 2:15 vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I place the Senate on notice that I wish to be consulted concerning a unanimous-consent request. I maintain that motion, and I wanted the record to show that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation that takes several steps. Some of them are large and some of them small, but they are all positive, in trying to accomplish some of the objectives this country is deeply concerned about. They are steps toward goals that concern the U.S. Senate—goals like revitalizing our cities, increasing savings and capital formation, aiding troubled families, and improving business competitiveness.

Unfortunately, parties outside this Chamber have already attempted to color dialog on the first of these issues. Recently, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development declared that enterprise zone proposals in this bill are "a hoax to the poor" and a "message to Los Angeles to drop dead." He insisted, in the billboard of a news release, that this proposal would not qualify Los Angeles as an enterprise zone. And he followed immediately with personal calls to mayors and legislators making other misrepresentations.

ENTERPRISE ZONES

Mr. President, this measure does not deny any city enterprise zone status because it does not name cities that are eligible. Rather, it specifies standards of poverty, unemployment, and general economic distress and leaves the naming of specific zones to the Secretary of HUD—gives him great flexibility—and other Cabinet officers. I assure you, Mr. President, areas of Los Angeles definitely qualify under those standards. Therefore, the only way they can be denied enterprise zone status is if the Secretary himself turns them down.

The Secretary has criticized the measure because it lacks a back-end capital gains provision—lay your money on the table, maybe get a break after 5 years. Mr. President, what we do in this one is put those breaks up front. We put the incentives up front, the discounts up front to encourage business people to make those kinds of investments. Remember this, that locations that meet enterprise zone criteria are fierce economic challenges. Any reasonable horizon for appreciation in business assets shimmers far out there in the distance. Investors know that. What is more, capital gains preferences benefit people who sell businesses. Preferences do not support businesses while they struggle to become vital long-term enterprises, and that is what we are trying to do, after all.

This measure offers meaningful incentives to people who will use them inside the enterprise zone. That is who we are trying to help. It does not create tax shelters for arm's length capitalists. It rewards shirtsleeve entrepreneurs who build jobs, businesses, futures and tax bases inside the enterprise zone. And it does so through incentives that offer their payback up front, not on the hazy horizon.

Mr. President, the Finance Committee did not pull the incentives in this legislation from an ill-fitting hat of political dogma. Staff worked around the country with mayors, city planners, legislators, local government, local business people. Those folks—whose authority comes from being on the front lines—told us what they needed to bring involvement and investment and they needed the up-front incentives. The Finance Committee acted on what they advised us.

They said we could stimulate employment through wage credits for the employer, and that is why this bill provides a very generous one.

They lamented on how many employees lacked skills and training—you just do not find that within these distressed areas—and what should be done about it.

And this bill provides the incentives to train those workers. They told us that our problem is not capital gains—it is borrowing money. It is financing. It is being sure they are going to be able to get insurance to protect that investment in that building. Getting loans was their problem. And that is why this measure authorizes tax-exempt bonds for building businesses—and permits the banks to buy them.

And just to be sure, there is an emphasis on equity in this measure. This bill lets investors deduct 50 percent—half—of their investment in stock of enterprise zone businesses.

Mr. President, I want another fact to be as clear as humanly possible: This measure is absolutely no less generous than the $2.5 billion the administration has requested and that the House has accepted. What it does not do is spread the benefits so thin that they do not begin to address the problem, and that is the case where you allocate $2.5 billion to 150 zones.

I cannot help but recall how Model Cities started out. There were just a few cities that it was going to help. But then it became almost a political patronage for it spread across the country and you diminished the effort so much that it failed.

Let us look how the numbers shake out on 150 zones. If you are talking about $2.5 billion in tax incentives for 150 zones spread over 5 years, that is $3.2 million per zone per year, $3.2 million a year to raise Americans from our Nation's most desperate poverty. Los Angeles alone had over a 1 billion dollars' worth of damages. At least Marie Antoinette offered the poor a whole cake. This one says: "Let them eat the crumbs."

That amount per zone will never give you a realistic measure of whether enterprise zones work or not. I am not sure they do. I read every bit of material I get my hands on. I have looked at our plans. I have looked at State plans. I have looked at the British and what they have done. But as long as we are going to do it, then let us make every effort to see that they succeed. So let us put up some parameters. Let us measure and see what effect we have and if they are working let us intensify that effort. Let us do a lot more of it. But give it a chance to work, not just a life-enriching promise for the impoverished that we pass out during an election year.

Mr. President, I could shower this Chamber with a Niagara of detailed comparisons between this measure and the Secretary of HUD's—eligible populations, economic entitlement versus economic empowerment. And I think this one beats it on all counts. And there will be a time for those comparisons.

There is one final opinion I add to my own. In testimony before the Finance Committee, Secretary Jack Kemp said it was more worthwhile to honor Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley's ideas than Jack Kemp's. So I quote a letter from Mayor Bradley and Mayor Tom Lanier of Houston. Their endorsements are echoed in letters from the National League of Cities; the National Association of State Treasuries; the National Association of Counties; and the Government Finance Officers Association.

Mayors Bradley and Lanier describes the wage credit as "The most important incentive for providing zone residents with jobs," saying it "will dramatically and immediately reduce an employer's cost of doing business and it is a major step in reducing the unemployment problems in our cities."

Of the Finance Committee's credit for job training expenses, they write, "We believe this new and innovative proposal will greatly encourage businesses to assist in our efforts to provide inner city residents with improved jobs skills particularly with respect to high school aged youth."

They call the bill's inducements for businesses to rehabilitate ravaged buildings and plan new ones "a powerful incentive to rebuild the city."

The bill imposes no limit on the size of enterprise zones, a fact their letter praises because it "gives cities flexibility to design enterprise zones which address widespread poverty."

They write, "it is significant that your tax-exempt bond provisions would apply to more than 200 cities. * * * So even those areas that are not officially designated—as enterprise zones—will qualify for tax-exempt bonds."

Mr. President, I also point out how this legislation includes $2 billion in other measures that bolster the economic foundation of our cities. Those measures include low-income housing credits, mortgage revenue bonds and a targeted jobs tax credit. A vote for this measure is a vote for the future of American cities and Americans who live and work in them.

REVIVING THE IRA

All Americans stand to benefit from another proposal in this bill, the one restoring and improving the real IRA. American business cannot be competitive when it lacks capital to invest particularly when our world competitors enjoy savings rates two and three times greater than ours.

The German rate is twice ours; the Japan rate is three times ours. They have the kind of savings and the kind of capital to build a new and modernized plan to increase their productivity, to increase their international competitiveness.

We have to stop the decay in household savings if we expect to turn around business investment.

When it was fully deductible—universally available—the IRA was the most popular savings vehicle since the cookie jar, and it sure did its job. In 1985, 16 million tax returns showed $38 billion in IRA contributions. And by 1989, after the IRA was neutered: 6 million returns, $11 billion in contributions and our savings rate crumbled one-third to a postwar low.

The American people have confirmed the IRA as a means to spur savings. My Republican colleague BILL ROTH, 76 Senators, and 270 Congressmen who cosponsor its return, and improvement, mirror that consensus.

This measure not only brings IRA's out of retirement. It touches more reasons why people save by granting penalty-free withdrawals for first homes, education, catastrophic medical bills, and protracted unemployment.

It even lets savers choose between tax-deductible contributions now or untaxed withdrawals later.

TAX CREDITS, ALLOWANCES, REAL ESTATE, LUXURY TAX

Besides expanding capital, this measure facilitates business investment and business operations in immediate ways. It extends the R&D tax credit. It repeals depreciation restrictions under ACE rules within the alternative minimum tax.

At urgent request from both sides of the aisle—Republicans and Democrats—this measure repeals the luxury tax that combined with recession to devastate America's boating and aircraft industries, with a great loss of jobs. It aids our afflicted real estate sector through passive loss relief for real estate professionals—not the doctors, not the lawyers, not the people not involved in the business, not the people that they created tax shelters for before. And it makes it easier for pension funds to invest in real estate.

FAMILY ASSISTANCE PACKAGE

Home and family is the focus for another aspect of this legislation, which dedicates more than $2.7 billion over 5 years to lift our society's most vulnerable. This measure supports State programs that address victims of parental and maternal substance abuse.

How many of you have gone into a hospital, looked in that intensive care area, see the rows of babies, some of them no larger than your hand, tubes running in all directions. They call them boarder babies. No one comes to claim them.

This measure supports State programs that address victims of parental and maternal substance abuse. Those are the crack babies that are casualties at birth. It funds education and training that prepare welfare recipients for productive jobs. It launches programs to covert welfare rosters into community service payrolls and to check the alarming pace at which children are farmed out to foster care.

Mr. President, these initiatives yield numberless returns—improved quality of our work force and greater competitiveness as a nation—more opportunity, more people working and more families working to stay together.

TAXPAYER RIGHTS, SIMPLIFICATION

And this measure also assists the people who ultimately pay for everything, the American taxpayer. It further assures he and she are protected and represented as they try to conform with tax laws. It reduces some of their difficulty by making the Tax Code easier to understand. It clarifies relationships and responsibilities and recourse. Especially, it eliminates many complexities and inconsistencies in pension regulations.

CONCLUSION

In closing, Mr. President, I want to emphasize the high degree of consensus that brings this measure before us. It passed the House because there was great accord for action in the areas it addresses. The Finance Committee reported it to this Chamber without dissent. Its Framers consulted closely with the administration and included virtually all its proposals. At each rung in the process it received a hand up from bipartisan cooperation. It is legislation that confronts the concerns of mainstream Americans and draws more Americans into that mainstream. This is legislation that can carry us forward.

Mr. President, I withhold the remainder of my time.

Mr. PACKWOOD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I want to thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee for his hard work on this important legislation.

He has put together a bipartisan bill that covers a lot of ground, and it successfully addresses many issues that all of us—on both sides of the aisle—want to see resolved.

The bill includes: enterprise zones; a new child welfare program and adoption of special needs children; six of the President's seven economic growth proposals; 18-month extensions of various tax provisions that expired on June 30; repeal of the luxury tax on all items except autos; and the taxpayers' bill of rights, tax simplification and a host of other provisions.

In short, this bill takes care of most of our unfinished business on the tax front.

However, let me make a few comments on the enterprise zone proposal in this bill.

Clearly, the Los Angeles riots brought home the severity of the problems in urban America. There is no one among us who is not concerned about the lack of opportunity and lack of hope that exists for many who live in our inner cities. I believe enterprise zones can bring economic opportunity and jobs to these distressed areas.

However, there is a philosophical difference between those of us who would like to see more cities qualify for enterprise zone status, and others who prefer the approach in the bill of a very limited number of zones.

The Finance Committee heard compelling testimony from officials of midsized cities, including Portland, OR, who are faced with severe problems with crime, gang violence, drugs, and minority youth unemployment. In order for these midsized cities to have a chance at this program, the number of zones in the bill must be increased.

Additionally, many of us on this side of the aisle would like to see some form of capital gains relief added to the bill's investment incentives.

I understand that there will be an amendment dealing with these issues.

I am very pleased to see that the bill expands the reforestation trust fund, which is very important to my State of Oregon. In 1980, I introduced the original legislation that led to the creation of the reforestation trust fund. Since that time, the reforestation trust fund has been very successful in reducing the backlog of reforestation projects on Forest Service lands—which was our original goal.

Today, a backlong exists in Oregon, and other States, on land administered by the Bureau of Land Management [BLM]. The expansion of the trust fund in the bill will help reduce this backlog by providing additional money for BLM lands. Increasing the number of trees planted on BLM lands and managing their growth is good for the environment. It also ensures a sustainable harvest that will return money to the States and counties, provide jobs for timber workers, and go a long way toward eliminating the timber supply crisis.

Another provision in this bill that has my enthusiastic support is my PRIME retirement account proposal. The PRIME retirement account is a very simple way for smaller employers to offer retirement savings plans for their employees.

The bill also includes several provisions I have been pushing for which will give a much needed boost to the real estate industry. These include a $2,500 tax credit for first homes, penalty-free IRA withdrawals for first homes, and fairer passive loss rules for real estate professionals. The real estate industry has led us out of recessions in the past and this bill should give them the wherewithal to do it again.

I am very pleased to see the child welfare provisions in this bill. We all know of the alarming number of children in foster care—almost twice as many today than just 10 years ago. Some of this increase is due to growing crack cocaine use by women. The bill will provide needed resources to help pregnant women get drug treatment, parents care for their children, prevent the breakdown of families, and keep children out of foster care. The bill also includes a provision the chairman of the Finance Committee and I have been working on for the last couple of years. It gives parents who are generous enough to adopt a mentally or physically handicapped child some help with adoption expenses in the form of a tax deduction of up to $3,000.

Again I commend the chairman of the Finance Committee for the fine job he has done on this bill. While we do have some differences on some matters, it is by and large a consensus bill and I hope we can complete floor action on this bill quickly, hopefully before we go home for the recess tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I thank the ranking member on the committee for the work he has done and for his very generous comments concerning the work we have been able to do together. It is always pleasing when you can bring about a consensus and do these things in a bipartisan way.

In all candor, I think the American public is a little weary of excess partisanship. And this is an example of trying to accomplish something, and bring it forward, that is going to help move this economy of ours forward and take care of some of our people in the most distressed areas.

Mr. BENTSEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, as I understand it there is a vote scheduled for 12:15. I ask unanimous consent that I might proceed as in morning business until 12:15.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECENT HANDGUN SHOOTINGS AND DEATHS

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, just about 1 month ago, I introduced legislation, S. 2913, to prohibit the sale, manufacture, and possession of handguns—those deadly, easily concealed and easily available weapons. I call my measure the Public Health and Safety Act, and I named it so for good reason.

All of us cannot help but be horrified by the steady stream of news reports on handgun shootings and deaths—each one more senseless and unimaginable than the previous one. It is utterly insane what is taking place in this Nation of ours, and always a handgun is involved.

Look at this report, dated July 20, from Santa Clara, CA: A 49-year-old man shot his next door neighbor to death. Apparently, the man and his wife returned from a 3-day trip and found their newspaper all wet. Assuming the neighbor's dog to be the culprit, the man threw the paper over the fence; the neighbor threw it back; heated words were exchanged; the first man fetched his .357-revolver; a shot is fired, and the neighbor loses his life—all for a wet, day-old newspaper.

In Bridgeport, CT, an 11-year-old girl was shot by a 13-year-old boy. The bullet lodged in her neck; but somehow she survived, although the bullet remains in her neck. Why shoot her? Apparently the boy had given her money to buy candy from a store but said upon her return that she was 35 cents short. So he pulled out a gun and shot her. Because he thought he was ripped off a 13-year-old boy shoots an 11-year-old girl.

Look at this report from Providence, RI: "Boy Held in Assault on Pizza Deliverer." Four teenage boys spending the evening playing basketball decide to quit and order a pizza. All four were armed with 9-millimeter handguns; one of the boys apparently decided that he wanted to use his. Just after midnight, when the pizza deliverer appeared with the food, the 15-year-old boy tried unsuccessfully to rob him, shot him instead, and fled on his bicycle. The pizzaman was hit three times: One bullet in the chest, one in the hand, and a third that hit both legs. Why? Because the boy wanted to and he had a handgun readily available.

Here in the District this past weekend, I think every single Washingtonian was horrified at what took place. It was 4 o'clock on a lovely August afternoon. Alain Colaco was out in his front yard. He had finished mowing the lawn and had started weeding the front sidewalk; an unknown man fired a semiautomatic handgun repeatedly at him. Alain was hit in the chest and head; he died almost immediately. Alain Colaco, 15 years old, honor student, most valuable track performer in his school, excellent soccer player, hoped for a career as a scientist, had a sought-after internship with the American Cancer Society. Alain Colaco, dead at age 15 because of the prevalence of handguns.

This horror, this insanity, has got to stop. We must ban all handguns in the United States. Ban the purchase, the sale, the manufacture, and the possession of all handguns.

If we do not, Mr. President, this senseless slaughter of which I have just given a figment, a partial, minute clip of what takes place every day, every weekend, every week across our Nation, this senseless slaughter will continue and, Mr. President, it soon will affect every single family in America.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the news clippings that I have referred to be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUSPECT TELLS OF "URGE" TO KILL NW TEENAGER

(By Ruben Castaneda)

The man charged with slaying an upper Northwest Washington teenager has told investigators that he killed the honor student because he had the "urge" to do it, according to a law enforcement source familiar with the investigation.

The Friday afternoon shooting of Alain Manuel Colaco, 15, who was shot to death as he was gardening in front of his home, apparently was a random, unprovoked act of violence, said the source, who requested anonymity.

Detectives have turned up no evidence that the suspect, Sean Lee Qualls, 21, of the 6600 block of Piney Branch Road NW, knew Colaco or even exchanged words with him before the shooting, the source said.

The two lived about three miles apart. However, "nowhere down the line had their paths crossed" before the shooting, the source said. Colaco was shot in the head and chest. His attacker fled on foot, according to witnesses.

In an interview with homicide detectives, the only reason Qualls could cite for shooting Colaco was that "he had the urge to do it," the source said. Colaco, a junior at Georgetown Day School, was his track team's most valuable player in the last school year, and was an avid soccer player and budding scientist.

The Colaco shooting occurred about 4 p.m. in a community of two-story and ranch-style houses in the 5400 block of 27th Street NW in Chevy Chase. The neighborhood, a block from Rock Creek Park, previously had been largely spared the violence that has visited some poorer neighborhoods in the District.

Saturday afternoon, a handgun that police believe was used in the slaying was recovered from woods near Rock Creek Park. Though no witnesses appeared to have seen the actual shooting, some reported seeing a man fleeing and ditching a gun in the area where police searched, the source said.

Qualls turned himself in to workers at D.C. General Hospital's psychiatric unit early Saturday morning, telling them he was responsible for the Colaco slaying, the source said. Qualls's mother is a psychiatric nurse who has worked at D.C. General, the source said. Efforts to reach her and hospital officials for comment yesterday were unsuccessful.

Qualls, who was held without bond, is scheduled to be arraigned today in D.C. Superior Court.

Colaco's family was traveling in Europe at the time he was shot; Colaco had stayed at home so he could work at Children's Hospital, where he was assigned to the biochemistry laboratory on a fellowship from the American Cancer Society. Colaco was one of eight Washington area youths to be awarded the prestigious fellowships.

The apparent random senselessness of the killing "reminded me of 'Little Man' James," the source said, referring to Henry James, who allegedly told his companions that he "felt like killing someone" before shooting a woman on the Anacostia Freeway.

MAN ALLEGEDLY KILLS NEIGHBOR BECAUSE DOG WET ON NEWSPAPER

SANTA CLARA, CA (AP)—A man allegedly shot his next-door neighbor to death because he thought the neighbor's dog had urinated on his newspaper, police said.

Michale DeBaets, 49, was being held Monday at the Santa Clara County jail on suspicion of homicide, police Sgt. Monte Macer said. He was schedlued for arraignment Tuesday.

Macer said DeBaets and his wife, Robin, had an ongoing series of problems with their neighbor, Martin Myslinski, 33, including arguments regarding parking, trees, Myslinski's dog and the DeBeats' cat.

When the couple came home from a three-day trip out of town and found their newspaper wet with what they thought was dog urine, Robin DeBaets placed it in Myslinski's convertible, according to police. Myslinski then threw it back onto the DeBaets' property, and the woman threw it back, police said.

Myslinski and Robin DeBaets then began having a discussion about the matter when her husband came out of the house and allegedly shot Myslinski once in the chest with a .357-caliber revolver, authorities said. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Kaiser Hospital.

Macer said Myslinski's wife was apparently inside when the argument and shooting occurred.

"This is an ongoing type of thing that has gone on for two years and possibly more," he said of the tension between the neighbors. "It's just a silly disagreement that ultimately led to murder. It's a sad situation, really."

Robin DeBaets wasn't charged in connection with the incident, he said.

GIRL SHOT FOR 35 CENTS

BRIDGEPORT, CT.—An 11-year-old girl was shot and injured by a 13-year-old boy who thought she shortchanged him by 35 cents, police said yesterday. The boy had given her money to buy candy Wednesday, but when she returned from a store, he said she was short 35 cents, pulled out a gun and shot her. A bullet was lodged in the girl's neck, and doctors hadn't decided yesterday whether to remove it. The boy, held as a juvenile, was charged with first-degree assault.

BOY HELD IN ASSAULT ON PIZZA DELIVERER

(By Diane Bakst)

PROVIDENCE.—A 15-year-old Providence youth was arrested early yesterday in connection with the shooting last weekend of a pizza deliveryman on Suffolk Street.

Maj. Milton R. Wilson said the boy, originally from Roxbury, Mass., and now living in the Chad Brown housing project, is being held at the state Training School pending an appearance in Family Court tomorrow. Wilson said that in addition to firearms charges, the boy faces charges of assault with intent to murder, robbery and attempted robbery.

The boy is accused of shooting Domino's Pizza employee Charles Shuck Jr. of 150 George M. Cohan Blvd. as Shuck was delivering a pizza to a house on Suffolk Street just after midnight on July 25.

Wilson said the shooting appears to be an act of "random violence."

According to Wilson, the boy had been playing basketball earlier that night with three friends, all juveniles from Roxbury. All three youths were armed with 9mm weapons, Wilson said, and apparently the Providence teenager decided he wanted to use his gun.

The youth apparently tried to rob Shuck, but when Shuck refused to give up his money, the youth shot him, then fled on a bicycle, Wilson said. No money was taken, he said.

One bullet entered Shuck's right arm and lodged in his chest, a second bullet hit both of his legs, and a third hit his left hand.

He was listed in satisfactory condition yesterday at Rhode Island Hospital.

Two witnesses later identified the youth as the assailant, Wilson said. He said the witnesses also recognized the bicycle on which the youth fled.

Wilson said police visited Shuck at the hospital yesterday but would not say whether he had identified the youth as his assailant.

Police were traveling yesterday to Roxbury to pursue the three other juveniles, Wilson said.

15-YEAR-OLD FATALLY SHOT IN HIS YARD

(By Santiago O'Donnell and Martin Weil)

A 15-year-old was shot and killed yesterday afternoon in front of his house in a quiet upper Northwest Washington neighborhood that has been largely immune to the wave of violence in much of the city.

The victim, identified as Alain Colaco, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Colaco, was shot several times with a handgun about 4 p.m. Police reported that a man approached him as he was doing yardwork in front of the family's home in the 5400 block of 27th Street NW.

Investigators said they had no idea why the youth, who finished 10th grade this year at Georgetown Day School, was shot. A brief statement released yesterday evening by police said the assailant "for unknown reasons" drew a handgun and fired before running off.

Based on accounts gathered at the scene, police described the assailant as a black man who appeared to be between 30 and 35 years old, about 5 foot 8, with a medium or heavy build and a medium complexion. They said he wore a dark shirt and dark pants. Anyone with information was asked to call the police Crimesolvers unit at 202–393–2222.

The youth's father is director of the Eastern Africa department at the World Bank here, according to one of his associates. The father and mother and Alain Colaco's older brother, Antoine, were in Europe on a trip yesterday and were told of the shooting by telephone, friends said.

Those who knew the youth and his family were stunned by news of the shooting. "These are such outstanding, nice people," said Francis Lethem, a project adviser for East Africa at the World Bank.

Colaco "was a very good student, very attentive [with many] friends," who was "never in any difficulty," said Gladys Stern, the headmistress of Georgetown Day School.

A family friend said Colaco was an excellent soccer player and a member of the school's soccer and track teams. "He was a very good athlete, and soccer was his thing," said the friend, who asked not to be identified.

"This is the most senseless killing I have known," said a neighbor, Phyllis Wetherill. Colaco "was the kind of boy everybody would want to have."

According to neighbors, Colaco, wearing shorts and a cap, had mowed the lawn earlier in the day and at the time of the shooting was pulling weeds from along the front sidewalk.

A few minutes before 4 p.m., Wetherill said, she heard four abrupt noises that sounded like "somebody banging against the garage door." She looked out, saw nothing and then walked out to go to the movies.

As she headed from her house, she saw Colaco lying on the sidewalk with what appeared to be bullet wounds in his chest and head. The Colaco family's housekeeper was at his side.

After learning that help already had been summoned, Wetherill said, she knelt to administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

But she said that the youth's throat and nose were filled with blood, and she saw that Colaco "was already dead."

The shooting was "highly unusual," a veteran investigator said yesterday evening. "I can't remember anything like this ever happening in that area."

The family has lived in the neighborhood for the last 15 years, several neighbors said.

D.C. MAN CHARGED IN TEENAGER'S SLAYING

(By Avis Thomas-Lester and Santiago O'Donnell)

A man who walked into a D.C. psychiatric ward early yesterday was arrested and charged with the Friday afternoon slaying of a 15-year-old youth who had been gardening in front of his upper Northwest Washington home.

The suspect, Sean Lee Qualls, 21, of the 6600 block of Piney Branch Road in the Takoma section of the District, apparently did not know the victim, police said. Qualls was questioned for several hours by homicide detectives and made statements, but police officials said they knew of no motive for the slaying of Alain Manuel Colaco.

Yesterday afternoon, police searched the woods near Colaco's home in the 5400 block of 27th Street NW in Chevy Chase and found a handgun they believe was used to shoot him in the head and chest. About 5:30 p.m., several officers executed a search warrant at the suspect's home, a weathered one-story house near the Prince George's County line.

The officers entered the house through windows, and after 15 minutes, they left. An officer refused to say what, if anything, was seized.

A source familiar with the investigation said Qualls told police he had taken drugs Friday.

Qualls had gone to D.C. General Hospital's psychiatric ward early yesterday morning and later was transferred to St. Elizabeths Hospital, the city's psychiatric hospital, where he was arrested at 2 p.m., police said. He was charged with first-degree murder and held without bond pending arraignment tomorrow, police said.

While detectives talked with Qualls at D.C. police headquarters yesterday, relatives from as far away as Toronto and Los Angeles gathered at the Colaco home to lend support to the youth's family.

The community of two-story and ranch-style homes a block from Rock Creek Park has been largely immune from the violence that has troubled other city neighborhoods.

But about 3:55 p.m. Friday, police said, a man had walked up to Alain Colaco, who was pulling up weeds on the front lawn. The man raised a handgun, fired several shots and ran away. At the time of the shooting, the Colacos' housekeeper, Annie Castillo, was in the house with her young child. She ran outside screaming when she realized the teenager had been injured.

Yesterday, several neighbors gathered near the home as officers converged on the lawn about 12:30 p.m. Some feared the police were there to protect the family from another shooting.

But within a few minutes, about 15 officers began searching the area, following a path between the Colaco home and a brick house next door, beating shrubs with their batons. Thirteen minutes after the search began, police found a semiautomatic handgun in the woods at the edge of Rock Creek Park.

Police said information provided by witnesses had led them to the gun.

Francis Colaco, the slain youth's father, looked shaken and his eyes filled with tears when he was told that an arrest had been made. "I don't want to know about that," he said.

Colaco said he had last spoken with his son a week before he died. Colaco, director of the East Africa department for the World Bank, had been on a weeklong business trip in Africa. He had left Tanzania and was on a stopover in Paris en route to meetings in Scandinavia when a close family friend called to tell him that his son was dead.

The youth's mother, Marie-Henriette, was visiting relatives in Amsterdam with the couple's other son, Antoine, 20. She was notified by Francis Colaco and was met by family members when she flew into Dulles International Airport with Antoine yesterday afternoon.

"When I heard, I didn't know what to think," Francis Colaco said. "We are a very close family. He was a wonderful boy, truly. He was a very good-hearted child."

Relatives said Alain Colaco, a junior at Georgetown Day School, had stayed at home during his family's summer trip so he could work at Children's Hospital, where he was one of two students working in the biochemistry laboratory on a fellowship from the American Cancer Society.

Colaco, who was planning a career as a scientist, was one of eight Washington area youths to be awarded the prestigious fellowships. Among his projects this summer was a study on the effects of cholesterol in young people. He also witnessed a five-hour open-heart surgery, his father said.

At a closing ceremony for the program, hours before he died, Colaco made a speech from a neatly typed manuscript that sat on his family's coffee table yesterday afternoon.

The speech read in part: "I think the greatest experience I gained through my stay at Children's was just a basic understanding of how hospitals, and laboratories in general, work. It also provided me with opportunities I would not have had otherwise, such as . . . the opportunity to sit and talk to patients. These are things that will help me no matter what I do in life."

Francis Colaco said, "He loved science, and he loved seeing that operation—he was very enthused about that. Because he was so good at science, people would ask him about studying medicine. He said he could never do that because he would not have been able to dissect animals in biology class. He was against that because he had a great love for animals."

Dr. Steven Soldin, director of clinical chemistry at Children's Hospital and the supervisor for Alain Colaco and a schoolmate during their fellowship, said, "He was a very quiet, serious individual, but he related extremely well to everybody. He was very diligent and performed his tasks very, very well."

But acquaintances said the youth also had a lighter side. He was looking forward to attending a concert next week by the rock band U2. He also was looking forward to a whitewater rafting trip later this month in Colorado, said his uncle, Joseph Colaco. "He's a neat kid, what a neat kid," Joseph Colaco said yesterday as he stood across the lawn from where his nephew was slain.

All day, acquaintances arrived at the home—friends of Alain Colaco's from Georgetown Day and the Sheridan School, which he also had attended; co-workers of his father's from the World Bank; co-workers of his mother's from the International Monetary Fund.

People who knew the youth described him as an honor student and avid sportsman who had begun his own regime of exercise and healthy eating in preparation for the coming soccer season. He also ran track and was named his team's most valuable player in the last school year, Francis Colaco said. He also was involved in his school's theater program, acquaintances said. His only pet, a gray cat named Fritz, was a stray "who adopted Alain and was adopted by Alain" several years ago, his father said. The youth spent the last two summers volunteering at a senior citizens home.

"I think he had a combination of things—he was a very good student, very studious, and he was very much into athletics," Francis Colaco said. His son planned to try out for the U.S. Olympic soccer team.

About 50 people gathered at Georgetown Day School yesterday to mourn the slain youth—girls who remembered him for his politeness, boys who remembered his support on the athletic field, teachers who delighted in his intelligence. About 20 people spoke about their friendships with the youth.

"We didn't try to explain it—I just basically said it is with great sadness that we have invited you here today to share our feelings about this wonderful young man . . . who was admired and appreciated by all of us," school headmistress Gladys Stern said. "The senselessness of this wanton killing has outraged us and left us with heavy hearts. . . . Random, senseless violence has been foreign to us."

In Takoma, several neighbors said Sean Qualls has lived at the home with his mother for several years, but few people seemed to know them. "They keep to themselves," said John Matthews, a neighbor.

Qualls's mother, whose name could not be learned, was not at the home. Qualls did not answer a reporter's questions at police headquarters.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I commend the Senator from Rhode Island for his courageous leadership on this issue. He is addressing himself to an issue that concerns many of us—continued loss of life by handguns in this country. He is attempting to do something about it. It takes a great deal of courage to provide this leadership. I hope he carries on and he has my support.

Mr. CHAFEE. I thank the distinguished Senator from Ohio who has been a loyal supporter of these efforts and indeed has been involved in efforts for handgun control and now my legislation, which is to ban handguns right from the beginning. I commend him.

Mr. President, many people say that what I am attempting to do, by banning handguns is a unique step.

Mr. President, it is not unique to ban handguns. It is unique to have the prevalence of handguns that we have in the United States of America today. No other nation in the world permits this, permits anybody to go out and buy a handgun. They are advertised, as everybody knows in the Washington Post or whatever paper it might be, "handgun specials, $29.95." There are no restrictions in some sections of the country.

Some people point out that Washington, DC, is the slaughter capital of the Nation, and they do have some control. Why does it take place? Anybody in Washington, DC, can go to Virginia and buy a handgun with no restrictions whatsoever. Mr. President, the solution is not for individual entities. Try though they might, a city or a State, to have handgun delays in the purchase, or controls of some type, it cannot be done in that manner. It can only be done with a national ban on all handguns.

Mr. President, this is a theme I will be talking about rather continually, because the horrible incidents continue to come forward. Think of that young boy, 15 years old. How can you be more innocent? Fifteen years old, in his own front yard, minding his business, and along comes, in this instance, apparently a deranged individual who easily obtained a handgun, never had seen this boy before, and he just shot and killed him.

AUTHORIZATION OF MULTILATERAL ACTION IN BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

The Senate continued with the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise in support of the pending resolution regarding Serb atrocities in Bosnia. As we near the dawn of a new century, we are once again confronted with ethnic cleansing—the latest euphemism for racial purification.

Mr. President, I rise in shock; I rise in outrage; but most of all, I rise with a sense of conviction—conviction that we cannot stand idly by if yet another ethnic minority is being systematically obliterated.

Mr. President, the many Senators voicing their rage at Serb atrocities are not naive: We all know that countless atrocities are committed every day, around the world.

We are not naive enough to believe that ethnic and racial minorities have lived in peace since the end of World War II.

We are not naive enough to believe that the United States can impose peace on the globe unilaterally.

No, Mr. President, we are not naive. Surely there is oppression and persecution that should receive the attention of the Senate, the attention of the entire world.

But the fact that suffering in one area goes unaddressed by us does not mean that we should ignore suffering in another.

We cannot ignore the way in which Bosnia is being forced to suffer.

We cannot ignore pictures of gaunt, haggard men, peering from behind rows of barbed wire.

We cannot ignore reports of ongoing, systematic sorting, isolation, and torture of Bosnian Moslems at the hands of Serb attackers.

We cannot ignore the methodical destruction of the Bosnian Moslem community.

For weeks, Serb gunners have rained death and destruction upon Sarajevo. Many are regular forces, and many more are irregular, undisciplined thugs.

They have turned their guns on women and children.

They have even turned their guns on U.N. relief workers.

It seems that they have also turned their guns on the helpless civilian men rounded up and held in the camps.

Mr. President, Bosnian Moslems present no political threat to their Serb neighbors. They clearly do not present a military threat. The Bosnians represent an ethnic threat.

Serbia does not fear Bosnians for political or military reasons.

No, Serbian political and territorial integrity is not threatened by Bosnia.

Mr. President, Serbia fears for its racial integrity. Serbia is taking organized, methodical steps aimed at insuring its racial purity. This is the truly chilling factor in the Bosnia crisis. This is what largely sets Bosnia apart from the many other conflicts raging around the globe.

Mr. President, I support the strong language of this resolution.

The Senate is going on record in support of "collective security". Collective security means that nations act together to quell a common threat. Such threats may be strategic, they may be economic, or they may be moral. They may threaten the moral fibre of the international community in such a way that we simply cannot stand by.

Mr. President, ethnic cleansing poses exactly such a threat to our standards of morality—our standards of decency. We cannot stand mute, we cannot watch passively—because such inaction will remain as a signal to future dictators.

Truly, the world's inaction today will sow the seeds for more pain, and more suffering than that currently gripping Bosnia.

Mr. President, I do not call for an American invasion of the Balkans.

I do not call for the United States to rush ahead of the international community.

However, I do believe that it is time for the nations of the world to act, to use collective force if necessary.

Mr. President, we have been discussing legislation that authorizes nearly $274 billion in spending for our Armed Forces. Our allies in Europe spend similar amounts on their own military forces. It has been said during debate on this resolution that there is nothing Western forces can do short of a full-scale invasion of Yugoslavia. We are reminded of the 37 German divisions that were pinned down by Balkan fighters.

Mr. President, I find it hard to believe that our military experts, working with the international community, cannot devise some plan, some type of action, should all other avenues for relief be closed.

If the gold-plated armed forces of the West and former Soviet bloc can't be employed in a fight against senseless racial purification, then I wonder what fight it is for which we are saving them.

I appreciate the concern about a Bosnian quagmire.

I appreciate the concern for acting under a U.N. mandate. The pending resolution attempts to address these concerns. But let's face it: There is no such thing as a perfect target, and there is no such thing as a perfect conflict.

Mr. President, how many times have we witnessed organized "ethnic cleansing" in this century?

How many times did we quibble when reports of atrocities surfaced?

How many times did we wish we had acted more quickly once the full story was told?

Mr. President, how short are our memories? We should not be urging Security Council action—we should be demanding it.

This resolution should pass overwhelmingly, and the international community should overwhelmingly endorse action in Bosnia.

AMENDMENT NO. 2929, AS MODIFIED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 12:15 having arrived, the yeas and nays having been previously ordered, the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. SEYMOUR] and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], are necessarily absent.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] is absent due to illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 82, nays 13, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, at 12:42 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2:17 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. ADAMS].

AUTHORIZATION OF MULTILATERAL ACTION IN BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

The Senate continued with the consideration of the resolution.

STOP, LOOK, AND LISTEN

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, with regard to Senate Resolution 330, it is time for the Senate to stop, look, and listen.

Yes, I am fully aware of the passions and outrage kindled by scenes of war from Bosnia. I share that outrage. I, too, am revulsed by Serbia's aggression and ethnic cleansing, by Serbia's concentration camps, by Serbia's targeting of innocent women and children in Sarajevo. These are despicable and cowardly acts. There is not a person in America who does not feel an impulse to want to reach out and right all the wrongs in Bosnia and the Balkans.

Likewise, it is perhaps understandable that the Presidential candidates of both parties—caught up in the supercharged atmosphere of the campaign—have called for military intervention on behalf of the besieged Bosnians. Both candidates have urged multilateral action under the U.N. Charter—action that could very well entail the commitment of U.S. forces to combat in the Balkans within a matter of days.

Mr. President, it is exactly in this kind of supercharged atmosphere, with Washington politicians inflamed by passions of the moment, that the Senate must act as a brake and a buffer. It is the institutional duty of this body to meet passion with dispassion. As Washington said to Jefferson, "We pour legislation into the senatorial saucer to cool it."

So let us cool our passions and reflect what is at stake here. Let us not trip willy-nilly into a combat commitment of American GI's in the Balkans. By way of caution, I can cite no better authority than Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, our former Ambassador to Yugoslavia, who said on Face the Nation this past Sunday, "If we are not careful about how we deal with it, we will find ourselves enmeshed in what I do not apologize to say could become another Lebanon or another Vietnam."

Mr. President, if we learned anything in Vietnam it is that the road to tragedy and quagmire is paved with good intentions. Again in 1983, when President Reagan deployed United States Marines to Beirut, the road was paved with good intentions. Likewise, today, the road to Sarajevo is paved with good intentions.

But let us be under no illusions about this particular road to Sarajevo. Down through history, it is a well-traveled and much-bloodied road. The Ottoman Turks went down that road in 1389 and spent the next five and a half centuries in a bloody struggle with Serbian rebels and guerrillas. Hitler marched down that road in 1941 and for the next 4 years was obliged to commit 37 German divisions to contend with savage resistance by the Serbs and others.

Can the American military traverse the Balkan killing fields more successfully than the Turkish Janissaries and German Wehrmacht? Are we Americans truly prepared for the road to Sarajevo and all that entails?

And for what purpose, Mr. President? Of course we are outraged by the camps and the killings in Bosnia. But there are camps and killings in many countries around the world, from Somalia to Siberia to China to Cambodia to Iraq and tens of other countries. Are we to nobly intervene in each of these terrible conflicts in order to assuage our passions and conscience? If so, Mr. President, then the 82d Airborne Division is going to be one very busy group of soldiers, indeed.

Mr. President, I feel the same outrage and passion for the suffering people of Bosnia that I feel for the Shiites now being massacred by Saddam in southern Iraq or for the millions of starving innocents in Somalia who are no less tragic victims of war. But we do not intervene militarily in southern Iraq or in Somalia for a simple reason: There is no direct national interest of the United States at stake to justify the shedding of American blood in those godforsaken lands. And that some prudent test must apply in Bosnia: There is no United States national interest at stake there.

Mr. President, I must vote against Senate Resolution 330. I refuse to send American boys to fight and die on Europe's most ancient and notorious killing fields for a purpose that is ill-defined and open-ended. I don't know what size contingent of United States troops the President envisions sending to Bosnia. But if those troops are being sent there to resurrect Bosnia, it will be too few, and if they are being sent there to die, it will be too many.

THE RIGHT APPROACH TO PEACE MAKING IN YUGOSLAVIA

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, no one could deplore the atrocities taking place in Bosnia, and in other parts of the former Confederation of Yugoslavia more than I do. Racism is insane at any time, but the situation in Bosnia is racism that has been elevated to murder. A kindred people is being murdered in the name of purification over religion and language. Women, children, and babies are being murdered for reasons the world should have long ago outgrown.

Also contributing to our revulsion over the repression in Yugoslavia is our bitter disappointment that amidst the breathtaking pace of democratization throughout Eastern Europe, the promise for freedom for the nations of Yugoslavia once seemed so close at hand. Yet, now, the world's hopes for freedom in that former Confederation have been dashed by reactionary Communists in Belgrade and the violent despotism of Serbian officials.

As the world's leading democracy, the United States must serve the cause of freedom whenever it is opposed by racism, imperialism, and the violent ambitions of tyrants. Such is the case in Bosnia today. And, I submit, the United States, under the leadership of President Bush, has taken strong action to defend the rights of those poor people and attempt to cease the atrocities which Serbia has inflicted on them. In a few moments, I will detail those actions.

I do, however, wish to warn this body that we cannot resolve this conflict alone, nor can we help Bosnia and the other nations of Yugoslavia prevail in their struggle against Serbian hegemony alone. I believe that President Bush is right in insisting that such goals cannot be obtained without the collective action of the entire civilized world, most especially from the democratic States of Europe, who share our concerns for human rights, and whose vital interests are even more directly threatened by the violence in Yugoslavia.

My liberal friends have through the years denounced almost every exercise of U.S. military force. They always premised their denunciations on the observation that the United States is not the world's policeman. I want to point out to them now that the world does not confront this tragic situation in Yugoslavia because the United States failed to act. We confront it because Europe failed to act. And I wish to repeat to them their frequent advice: The United States is not the world's policeman.

The President believes that the decision to use U.S. force in a crisis must be carefully and thoroughly deliberated, and that the costs and objectives of such action be completely understood before it is undertaken. The President's opponents may believe the contrary. But as the President correctly observed, it is he, not Bill Clinton, who must make the decision to send America's sons and daughters into harm's way. And before he does so, he will be certain such action is necessary, that the goal is achievable, and that all due precautions for the safety of our troops have been taken. The President understands the costs of military action from personal experience. Bill Clinton does not.

Bosnia is part of Europe. It is in what is supposed to be a civilized part of the world. It is part of a community of European nations which are supposed to be in the process of unification, and which are supposed to be committed to peace, to democracy, and to human rights. Mr. President, this was supposed to be the year of Europe. This was supposed to be the year that Europe emerged as a new economic superpower.

Where is Europe? We have seen Lord Carrington act as a representative of Europe to negotiate a resolution of this crisis, but the extent of his support from his own government is unclear. We have seen Germany recognize the sovereignty of some Yugoslavian nations, but what evidence of leadership have they demonstrated beyond that action? We have seen President Mitterand go to Yugoslavia, and to send limited numbers of peacekeepers into the conflict which represents a beginning at least for Europe. But where is the European Community? Where is the Western European Union? Where are Sweden and Switzerland—nations that always seem willing to draw moral lines when there is no real cost for them?

Second, Mr. President, if we are to realistically seek an end to the conflict, we will need to field a United Nations peacemaking force that is composed primarily of European elements and that has strong and decisive European support. Europe is the only place from which we can draw the land forces, police forces, emergency workers, and aid to carry out a successful peacemaking effort and then keep that peace.

Mr. President, we are not talking about firing a few shots or dropping a few bombs. We are not talking about some minor effort that will last a few days. We are talking about hundreds of thousands of people who have been thrust into a massive civil war based on hate and the worst kind of inhumanity.

Even if we can halt today's atrocities with limited military action, and I have good reason to doubt that fact, we will need peacemaking forces on the ground. We will need sufficient force to suppress a guerrilla war, we will need sufficient force to allow people to live in security, and we will need sufficient force to allow reason to heal a divided people.

Mr. President, no one can guarantee an end to this tragedy without a major European presence and without some European show of unity and will—at least by Europe's major powers.

This is why, Mr. President, I believe that we should not be concentrating our pressure on President Bush. We should be exerting our influence in Europe and in the Security Council of the United Nations which is precisely what the President has done. We should praise those Europeans who have had the courage to act, but we should criticize the current temporizing of some Europeans, and the utter inaction of Europe's ever-moralizing neutrals.

Third, Mr. President, I want to issue a warning. I believe in airpower. I believe there are times in which airpower can be successfully used to defend freedom and protect human rights. The key to the successful use of force, however, is that the means must be tailored to the contingency in both political and military terms.

We learned the hard way in Korea, Vietman, and Lebanon that it is one thing to defeat a regular military force in the field and another thing to intervene in a guerrilla or popular war. In simple technical terms, it can take us several fighter bombers to locate and kill a single artillery piece. We can never be sure of locating and killing mortars and rocket launchers.

There is no way to be surgical about air strikes against scattered infantry forces or guerrillas mixed in with civilian populations. Vietnam has taught us that you need massive amounts of airpower, you do immense amounts of damage to everything around your target, and you often fail. No one has ever stopped a major guerrilla war through airpower alone, and no one ever will.

We may be able to force some kind of pause, or make the atrocities less visible, if we start the equivalent of a war against Serbia, and strike at the power base of the dictator that has driven this war to its present level of tragedy. We are, however, now hearing calls for air strikes against the armed forces of an entire country, and not just against the irregular forces that threaten Bosnia's civilians today.

We may end up involving ourselves in an escalating conflict where more civilians suffer. We may see the kind of pause we saw in Vietnam, where a totalitarian regime backs down for a while, and then returns to new atrocities later. We may simply see Serbian extremists go on fighting, or inflicting atrocities on Bosnians that are less visible to the world.

We can certainly support decisive European and United Nations action, just as Europe and the United Nations supported us during the gulf war. We must certainly support President Bush in pushing the United Nations and European action. We can continue to assist in efforts to assure the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the suffering population of Bosnia. What we must not do is try to return to 19th century gunboating, or confuse our carefully planned and measured success in Desert Storm, backed by sufficiency of force of every kind, with the situation in Bosnia and the rest of Yugoslavia.

Only sheer luck can make U.S. airpower the answer to this crisis. It is far more likely that we will be confronted with the choice between failure or steadily escalating our involvement and having to send in troops. If we do, the model we should remember is Lebanon, not Kuwait. Even if we are seen as liberators for the moment, we will be in the middle of a civil war based on racism and hate.

Our men and women in uniform have proved their courage and willingness to take losses in a good cause. The fact is, however, that the 235 men who died in the Marine Corps barracks outside Beirut did not bring peace. They died in a good cause, but their deaths did not bring peace nor an end to suffering.

When I was a Member of the other body, I opposed the continued presence of American Marines in Lebanon, a presence that ended in terrible tragedy. The reasons I cited for my opposition then were the criteria for military involvement that Gen. Maxwell Taylor had once elaborated. "First, the objectives of our involvement must be explainable to the man in the street in one or two sentences. Second, there must be clear support of the President by the Congress for the involvement. Third, there must be a reasonable expectation of success. Fourth, we must have the support of our allies for our objectives. And finally, there must be a clear U.S. national interest at stake."

I did not believe that all of General Taylor's criteria were met by our involvement in Lebanon. I do not believe they would all be met by unilateral and immediate United States military action in Yugoslavia. Before I will ask American men and women to risk their lives in this conflict, all of those requirements must be fully and clearly fulfilled.

Mr. President, there are good reasons why President Bush has encouraged action within the United Nations. There are good reasons why he has drawn on his vast experience in foreign affairs, and his admirable understanding of the consequences of using military force to pursue the course of action he has chosen. The focus of our attention should be on forcing all the nations which have a stake in European peace, and a commitment to democratic values, to involve themselves in a concerted attempt at resolving the tragedy in Yugoslavia. We should convince our allies that it is their responsibility to avoid further repeating their failures of the 1920's and 1930's.

Finally, Mr. President, I would like to remind both our European allies and the President's critics, that the United States has not failed to act or to show the kind of leadership that is rightly expected of the world's leading democracy. Most recently of course, the President has announced his intention to seek a U.N. Security Council resolution that would authorize appropriate, collective and not unilateral action to assure the delivery of humanitarian assistance to Bosnia.

I have prepared a short chronology of the actions, the Bush administration has taken prior to the President's statement yesterday to deal with this crisis. I believe that anyone who questions our approach to this crisis should examine that record, and then consider whether rushing forward to use force without the support of Europe or multinational action by the United Nations is the right approach. I also ask unanimous consent that a detailed record of our humanitarian assistance to the struggling nations of Yugoslavia prepared by the United States Agency for International Development be included in the RECORD at this point, should anyone persist in doubting the President's commitment to these people.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, the U.S. has already taken the following actions:

On September 25, 1991, speaking before the United Nations Security Council, the Secretary stated that, "the Government of Serbia and the Yugoslav federal military bear a special and indeed growing responsibility for the grim future which awaits the people of Yugoslavia if they do not stop the bloodshed and reverse the violent course now being pursued." The Secretary underscored that this policy "represents a direct threat to international peace and security." The Secretary went on to say that "we must collectively protect as well against the spread of this cycle of violence to yet another Yugoslav Republic. There can be no mistaking that the fate of Bosnia-Hercegovina also hangs in the balance."

The Secretary's statement was a clear warning of the direction of Serbian aggression. Moreover, it was made at a time when others were far more reticent in voicing concerns about the developing crisis. The Secretary's remarks helped galvanize support for a UN arms embargo which was adopted that same day.

During meetings with EC leaders in march 1992, the U.S. took the lead in pressing for recognition of Bosnia-Harcegovina and Macedonia. Bosnia-Hercegovina was recognized by the U.S. and the EC in April.

Over the Easter weekend, we provided the first airlift of humanitarian relief to Sarajevo.

On May 16, we advised the Serbian leadership that the U.S. would deny JAT its operating authority in the U.S. if Belgrade did not provide reliable assurances that relief convoys would be allowed to enter Sarajevo and that the airport would be returned to Bosnian civilian control.

On UN sanctions, the U.S. strongly and successfully pressed its allies to adopt a comprehensive set of economic sanctions rather than to pursue a gradual approach. The U.S. also took the lead in pressing for the inclusion of an oil embargo. It was largely as a result of U.S. efforts that a prompt, comprehensive embargo was adopted.

On May 21, we advised our friends and allies that we planned to announce the withdrawal of military attaches from Belgrade, close two "Yugoslav" Consulates General, and implement a partial drawdown of our staff and terminate JAT's operating authority in the U.S. We strongly urged other governments to take similar steps in an effort to deter Serbian aggression.

On May 25, we announced the closure of the "Yugoslav" Consulates General in New York and San Francisco and the expulsion of two "Yugoslav" military attaches. We subsequently undertook a considerable drawdown of our staff at Embassy Belgrade. In all of these measures, we have been well in front of our allies.

In May 1992, the U.S. led efforts to suspend Serbia/Montenegro from participation in decisions affecting Yugoslavia at the CSCE.

On June 23, the Secretary told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee we were witnessing a humanitarian nightmare in Bosnial. He announced that we would no longer accept representation from Belgrade at ambassadorial level and would close the Chicago Consulate General (both steps have since been taken). The Secretary also said we would broaden our efforts to suspend Serbia and Montenegro from participation in the international community.

In July 1992, under the leadership of the U.S. Delegation, the CSCE Committee of Senior Officials extend the suspension of participation by "Yugoslavia" (Serbia-Macedonia) in CSCE activities until October 14.

On July 16, 1992, NATO agreed to a U.S. proposal and initiated monitoring of the Adriatic for possible violations of UN sanctions against Serbia-Montenegro with NATO STANAVFORMED naval task force in cooperation with WEU naval task force.

On July 25, 1992, at a meeting of NACC representatives in Brussels, Romania invited member countries to send monitors to Romania to oversee compliance with UN "Yugoslav" sanctions at the suggestion of Secretary Baker. We are in the process of working with the Romanians and NATO to implement this effort.

We are making demarches in Belgrade, Zagreb and Sarajevo demanding that the ICRC be given immediate an unimpeded access to sites which are alleged to be detention camps. We are asking the UK presidency to raise this issue with member states and urge them similarly to request access on behalf of the ICRC. We are also asking the Russians to use their influence with the Serbs to this same end.

Mr. President, no nation on Earth has spent more, has suffered more to secure the success of liberty everywhere in the world than the United States. Because the American people expect no less, the United States has undertaken to help the people of Bosnia and the other struggling nations in Yugoslavia. The President, as evident by his actions to date, is committed to a course that is intended to bring a resolution to the conflict, and the liberation of nations whose God-given rights have been brutally repressed. His leadership has been forceful, and what his critics have failed to see, offers the best chance of alleviating the suffering of these afflicted peoples, and providing them the opportunity to live peacefully in freedom.

FORMER YUGOSLAVIA—CIVIL STRIFE

Date: June 1991 and ongoing.

Location: All republics of the former Yugoslav nation are affected, but fighting has been most intense in Croatia and Bosnia-Hercegovina.

No. Dead: An estimated 10,000 in the six-month conflict (June 1991–January 1992) in Croatia, 7,561 dead and 27,412 wounded in the ongoing struggle in Bosnia-Hercegovina (media quote of Bosnian officials on July 5).

No. Affected: Some 1.75 million displaced people and refugees within the former Yugoslavia (UNHCR report of July 7) (This does not include the displaced who have fled to other countries.)

Total USG Assistance: $51,052,595.

BACKGROUND

Since June 1991, warfare between the nations of the former state of Yugoslavia has taken a severe toll in lives, displaced large populations, and inflicted enormous damage to property and infrastructure.

Six-months of fighting between Serbs and Croats followed the June 1991 declaration of independence by Slovenia and Croatia. A cease-fire was agreed to in January 1992 and a U.N.-peace-keeping force was deployed in April to areas of Croatia still controlled by Serbs.

Inter-ethnic fighting flared anew in the still smoldering Yugoslav war after the republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina (B–H) voted for independence on February 29, 1992. The majority of the republic's population, made up of Muslims (44%) and Croats (17%), voted in favor of independence. Most ethnic Serbs (31% of the Bosnian population) boycotted the independence vote, while Bosnian Serb leaders called for a separate Serbian republic of Bosnia and Hercegovina. Since early April 1992, Bosnian Serb secessionists backed by the Yugoslav military, Serbian paramilitary groups from Serbia, and by Serbia have applied force to create such a Bosnian Serb republic and to expel all non-Serbs from its territory.

The European Community (EC) recognized the sovereignty of Croatia and Slovenia in December 1991, and of Bosnia-Hercegovina in April 1992. The United States announced recognition of all three republics in early April. Macedonia, a fourth former Yugoslav republic that has also declared its sovereignty, has not yet received widespread international recognition. Serbia and Montenegro, which remain allied, have proclaimed the establishment of a new, truncated Yugoslav state, whose claim to be the continuity of the former Yugoslavia is rejected by the U.S. and has not been generally accepted by U.N. members.

GENERAL SITUATION

Despite recent cease-fire agreements, fierce fighting has continued in the capital Sarajevo and other parts of B-H. The stream of displaced people seeking refuge in other republics and other European countries has grown steadily. Civilians still remaining in Sarajevo and other B-H cities and villages have been cut off from desperately needed aid by barricades and intensified fighting.

The UNHCR, UNICEF, ICRC, and others have managed to truck supplies to accessible areas in B-H; however, the relief effort has been hindered by security concerns. The ICRC and UNHCR temporarily suspended operations in Sarajevo after an ICRC staffer was killed in an attack on a convoy in May. Both organizations have resumed operations in B–H. ICRC will concentrate activities in Bihac. Bania Luka, Mostar, Zenica, and other affected towns and will also provide assistance to 19 hospitals in B–H. To supplement the airlift into Sarajevo, the UNHCR is trying to establish permanent land corridors into the besieged capital.

Critical to the delivery of desperately needed relief supplies for the 300,000 or more residents of Sarajevo and suburbs trapped by the fighting has been the reopening of the Sarajevo airport. Serb forces agreed on June 5 to turn over control of the airport to the U.N. Protective Forces (UNPROFOR), and a team of U.N. military observers from existing peacekeeping forces in Croatia was sent to Sarajevo. Fighting continued, however, between Serbs militiamen and Bosnian Defense Forces in the vicinity of the airport, prompting world capitals to consider a forced military intervention. On June 26, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali issued an ultimatum to both sides that a cease-fire must be in effect within 48 hours, and the U.N. Security Council voted to send a 1,000 member Canadian infantry battalion to Sarajevo to shore up security at the airport. The U.N. raised its flag at the airport on June 27, and the first planes of a French relief airlift, also carrying 125 French marine commandos, arrived at the Sarajevo airport on June 30. EC and U.S. military flights followed, beginning June 2 in the U.N.-sponsored relief effort. Other countries participating include the United Kingdom, Denmark, Canada, Germany, Greece, Italy, Kuwait, Turkey, Netherlands, Belgium, Norway, Spain, Tunisia and Saudi Arabia. Zagreb is the staging point for the U.N. flights. Relief materials reaching Sarajevo are delivered to Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) for distribution or placed in temporary storage; however, the security situation hampers the distribution of relief goods. Shelling continues near the airport and elsewhere in the city. The siege also continues in Gorazde and other towns in B–H, and the exodus of non-Serbs continues.

Cease fire violations have also continued in Croatia. Dubrovnik came under attack on May 29 for the first time in six months, and Vinkovei was attacked on June 15. Croatia has appealed for assistance to care for refugees from B–H.

To protest Serbia's aggression against Bosnia-Hercegovina, the United States and EC countries recalled their ambassadors from Belgrade in mid-May. On May 30, the U.N. Security Council voted to impose economic sanctions on the Yugoslavia federation of Serbia and Montenegro.

ASSISTANCE PROVIDED BY U.S. GOVERNMENT

In August 1991, an inter-agency U.S. Embassy team visited the first people displaced by hostilities on the Croatian front. They reviewed efforts and plans for the care of those displaced with social welfare. Red Cross, and voluntary agencies in Croatia, Vojvodina, and Serbia and shared their findings with the international relief agencies.

In September 1991, the State Department's Bureau of Refugee Programs (RP) allocated $1 million to ICRC for aid to displaced persons.

On Nov. 26, 1991, U.S. Ambassador Warren Zimmermann issued a disaster declaration, authorizing $25,000 in emergency assistance. The funds were used to purchase 11,000 kilos of high protein weaning foods to be distributed by the Red Cross of Bosnia-Hercegovina to infants of all ethnic groups.

From Dec. 5 to 21, 1991, a U.S. assessment team, comprising representatives from the U.S. Embassy, A.I.D., and the International Rescue Committee (a New York-based PVO), traveled to Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, Vojvodina and Serbia to observe the situation first-hand and determined what further U.S. assistance would be appropriate.

President Bush announced on Dec. 17 that the United States would provide an additional $7 million to help meet the urgent needs of displaced people. This contribution, authorized from RP's Emergency Refugee and Migration Account (ERMA) included the following grants: $2 million to ICRC and $3 million to UNHCR in January 1992 and $1 million to UNICEF and $1 million to UNHCR for Bosnian relief in April 1992.

Two military flights authorized by the Department of Defense carried excess DOD medical supplies and food to the war victims in July and December 1991. The first flight landed in Serbia and the second went to Vienna for overland shipment to the affected areas.

In January, the International Rescue Committee sent a three-person team to Yugoslavia, under an OFDA grant arrangement, to work with local and international organizations in the affected areas. Their objectives were to monitor the distribution of donor resources, facilitate donor coordination and logistics, provide information to U.S. PVOs interested in assisting the relief effort, and to report on the impact of USG-provided resources to the relief effort.

A.I.D.'s Europe Bureau sent a three-person Project Hope team to the former Yugoslavia from April 5 to 9 to assess the medical needs in Bosnia-Hercegovina. Based on the team's findings, Project Hope arranged for the shipment of $3.0 million worth of medical supplies. One-half of the medical shipment was airlifted to the region on June 15, and trucked to warehouses in Zagreb. The balance is being shipped by ocean freight. As the security situation in Bosnia-Hercegovina permits, the medical supplies are being transported by Medecins sans Frontieres/Holland (MSF/H) to affected populations in that region. A.I.D. Europe provided $600,000 and leveraged $2.4 million of the $3 million shipment.

FHA/OFDA funded five U.S. Air Force C-141 flights to Sarajevo on April 18–19. The airlifts carried 10,800 wool blankets from the OFDA stockpile in Leghorn, Italy; 90,000 meals-ready-to-eat (MREs) from DOD stocks; and over $200,000 worth of medicine and supplies from Amsterdam under an OFDA grant to MSF/H.

On May 16, a DOD C–130 and two C–141s, carrying 40 tons of MREs (about 55,000 meals) landed in Zagreb. The food stocks were placed in UNHCR storage facilities and will be distributed to displaced people temporarily housed in and around Split, a city located southwest of Sarajevo on the Adriatic sea.

OFDA also arranged with DOD to truck 155 sea containers of MREs (120 from Camp Darby in Livorno, Italy, and 35 from Rotterdam, the Netherlands) to Zagreb. The cost of the transport is $775,000, and the 3,214,080 MREs are valued at $13,659,840. The DOD road convoys began arriving in Zagreb on June 13. All 155 truckloads had arrived in Zagreb by July 7. Some of the MREs are being airlifted to Sarajevo; others have been transferred to Split. DOD has committed an additional 80 sea containers of MREs, valued at about $7 million for future delivery as needed.

RP announced additional contributions totaling $9 million in response to the latest international appeals: $6 million to UNHCR and $3 million to ICRC. This brings RP's total contribution to date to $17 million. OFDA sent an assessment team to the former Yugoslavia the first week of June to identify needs of displaced persons in Macedonia at the request of local authorities, and determine an appropriate USG response. The team included an OFDA disaster operations officer, an assessment/logistics expert, and representatives of the International Rescue Committee, the Centers for Disease Control, the Office of Food for Peace, and USAID/Europe Bureau. The logistics expert assessed the logistical and storage capacities of Zagreb and Split in Croatia. The team leader joined a USG delegation in Brussels to attend a G–24 meeting on June 22, where the international community discussed the current emergency in the former Yugoslavia. The OFDA team identified a range of needs for the consideration of the international donor community to assist both the hard-pressed Government of Macedonia and the refugees from B-H seeking relief assistance in the country.

Following the assessment in Macedonia, OFDA arranged with UNICEF to procure $66,000 worth of medicine and medical supplies for distribution there. In late June, OFDA sent two consultants to the former Yugoslavia, one to assist with the distribution of medical supplies in Macedonia and the other to monitor the delivery and distribution of MREs arriving in Zagreb. OFDA also sent a consultant to work on the subgroup of logistical and management experts in Brussels, in response to a G–24 request for personnel.

In July, OFDA purchased 10 medical kits from UNICEF, each kit containing essential medicine and disposable medical supplies sufficient to serve 10,000 people for three months. The kits and transportation were valued at $82,240.

The U.S. military launched Operation Provide Promise on July 3, flying C–130 Hercules transport planes to Sarajevo from Rhein Main Air Force Base near Frankfurt, Germany, carrying logistics equipment and MREs. DOD is also trucking powdered milk, valued at $165,000, to Macedonia. DOD has committed $1,000,000 for the airlifts.

A.I.D.'s Office of Food for Peace (FHA/FFP) has approved the provision of $6,650,000 worth of wheat flour, lentils, peas, vegoil, corn-soy milk, and wheat-soya blend for all areas of the former Yugoslavia, as well as $2,700,000 worth of wheat for Macedonia. The commodities are being programmed for October 1992 delivery. The cost includes ocean freight and internal transport.

ASSISTANCE PROVIDED BY U.S. VOLUNTARY AGENCIES

Adventist Development and Relief Agency—is sending food, blankets, medicine, baby food, and dried milk to Zagreb for distribution through 45 centers in Croatia.

American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee—is providing unspecified emergency assistance.

American Red Cross—has sent 2,500 food parcels to ICRC for distribution in B-H.

AmeriCares—has flown 11 airlifts of relief supplies to the former Yugoslavia. A portion of the supplies will be distributed to refugees from B-H in Hungary. The supplies are valued at $21,400,000.

Baptist World Alliance—has provided funds for relief to the Baptist Union of Croatia, as well as food, seeds, and financial aid through other organizations.

Brother's Brother Foundation (BBF)—has sent or committed 35 ocean-going containers of food, medical supplies, and seeds, all valued at about $3,000,000, to Croatia and other regions of the former Yugoslavia. Consignees are the Baptist Union, the Serbian Orthodox Church, and the Catholic Church of Croatia.

Church World Service (CWS)—distributed $70,000 worth of medicine and blankets with funds raised by a September 1991 appeal. CWS has issued a second appeal.

Interchurch Medical Assistance—has supplied medicine and medical supplies through their member and associate-member programs.

International Rescue Committee—sent a 3-person team, funded by an OFDA grant, to the conflict areas to work with local and international agencies in the relief effort.

Lutheran World Relief—approved a $50,000 grant for emergency supplies for Croatia and B-H.

MAP International—has provided over $7,000,000 worth of medical supplies for Croatia, B-H, and Macedonia. MAP has also delivered 12 WHO emergency kits to Croatia and Belgrade.

Project Hope—fielded a 3-person team from April 5 to 9, funded by an A.I.D. Europe Bureau grant, to determine medical needs in Bosnia-Hercegovina. On June 15, Project Hope shipped $3,000,000 ($600,000 funded by A.I.D. bureau) worth of medical supplies to Medecins sans Frontieres in Zagreb for distribution in B-H. DOD provided air transport to Graz for one-half of the shipment.

World Relief—contributed $25,000 to the Evangelical Church of Croatia to provide soap, diapers, and toiletries for refugee families.

World Vision Relief and Development—is implementing a $60,000 project that provides food, blankets, beds, medicine, and a truck through the relief arm of the Evangelical Church of Croatia.

ASSISTANCE PROVIDED BY THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY

INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

European Community (EC)—has attempted to mediate the conflicts by sending observers to crisis areas and sponsoring a peace conference. The EC earmarked about $23,750,000 for relief operations, and, on May 11, announced a further contribution of $37,500,000 to the U.N. program. A further aid package of about $150,000,000 for B–H was announced on July 2. The EC contributions are in-kind as well as cash.

Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies—works with local chapters in non-conflict areas to complement the work of ICRC and UNHCR.

International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC)—as a neutral intermediary, has worked in Yugoslavia since mid-1991, acting in its traditional role of providing protection and emergency medical assistance, tracing missing persons, and disseminating information on international humanitarian law. The ICRC has distributed thousands of family parcels donated by Red Cross national societies, as well as medical supplies to hospitals. A first ICRC appeal was launched on Sept. 9, 1991, and a revised appeal was issued on April 21, 1992.

OPEC—provided $100,000 for relief supplies for B–H to be administered by UNICEF.

UNICEF—has carried out a program in Bosnia-Hercegovina, providing milk for infants, vaccines, and emergency health kits to meet the needs of women and children. UNICEF donated $250,000. Under a new U.N. appeal, UNICEF plans to focus on information programs, supplementary feeding programs, assistance to sick children, and vaccination programs.

UNHCR—began a program complementing that of ICRC in November 1991. Working with people displaced by the war, UNHCR distributes food parcels and domestic items and provides social services and transport and logistics assistance. UNHCR/UNICEF/WHO launched a joint appeal on Dec. 3, 1991, for humanitarian assistance programs in Yugoslavia and revised the appeal in April 1992. A joint U.N. appeal in May for over $165 million superseded the April appeal.

WHO—sent a mission to assess health and sanitation needs. WHO plans a program to provide support for war traumatized children, to rehabilitate health services, to provide essential drugs, and to monitor the impact of the conflict on existing health infrastructure. WHO has provided UNHCR with health kits which will provide basic medical care for 20,000 people for three months. WHO has developed a health strategy, employing a team of specialists, to look at health problems in the former Yugoslavia.

GOVERNMENTS

Australia—about $577,000 in emergency funds
Austria—$172,413 to UNHCR
Canada—$581,197 to UNHCR and $127,226 to ICRC
Denmark—$1,108,475 to UNHCR
Finland—$1,178,832 to UNHCR
France—$456,204 to UNHCR and $44,964 to ICRC
Germany—$928,000 to UNHCR and $443,425 to ICRC
Italy—has allocated a total of about $117,000,000 for emergency assistance to refugees from the former Yugoslav republics.
Iran—sent 15 truckloads of food and medical supplies for B-H
Japan—$436,730 to UNHCR
Liechtenstein—$6,579 to UNHCR
Luxembourg—$88,235 to UNHCR
Netherlands—$2,111,111 to UNHCR
Sweden—$4,941,356 to UNHCR, $250,000 to UNICEF, and $80,000 to WHO Switzerland—$27,572 to ICRC
Thailand—$4,000 to UNHCR
Tunisia—$2,000 to UNHCR
United Kingdom—$266,729 to UNHCR and $63,380 to ICRC

NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

European UNICEF Committees—$572,584
German Foundation for UNHCR—$62,500

UNHCR

Soroptomist International (Japan)—$16,030
Stichting Vluchteling (Netherlands)—$50,000
Private donations (Japan)—$4,819 to UNHCR
Private donations (Switzerland)—$194 to UNHCR

DAYTON MAXWELL,
Acting Director, Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance.

THE RIGHT APPROACH TO PEACE MAKING IN YUGOSLAVIA

(By Senator John McCain)

Mr. President, I am now sending an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

My amendment is very simple. It makes it unambiguously clear that the Congress must vote to approve any U.S. use of military force in the former Republic of Yugoslavia, just as it voted to approve the use of force in the Gulf.

My reasons for this amendment are twofold. First, I do not want U.S. men and women to be committed to even the most limited use of force, even as part of a UN approved multi-national peace-keeping mission, unless the Congress is firmly on record as having taken full responsibility for the outcome of the course of action involved.

We must never, never, again vote the equivalent of the Tonkin Gulf resolution. We must never casually, under the emotional and political pressures of the moment, start a course of action we are not fully and formally committed to supporting.

Second, I have deep reservations about taking words on this issue that can lead to our taking action without fully understanding the situation we are interfering in.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, the situation in Bosnia and Hercegovina has captured the world's attention. The killings and other atrocities that have been taking place there for a long time have finally been brought home by the graphic pictures we have seen in recent days.

We cannot simply stand by and watch these horrors without taking action. The United States, as the leader of the free world, has an obligation to take a leadership role in getting the United Nations to make clear to all sides in the conflict that we will not let these actions go unpunished.

The doctrine of ethnic cleansing is repugnant to us all and it brings to mind the actions of the Nazis during the thirties and forties. We must express our outrage. But that is not enough, we must also take action to ensure that relief supplies and aid get through to the innocent civilians—the women and children—who are being slaughtered, raped, and abused every day.

On Sunday, I had the opportunity to meet in St. Louis with representatives of the National Association of American Muslims and other groups. All of the people I spoke with had friends or relatives in the areas of the fighting. Their pain over the current situation was obvious, and the message they delivered to me was clear—the United Nations must act to provide humanitarian relief, to bring the heavy artillery under control, to inspect the camps and to bring the guilty to justice.

As we speak on this floor today, the U.N. Security Council is considering resolutions to address the situation in the former Yugoslavia. Those resolutions are the work of our Government along with the French, the British, and others. I believe the President and the U.N. Security Council are on the right track with the pending resolutions. We need to provide humanitarian assistance to the victims of the fighting in Bosnia. And, although we all hope that military action will not become necessary, we need to make clear our resolve to use it if necessary to provide that aid.

As I stated earlier, the United States has a role to play in this matter, but we must make clear to everyone—especially our European allies—that we will not allow this to become a U.S. problem. The Germans, French, British, and others have just as great an interest—if not greater—in resolving the fighting in the region, and they have an obligation to act accordingly.

It is also important, Mr. President, that the Security Council make clear several other points. First, that the International Red Cross and other monitoring groups must be given access to all camps in the region so that independent inspectors can determine what has been taking place there.

Second, we must make it clear that those guilty of committing atrocities will be held responsible and tried as war criminals by an appropriate international body. The civilized world must make clear to those throughout the world who commit the crimes that we saw in Kuwait and that we are now seeing in Bosnia, that we will not let them go free—that we will make them answer for their actions.

The resolution before us today puts the Senate on record in support of the President's recent actions. I believe it is an important statement for this body and I intend to support it.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I wish to indicate my support for this resolution, and my misgivings.

I fully agree with the sponsors of this resolution that we must strongly condemn reported human rights abuses and demand immediate access by international relief personnel to refugee and prisoner of war camps. The reports of murder and torture must be immediately investigated. I also support the participation of the United States in a U.N. effort to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid to Bosnia, knowing that this effort will probably require the use of force. The President is working hard to gather support for just such an international effort. And it is appropriate for the U.S. Senate to articulate its backing of this objective, realizing that U.S. military personnel may be called on to participate.

The delivery of humanitarian supplies will no doubt be a difficult job if the U.N.'s experience at the Sarajevo Airport is any indication. But it must be attempted in view of the increasingly desperate situation of the besieged Bosnians. I think there is relative agreement in this Chamber on the importance of that mission and the wisdom of the President's decision to seek a U.N. mandate to accomplish it.

Notwithstanding this general agreement, the debate on this resolution has centered on the larger issue of whether the United States should become directly involved in the Bosnian conflict. The version of this resolution presented to the Foreign Relations Committee last week contained language calling on the United Nations Security Council to develop a plan for putting all heavy weapons under U.N. control and implied that the Senate would approve use of U.S. military forces to do so. This resolution was adopted by the committee on a 12 to 4 vote.

I could not support a resolution that in effect would commit U.S. troops to the vague task of trying to disarm the parties to this conflict. Most military experts agree that such a task would require ground troops, would probably take a long time to accomplish and could exact heavy casualties. My colleagues must remember that much of Bosnia is extremely rugged country and that this is a centuries-old conflict. Disarming the parties could bog down U.N. troops for an extended period in the midst of a guerrilla war. Is this not a potential repeat of the Lebanon fiasco when our Marines were bombed while guarding the airport and forced to withdraw? It seems to me that we should avoid such a situation if at all possible, and if we were to decide to become engaged, it should be only with very clearly stated goals and a firm understanding of the likely risks and costs involved. Neither of these exist at this point. While the resolution before us today puts disarmament in the context of a U.N.-orchestrated cease-fire, it is still highlighted as an objective for the Security Council, which may not be a wise move at this juncture.

I am even more troubled by the larger implications of this debate. As some of my colleagues have commented, this indeed is a defining moment in the evolution of U.S. foreign policy. With the demise of cold war nuclear threat, the United States may feel freer to become engaged in conflict situations around the globe that previously would have been avoided for fear of precipitating a United States-Soviet confrontation. Suddenly it seems possible to project limited force into an area in an effort to promote regional stability. And the new impetus to coordinate efforts through the United Nations makes it seem safer to contemplate military action. But I would argue that we are running the risk of being lulled by the seemingly less dangerous climate of the post-cold war into potentially dangerous conflicts.

Mr. President, the crisis in Bosnia is just one of several very tragic situations around the world. The front page of today's Washington Post brought one of those tragedies home—the suffering of a Somalian mother holding her starving child. Estimates are that hundreds, and perhaps even thousands of people are dying each day from starvation. According to the Post, a U.N. inspector referred to the area around Baidoa as the land of the dead. Adverse weather conditions combined with violence between rival clans are creating a famine perhaps worse than that suffered by Ethiopia in 1984. In many ways, it would be much easier and less costly in military terms to intervene in the Somalian civil war and get humanitarian aid to the people who so desperately need it. Why focus our attention solely on Bosnia and not on Somalia, where the suffering of innocent people may be of even greater proportions?

I agree that we must take immediate action to express our outrage over Serbian policies of ethnic cleansing. The Senate agrees that the attempt to displace all Moslems from Bosnia cannot go unchallenged. But why have we not been equally outraged at the Chinese efforts to subjugate the Tibetan and forcibly absorb these proud and independent people into the Chinese population? Why did we not take action against Saddam Hussein when he used poison gas on the Iraqi Kurds? The list goes on of small ethnic and religious groups threatened with annihilation.

After passage of this resolution, I strongly urge that we step back from the particulars of the Bosnian situation and try to develop a new set of criteria that can guide us in the new world order. How do we decide which ethnic and regional crises to get involved in? Should U.S. involvement be bilateral, or should the United Nations be the primary vehicle for U.S. action? When should military force be contemplated, and under whose flag: the American flag? NATO? The U.N. banner? Should U.S. national interest be the main criteria for involvement, or should humanitarian principles primarily guide our actions?

This is indeed a critical moment in U.S. history. We must respond to the demands of the moment in a manner that shows we are cognizant of what may lie ahead and the precedent we may be setting for future conflicts.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, yesterday I expressed my outrage regarding the atrocities taking place in Bosnia. I also voiced my concerns regarding the resolution before us. As carefully, as I could I pointed out the dangers in becoming involved on the land in that area of the world.

As a general rule, I do not believe we should be expressing the Sense of the Senate, on matters such as this, which ought to be within the sole discretion of the President. Having said that, I would still like to explain why I intend to vote for its adoption.

Through this resolution we are exhorting the President to seek United Nations approval to use "all necessary means" in Bosnia to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid and to gain access to refugee and prisoner camps. At the same time, I along with Senator after Senator, expressed reservations about the possibility of involving U.S. forces on the ground in Bosnia. There is indeed an inconsistency in these positions.

However, there is value in this resolution if it helps to gain the attention of Serbian Nationalists. I hope that this resolution will have a sobering effect on them and persuade them to cooperate with the United Nations.

Mr. President, I have great confidence in President Bush, who has demonstrated a keen appreciation of the pitfalls associated with the commitment of U.S. forces in Bosnia. I feel confident that President Bush will not permit our country to get dragged into a quagmire in Bosnia, and I therefore can support this resolution. Finally, this is a nonbinding resolution, and I know that we would have to vote again before U.S. forces could be committed to conflict.

I, therefore, intend to support this resolution in the hope that it will promote greater respect for human rights on the part of the Serbian Government and Serbian guerrillas in Bosnia.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, the choice presented by this resolution is clear. Are we going to stand by and watch a bunch of thugs and murderers commit virtual genocide; or are we going to do what we can, as civilized people, in cooperation with the rest of the civilized world, to stop them?

In the fall of 1990, at the time of Operation Desert Shield, the President told us that by confronting Saddam Hussein, we could help bring about a "new era, freer from the threat of terror, stronger in the pursuit of justice, and more secure in the quest for peace * * * a world in which nations recognize their shared responsibility for freedom and justice and where the strong respect the rights of the weak."

The question we face today is whether those words mean anything at all. This is a defining moment, not only for the suffering people of Bosnia, but for the international community as well.

Because if we stand by and do nothing while orphans are murdered, while defenseless men and women and children are herded into cattle cars and shipped to detention camps, while civilian homes and apartments are shelled day after day, while those trying to provide food and medicine to the sick and starving are threatened and shot at, and while a process of so-called ethnic cleansing is followed to its logical, deadly conclusion, we will not simply have failed the people of former Yugoslavia, we will have aided and abetted their destruction. And we will have sent a message to dictators and potential dictators from the hills of Cambodia to the mountains of Peru that as long as it is only human lives and not oil that is at stake, you can get away with just about anything you have the power and the ruthlessness to attempt.

During debate on this issue in the Foreign Relations Committee, concern was expressed about the precedent that we might be setting by this resolution. After all, if we participate in using force to stop the bloodshed in Bosnia, what about the civil war in Somalia, what about Nagorno-Karabach, what about Kashmir, what about any number of conflicts that are now raging or that may break out around the globe? I think this is an understandable concern, Mr. President, but I also think there are good answers to it.

First of all, what is happening in Bosnia is not—as some have said—a civil war. Make no mistake about that; it is international aggression. The Bosnian Serbs have received arms, training, supplies, and direction from the Government in Belgrade and the majority of those now fighting as Bosnian Serbs are former members of the regular Yugoslav Army. Like Kuwait in 1990, Bosnia has rights under international law that are being abused. Like Kuwait, Bosnia has a right to expect the international community to respond.

Second, the goals we have set are limited. No one has proposed sending in United States, or for that matter, United Nation troops to fight a land war in the Balkans. We are talking about humanitarian intervention. We ask only that relief efforts be protected, that the Red Cross have unimpeded access to prison and detention camps, and that efforts be made to investigate allegations that atrocities are occurring or have occurred. These are all straightforward goals, and all are designed for the single purpose of saving lives.

Third, there is an inherently inhibiting factor built into this resolution: It depends on action by the Security Council of the United Nations. Those who say that if we get involved here, we will get involved everywhere, forget that. We are not talking about going it alone. We are talking about mobilizing Russia, China, Europe, and the rest of the international community to protect international standards of law and rights. That is not going to happen every day or everywhere—but it should happen in Bosnia and it should happen now.

Finally, I ask my colleagues, what is wrong with a precedent that says to Mr. Milosevic, you will not get away with genocide? What is wrong with a precedent that says there are consequences to lying repeatedly to the United Nations? What is wrong with a precedent that attaches a price to shooting at caravans of food and medicine and trucks carrying refugees? What is wrong with a precedent that says suspected death camps are a matter of international concern? These are not precedents to the feared. These are precedents for international peacekeeping and humanitarian relief that we must establish if any of our rhetoric, or the President's rhetoric, in recent years is to have any meaning at all.

And as for those who are worried about the United States getting involved in humanitarian relief efforts in Somalia, all I can say is that my worry is the opposite: That we will not do enough, quickly enough, to save the thousands on the verge of starvation in that troubled land.

The second major concern that has been expressed about this resolution on Bosnia is more serious and that is that the process it envisions will not work. The argument goes that military intervention on a scale that would make a difference cannot be supported; while military intervention on a scale that can be supported would not make a difference. As a veteran of Vietnam, this is an argument I can not help but think about with great care. We do not want another Vietnam or Lebanon. We do not want to raise the expectation in Bosnia that American or United Nations troops will be able to roll back and undo the aggression that has already been perpetrated against their land—because as much as we might desire that, it is very, very unlikely to occur.

We should not go forward with military force under this resolution or under the U.N. resolution that will be approved tomorrow unless we are clear about what we hope to accomplish and clear, as well, about how we intend to accomplish that goal.

That is why it is important to remember that this resolution does not authorize the use of American ground troops in Bosnia, nor does it specifically authorize the use of air or naval power. It simply associates the U.S. Senate with the current policies of this administration and of the Security Council of the United Nations. It states the principle embodied in the draft of the United Nations resolution, to be approved this week, that we are > determined to establish as soon as possible the necessary conditions for the delivery of humanitarian assistance wherever needed in Bosnia.

We do not know, at this point, how much force this will take or if it will require the substantial application of force at all. We will not know what will work until we try to make it work. But given the limited nature of our goals, clearly there are many options short of the full-scale engagement of troops on the ground that some have said—without cause—would result from this resolution. Those options should be explored.

There have been some, during this debate, who have simply assumed that the Serbians will never yield, never flinch, never give up, and never change policy no matter how much pressure is brought to bear against them.

But the fact is that the Serbian forces, to date, have not been tested. All they have done so far is fight like cowards—sitting in the hills firing artillery at apartment houses and bread lines, using sniper fire to scare teenage boys. They have been able to do this because they have a monopoly on heavy weapons. We do not know how these forces will stand up against even the threat of opposing air power. We do not know how they might respond to the threat of attacks on supply lines or on military targets inside Serbia if those should prove necessary. We do not know how they would respond if we lifted the arms embargo—as we should if Serbian attacks do not immediately cease—so that Bosnians can defend themselves and their families. And we do not know whether President Milosevic can withstand the growing opposition of his own people, at least some of whom, despite a lack of good information, are appalled by the policies he is carrying out.

As I said, there are those who have argued that the United States and the world community should not even bother trying to stand up to the Serbs because they are a brave and stubborn people. We are told over and over again that tens of thousands of Nazi troops tried to defeat the Serbs during the Second World War and could not do it. But I submit there is a difference between stubbornness in opposition to Nazi policies and stubbornness in support of policies that can fairly be described as Nazi-like. The former generates solidarity and encourages sacrifice; the latter is demoralizing and divisive.

Day after day, we read tiny accounts from Moslems and Croats about acts of kindness and help from individual Serbs—their former neighbors. We know there have been large, popular demonstrations in Belgrade in opposition to the policies of Milosevic. We know there is opposition to Milosevic in the business community and among intellectuals. We need not—and should not assume—that Serbian policies will not change; nor should we accept that those now responsible for Serbian atrocities will remain indefinitely in power.

A third concern about this resolution that I wish to discuss is the question of taking sides. Some say that it would be a mistake for the United States or the United Nations to intervene in an ethnic dispute that goes back centuries. Obviously, there is a basis for this concern in the history of relations between Serbians and Croats, and the uneasy status of Albanians, Moslems, and other minorities within the former Yugoslavia today. Given this history and given the reports that we have heard about killings and abuses committed by all sides, there are obvious grounds for caution.

But let us be clear that this resolution does not call upon us to take the side of one ethnic group against another. Its mandate is even-handed: To provide relief to all who need it; to see that emergency medical care is available to the injured or wounded on all sides; to obtain access to all prisons and detention camps and to investigate allegations of war crimes by all sides.

Mr. President, the difficulty of bringing peace to an area as far away and as ordinarily remote from American concerns as the Balkans does not absolve us from the need to act, nor does it eliminate our capacity to influence events. It is a cliche of history that all it takes for evil to prosper is for good men and women to do nothing. We have no guarantee that the measures recommended in this resolution will succeed in halting the bloodshed in Bosnia or in erasing the shame that the international community should feel for its failure to act earlier.

But although many lives have already been lost, many more remain at stake. Their faces stare out at us each morning from the pages of newspapers; and each evening from the television. Their prayers reach us from makeshift prisons and hospitals, from shot out storefronts, and from makeshift cemeteries where mourners gather to bury the dead in a land that has literally run out of wood for making coffins.

We are not asked to do much. Only to try. Only to live up, just a little bit, to our own pretentions and principles. Only to define, in a way that has meaning, what a new world order is really all about.

Mr. President, I hope that we will approve this amendment by an overwhelming vote. I hope that the United States and the United Nations will go forward; that some stark choices will be presented to the Serbians, both in Belgrade and in Bosnia; that the tide of events will soon change course; and that history will record that in this case when the call came, the international community did respond and civilization and decency did prevail.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, last week I made some comments about the general situation in the former State of Yugoslavia. At that time I was expressing my support for the efforts by Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator DECONCINI to offer an amendment, which I cosponsored, condemning the inhuman ethnic cleansing policy practiced by Serbian forces and calling on the President to work with the United Nations to deal with the human crisis those policies have created.

Ever since the effort was made to bring that amendment before the Senate, we have had people opposing it. But—and this is critical—they have not opposed the factual basis for the amendment or the resolution now before us. They have not disputed the claim that the current hostilities were precipitated by Serbia and Serbian-backed forces. They have not disputed the claim that supplies of food and medicine are being repeatedly blocked and in some cases have been attacked by Serbian-backed forces. And most critically, they have not disputed the claim that Serbian forces are committing horrible atrocities including the ethnic-cleansing of regions inhabited by non-Serbs.

They have not disputed the fact that there is all too sufficient reason to believe that a genocide is being carried out in Bosnia-Hercegovina. A genocide. Undisputed.

Mr. President, when those claims are not disputed, I do not know how anyone can dispute the need to act.

I understand the concerns that have been raised. People are concerned that the need to act could be translated into American ground forces being sent into a conflict that would be hard to win and would involve great risk. I share that concern. But the resolution before us does not transform the need to act into any particular policy. In fact, to the extent that the resolution is suggestive about the type of force to be used, it implies an inclination to favor a demonstration of force, probably air strikes against selected Serbian positions. But it is important, Mr. President, to recognize the fact that the resolution before us does not commit us to any particular military course of action. Indeed, it does not commit the United States to being involved in any military action. All the resolution calls for is the President to urge the U.N. Security Council to meet in order to authorize all necessary means, including the use of military force, to achieve specific goals. Those goals are not broad political statements like bring peace to the people or end the conflict. They are specific and I believe they can be achieved through the use of military force. But even if the President responds to this resolution and even if the United Nations authorizes the use of force, that does not commit a single American soldier, sailor, or aviator to combat. We have not surrendered our sovereignty to the United Nations. No matter what the United Nations authorizes, America will decide what forces to deploy, if any, and what the goals and tactics of those forces will be.

Now Mr. President, over a year ago I voted against the immediate use of force against Iraq. I thought there were other options which we should explore before using force. I do not wish to revisit that debate today. But I do want to make three points about the relationship between that decision and this one.

First, while Desert Storm turned out well—while the loss of American life was miraculously small—we did not go into that conflict thinking that our losses would be measured in the tens of dozens rather than tens of thousands. Those who voted for the use of force in the Persian Gulf had to be willing to risk the loss of thousands of American lives there. They were willing to do so because they believed that the cause was just and that there was no recourse other than force. Are those who oppose this resolution suggesting that this cause—to prevent a genocide—is somehow suspect? I hope not. But they may be suggesting that this cause, while just, is not directly related to our national self-interest. The national self-interest in the Persian Gulf, to quote our Secretary of State, was "jobs, jobs, jobs." The national self-interest in this case isn't that simple, but it is just as clear. It is to prevent genocide. To prevent one nation, Serbia, from invading the sovereign territory of other nations, Bosnia in this case, Croatia just a few months ago. To bring some meaning to the new world order, a phrase which until now has been largely symbolic rather than substantive. If that is not in America's self-interest then we have too narrow a notion of what America is all about. We are about jobs, jobs, jobs. But we are about more than that. We are also about human rights and human dignity. And that is what this resolution is about as well.

Second, Mr. President, in Iraq we had an alternative to the use of force—economic sanctions—which some people thought was a viable way to achieve our goals. But none of the opponents of this resolution have pointed to any option other than sitting on the sidelines and saying how sorry we are about the destruction of a people and a sovereign state. And that, Mr. President, is unacceptable.

Third, in the Persian Gulf we allegedly had a clear aim and we allegedly deployed military forces to assure it was achieved. In hindsight, I am not at all sure we understood what those goals were and were not; nor am I sure that we achieved them. We certainly have not achieved the goal of giving United Nations observers the right to inspect Iraqi weapons facilities. And I suspect that some people thought our goal was to eliminate Saddam Hussein. We clearly did not do that. Nor did we protect the Kurds. But, put that aside for the moment.

The goals in this resolution are clear: Provide humanitarian relief to civilians, inspect all the prisoner of war camps in all the republics of the former Yugoslavia, review the desirability of lifting the arms embargo applied to Bosnia, evaluate the feasibility of establishing a war crimes tribunal.

Is it impossible for the United States, as part of a United Nations force, to provide humanitarian relief to civilians? The irony here is worth considering for a moment. Initially, this resolution was to have been offered as an amendment to legislation authorizing the expenditure of over $270 billion this year for the Department of Defense. Are the opponents of this resolution telling us that $270 billion, in combination with the trillions we have spent in the past few years, are not sufficient to allow us, in combination with other nations, to achieve those specific and limited goals against the forces of Serbia? What are we about, Mr. President? What have we done? Prepared to wage a war against a Soviet state that no longer exists but failed to prepare to protect the peace in the wake of the Soviet demise? Mr. President, if we do not have the ability to achieve limited goals against Serbia, then we might as well defeat the DOD authorization bill and start all over again. We are not proposing that we send soldiers to some airfield in Beirut with an undefined mission and no role to play other than watch and wait. We are proposing that we review the desirability of engaging in a real military mission. And as the Brown amendment we adopted makes clear, we will not send a single American man or woman into a combat situation unless their mission is clear and we have given them the resources to accomplish it.

Mr. President, I hope I have made it clear that this resolution does not commit a single American man or woman to go to Bosnia. I also hope I have made it clear why the conditions in Bosnia justify considering that commitment. When the Soviet state existed, we would not have gone to war about conditions in their satellite republics. We did not in Hungary. We did not in Poland. But there is no Soviet state now. There is a new reality in the world. And if we do not deal with this first sign of ethnic instability in a post-cold war environment, if we do not respond to this initial breakdown in civilized structure, we will see worse. We will see much worse. So let us face up to our responsibilities—our moral responsibility as a people and our political responsibility as a great nation—and adopt this resolution.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, there is no disagreement in this body about the agony and outrage imposed upon the non-Serbian citizens of Bosnia. Its horrors rank with those of Cambodia of a few years ago, of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and the slaughter in Somalia. The Serbian ethnic cleansing may constitute the most vile case of aggression since World War II, as we watch Serbs systematically remove over 2 million people from their homes on the basis of race.

But, the question today is whether our horrified reaction to these atrocities will also lead us toward appropriate public policy. The resolution we are considering specifically authorizes all means necessary for a vague and intermediate goal, which may well require the use of ground troops. Before we adopt such a policy, we must first determine a precise political goal, next, what military strategy must be used to attain that goal, and finally, once we are in, how we will get out.

First, what is the political goal of the United States and the United Nations? The answer which this resolution offers is the provision of humanitarian relief to the citizens of Bosnia. It is not limited to creating a landline to supply food and medicine to the people of Sarajevo, but also includes the relief of perhaps 100 concentration camps in Bosnia, containing over 70,000 people. Assuming that we feed these people, do we then offer them prolonged protection there, send them to other European countries, or return them to their homes? If to their homes, it will be to a new, disturbed country of which Serbia controls 70 percent. And even this limited goal will, those on the ground estimate, require 100,000 troops and many casualties for an indefinite period.

Having undertaken this expense, we will not even have responded to the Bosnians' requests. Yesterday, the Bosnian Ambassador to the United Nations said that the anticipated resolution addresses the symptoms but not the illness. It is tantamount, he said, to fattening up Bosnians before their slaughter. Humanitarian assistance doesn't advance the Bosnians' true goal of living in an independent Bosnia.

I am not certain, however, that some are not recklessly contemplating this goal, and considering it implicitly included in this resolution. After all, we have recognized Bosnia's independence and have included that independence as a justification for our intervention in this conflict. If that is our goal—and it is for many countries—is the United Nations going to concern itself with the security as well as the independence of Bosnia? If so, this would require the disarming of Serbians who have stayed, or moved, into Bosnia, and a return of that portion of the 2 million refugees who wish to move back into their homes in Bosnia. It will almost certainly require a formal, Desert Storm-type war with Serbia itself.

Is it a realistic goal for the United Nations to quell the fighting in an area fired by hatreds that go back half a millennium? Roman Catholics have fought Orthodox Christians there since 1221 and the Serbs cling to their 1389 defeat by the Turks. Can we expect these people to coexist peacefully once we have provided humanitarian assistance? Or is our implicit goal to end the integration with some kind of partitioning of Bosnia? Mr. President, these are questions which I believe we must answer before we begin any military action in Bosnia. For all of their noble intentions, this resolution's goals are not specific enough and their cost is gravely underestimated.

Second, once we have defined our goal—and I believe that anything short of allowing Bosnia to be an independent country is a fatally intermediate goal—what will be our military strategy toward attaining that goal? One of the attractive assumptions in this debate has been that we can achieve our goals through air strikes. But if we are to free Sarajevo as well as the untold number of concentration camps in the north of Bosnia, we will need to secure communication lines with dozens—perhaps 50, 60, or 100—of locations within Bosnia, all with tenuous lines of communications along roads and river valleys surrounded by hills from which snipers can apparently act unimpeded.

If we are to vote for this resolution, I would like to know now many casualties we are willing to accept. Winston Churchill might have been exaggerating in 1944 when he said that Yugoslavia's guerrillas were occupying 14 German divisions, but as we know, Germany was never successful in subduing Yugoslavia.

Currently at the United Nations, we are pursuing a resolution which authorizes an unstated degree of force. One official quoted in today's Washington Post said, "The numbers, the game plan, we're not aware of such a thing." Apparently, diplomatic efforts are continuing independently of military consultation. When asked how many troops would be required to fulfill this mission, one military specialist estimated 100,000. Are any of us here willing to commit 100,000 U.N. troops? Are we prepared to send half that number of Americans?

And of those men who are killed, how many will be American? We have heard a great deal from the Germans, who have been magnanimous in accepting refugees, but are nonetheless haunted by their history in Yugoslavia, and appear reluctant to enter. How many troops can we expect the United Kingdom to contribute? At the moment, it has more misgivings than we do. How many troops can we expect from the Moslem countries, from France, from Russia?

Third, Mr. President, I believe we should ask ourselves how we get ourselves out once we are in? If we define our goal as the relief of Sarajevo and the concentration camps, will we be able to leave once these people fall under attack? And if we cannot allow ourselves to leave, for how long do we choose to protect them? For 2 months or 2 years? At what point could we declare our victory? Even if we were to feed and protect these people for 2 years, it's likely that any cease-fire would collapse as soon as one party was left defenseless. I ask those who propose our intervention to identify the scenario in which we soon remove ourselves from this conflict, leaving behind a peaceful resolution in Bosnia.

Mr. President, last week, British Prime Minister John Major wrote that, "It is the nature of the Yugoslav tragedy that solutions cannot be imposed from the outside." We should accept that any role we assume here will be unsatisfactory. There is, however, an approach better than the one we are now considering.

The Bosnians have a wish to be free. They have a fundamental right to be free. We should arm them and let them establish their own freedom. We can make this a fair fight, and perhaps a winning fight, without risking our lives and the lives of our European allies.

At the moment, we are adhering to a U.N. arms embargo which effectively penalizes only those in Bosnia who are fighting for their freedom and does nothing to hinder their aggressors. In fact, while the Bosnians have remained woefully underequipped, German television has reported that Serbia is receiving arms through its long, porous border with Romania. Others have reported that ships have deposited weapons at the port of Bar, Montenegro. If we are going to impose an embargo upon former Yugoslavia, at the very least, we should be certain that it does not benefit the aggressors more than the victims.

What's more, the resolution we are now debating asks for the provision of humanitarian aid. The Bosnians are now warning that this aid will be useless unless they have some means to defend themselves. We are laboring over dangerous military actions whose worth is questioned by its recipients. Mr. President, I propose that, in addition to a total and complete blockade, we listen to Bosnians, and give them the ability to fight for their own freedom. As we did in Afghanistan, we can allow the Bosnians to defend themselves and their land, without risking lives in the United States.

Mr. President, I believe that this resolution, no matter how modified, presents a grave danger to the United States. It authorizes an unspecified amount of force, for unclear goals which do not even include, I fear, the true goals of some of this body. For once, I believe that we should exercise silence, and allow the President to bring before us a specific proposal on which we can debate the clarity of its political goals, the means and costs of its goals, and how long we are willing to pursue its goals. At that time we can hear from military experts who will speak specifically toward the proposal. Until then, a vote for this resolution is a tacit vote for authorization beyond what I think we are truly willing to extend.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, like all those who have followed the situation in Bosnia, my heart grieves for the suffering people there. The images of children and grandmothers being shot, the stories of concentration camps and sealed trains, the shortages of food and medical supplies, all of these demand action.

There is complete agreement in the Senate that humanitarian relief supplies need to be provided, detention centers need to be opened to international human rights groups, and negotiations must be conducted to address the underlying problems that are feeding the violence.

The question Mr. President is, What actions can we take that would be most effective in promoting these objectives? If there was good reason to believe that the use of military force would alleviate that suffering and bring us closer to the resolution of the problems that have produced that suffering, I would not hesitate to support such force.

But the best evidence available to us clearly indicates that using military force will only make that suffering worse, will only increase the violence, and will only reduce the amount of humanitarian aid that can be delivered.

This view, Mr. President, is supported by this morning's testimony by the U.N. official who until last week was in charge of delivering humanitarian aid in Sarajevo.

We all wish that our powerful military forces could end this tragedy. But we must base our decision on the clear evidence that intervening militarily, and even threatening to intervene, will only heighten the violence and deepen the suffering.

Instead of threatening to use force, we should act through the U.N. Protection Forces to improve the supply of humanitarian goods to Bosnia, we should act through the International Committee of the Red Cross to improve access to and conditions in detention centers, and we should act through the United Nations, the European Community, and the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to get underway serious negotiations on the future of Bosnia.

AIR POWER NOT ENOUGH

Throughout the debate, the proponents of this resolution have repeatedly sought to assure the Senate and the American people that it only is meant to express support for the use of air power and naval power, not ground troops. Several Senators were more candid in their remarks when they acknowledged that at least some ground forces would probably be necessary. But, in general, the chorus we have been hearing from proponents is air power and the images we have been fed have been of antiseptic, surgical air strikes that knock out aggressors and leave innocent civilians untouched.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the professional opinions presented by knowledgeable military officers completely contradict this.

Maj. Gen. Lewis MacKenzie served until a few days ago as the commander of the U.N. Protection Force in Sarajevo. General MacKenzie has served in nine U.N. peacekeeping operations around the world and he has spent most of this year in Croatia and Bosnia. He left Sarajevo just last week for a new assignment.

Two days ago, General MacKenzie was asked if the U.N. "Security Council passes a resolution authorizing the use of force to ensure humanitarian assistance" would "air power alone * * * be enough to get the job done?"

After indicating that he was constrained in what he could say, he clearly stated: "I think probably I could say no."

This morning, the Armed Services Committee held a hearing on the question of the use of force in Bosnia. I am going to be citing testimony from this morning's hearing and since we do not yet have a transcript I will be reciting what I would term faithful efforts at quotation. Although a later review of the transcript may reveal some difference in words, I do not think there will be a difference in content.

One of the witnesses at today's hearing was Lt. Gen. Barry McCaffrey, who is the Assistant to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Powell.

Senator WARNER asked General McCaffrey whether the objectives of this Senate resolution could be accomplished with air and sea power alone. General McCaffrey's response was "the short answer is no."

ARMY CORPS FOR SARAJEVO ALONE

Senator COATS later asked how many troops would be required to secure the airport and a land route to Sarajevo. General McCaffrey responded that we would need to secure a 30-kilometer circle around Sarajevo and a 201-mile corridor from Split on the Adriatic to Sarajevo. He testified that this would require "an army corps, about 60,000 to 120,000 troops." This is what would be required for Sarajevo alone.

Since General McCaffrey testified that his mandate would extend beyond this to provide humanitarian relief throughout Bosnia, I asked how many total troops would be required to meet that mandate. After noting that Bosnia was the size of South Vietnam and there are some 200,000 armed individuals in Bosnia, he testified that the delivery of humanitarian aid throughout Bosnia would require a "field army."

There is no set size to a field army. In Vietnam and in the gulf war, we deployed a field army, although the size of that force differed in those two cases.

But earlier in the hearing in response to a question from Senator EXON, General McCaffrey testified that 400,000 troops would be needed, which is consistent with the concept of a field army.

Four hundred thousand troops, Mr. President.

Perhaps not all of these would be Americans. But it is difficult to predict what other nation might provide troops. British Prime Minister John Major has repeatedly stated that Great Britain will not provide ground troops. Germany says that its constitution, as well as history, prevents deployment of ground troops in Yugoslavia, and its deployment of warships in the Adriatic just to monitor the embargo has been challenged in Germany's constitutional court. Italy says it will not send troops, given the history of Italian aggression in Yugoslavia during World War II. The French have made no commitments to provide forces. The Russians would be very reluctant to fight another Slavic group, and the fact is that Russia's military leadership made clear that its sympathies lie not with the Bosnian Moslems but with the Serbs.

So perhaps not all 400,000 troops would be American, but we have no indication from our allies that they would be willing to provide troops.

Moreover, Mr. President, the number of troops is only one relevant question.

Another is how long we would need to deploy those troops. The U.N. commanding general, Lewis MacKenzie, was quoted as mentioning the possibility of deploying troops for 20 years in Yugoslavia. Assuming this might be a realistic possibility, Mr. President, the decision we make today could conceivably result in American children not yet born being sent to a Bosnian war zone as 18-year-old privates two decades from now.

And General MacKenzie has repeatedly pointed out that sending troops will solve nothing and when the troops are withdrawn the situation will return to the way it had been only with much worse suffering.

General McCaffrey echoed such sentiments during today's hearing when he testified that, while the U.S. Armed Forces are prepared to go in harm's way, he is concerned that using military force would not make the situation better. He expressed the hope that military action would only be a backdrop to political efforts to resolve the underlying problems. But such political efforts are not on the verge of success. And, in fact, General MacKenzie testified that our even talking about military intervention would keep the parties away from the negotiating table.

GENERAL MACKENZIE: DON'T INTERVENE

Mr. President, the most persuasive testimony Congress has received on Bosnia was provided today by General MacKenzie, who until last week commanded the U.N. protection force in Sarajevo and earlier commanded U.N. Forces in Croatia.

He clearly and categorically argued against even considering to use military force in an effort to deliver humanitarian supplies. Let me quote as best I can from his testimony:

> General MACKENZIE. There is no military solution. There is no way intervention will do anything but escalate the violence.
> Sen. NUNN. When you say intervention will escalate the violence, do you include humanitarian assistance as intervention?
> Gen. MACKENZIE. I'm sorry but I'm afraid so.

General MacKenzie went on to note that the United Nations is currently delivering humanitarian supplies to Sarajevo, both by air and by land. While there have been some disruptions of that, he argued that any effort to use military force would actually interrupt even this supply of humanitarian goods.

Clearly there is suffering in Sarajevo and elsewhere in Bosnia. If there was good reason to believe that the use of military force would alleviate that suffering and bring us closer to the resolution of the problems that have produced that suffering, I would not hesitate to support this resolution. But the evidence available to us clearly indicates that using military force will only make that suffering worse.

General MacKenzie emphasized that there was no possibility that once we committed to using force that we could contain that force to simply trying to deliver humanitarian supplies, but instead we would inevitably be drawn into fighting various groups in Bosnia.

He also emphasized that the Bosnian Government wants us to intervene. He quoted the Bosnian President as stating that—

> . . . this is what we have been hoping for. Let Bush take the roads, have his helicopters shot at. He'll shoot back and pretty soon he'll be fighting the same war as we are.

He testified that even talking about military intervention was a carrot encouraging the fighting in Bosnia to continue, rather than a stick to get the fighting to stop. "You're playing their hand," he testified.

And, as I stated, he repeatedly testified that intervention and talk of intervention will prevent any possibility of talks to address the underlying problems among the groups in Bosnia:

> The more we talk about intervention—and that includes humanitarian aid, because that will grow, I guarantee, to more intervention—they will not talk. The answer is to rip the rug of intervention out from under them, because until they do they won't talk.
> The first thing I'd recommend is get away from the carrot of intervention.

Mr. President, this is the testimony of the man who until a few days ago was the U.N. military commander in Sarajevo. He knows the military situation on the ground there. He knows the individuals involved as real people, not just as figures on a television screen. He has been involved in numerous other U.N. peacekeeping operations in Central America, the Middle East, and elsewhere and has seen first hand what works and what does not work in these situations. We ought to give great weight to his unequivocal testimony.

ADDITIONAL HILL AUTHORIZATION NEEDED?

I'm a bit confused by the debate that has been posited so far. On the one hand, we have Members urging us to take action and, on the other hand, they say this is a nonbinding resolution.

When I left my first job, I was given a watch. On the back it has a three-word inscription in Latin. It said, "Virtute, non verbis," which means "Deeds not words."

Yet according to the arguments of some, we are talking here about words and not deeds. According to the sponsor, if we pass this resolution, we are not in fact authorizing the President to take unilateral action.

I raise this in the context of what we went through on the Persian Gulf debate. I remember, for example, that President Bush went to the United Nations first and got a resolution passed in the Security Council. At that point he indicated to some of us that he did not feel it was necessary, constitutionally, to come to the Congress for approval for the use of force against Saddam Hussein.

Now, if we adopt this resolution and authorize the President to seek U.N. support for the use of force to achieve these goals, there arises the question or what happens next week after we go into recess. Would the President call us back into session?

Adoption of the resolution is urgent, we are told. Yet, we are also told, the resolution authorizes nothing and the President must come back to Congress before he acts, although we are out of session until after Labor Day. This seeming contradiction, together with the fact that the President has nearly completed negotiations for a security resolution which might be adopted as early as this afternoon, calls into question why this resolution is being handled as it is.

CONCLUSION

In the end, Mr. President, the decisions Senators must make is whether we will focus on intent or on consequences. The resolution before the Senate expresses the statement—a sincere and incontrovertible statement, but nonetheless nothing more than a statement—that the situation in Bosnia is abhorrent and we wish that our military forces could end the tragedy there. But the consequences of this resolution, if we were to follow through on its provisions, would, in fact, make the situation in Bosnia even more abhorrent. It would heighten the violence and deepen the suffering. It would make less likely the possibility of negotiations to resolve the underlying problems. And it would make it less likely that we would ever use our military forces in other situations in which they might, in fact, be able to alleviate suffering and counter aggression.

For all these reasons, Mr. President, and others I have expressed before, I will vote against this resolution.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, the sense-of-the-Senate resolution before us on the conflict in Bosnia-Hercegovina is an important policy issue that deserves the attention of the U.S. Senate and the American people.

As a member of the Helsinki Commission on Human Rights. I have long been concerned about the suffering and destruction in this land torn by conflict. In an effort to help restore peace and stability I have supported previous legislation imposing sanctions, S. 2743.

The resolution we have before us expresses the concern that I share with many of my colleagues and this administration about the deterioration of the situation in the former Yugoslavian republic. While I agree with the intent of Senate Resolution 330, I have concerns about some of the language in the bill. The administration has been working diligently with our allies in Europe and through the auspices of the United States to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid. I support the actions of the administration and will continue to support our President's efforts in securing our national interests.

I am also concerned about the direction taken in Senate Resolution 330. I cannot support even the tacit discussion of the use of the United States military without a clearly defined and achievable objective and strategic plan that will get us to that objective. There has been a great deal of concern expressed by military advisers because of the mountainous terrain and many other geographical barriers to a successful campaign in the region. Also, entering a conflict with multiple players is difficult at best.

This does not mean that I feel we, as a nation, should sit idly by and watch the slaughter continue. I will continue to support the administration's efforts. If the use of force becomes an issue, and the above concerns are clearly addressed, I will then make a decision on whether or not to support the use of American troops in conjunction with a multilateral force.

There is no question that the tragic humanitarian situation, especially in Bosnia-Hercegovina, is unacceptable. I welcome the efforts made to ensure the delivery of aid, and will continue to support negotiations and diplomatic efforts to end hostilities and reestablish peace in that region. However, for the reasons outlined above, I will not support this bill.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I give my strong support to this resolution calling for more effective action by the United States under the auspices of the United Nations to deal with the brutality and devastation being caused by the vicious aggression of Serbia.

During the past few weeks and months, the world has watched with horror as Serbian forces in Bosnia have indiscriminately shelled cities and villages, killing large numbers of innocent civilians.

Non-Serbian survivors have been rounded up in an ethnic cleansing campaign that is all too reminiscent of the atrocities perpetuated half a century ago by Nazi Germany.

So far, diplomatic and economic pressure on Serbia has not ended that government's aggression against Bosnia. In fact, our timid response during the past year has consistently been too little and too late. It may well have encouraged Serbia to expand its aggression and undertake its brutal, racist policy of ethnic cleansing that has raised the specter of genocide.

We have already delayed too long in mounting an effective response. If the international community is to protect basic principles of law and human rights, we must act now. And we must be willing to use military force as a last resort if other steps fall short. That may well be the only language that the Serbian dictators understand.

There are substantial risks involved in any action we take. But as we have witnessed in recent days, there are substantial risks involved in our failure to act.

The international community cannot afford to shy away from this crisis. The leadership and credibility of both the United States and the United Nations are at stake. If atrocities and racist policies are tolerated in Bosnia, they will be encouraged in many other lands. The time to stop them is now.

No one underestimates the difficulty of carrying out effective U.N. military action against Serbia. All of us hope that it will not be necessary. But we know that this aggression must be stopped—before it becomes even worse, before the cost of stopping it becomes even higher.

America is at its best when we stand up for human rights—both for our own citizens and for all peoples throughout the world. We must do all we can to stop this monstrous aggression and assist the innocent victims.

I urge the Senate to support this timely and important resolution.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of this very important resolution. And I want to commend Senator PELL and Senator BIDEN for steering this legislation through the Foreign Relations Committee and bringing it to the floor so quickly.

I also want to make note of the important contributions of Senator DECONCINI and Senator LIEBERMAN, both of whom have been instrumental in bringing this matter to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. President, for the better part of a year the land once known as Yugoslavia has been consumed by upheaval and ravaged by war. It was a conflict, until recently, for the back pages of America, a sad but distant tragedy on the other side of the world.

Every one of us was appalled by the brutality of the fighting, shocked by the disregard for the value of human life. And all of us were shaken by the relentless attacks that left civilians without homes and a people without hope.

But as the war carried on we remained on the sidelines, a silent observer to this murderous game. It was a battle over traditions we did not understand, a war over values we could not comprehend. And as the death toll increased we safely kept our distance, secure in the belief that the problem was not ours.

In the course of the last several days, Mr. President, all that has changed.

It changed when we heard of the Serbian refugee camps, little pockets of hell where only terror prevailed. It changed when we heard of the boarded up trains, the firing squads, the mass executions. It changed when we heard of the scale of the tragedy: More than 100 refugee camps in this once peaceful land.

It changed when we heard of a camp called Omarska, where inmates were held in a four-level cage. It changed when we heard of the fate of the prisoners: that hundreds if not thousands were said to have died. And it changed when we heard of the so-called ethnic cleansing, a policy of fear in a land full of hate.

And it changed when we heard of the personal tragedies—the tales and the stories of torture and starvation.

One story was given, Mr. President, by a former prisoner at Omarska. In last Sunday's edition of New York Newsday, he told of civilians being held in a renovated mining complex, crowded like cattle at least 300 strong. They were given nothing to eat for days on end, forced to exist in their own filth and squalor.

Every few days, Mr. President, the door would open and 10 prisoners, sometimes 15, would be led away. The prisoner then tells the rest. "They would take them to a nearby lake," he said. "You'd hear a volley of rifles. And they'd never come back."

Those that were spared the firing squad, Mr. President, were hardly lucky. As one guard said, "We won't waste our bullets on them. They have no roof. There is sun and rain, cold nights, and beatings two times a day. We give them no food and no water. They will starve like animals."

Mr. President, I hope and I pray with all of my heart that these tragic reports turn out to be false. I hope we can be told that there really are no killings, that the stories are all wrong, that the hatred is not real.

But if these reports are true, Mr. President, then the conclusion is inescapable. What is happening in the Balkans may well be the makings of a modern genocide. And we can no longer stand on the sidelines and watch.

We can no longer wait for endless negotiations and futile cease-fires. We can no longer wait as civilians are bombed and tiny orphans are murdered. We can no longer wait as human beings are rounded up like cattle, led to a fate that defies all description.

Mr. President, it would be easy to stand here and call for a United States invasion of Yugoslavia. It would be easy to call for a full-scale intervention to bring Slobodan Milosevic to his knees. Our hearts and our passions might compel such a response.

But before we get carried away with emotion, Mr. President, we should pause for a moment and let reason be our guide. We should investigate our options, define our objectives, and carefully select the right course of action.

First of all, Mr. President, we should be wary of hasty conclusions and misleading comparisons. We have often heard it said that this is another Holocaust, that the actions of the Serbs can be compared to the Nazis, that Slobodan Milosevic is a modern version of Hitler.

The atrocities in Yugoslavia are certainly appalling. On that point, Mr. President, I have no doubt. But, Mr. President, I have always believed that the Holocaust was a singular moment in history, an episode of human suffering that will never be repeated. I will cling to that notion until I am forced to believe otherwise.

Second, Mr. President, let us not fall prey to casual generalizations about Serbian passions or the Serbian people. Not all Serbs are driven by hatred. Not all Serbs are supportive of this war. Not all Serbs have taken up arms against the Croatian and Bosnian people.

The truth is, we know very little about the conflict in the Balkans. We have little comprehension of the age-old passions involved. And the wrong move by an international military force might tragically backfire, turning popular rage against the Western world.

So let us not meet madness with more madness. Let us not meet insanity with greater insanity. Let us not blindly rush forward, and only compound the tragedy.

Let us instead take careful steps toward a legitimate bipartisan consensus. That is the principal intent of the resolution before us.

We started with the premise that anything we do must be in the framework of multilateral action. This is not the time for Rambo-like heroics. This is not the time for Globocop. We have neither the resources nor the capability to solve this problem on our own.

The resolution before us today calls on the President to convene an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council to consider military action, if necessary, for two narrowly defined purposes: To provide humanitarian relief to civilians in Bosnia and to gain access for United Nations and International Red Cross personnel to refugee and prisoner-of-war camps.

The resolution also calls on the Security Council to develop a plan for placing heavy weapons belonging to all factions in the conflict under U.N. supervision; to review and consider removing the arms embargo on Bosnia; and finally, to plan for a tribunal to investigate war crimes and crimes against humanity committed within the territory of the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. President, let me make one thing clear. This is not an authorization of force. If the President intends to use U.S. military forces, in connection with a U.N.-sponsored effort, he would have to ask Congress for the proper authorization as required under the Constitution. We would consider such a request at that time.

The purpose of this resolution, Mr. President, is to put the U.S. Senate on record as condemning in the strongest possible terms the senseless acts of violence taking place on Bosnia-Hercegovina. And it is to put the Serbian leaders on notice that we are prepared to consider military action if all other methods fail.

Mr. President, in the murky world of the Balkan civil war, the only thing for sure is that there are no easy solutions. The war in the former Yugoslavia will not come to an end overnight. The fighting will not be halted because of mere popular outrage.

But if there is to be a long-range solution to the war in the Balkans, our post-cold-war experience leaves us just one conclusion: Peace will not be imposed by unilateral action alone. Only through a legitimate multilateral consensus, supported if necessary by multilateral action, can we truly come to grips with the horrors in Bosnia.

That is the purpose of the resolution before us today. I hope it will be adopted with the strong support of this body.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I raise today to discuss my vote on Senate Resolution 330.

It is trite to say that this is an enormously difficult vote. No decision of this body is more arduous than a choice contemplating the use of force.

I intend to support this sense-of-the-Senate resolution because I think we must demonstrate our solidarity with the innocent victims of conflict in the former Yugoslavia. In my view, this resolution is the only current vehicle we have for expressing our collective concern.

My support for this resolution is not without grave reservations. Despite the efforts to narrowly craft the resolution, too many questions remain unanswered.

I believe that when the United States decides to risk the lives of American servicemen, we must do so only with a clear sense of our goals. We must have a sense of the amount of force we are willing to bring to bear. And we must have the reasonable expectation that our goals are achievable.

On its face, the goals of this resolution seem clear. It is not a declaration of war, or even an authorization for the use of U.S. force. Rather, it is an expression of support for using United Nations leverage: First, to deliver humanitarian relief; and second, to gain international access to refugee and prisoner of war camps in the former Yugoslavia. I strongly support these goals.

I suspect that in a matter of a few weeks the Senate will return to this issue. At that time, the question will be whether to use force. I listened with great interest to the debate over this resolution. Before we vote on the use of force, we will need a lot more information than any of us appears to have today.

We will need a far clearer idea of the degree of force being contemplated. We will need a far clearer estimation of whether any amount of force will bring about our goals.

In the end, no United States action is likely to do more than buy a brief window of opportunity for the people of the former Yugoslavia. I sincerely hope that they, with the support of the international community, will use this opportunity to find a peaceful solution to the violence that plagues their land.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I commend the authors of this resolution and the course of action it recommends. We must find a way to provide humanitarian relief to Bosnia-Hercegovina and to gain access for international inspectors to refugee and prisoner-of-war camps.

We have all been shocked and disturbed by the revelations of killing and injury taking place in Bosnia-Hercegovina. The faces of childern crying in pain haunt us. The knowledge that children are being orphaned and others separated from their families cries out for our attention. The photographs of bombed out communities and emaciated refugees disturbs all sensibilities.

Mr. President, this is more than a civil war. The actions we are witnessing are motivated by so-called ethnic cleansing. The reports are haunting. They bring back memories of Hitler and World War II. Racial purification. Death camps and the intolerable treatment of innocent humans.

One of the most painful lessons we learned from World War II is that genocide is possible. We learned that ruthless hatred, if unchallenged, can lead to the senseless, brutal death of innocents. We also learned that silence, as written by the philosopher and writer Elie Wiesel, is a crime unto itself. We learned that never again can the world be silent in the face of racially motivated barbarity. Never again.

People should not be assaulted or murdered because they believe in a different religion or because they are different culturally. Basic decency and humanity command that religious and cultural differences between the Serbs, Croats, and Moslems be tolerated.

Mr. President, we have a responsibility to speak out. I hope this resolution will send a strong message to the aggressors in the former Yugoslavia that the killing must stop. This resolution does not call for the automatic deployment of U.S. troops. It is not a blank check for the use of U.S. military force. Rather, it is a statement of the principles of freedom and respect for basic human rights that the United States is willing to uphold internationally. It is a call for the President to work with the United Nations to find a way to bring relief and to gain access to the camps.

No one in this Senate wants to make a reckless commitment of U.S. military forces. But doing nothing is a violation of ethics and morality that the United States or other free countries should not accept.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, the news from Bosnia is horrifying. We are hearing about atrocities against innocent civilians, taken from their homes, driven into exile, because of their ethnicity and where they live. This is the policy of ethnic cleansing. It is grotesque. Yet it is the goal driving many in the civil war underway in Bosnia.

We will never stand by as systemmatic genocide, involving the shipment of people to death camps to exterminate them, is occurring. This country will never turn its back on the deliberate, premeditated extermination of a people.

However, this resolution would make things worse—not better. Guaranteeing humanitarian aid throughout Bosnia would mean engaging ground troops in a civil war without end, in a war where the sides are not clear and the fighting and atrocities are everywhere. It would mean putting the United Nations protection forces already on the ground at risk—a possibility that their former commander, General MacKenzie, has thundered against at every opportunity.

Mr. President, let us tell the parties to this conflict something that is unmistakeable in its clarity. Let us tell them that we will not tolerate death camps. Let us tell them that we are watching very, very carefully. And if we determine that death camps, involving a program of systematic extermination, do exist, then we will punish the perpetrators swiftly and surely. That is what this Senate should be saying today. That is the resolution I would support. It is not the resolution before us today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2:15 having arrived, under the previous order, the question is on agreeing to the resolution (S. Res. 330) as relating to the multilateral action in Bosnia-Hercegovina. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from California [Mr. SEYMOUR] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] is absent due to illness.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from California [Mr. SEYMOUR] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 74, nays 22, as follows:

So the resolution (S. Res. 330), as modified and amended, was agreed to.

The preamble, as modified and amended, was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, is as follows:

S. RES. 330

Whereas the Republic of Bosnia-Hercegovina is internationally recognized as an independent state and is a member of the United Nations and a participant in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe;

Whereas attempts to bring about a permanent cessation of hostilities precipitated by Serbia and Serbian-backed forces in Bosnia-Hercegovina through negotiations have repeatedly failed;

Whereas horrible atrocities are being committed by Serbian-backed forces against the civilian population, including the "ethnic-cleansing" of regions inhabited by non-Serbs;

Whereas the United States and other Contracting Parties to the International Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide may, under Article VIII, "call upon the competent organs of the United Nations as they consider appropriate for the prevention and suppression of acts of genocide" or any of the other "Acts Constituting Genocide" enumerated in Article III;

Whereas officials of the International Committee of the Red Cross have been denied access to prison camps and internment camps throughout Bosnia-Hercegovina even though such officials are entitled to access to such camps under Article 143 of the 1949 Geneva Convention;

Whereas United Nations and Red Cross relief convoys carrying much needed supplies of food and medicine are being repeatedly blocked and in some cases have been attacked by Serbian-backed forces;

Whereas the Security Council of the United Nations voted unanimously to dispatch additional forces to reopen Sarajevo's airport, and the delivery of supplies of humanitarian assistance to the city's beleaguered population is taking place under the protection of these forces but with great difficulty;

Whereas the Security Council also endorsed the cease-fire plan negotiated by the European Community Envoy which would place all heavy weapons in the possession of factions in Bosnia-Hercegovina under international supervision;

Whereas the president of the democratically elected Government of Bosnia-Hercegovina has issued urgent appeals for immediate assistance from the international community;

Whereas the situation in Sarajevo and elsewhere in Bosnia-Hercegovina has reached a critical point requiring immediate and decisive action by the international community; and

Whereas the President on August 6, 1992, announced a six-point plan, to be implemented through the United Nations, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and NATO, to respond to the situation in Bosnia-Hercegovina, and to attempt to prevent the conflict's spread into Kosova and neighboring countries: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should immediately call for an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council in order to authorize, under Article 42 of the United Nations Charter, all necessary means, including the use of multilateral military force under a Security Council mandate, giving particular consideration to the possibility of "demonstrations" of force, to give effect to Security Council decisions to ensure the provision of humanitarian relief in Bosnia-Hercegovina and to gain access for United Natons and International Red Cross personnel to refugee and prisoners of war camps in the former Yugoslavia;

(2) during such meeting, the Security Council should—

(A) develop the means by which to implement the July 17, 1992, United Nations-sponsored cease-fire plan, which includes placing heavy weapons belonging to all factions in Bosnia-Hercegovina under United Nations supervision;

(B) review the effects on Bosnia-Hercegovina of the arms embargo imposed on all states in the former Yugoslavia pursuant to United Nations Security Council Resolution 713 and determine whether the termination or suspension of the application of that resolution to Bosnia-Hercegovina could result in increased security for the civilian population of that country; and

(C) convene a tribunal to investigate allegations of war crimes and crimes against humanity committed within the territory of the former Yugoslavia and to accumulate evidence, charge, and prepare the basis for trying individuals believed to have committed or to have been responsible for such crimes;

(3) the United States Senate strongly supports the measures announced by the President on August 6, 1992;

(4) no United States military personnel shall be introduced into combat or potential combat situations without clearly defined objectives and sufficient resources to achieve those objectives; and

(5) the United States Senate pledges to provide such funds as may be necessary for United States participation in such humanitarian relief and multilateral military force activities, pursuant to such mandates as may be adopted by the United Nations Security Council, consistent with the terms of this resolution.

SEC. 2. (a) Congress makes the following findings:

(1) National elections for the President and Parliament of Romania are scheduled to be held on September 27, 1992.

(2) Romania lacks an historical tradition of political democracy.

(3) The Romanian elections of 1946, in a major step toward the Soviet and Communist enslavement of Eastern Europe, were fraudulently manipulated to bring the Communists to power.

(4) Romania, since the violent overthrow of the Communist Ceausescu regime in 1989, has professed to pursue a democratic course.

(5) Progress toward achieving democracy has been marred by acts of violence, perpetrated by groups of miners in June 1990 and September 1991, that were aimed either at suppressing political dissent or at undermining the democratic institutions of the Romanian government.

(6) In February 1992, the first free and fair local government elections in a half century were held in Romania.

(7) There are many encouraging signs that the parliamentary and presidential elections scheduled for September 27, 1992, can be fairly and democratically conducted.

(8) Among those signs is the recent enactment of legislation in Romania that creates an audiovisual council with the responsibility for fairly allocating radio and television access to the various candidates.

(9) although international human rights monitors have observed that Romania has made progress in the area of human rights, the monitors have also identified significant unresolved problems with regard to free speech, the activities and control of the Romanian Intelligence Service, and the rights and treatment of minorities.

(10) Recent press reports indicate that Romania may be serving as a conduit for the transport of goods to Serbia and Montenegro in contravention of United Nations sanctions.

(11) A bilateral United States-Romanian trade agreement, which was signed on April 3, 1992, has been submitted to the Senate.

(12) To become effective, that trade agreement must be approved by the Senate.

(13) The support of the Senate for extending the favorable aid and trade treatment needed to help improve the performance and growth of the Romanian economy will depend heavily on the conduct of the fall election campaign and on the election day procedures.

(14) In considering the trade agreement, the Senate will also take into account Romania's record on human rights and its compliance with the United Nations sanctions against Serbia and Montenegro.

(15) The development of democratic procedures and institutions in Romania is at a critical stage, and the elections scheduled for September 27, 1992, represent an historic test of the commitment of the Romanian leadership and political system to developing such procedures and institutions.

(b) It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the elections for the President and Parliament of Romania that are scheduled to be conducted on September 27, 1992, will be an important measure of Romania's progress toward democracy;

(2) those elections should be conducted in a free and fair manner that includes reasonably equal access to the mass media by the major candidates;

(3) the Secretary of State should initiate an international effort to ensure that a sufficient number of United States and international observers are placed in Romania to monitor the scheduled elections, and any run-off elections that may be held, in order to ascertain whether such elections are conducted in a free and fair manner; and

(4) consideration by the Congress of any legislation to grant nondiscriminatory (most-favored-nation) trade status to Romania should be withheld until the Secretary of State has certified to the Senate that the elections in Romania scheduled for September 27, 1992, and any subsequent run-off elections that may be held, are conducted in a free and fair manner.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SYMMS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES ACT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, Senator BENTSEN has discussed the following matter with members of the Finance Committee, and after so doing, a majority of the members of the committee have authorized me on behalf of the committee to make a modification to the reported committee amendment.

Therefore, on behalf of the committee I modify the reported committee amendment to H.R. 11. I send the modification to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The clerk will report the modification, and the amendment is modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

The Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 11 which the clerk will report.

I have recognized the Senator from Texas. I apologize to the minority leader. I already granted recognition and reported the bill.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 11) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax incentives for the establishment of tax enterprise zones, and for other purposes.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I say to the Senate Republican leader I surely do not want to be unfair in any way.

Mr. DOLE. How do you modify a bill that is not before us?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That modification was done by the majority leader.

The bill was not before us but the majority leader has the right or the floor manager to modify the amendment and has that right and it has been ordered that it be modified pursuant to his request. That is the status of H.R. 11.

Mr. DOLE. Further parliamentary inquiry.

The bill was not before us then; the majority leader would now have to ask consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is correct.

Mr. DOLE. I ask for the yeas and nays on the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Wait a minute. There is a parliamentary inquiry there.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FOWLER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MODIFICATION TO COMMITTEE AMENDMENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, Senator BENTSEN has discussed the following matter with members of the Finance Committee, and after so doing, a majority of the members of the committee have authorized me on behalf of the committee to make a modification to the reported committee amendment.

Therefore, on behalf of the committee, I modify the reported committee amendment to H.R. 11. The modification is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is now so modified.

"SEC. 3011. INFORMATION REPORTING WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN SELLER-PROVIDED FINANCING."

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Section 6109 (relating to identifying numbers) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) IDENTIFYING INFORMATION REQUIRED WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN SELLER-PROVIDED FINANCING.—

"(1) PAYOR.—If any taxpayer claims a deduction under section 163 for qualified residence interest on any seller-provided financing, such taxpayer shall include on the return claiming such deduction the name, address, and TIN of the person to whom such interest is paid or accrued.

"(2) RECIPIENT.—If any person receives or accrues interest referred to in paragraph (1), such person shall include on the return for the taxable year in which such interest is so received or accrued the name, address, and TIN of the person liable for such interest.

"(3) FURNISHING OF INFORMATION BETWEEN PAYOR AND RECIPIENT.—If any person is required to include the TIN of another person on a return under paragraph (1) or (2), such other person shall furnish his TIN to such person.

"(4) SELLER-PROVIDED FINANCING.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'seller-provided financing' means any indebtedness incurred in acquiring any residence if the person to whom such indebtedness is owed is the person from whom such residence was acquired."

(b) PENALTY.—Paragraph (3) of section 6724(d) (relating to specified information reporting requirement) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) any requirement under section 6109(h) that—

"(i) a person include on his return the name, address, and TIN of another person, or

"(ii) a person furnish his TIN to another person."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

"(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992."

On page 1519, line 5, insert "excess inclusions (as defined in section 860E(c) of such Code) in" before "taxable years".

On page 1527, between lines 22 and 23, insert:

"(g) TREATMENT OF DISPOSITIONS UNDER PASSIVE LOSS RULES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) of section 469(g)(1) is amended to read as follows:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If all gain or loss realized on such disposition is recognized, the excess of—

"(i) any loss from such activity for such taxable year (determined after the application of subsection (b)), over

"(ii) any net income or gain for such taxable year from all other passive activities (determined after the application of subsection (b)), shall be treated as a loss which is not from a passive activity."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

On page 1788, line 1, insert "and notwithstanding paragraph (3)," after "paragraph,".

At the end of title VIII, insert:

"SEC. ____. GAINS AND LOSSES FROM CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS BY FARMERS COOPERATIVES."

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1388 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k) TREATMENT OF GAINS OR LOSSES ON THE DISPOSITION OF CERTAIN ASSETS.—For purposes of this title, in the case of any farmer cooperative—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A farmer cooperative may elect to include gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of any asset (including stock or any other ownership or financial interest in another entity) in net earnings of the organization from business done with or for patrons, if such asset was used by the organization to facilitate the conduct of business done with or for patrons. Any such gain or loss shall be allocated proportionately to patrons.

"(2) ALLOCATION.—An election under paragraph (1) shall not apply to gain or loss on the sale or other disposition of any asset to the extent that such asset was used for purposes other than to facilitate the conduct of business done with or for patrons. For purposes of this paragraph, the extent of such use may be determined on the basis of any reasonable method for making allocations of income or expense between patronage and nonpatronage operations.

"(3) PERIOD OF ELECTION.—An election under paragraph (1) shall apply to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years unless revoked by the organization. Any such revocation shall be effective for taxable years beginning after the date on which notice of the revocation is filed with the Secretary.

"(4) ELECTION AFTER REVOCATION.—If an organization has made an election under paragraph (1) and such election has been revoked under paragraph (3), such organization shall not be eligible to make an election under paragraph (1) for any taxable year before its 3rd taxable year which begins after the 1st taxable year for which such revocation is effective, unless the Secretary consents to such election.

"(5) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 1231.—If an organization has made an election under paragraph (1), section 1231 shall be applied separately with respect to both patronage-sourced gains and losses and nonpatronage-sourced gains and losses.

"(6) FARMER COOPERATIVE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'farmer cooperative' means any farmers', fruit growers', or like association to which subpart I of this subchapter applies.

"(7) NO INFERENCE.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to infer that a change in the law is intended for farmer cooperatives not having in effect an election under paragraph (1) or other organizations. Any gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of any asset by such organization shall be treated as if this subsection had not been enacted."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to sales or other dispositions in taxable years beginning after date of enactment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the bill, as modified, the substitute that is now before us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, this modification relates to the enterprise zone proposal, the investment tax allowance proposal, and first-time home buyer credit proposal, and also makes minor modifications relating to wager excise tax, tax treatment of farmer cooperatives, and five other technical amendments.

I ask unanimous consent that an explanation of these changes and a summary of the proposed committee floor modification be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF PROPOSED COMMITTEE FLOOR MODIFICATION

1. Addition of Technical Amendment to Passive Loss Rules (sec. 6102(e) of the House Bill and sec. 469(g)(1)(A) of the Code).

This provision was inadvertently excluded from the Finance Committee amendment, although it was accurately described in the "Technical Explanation of the Finance Committee Amendment" at 138 Cong. Rec. S11364 (August 3, 1992). In general, the provision would clarify the rule relating to the computation of the overall loss upon the disposition of a passive activity.

2. Correction of Effective Date to REMIC Technical Correction (sec. 6102(e) of the Senate Amendment and sec. 860E of the Code).

Under the modification, the effective date of this provision would apply to "excess inclusions" in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

3. Correct Effective Date For Earned Income Tax Credit Provision (sec. 4109 of the Senate Amendment).

Under the modification, the effective date of this provision would be taxable years after December 31, 1992, as opposed to December 31, 1991.

4. Eliminate H.R. 11 Provision Increasing Excise Tax on Wagering (sec. 3011 of the Senate Amendment).

H.R. 11 (as reported by the Senate Finance Committee) increases the excise tax on certain State-authorized wagers from one-fourth of one percent to one percent of the amount wagered, effective with respect to wagers entered into on or after the date of enactment. This committee modification would delete this provision from H.R. 11.

5. Treatment of certain gains and losses of farmer cooperatives (sec. 1388 of the Code).

Under the provision, a "farmer cooperative" may elect to include gain or loss on the sale or other disposition of certain assets as patronage source income. For this purpose, a "farmer cooperative" is any farmers', fruitgrowers', or like organization or association to which part I of subchapter T applies. The provision would apply to any asset used by the farmer cooperative to facilitate the conduct of its patronage business. This provision would apply, at the election of the farmer cooperative, to all dispositions of such assets during the taxable year for which the election is made and all subsequent taxable years, until revoked by the farmer cooperative. Following a revocation of its election and absent the consent of the Treasury Department, a farmer cooperative would not be eligible to re-elect patronage treatment for dispositions of assets until the third taxable year following the taxable year for which the revocation is effective.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The provision would be effective for dispositions of property occurring in taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

6. Technical Correction to Include Provision Requiring Reporting of Taxpayer Identification Numbers of Parties in Seller-Financed Mortgage Transactions (sec. 6109 of the Code).

This provision was inadvertently excluded from the statutory text of the Senate Finance Committee amendment, although it was included in the Chairman's mark and adopted by the committee. The provision provides that, if any taxpayer claims a deduction for qualified residence interest on any seller-provided financing, such taxpayer (the buyer) shall include on his or her tax return the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person (the seller) to whom the interest is paid or accrued. In general, this information must be furnished on Schedule A of the buyer's tax return for every year in which the buyer deducts this interest.

If any person receives or accrues interest from seller-provided financing, such person (the seller) shall include on his or her tax return the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person (the buyer) from whom the interest is received or accrued. In general, this information must be furnished on Schedule B of the seller's tax return for every year in which the seller is required to include this interest in income.

If any person involved in seller-provided financing is required to include on his or her tax return the taxpayer identification number of another person, such other person is required to furnish his or her taxpayer identification number to such person. Information would not be required to be reported under this provision to the extent it would be duplicative of existing information reporting requirements.

Failure to meet the requirements for information reporting described above are subject to information reporting penalties under section 6723. In general, these penalties are $50 for each failure.

It is anticipated that all parties to real estate closings will make every effort to inform both buyers and sellers of the requirements of this provision, and will also facilitate (to the maximum extent possible) the exchange of taxpayer identification numbers between buyers and sellers.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1991.

7. Clarification of treatment of veterans' benefits (sec. 8206 of the Senate Amendment).

Section 8206 of H.R. 11 as reported by the Senate Finance Committee provides that benefits administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs are excludable from gross income. The amendment would correct a drafting error to make it clear that all benefits administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, including benefits modified after September 9, 1986, are excludable from gross income.

8. Modification to Enterprise Zone Provisions (secs. 1101-1106 and 1111 of the Senate amendment).

The following modifications would be made to the enterprise zone provisions (secs. 1101-1106, 1111) of H.R. 11 as reported by the Committee on Finance:

Designation of tax enterprise zones

125 enterprise zones.—A total of 125 tax enterprise zones will be designated during 1993-1996. Of the designated tax enterprise zones, 75 urban zones will be designated by the Secretary of HUD, 40 rural zones will be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and 10 Indian reservation zones will be designated by the Secretary of the Interior.[1]

Zone designations generally will remain in effect for 10 years.

Eligibility criteria for zones.—(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11, except that urban zones in mid-size cities will have a minimum population requirement of 10,000, and rural zones will have a minimum population requirement of 5,000.)

To be eligible for nomination as a tax enterprise zone, a nominated area will be required to have the following characteristics: (1) a population of at least 20,000 (10,000 in the case of urban zones in mid-sized cities, 5,000 in the case of rural zones, and no minimum population for Indian reservation zones); (2) a condition of unemployment and general distress (indicated by factors such as high crime rates, or designation of the area as a disaster area or high-intensity drug trafficking area ("HIDTA") under the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988); (3) is one contiguous area; (4) is located within not more than two State; (5) poverty rates of at least 25 percent in each of the area's census tracts; (6) poverty rates of at least 35 percent in each of at least 80 percent of the area's census tracts; and (7) a satisfactory course of action (described below) adopted by the State and local governments designed to promote economic development in the nominated area.

Course of action.—(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11) In order for a nominated area to be eligible for designation as a tax enterprise zone, the local government and State in which the area is located are required to agree in writing that they will adopt (or continue to follow) a specified course of action designed to reduce burdens borne by employers or employees in the area.

Selection process and criteria.—(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11) All designated tax enterprise zones will be selected from nominated areas on the basis of the following factors: (1) the strength and quality of promised contributions by State and local governments relative to their fiscal ability; (2) the effectiveness and enforceability of the guarantees that the promised course of action will be implemented, including the specificity with which the commitments enumerated in the course of action are described in order that it could be determined annually by the applicable Secretary whether such commitments actually are being carried out; (3) the level of commitments by private entities of additional resources to the economy of the nominated area, including the creation of new or expanded business activities; and (4) the relative levels (compared to other nominated areas) or unemployment, general distress, and poverty in the nominated area.

[1] Designation of the 75 urban zones will be phased in as follows: 15 zones in 1993, 15 zones in 1994, 25 in 1995, and 20 in 1996. At least 40 of the urban zones will be located in cities with a population of less than 500,000.

Designation of the 40 rural zones will be phased in as follows: 8 zones in 1993, 8 zones in 1994, 12 in 1995, and 12 in 1996.

The 10 Indian reservation zones will be phased in as follows: 2 zones in 1993, 2 zones in 1994, 3 zones in 1995, and 3 zones in 1996.

Tax incentives

Employer wage credit.—A 30-percent credit against income tax liability is available to all employers for the first $15,000 of wages paid to each employee who (1) is a zone resident (i.e., his or her principal place of abode is within the zone, and (2) performs substantially all employment services within the zone in a trade or business of the employer.

The wage credit (and the capital incentives described below) are not available to large farms (defined as businesses with assets with an unadjusted basis exceeding $500,000 that conduct farming operations as described in present-law sections 2032A(e)(5) (A) and (B)).[2]

The maximum credit per qualified employee is $4,500 per year. Wages paid to a qualified employee continue to be eligible for the credit if the employee earns more than $15,000, although only the first $15,000 of wages are eligible for the credit. The wage credit is available with respect to a qualified employee, regardless of the number of other employees who work for the employer or whether the employer meets the definition of an "enterprise zone business" (which applies for the investment tax incentives described below).

Qualified wages include the first $15,000 of "wages," defined as (1) salary and wages as generally defined for FUTA purposes, and (2) certain training and educational expenses paid on behalf of a qualified employee, provided that (a) the expenses are paid to an unrelated third party and are excludible from gross income of the employee under present-law section 127, or (b) in the case of an employee under age 19, the expenses are incurred by the employer in operating a youth training program in conjunction with local education officials.

The credit is allowed with respect to both full-time and part-time employees. However, the employee must be employed by the employer for a minimum period of at least 90 days or 120 hours of service. Wages are not eligible for the credit if paid to certain relatives of the employer or, if the employer is a corporation, certain relatives of a person who owns more than 50 percent of the corporation. In addition, wages are not eligible for the credit if paid to a person who owns more than five percent of the stock (or capital or profits interests) of the employer.

To be eligible for the wage credit, an employer is required to notify all employees eligible to receive advance refundability of the earned income tax credit (EITC) of the availability of such advance refundability.

For certain small employers, the credit is refundable (and may be used to reduce tentative minimum tax). For this purpose, the term "small employers" is defined as employers with gross receipts not greater than $2 million during the preceding taxable year, although refundability is phased out for employers with gross receipts between $1 million and $2 million. For employers that are not "small employers," the credit is not refundable. For such employers, the credit is subject to the general business credit limitations (sec. 38) and, therefore, may not be used to reduce tentative minimum tax.

An employer's deduction otherwise allowed for wages paid is reduced by the amount of credit claimed for that taxable year.

Expansion of targeted jobs tax credit.—The present-law targeted jobs tax credit (TJTC) is expanded so that a person who resides in a tax enterprise zone is treated as a member of a targeted group for purposes of that credit.[3] However, the TJTC credit rate for zone residents is 30 percent. Thus, employers located outside enterprise zones are entitled to claim the 30-percent TJTC credit on up to $6,000 of qualified first-year wages paid to employees who reside within a tax enterprise zone.

As under present-law, an employer's deduction otherwise allowed for wages is reduced by the amount of TJTC claimed for that taxable year.

Definition of "enterprise zone business".—(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11, except large farming operations excluded.) The investment tax incentives described below (but not the labor incentives described above) are available only with respect to trade or business activities that satisfy the criteria for an "enterprise zone business." Under the bill, an "enterprise zone business" is defined as a corporation or partnership (or proprietorship) if for the taxable year: (1) the sole trade or business of the corporation or partnership is the active conduct of a qualified business within a tax enterprise zone;[4] (2) at least 80 percent of the total gross income is derived from the active conduct of a qualified business within a zone; (3) substantially all of the use of its tangible property occurs within a zone; (4) substantially all of its intangible property is used in, and exclusively related to, the active conduct of such business; (5) substantially all of the services performed by employees are performed within a zone; (6) at least one-third of the employees are residents of the zone; and (7) no more than five percent of the average of the aggregate unadjusted bases of the property owned by the business is attributable to (a) certain financial property, or (b) collectibles not held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of an active trade or business.

A "qualified business" is defined as any trade or business, other than a trade or business that consists predominantly of the development or holding of intangibles for sale or license, a large farming operation (described above), or a business consisting of the operation of a facility described in present-law section 144(c)(6)(B). In addition, the leasing to others of any structure or building located within a tax enterprise zone is treated as a qualified business only if at least 50 percent of the gross rental income from the building or structure is derived from property leased to enterprise zone businesses. The rental of tangible personal property to others is not a qualified business unless substantially all of the rental of such property is by enterprise zone businesses or by residents of a tax enterprise zone.

Additional expensing of equipment and buildings.—Enterprise zone businesses are allowed to expense 100 percent of the first $10,000 of investment in equipment and buildings. In addition, 50 percent of the next $40,000 of such investment also may be expensed.[5] The amount of such investment not expensed is eligible for accelerated depreciation, as described below.

"Qualified zone property" eligible for expensing is defined as depreciable tangible property (including buildings), provided that: (1) such property was acquired by the taxpayer (but not from a related party) after the zone designation took effect; (2) the original use of the property in the zone commences with the taxpayer; and (3) substantially all of the use of the property is in the zone in the active conduct of a trade or business by the taxpayer in the zone. In the case of property which is substantially renovated by the taxpayer, however, such property need not be acquired by the taxpayer after zone designation nor originally used by the taxpayer within the zone if during any 24-month period after zone designation the additions to the taxpayer's basis in such property exceed 100 percent of the taxpayer's basis in such property at the beginning of the period of $5,000 (whichever is greater).

The increased expensing allowance is allowed for purposes of the alternative minimum tax (i.e., it will not be treated as an adjustment for purposes of the alternative minimum tax). The section 179 expensing deduction will be recaptured if the property is not used predominantly in an enterprise zone business (under rules similar to present-law section 179(d)(10)).

Accelerated depreciation.—(Same as the Finance Committee Amendment to H.R. 11.) An enterprise zone business (as defined above) will determine depreciation deductions with respect to "qualified zone property"[6] (also defined above) by using the following recovery periods:

	Years
3-year property	2
5-year property	3
7-year property	4
10-year property	6
15-year property	9
20-year property	[7]12
Nonresidential real property	20

The shorter recovery periods allowed for qualified zone property of enterprise zone businesses will not be allowed for alternative minimum tax purposes.

Ordinary loss treatment.—(Same as the Finance Committee Amendment to H.R. 11.) Loss incurred by an individual or corporate taxpayer on disposition of certain property used in an enterprise zone business is treated as ordinary loss. The provision applies to tangible property used in an enterprise zone business for at least two years (five years in the case of real property). Loss on disposition of a stock or partnership interest in an enterprise zone business held by an individual for at least two years also is treated as ordinary loss. Ordinary loss treatment is not available under the provision for intangible property, other than stock or partnership interests in enterprise zone businesses.

[2] In addition, the wage credit and capital incentives are not available with respect to any facility described in present-law section 144(c)(6)(B) (i.e., a private or commercial golf course, country club, massage parlor, hot tub facility, suntan facility, racetrack or other facility used for gambling, or any store the principal business of which is the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption off premises).

[3] The TJTC (sec. 51) expired on June 30, 1992, but is extended for 18 months (i.e., through December 31, 1993) by another provision contained in the bill.

[4] This requirement does not apply to a business carried on by an individual as a proprietorship.

[5] As under present-law section 179, the additional expensing is phased out for taxpayers with investment during the taxable year exceeding $200,000.

[6] Accelerated depreciation will be available with respect to property that is not expensed under section 179.

[7] Thus, the recovery period for commercial real property used in an enterprise zone business would be reduced by 50 percent, because another provision of the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11 increases the general recovery period for nonresidential real property to 40 years.

Stock interests eligible for the ordinary loss treatment must be acquired by the individual taxpayer on original issue from the corporation solely in exchange for cash at a time when the corporation was an enterprise zone business (or was being organized for the purpose of being an enterprise zone business) and, during substantially all of the taxpayer's holding period, the corporation qualified as an enterprise zone business. Similar rules would apply to partnership interests in enterprise zone businesses. Property used in an enterprise zone business is eligible for the ordinary loss treatment under the bill if the property (1) meets the definition of "qualified zone property" (defined above), or (2) is land which is an integral part of an enterprise zone business.

The ordinary loss treatment applies only to losses that are attributable to the period that the property is used in an enterprise zone business. The ordinary loss treatment is to apply for purposes of computing alternative minimum tax.

Stock expensing.—An individual is allowed a 50-percent deduction for the amount paid in cash during the taxable year to purchase certain stock in an enterprise zone business. The amount of the deduction is limited to $20,000 per year (with a $200,000 lifetime cap).[8] The deduction is allowed to an individual as an above-the-line deduction (regardless of whether the individual claims the standard deduction).

Stock qualifies for the expending deduction only if it was stock acquired on original issue from a domestic C corporation that: (1) meets the definition of an enterprise zone business (defined above); (2) does not have more than one class of stock outstanding; (3) the sum of (a) the unadjusted bases of the assets owned by the corporation and (b) the value of leased assets does not excess $2 million; (4) more than 20 percent of the total value and total voting power of the stock of the corporation is owned by individuals (directly or through partnerships or trusts) or by estates; and (5) the case paid for the stock is used by the issuing corporation within 12 months to acquire property (a) which is depreciable tangible property (whether real or personal) to which section 168 applies, (b) the original use of which in the zone commences with the issuing corporation, and (c) substantially all of the use of which is in the zone.

For purposes of the $20,000 annual limitation and the $200,000 lifetime cap, an individual and members of his family (as defined in present-law section 267(c)(4) are treated as a single individual.

The basis of stock for which a deduction is claimed under the provision is reduced by the amount of the deduction. In addition, gain or disposition of the stock is treated as ordinary income to the extent of the amount allowed as a deduction, and interest is payable on certain premature dispositions. The deduction is allowed for purposes of the alternative minimum tax.

Low-income housing credit expansion.—Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.) For purposes of the low-income housing credit (LIHC),[9] tax enterprise zones automatically qualify as "difficult to develop" areas, within which the eligible basis of buildings for purposes of computing the credit is 130 percent of the cost basis. (Thus, for LIHC projects in tax enterprise zones, the credit will be based on 91 percent of present value instead of the regular LIHC rate of 70 percent of present value.) The present-law State credit cap continues to apply.

Qualified enterprise zone facility bonds

(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.)

In general.—The bill authorizes a new category of exempt-facility private activity bonds, qualified enterprise zone facility bonds, for use in areas certified as eligible to be enterprise zones. Qualified enterprise zone facility bonds are bonds 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of which are used to finance qualified enterprise zone property (as defined generally under the bill) for a qualified enterprise zone business[10] and land located in the zone the use of which is an integral part of such a business.

Unlike the other tax incentives provided for designated tax enterprise zones, these bonds may be issued for us in all areas that are eligible for designation as one of the 125 tax designated tax enterprise zones, regardless of whether the appropriate Secretary designates the area such.[11] However, an area is eligible for use of these new exempt-facility bonds only if an application is made to the appropriate Secretary for such a designation and that Secretary certifies that the application demonstrates that the area meets the eligibility criteria enumerated above for designation (including the required course of action by the State and local governments).

Qualified enterprise zone facility bonds may be issued for use in an area only during the 60-month period following the earlier of (a) the date the zone is certified by the appropriate Secretary as an eligible area, or (b) the date on which the zone is designated the tax enterprise zone.

Prompt expenditure required.—The proceeds of qualified enterprise zone facility bonds must be spent no later than 18 months after the date on which the bonds are issued. Tax-exemption on the bond interest will not be affected if this expenditure requirement is not satisfied, however, if (a) all unspent proceeds as of the end of the 18-month period are used to redeem bonds that are a part of the issue during the succeeding six months, and (b) the issuer pays a penalty equal to three percent per year of the unspent proceeds for the period beginning on the date the bonds are issued and ending on the date the unspent proceeds are used to redeem bonds.

Special rules on issue size and use to finance certain facilities.—The aggregate face amount of a qualified enterprise zone bond issue may not exceed the excess of $1 million over all outstanding prior issues of such bonds with respect to any qualified enterprise zone business which is a principal user of the bond proceeds. For purposes of this determination, all businesses that are related parties, within the meaning of section 52 (a) or (b) are treated as a single business.

The bill exempts qualified enterprise zone facility bonds from the general restrictions on financing the acquisition of existing property (sec. 147(d)). Additionally, these bonds may not be used to finance the acquisition of farmland, including such land for use by certain first-time farmers (sec. 147(c)(2)).

Penalty for failure to continue as zone business or to use bond-financed property in the zone business.—The bill extends change-in-use rules to qualified enterprise zone facility bonds. Accordingly, interest on all bond-financed loans to a business that no longer qualifies as an enterprise zone business, or on loans to finance property that ceases to be used by the business in the enterprise zone, becomes nondeductible, effective from the first day of the taxable year in which the disqualification or cessation of use occurs.

Further, if less than substantially all of the use of bond-financed property continues to be in the enterprise zone or the borrower ceases to be an enterprise zone business at any time within 10 years after the financing is provided, a penalty of 1.25 percent of the face amount of all qualified enterprise zone facility bond financing provided to the borrower is imposed. This penalty is in addition to the loss of interest deductions, described above.

The bill provides that the change-in-use and 1.25 percent penalties are waived in the case of borrowers that cease to qualify as enterprise zone businesses or that cease to use bond-financed property in the zone in that business as a result of bankruptcy, or solely as a result of a zone's ceasing to be eligible as such (e.g., as a result of the passage of time). Further, the committee intends that the Treasury Department may waive these penalties in the case of violatoins caused by circumstances beyond the control of the borrower if the violations are corrected within a reasonable period after the business has reason to know of them.

Partial exemption from State volume limitations.—Qualified enterprise zone facility bonds are allowed a 50-percent exclusion from the otherwise applicable State private activity bond volume limitations.

Exception from bank pro rata interest deduction disallowance.—The bill provides that the general rule requiring banks to forego a portion of their otherwise allowable interest expense deduction if they invest in tax-exempt bonds does not apply to investments in qualified enterprise zone facility bonds, if the issuer elects.

Rules

(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.)

Within four months after the date of enactment, the Secretaries of HUD, Agriculture, and Interior are required to promulgate rules (by notice or regulation) regarding: (1) procedures for nominating areas for designation as tax enterprise zones; (2) the method for comparing the enumerated selection criteria; and (3) recordkeeping requirements to assist in the preparation of studies to be submitted to Congress (described below). Such rules must provide that State and local governments shall have no less than five months after issuance to submit their applications for zone designation before such applications are evaluated and compared and any area is designated as a tax enterprise zone.

Study

(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.)

[8] Thus, in order for an individual to claim the maximum $20,000 per-year deduction, the individual must purchase $40,000 of qualified stock during the taxable year

Individuals are permitted to carry excess amounts (above the $20,000 per year limit) to the next taxable year (subject to the $200,000 lifetime cap).

[9] The LIHC (sec. 42) expired on June 30, 1992, but is extended for 18 months (i.e., through December 31, 1993) by another provision of the bill.

[10] For purposes of the tax-exempt bond provisions, the term qualified enterprise zone business includes a business located in a certified enterprise zone area (see below) that satisfies with respect to the certified area in which it is located all of the criteria applicable to such businesses that are located in designated tax enterprise zones.

[11] However, for areas that are not designated as a tax enterprise zone, the minimum population requirement will be 20,000 for an urban area and 10,000 for a rural area. There will be no minimum population requirement for areas located on Indian reservations.

The bill provides for a study to be conducted under the auspices of the National Academy of Sciences, analyzing the effectiveness of the tax incentives in the tax enterprise zones. An interim report of this study is required to be submitted to Congress by July 1, 1997, and a final report by July 1, 2000. The Secretary of the Treasury (in consultation with the Secretaries of Housing and Urban Development, Agriculture, and Interior) is directed to contract with the National Academy of Sciences within three months after the date of enactment to conduct this study.

Effective date

(Same as the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.)

Tax enterprise zone designations will be made only during calendar years 1993 through 1996. The tax incentives provided for are available during the period that the designation remains in effect, which generally will be for 10 years after the designation first becomes effective.

9. Eliminate H.R. 11 Provision on Special Depreciation Allowance for Certain Equipment Acquired in 1992 (sec. 2161 of the Senate Amendment).

Section 2161 of H.R. 11 (as reported by the Senate Finance Committee) allows an additional first-year depreciation deduction equal to 15 percent of the adjusted basis for certain property acquired in 1992 and placed in service before 1994. This committee modification would delete this provision from H.R. 11.

10. Eliminate H.R. 11 Provision on First-Time Homebuyer Credit (sec. 2121 of the Senate Amendment).

Section 2121 of H.R. 11 (as reported by the Senate Finance Committee) provides a tax credit for the purchase of a principal residence by a first-time homebuyer. This committee modification would delete this provision from H.R. 11.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I brought to the desk a Finance Committee modification that includes eight noncontroversial changes in the tax bill reported out last week by the Finance Committee. It also includes one substantive modification to the enterprise zone legislation that a majority of the committee has agreed to and that I want to discuss in some detail.

Since the riots in Los Angeles, my goal for the enterprise zone proposal, a goal which I think every Member of this Senate supports and shares, is to make the proposal work for the residents in those distressed areas. That is why the proposal the Finance Committee reported out is based on incentives that target the benefits to the zone residents, and that is why the number of zones was limited in the first place to the extent it was.

Nevertheless, I recognize the legitimate concerns about providing only 25 full-fledged enterprise zones. The problem is that the committee felt that we could not go a great deal higher than that without diluting the benefits to the point of meaninglessness. If we stayed with the $2.5 billion revenue ceiling that the administration get.

The committee has now decided to abandon that last assumption and commit to a much longer number of zones with the same meaningful benefits.

Those benefits would be funded by deleting the investment tax allowance and the tax credit for first-time home buyers.

I hear one of my colleagues on the other side critizing those provisions because they would expire at the end of the year. Nevertheless, these two temporary provisions provide $3 billion more which we can use to increase the number of zones.

We increased the number of zones, five times the number of zones even though we increased the amount of money by a little over twice. The reason for that is the more zones you establish, the smaller the area and hence the revenue loss. Our proposal provides that at least 40 of the 75,000 urban zones must go to cities with less than 500,000 population.

With respect to the question of which cities would qualify, I have to respond to Secretary Kemp's outrageous change that Los Angeles would not qualify. If anyone thinks that my committee would develop and endorse, an enterprise zone proposal that disqualified Los Angeles, they do not know my committee very well. Our criteria was clear—enterprise zones would be selected on the basis of relative poverty, unemployment, and general distress.

Anyone who would think Los Angeles was not distressed with $1 billion worth of damage and 58 lives lost would have to be absurd, indeed. But, nevertheless, Secretary Kemp made that outlandish and false claim that Los Angeles would not quality.

The measures that we delete, the investment tax allowance and the tax credit for first-time home buyers—were included in the original bill at the administration's request in their exact form, before the administration changed its position and indicated that they would veto the tax measure.

And frankly, no one has given a 21-gun salute to those two provisions. In fact despite the fact that the administration requested them, the two incentives have come under criticism from Senator DOMENICI who stated that the economic incentives were terribly late and short on time. Deleting those two provisions will save $3 billion and we would allocate every penny of that to the enterprise zones, so we are able to retain meaningful tax incentives and yet substantially increase the number of zones from 25 to 125.

Let me summarize some of those changes to the tax incentives.

First, the modified proposal would provide a 30 percent tax credit for the first $15,000 of wages paid by an enterprise business to a zone resident. The original proposal provided a 40-percent credit for the first $20,000 of wages.

The wage credit in the modified proposal is still very powerful, a maximum of $4,500 for each zone resident that is hired. That is a powerful incentive to hire residents of those distressed areas. The first goal of an enterprise zone should be to provide jobs to those zone residents, and that is what a generous wage credit would do.

Another problem this proposal addresses is the lack of incentives for job training. Our proposal provides the same tax credit for the training of zone residents so they can qualify for productive jobs.

Second, 50 percent expensing of buildings and equipment would be allowed for small businesses up to $50,000. That compares with 100 percent of expensing up to $75,000 of equipment and buildings in the original proposal.

The accelerated depreciation provisions available to both large and small business would be unchanged from the original proposal.

Third, individuals would be able to deduct 50 percent of the stock investment in zone businesses up to an annual cap of $20,000 for the deduction and a lifetime cap of some $200,000 for that deduction. The change here is that the original proposal provided original and lifetime caps of $25,000 and $250,000 respectively. Also, the size of the zone businesses eligible for this incentive would be decreased from $3 to $2 million of gross assets.

And, finally, farms with assets of over $500,000 would not be eligible for the zone benefits. The reason for this change is that we had members on the Finance Committee from farming States who were deeply concerned that the proposal would provide incentives for corporate farming at the expense of family farms. So that limitation was put in response to their concerns.

Those are the enterprise zone changes agreed to by a majority of the committee. I firmly believe the modified proposal represents a package that has a real chance of helping our cities and these troubled rural areas. This is a serious response to one of our Nation's most serious problems. The provisions requiring studies of zones will stay in the bill—we will continue to monitor this project carefully.

I must tell my friends that I have brought together all the studies I can find on enterprise zones. We find people who feel very strongly they succeed and others who think they do not. It is a mixed array of information.

But if the President wants enterprise zones and the leadership is supporting the President in that regard, then let us do everything we can to make them work.

I congratulate my friends on the other side, and Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Secretary Kemp who have abandoned talk about an entitlement program. I think it would be a serious mistake to put this in the category of an entitlement with so many questions still remaining.

What we would do is put limits in at the very beginning to evaluate and study the success of these enterprise zones. Let us have the National Academy of Sciences, a nonpartisan group, evaluate it. If they are what we hope they are, if they really turn these places around with jobs and training and an improvement of the infrastructure, then let us intensify that effort in the future and continue it.

I think this enterprise zone proposal is one in which the whole Senate, including those who want more zones and those who want more revenue in the zones, can wholeheartedly support.

Mr. President, the committee modification also includes seven noncontroversial changes to the tax bill reported out last week by the Finance Committee. Five are technical. One deletes a revenue-raising provision, and one clarifies the tax treatment of farmer cooperatives.

Two technicals were inadvertently left out of the committee bill. The first clarifies a provision in the passive loss rules and is included in the House version of H.R. 11. The second technical provision correction concerns the provision that requires information reporting by parties to a seller-financed mortgage transaction. That provision was included in the chairman's markup, approved by the Finance Committee, and inadvertently left out of the statutory text of the amendment before drafting. This technical simply restores the statutory language.

Two technicals clarify the effective dates for a real estate mortgage investment conduit, and a technical provision in the earned income tax credit simplification provision.

The fifth change clarifies that veterans' benefits administered by the Department of Veterans' Affairs are tax exempt no matter when those benefits are granted.

The sixth change deletes the increase in excise tax on wagering.

And the seventh change clarifies, on a prospective basis, the tax treatment of gains and losses on the sale of assets by farmer cooperatives. The bill would allow these cooperatives to elect to treat the gains or losses as patronage source income that can be passed through to the patron owners as patronage dividends, if the assets were used by the cooperatives to facilitate business done with the patrons. That provision is necessary to give certainty to farmer cooperatives in determining the amount of patronage source dividends they must pay to patrons.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

STATEMENT OF SENATOR SASSER UNDER SECTION 9 OF THE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I hereby submit revised budget authority and outlay allocations to the Senate Committee on Finance and aggregates under section 9 of the concurrent resolution on the budget, House Concurrent Resolution 287, in connection with H.R. 11, the Revenue Act of 1992.

Sections 9 (a) and (b) of the budget resolution state:

SEC. 9. DEFICIT-NEUTRAL RESERVE FUND IN THE SENATE FOR FAMILY AND ECONOMIC SECURITY INITIATIVES IN ACCORDANCE WITH PROVISIONS OF THE SUMMIT AGREEMENT.

(a) Initiatives To Improve the Health and Nutrition of Children and To Provide for Services To Protect Children and Strengthen Families.—

(1) In general.—Budget authority and outlays may be allocated to a committee or committees for legislation that increases funding to improve the health and nutrition of children and to provide for services to protect children and strengthen families within such a committee's jurisdiction if such a committee or the committee of conference on such legislation reports such legislation, if, to the extent that the costs of such legislation are not included in this concurrent resolution on the budget, the enactment of such legislation will not increase the deficit (by virtue of either contemporaneous or previously passed deficit reduction) in this resolution for fiscal year 1993, and will not increase the total deficit for the period of fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

(2) Revised allocations.—Upon the reporting of legislation pursuant to paragraph (1), and again upon the submission of a conference report on such legislation (if a conference report is submitted), the Chairman of the Committee on the Budget of the Senate may file with the Senate appropriately revised allocations under sections 302(a) and 602(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and revised functional levels and aggregates to carry out this subsection. Such revised allocations, functional levels, and aggregates shall be considered for the purposes of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 as allocations, functional levels, and aggregates contained in this concurrent resolution on the budget.

(3) Reporting revised allocations.—The appropriate committee may report appropriately revised allocations pursuant to sections 302(b) and 602(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 to carry out this subsection.

(b) Economic Growth Initiatives.—

(1) In general.—Budget authority and outlays may be allocated to a committee or committees for legislation that increases funding for economic recovery or growth initiatives, including unemployment compensation or other, related programs within such a committee's jurisdiction if such a committee or the committee of conference on such legislation reports such legislation, if, to the extent that the costs of such legislation are not included in this concurrent resolution on the budget, the enactment of such legislation will not increase the deficit (by virtue of either contemporaneous or previously passed deficit reduction) in this resolution for fiscal year 1993, and will not increase the total deficit for the period of fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

(2) Revised allocations.—Upon the reporting of legislation pursuant to paragraph (1), and again upon the submission of a conference report on such legislation (if a conference report is submitted), the Chairman of the Committee on the Budget of the Senate may file with the Senate appropriately revised allocations under sections 302(a) and 602(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and revised functional levels and aggregates to carry out this subsection. Such revised allocations, functional levels, and aggregates shall be considered for the purposes of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 as allocations, functional levels, and aggregates contained in this concurrent resolution on the budget.

(3) Reporting revised allocations.—The appropriate committee may report appropriately revised allocations pursuant to sections 302(b) and 602(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 to carry out this subsection.

The Committee on Finance has reported H.R. 11, the Revenue Act of 1992, with a committee amendment. As reported, H.R. 11 includes, among other things, several provisions that would strengthen foster care, adoption, and child welfare services, would make improvements to the Aid to Families With Dependent Children Program, better known as AFDC, would provide comprehensive substance services to pregnant women, and would modify the earned income tax credit, which benefits families. In the words of section 9(a) of the budget resolution, these provisions would increase "funding to improve the health and nutrition of children and to provide for services to protect children and strengthen families."

As reported by the Finance Committee, H.R. 11 also includes provisions that would temporarily increase matching rates for job opportunities and training programs, would provide for employment demonstration programs, and would expand a targeted jobs wage credit. In the words of section 9(b) of the budget resolution, these provisions would increase "funding for economic recovery or growth initiatives."

H.R. 11, as reported by the Finance Committee, also meets the other requirement of sections 9 (a) and (b) of the budget resolution that "to the extent that the costs of such legislation are not included in this concurrent resolution on the budget, the enactment of such legislation will not increase the deficit—by virtue of either contemporaneous or previously passed deficit reduction—in this resolution for fiscal year 1993, and will not increase the total deficit for the period of fiscal years 1993 through 1997."

As H.R. 11 as reported complies with the conditions set forth in the budget resolution, under the authority of sections 9 (a)(2) and (b)(2) of the budget resolution, it is therefore appropriate that I file with the Senate appropriately revised budget authority and outlay allocations under sections 302(a) and 602(a) and revised functional levels and aggregates to carry out this subsection.

Note that have I twice submitted similar revisions during the past two weeks in connection with the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act, H.R. 776. Those statements appear at pages 20076 through 20078 of the Congressional Record for July 29, 1992, and page 21020 of the Congressional Record for August 3, 1992. Even though the Senate passed the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act on Thursday, July 30, 1992, Congress has not yet completed action on it. Consequently, in keeping with precedent, the Budget Committee has not yet added the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act into its estimate of the current level of budget authority, outlays and revenues.

The filing that I make today displays revised allocations and aggregates in two ways: with the estimates of the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act excluded and included. Consistent with the precedent of excluding legislation from the current level of spending and revenues until Congress has completed action, the Budget Committee will compare its estimate of the current level of spending and revenues to the revised allocations and aggregates that exclude the revisions associated with the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act until Congress completes action on that act. The allocations and aggregates excluding the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Policy Act will govern until Congress submits it to the President. The allocations and aggregates including that act will govern if and when Congress enacts both the Comprehensive National Energy Policy Act and the Revenue Act of 1992 in their current form.

With this explanation, I hereby file with the Senate appropriately revised budget authority and outlay allocations under sections 302(a) and 602(a) and revised functional levels and aggregates in connection with H.R. 11.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COOPERATIVE SALE OF ASSET AMENDMENT

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I wish to commend the chairman of the Finance Committee, the distinguished Senator from Texas, for his modification today which contains provisions to clarify the tax treatment of gain or loss resulting from the sale of an asset by a farmer cooperative. It is important to farmers and their cooperatives both in my State of Oklahoma and across the country.

Disputes between farmer cooperatives and the Internal Revenue Service over the tax treatment of gain or loss resulting from the sale of assets used by cooperatives in their patronage operations have increased in recent years. Simply put, the disputes involve whether gains or losses from such dispositions should be considered to be derived from patronage or nonpatronage sources.

The patronage/nonpatronage distinction is vital to the operation of the single tax system of subchapter T of the Internal Revenue Code. Gain from patronage sources is eligible to be distributed to patrons as a patronage dividend which is deductible to a cooperative and taxable to the patron. Of course, nonpatronage sourced income is taxable to a nonexempt agricultural cooperative whether or not it is distribution to the farmer patrons.

Agricultural cooperatives have taken different approaches toward the classification of gain or loss from the sale of assets used in the patronage operation. Some cooperatives, relying on the test used in over nine court cases, have treated this gain or loss as patronage sourced on the ground that the assets sold were directly related to or actually facilitated the marketing, purchasing, or service activities of the cooperative.

Other cooperatives have treated gain or loss from the sale of assets used in the patronage operation as nonpatronage sourced in reliance on an example in Treasury regulation section 1.1382–3(c)(2) and the IRS's administrative position that capital gain—or gain treated as capital gain under section 1231—is automatically nonpatronage sourced.

Recent court decisions have consistently applied a directly related/actually facilitates test to distinguish between patronage and nonpatronage income. In one case, a court found that gain from the disposition of a capital asset used in the patronage operation was directly related to the patronage operation and thus patronage sourced. Notwithstanding these decisions, the IRS has continued to assert deficiencies in such cases.

The position taken by the IRS in a variety of factual contexts, when considered against the applicable legal authorities as well as other IRS rulings, has created confusion and uncertainty as the proper treatment for the gain from the sale of property used or held to facilitate business done with or for patrons.

In general, this amendment recognizes that patronage-sourced income includes the gains and losses from assets used to facilitate the cooperative's conduct of business done with or for its patrons. Accordingly, this provision clarifies that gain or loss from the disposition by a farmer cooperative of any asset may be treated as patronage sourced if the farmer cooperative is able to demonstrate, as a matter of fact, that the asset was used to facilitate business done with or for its members. This provision adopts the test applied in numerous court cases and recognized by the IRS in Rev. Rul. 69-576. The amendment also allows the cooperative and its patrons to agree to a different arrangement. The provision therefore does not change present law with respect to nonelecting cooperatives. However, no inference should be drawn from this legislation that the Internal Revenue Service's interpretation of present law on this issue is correct.

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, let me just for 2 or 3 minutes tell the Senate where we are and where we are not, and what this new modification seems to us to be. Let me begin by saying I think it is a partial victory, because one of the struggles has been that we have been trying to expand the number of zones. Some have felt that 25 zones would be adequate, because they did not agree with the basic idea of enterprise zones, and they wanted to try out a few models. Well, we seem to have won that argument. We are going to go forward with approximately 125 zones.

So we are beyond the idea that it is just a small number, because we do not think enterprise zones will work. Maybe now we are winning the argument for entrepreneurial solutions.

But what is really happening here is that we have increased the zones; but how? The administration in the original Kasten proposal, the original Lieberman proposal, the original efforts we were making months ago, was not for 25, 125, 150, but 300 enterprise zones. That is where we began.

We started struggling with the revenue estimate. The Joint Tax Committee finally said it was going to be $2.5 billion, because the Finance Committee had a $2.5 billion price tag on their revenue with regard to their enterprise zone proposal for 25 zones. We have been working within that $2.5 billion and we were able, the Senator from Connecticut and I, to, by making some changes, to get 150 zones and still stay within that revenue estimate which was actually $2.498 billion.

We would not have had a point of order against us. We would have won the amendment, and we would have been successful. And I believe that is why this change has been made. Anybody here can count votes. The Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Wisconsin would have won. We would have defeated the committee position, and we would have had 150 zones at a cost of $2.498 billion.

Now we have some confusion here. We are still not at the 300 we wanted, because we now have 125 zones. How do we get those 125 zones? What within this bill has changed? No. 1, the final committee modification for the investment tax allowance. That was whereby we were going to encourage people to buy machinery in order to put people to work, and they were going to be able to get a speedup, if you will, of their depreciation. That was originally an administration proposal. I believe it was in the State of the Union Address, that this was one of the ways we could get the immediate kick we wanted, the push right away, not long term. This was first year.

All right, that has been thrown out. That was in the Finance Committee bill and has been thrown out by the committee modification, in order to go from $2.5 to $5.5 billion, which is the price tag of the present Finance Committee bill, as modified.

So we no longer are concerned, I guess, about incentives for small business, to put plant machinery into America—not just zones.

What else has the Finance Committee modification thrown out? After all of the talk about, again, the engine that was going to pull us out of the recession, about incentives that were going to make a difference right now, we have decided home building and real estate is no longer key, because the modification has knocked out that important incentive in order to get to the $5.5 billion estimate. I do not know what my friends in real estate and home building are going to say about that. They are probably just learning about it right this minute. But the modification knocked that out in order to somehow work this political solution to what was a difficult problem for the Finance Committee.

So, the modification has knocked out the investment tax allowance to help people invest in machines and equipment that are going to provide jobs, and it has also knocked out the first-time homebuyer and is no longer concerned about housing and real estate leading us out of this recession.

What have we ended up with? We have ended up with 125 zones. But what do we have in those zones? We used to have, as I understood it, an $8,000 tax credit—and the chairman referred to this a moment ago—but now that $8,000 tax credit, talking about the importance of wages and wage earners, has gone to $4,500. So we have cut that about in half, as I understand the proposal, and we are still trying to analyze it. What have we forgotten about?

It is very hard to have employment if you do not have employers. It is very hard to have jobs and wages to which you would apply a credit if you do not have people providing those jobs.

What is missing here, and has been missing in the Finance Committee proposal from the very beginning, is some kind of incentive for people to target their investment for employers to decide to put plant, machinery, and equipment into a zone, so that we could then have the wages that would then be subject to the credit.

It is pretty hard to have wages if you do not have jobs. It is pretty hard to have jobs if you do not have people putting plants, machinery, and equipment into these zones.

So we are missing the capital gains component and missing the incentives for locating the plants in the zones. We have forgotten about the employer. We are thinking about the employment or the wages, even though we reduced that.

Now, I believe that what we need are effective tax incentives, and I believe they ought to be in this bill. The capital gains provision is critical because under the static models, unfortunately, the Joint Tax Committee, and others we are working on, even under those models, the Government loses no revenues unless the zones are successful and can result in capital gains that can be realized under the finance bill, even as modified.

You pour all of these different tax drains into the zones up front before you know whether the business will even be successful. The key is you cannot have jobs without people providing the jobs. You cannot have employees without employers. And there is no incentive, either, to invest anywhere, particularly in regard to investing in the zone.

I am hopeful that we can, at this particular moment, step back, review where we stand, and see what we can get with the Lieberman-Kasten kinds of proposals now that we have a $5.5 billion number to shoot at as opposed to just $2.5 billion. I certainly do not want to give up on the first-time home buyer component. That is important. And I still believe real estate and home building can help pull us out of the recession.

I am not crazy about giving upon the 15-percent investment tax allowance, either. That is something we need and I hope we can keep in the bill. So we might not be able to have a price tag of $5.5 billion on a revised program. It might be somewhere between $2.5 and $5.5 billion.

So, yes; this is a victory. Yes; we have expanded the zones. Yes; the mayors across this country, Republican Democrat, and Independent, have had their voices heard in this body. They said they would not accept just 25 zones, and now we have won. So we can claim victory on the numbers. We can claim victory on the idea that enterprise zones will work.

But what kind of enterprise zones? And, particularly, where are the incentives to provide the jobs and produce the employment that is needed. Just to have the employment we need employers. And the key here is there is little for investing right now in plants and machinery that are going to provide those jobs.

I also wish we would not have to back up on the wage credit all the way to $4,500.

So I think we have some work today, and I see the Senator from Connecticut, the sponsor of this amendment. And we say that we have won part of this battle. Maybe even we can say we won more than half. But we have not won a number of key parts of this battle. My hope is that when we have a chance to review this modification, we can come back and see if we cannot still improve, particularly in terms of incentives for employers, incentives of people with capital to invest. Because without jobs and without job creators, we sure as heck are not going to have wages upon which we can have tax credits.

So I hope we can get off of this subject in a moment, and go on with probably an IRA amendment—I see a chart here with regard to IRA's—and come back and visit this question later.

We have won an important battle, the mayors; Republicans, and Democrats have won a battle. We have the numbers up which are part of the battle. But we still do not have incentives that we need in order to make this program as good as it can be.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DASCHLE). The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I rise to join my colleague from Wisconsin, and cosponsor of the amendment, regarding enterprise zones, and to speak just a bit about enterprise zones. And I particularly rise to thank the chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Texas, for the modification that he has made to the enterprise zone component of the urban aid bill that is before us, because I think it is significant and it certainly sets the context for the kind of bipartisan agreement that there ought to be on enterprise zones.

It is directly responsive to the needs of a lot of cities in rural areas and Indian reservations around this country, and it is responsive to the calls and pleas of so many of the mayors of our cities and smaller areas, rural areas, around the country, for just this kind of help.

Mr. President, in my opinion, enterprise zones are a concept that works. They started actually in Connecticut in this country about 10 years ago. There are now 36 States and the District of Columbia that have enterprise zones. According to numbers we put together speaking to the economic development offices of the various States and the District in that 10 years, more than $28 billion has been invested in enterprise zones, creating 258,000 new jobs.

And all that without the most significant sweetener that was contemplated when the idea was first introduced in America, and that is the Federal tax incentive. Let us remember, when it was first introduced in Congress, it was very much a bipartisan proposal, associated appropriately with then Congressman—now Secretary—Jack Kemp, but also cointroduced by Congressman Bob Garcia of New York.

As the proposal took shape within the Finance Committee in response to the troubles, the riots in Los Angeles earlier this year, I think we have made significant progress, and very significant progress in the modification proposed here.

The appeal of enterprise zones as an instrument or urban aid are that by the use of tax incentives they leverage every dollar spent—or one might say lost—in lost revenue by the Federal Government by drawing in a multiple of investments from the private sector. So that, unlike other ways in which the Federal Government can and in fact should assist cities, as opposed to a dollar's worth of service for a dollar's worth of investment, here, every time we invest a dollar in tax incentives in one of the poor areas of our country, we get back at least $3 from the investment.

That is what the experience of the last 10 years shows. And we directly help the mayors in dealing with one of their most serious problems and one of the cities' most serious problems, which is the decline of the urban tax base and the poor rural tax base. Businesses depart; they take their tax revenue with them. Cities are compelled to rely on a small tax base, and have to increase taxes very often on residential taxpayers, and too often force too many middle-class taxpayers out of the city, increasing the decline of the cities.

Second: Obviously, we hope that enterprise zones—and we have seen over the 10 years that they can and will—bring capital into the cities and create jobs for people who live there. I think the proposal, the modification, that the Senator from Texas has made significantly achieves those goals.

It is true that one of the elements that I have favored and others have favored, which is the use of a capital cost reduction, some form of a capital gains reduction, targeted for the central city, is not there. And I hope we can find a way to put it there.

But let us not overlook the fact that there are at least two very significant capital cost reduction incentives in the proposal of the committee. One, a stock expensing of 50 percent deduction, limited to $25,000 per year; $250,000 lifetime cap per taxpayer. You can put in $50,000, and deduct $25,000 right at the outset. That is going to be a tremendous incentive to move capital into companies in the poor areas. And, second, is the capital expensing equipment, expensing up to $75,000, I believe, in the last proposal.

I would like to see us go even further. I know in my home State, in New Haven, CT, we have an enterprise zone in which a lot of new startup, high-tech research oriented businesses are locating, the kind that really could attract more investment, if there was a capital gains incentive. People would be willing to put money down, hoping for a dramatic increase, if they knew that the capital gains taxes would be reduced in the end.

I want to say that I am personally grateful for the tremendous progress that has been made. I think the good news here for America's poorest cities and rural areas is that there is going to be enterprise zone legislation adopted this year, and it is going to be good legislation.

What remains is some discussion that I would consider to be effectively around the margins of the issue, to try to make it as good as we possibly can.

So I look forward to joining with my colleague from Wisconsin in a more detailed consideration of the modification that we have just been informed of.

But I really hope—understanding that this is a zero-sum, and being limited in what we can do by the revenue limitations we have and that we have to make some choices here—that we do the best we can to reach an agreement that a strong, bipartisan majority can support when it comes to enterprise zones.

And it is in that spirit that I again express my gratitude to the chairman of the Finance Committee for the substantial progress that has been made in this discussion, and for hope that it gives poor people that they are going to get some help from this Senate and Congress his year.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank the distinguished Senator from Connecticut for his comments concerning that.

When he talks about an equity approach and trying to cut the cost of capital, we certainly did that. And part of it was the Senator's recommendation that we accepted when we talked about the expensing of 50 percent of stock investments in business up to a cap of $20,000 a year and an overall cap of $200,000. That was the Senator's suggestion. We took it.

I listened to my friend from Wisconsin make his comments about how disappointed he was that we had to cut our wage credits $4,500. I looked at the wage credit in his on the earned income tax credit of $357—$4,500 to $357.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, with reference to enterprise zones, I think there obviously has been a significant change on the part of the majority and it is going to take some time to analyze.

Of course, the down side is that you get pretty much the number of zones, but you do not get the capital gains provision. To do that, you sacrifice two portions of the President's program—investment tax allowance and first-time home buyer credit, that pick up the $3 billion that was pushed into the other proposal. I might suggest it come from the millionaire IRA provision or others, but that is not what happened.

So we will have that debate later on IRAs. But it is a significant change. It is going to be some time, I think, before we can find out precisely what the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, the Senator from Connecticut, and others, who have been the leaders on enterprise zones on a bipartisan basis, wish to do.

But I hope, having said that, we could move on to other features of the bill, have a debate, and have some votes. I understand the Senator from Rhode Island is prepared to do that.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I was going to proceed with an amendment.

If the Senator from Louisiana has a short comment, I would be glad to yield, because I will be some time.

Mr. BREAUX. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BREAUX. I have some general comments that should not take too long, unrelated to any amendment.

Mr. CHAFEE. By not too long, would the Senator say 10 minutes?

Mr. BREAUX. Yes.

Mr. CHAFEE. All right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. BREAUX. I thank the Chair and I also thank my colleague from Rhode Island. I will not be that long.

I would like to talk about one very important provision of the bill.

Mr. President, all of America watched as Los Angeles burned a few months ago. A great deal of sympathy went out to the people of Los Angeles and California, because the problems that they were experiencing really were a result of a lot more factors than the Rodney King verdict.

Let us face it. The problems in Los Angeles had been brewing for a number of years. The Rodney King incident was just the culmination of a high degree of frustration that the citizens of Los Angeles were experiencing because of a number of factors, including poverty, lack of jobs, lack of training.

Mr. President, I suggest that there are a lot of Los Angeleses throughout the United States. They are not named Los Angeles, of course, but they are cities throughout this country that have the same potential problems that erupted in Los Angeles. That mass explosion of humanity resulted in the destruction of property, the death of innocent citizens, and the destruction of a lifestyle of law-abiding citizens who work hard every day, pay their taxes, pay the mortgage, and try to send their children to school.

There are a number of cities that have the same circumstances, as we saw highlighted on the floor of the Senate in the summer of 1992. These cities are just waiting for a Rodney King incident to cause an explosion of frustration and violence.

That is something that we, in America, cannot be very proud of and, in fact, have to bear the responsibility for the conditions that allow these circumstances to occur.

The legislation that the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Texas, brings to the floor today is an approach that I think addresses not the Rodney King problem per se, but the circumstances that led up to a city burning in America in 1992. The degree of frustration that we saw exhibited in those violent outbreaks I think was in a large degree, due to the frustration of these young people with a system that does not provide them the jobs and education to give them the hope and opportunity to go out into the real world and earn a decent salary in order to achieve the American dream.

The enterprise zone legislation, crafted by the Senator from Texas, brings hope. It brings opportunity. It encourages responsibility in what I think is a major effort—the first by the Congress—to address these types of social problems across the board.

I would like to speak to one particular provision of the enterprise zone proposal that I think is of major importance.

The bill is replete with tax incentives to get companies to locate where they might not locate otherwise—in enterprise zones, areas of high poverty, areas of high risk for any businessman. It is important that business does not turn their backs on these areas; that business sees an opportunity to be successful inside the central cities and in many rural areas of this country.

I know, and I think every Member would realize, that American business is not going to go locate in a different area unless there are some incentives. This legislation contains a number of tax incentives that make it profitable for these companies to locate an expansion of their business, or to locate their principal business enterprise inside one of these areas that the administration will designate under guidelines set out in this legislation.

So, there will be incentives to get the businesses to locate in these areas. But that is not enough. It is not enough for a business that makes, for instance, widgets, to locate in an enterprise zone if nobody in that zone can go to work for the widget factory because they do not know how to make widgets.

I daresay that what we saw in the Los Angeles riots; the fights, the brutality, the gangs—highlight the fact none of the members of those gangs would know how to go to work at a plant if the plant was open in that area tomorrow morning and put out a sign and said we have 500 jobs for people who want to make widgets. None of those young people, I would say, are qualified to go to work in that widget factory because they do not have the training, they do not have the background, they do not have the education.

So it is not enough to merely get a business to move its physical plant into an enterprise zone unless it is able to hire people from that area. And they can only hire people from that area if there is a training program that has taught them or will teach them how, in my example, to make widgets, and to do so with the necessary degree of productivity.

Therefore what I want to point out in the chairman's legislation is the wage credit for those businesses that locate in that zone. That wage credit is a 30 percent credit for wages that are paid to employees in that area. The definition of wages includes not only the salary that is paid to that employee in that area, but also includes any training expenses that are incurred by that employer in operating a youth training program or a youth apprenticeship program.

Mr. President, that is very significant. This is the first time in my memory that the Federal Government is involved in giving tax incentives to a business to establish a youth apprenticeship type training program.

This legislation, crafted by the chairman, will say to that company that if it hires a person who is over the age of 19 years old, that it would receive a 30 percent credit on the expenses that it incurs to send the employee to a third party for training. If that employee is under the age of 19, that company will get a 30 percent credit for the expenses that are incurred in operating a youth training program in conjunction with some local education officials.

What we are doing in this legislation for the very first time in my memory, is to encourage businesses to locate in enterprise zone areas. Everybody agrees with that. But the second ingredient is to encourage them to participate in training programs to train youngsters to work in that widget factory.

There are hundreds of thousands of young people in this country who become frustrated with high school. They sit in class with a glazed-over look in their eyes as the teacher tries to explain calculus, chemistry, physics, and complicated subjects that really have no relation to what that student is going to be doing in the real world. As a result, that bored youngster gets kicked out of school, drops out of school, or gets frustrated and leaves high school because he believes that what he is learning, or not learning, is not going to have any relation to the real world that he or she is going to live in.

This legislation would encourage employers to set up apprenticeship programs to train youngsters in the skills needed to go to work in plants that are located in their neighborhood.

I think this provision is going to give young people in this country some degree of hope and optimism. They know if they stay in school and participate in this apprenticeship program that when they get out of high school they will have two things. Number one, they will have a high school degree. But, number two, they will have a skill that allows them to go out in the real world and work for a real employer located in their neighborhood. They will have the skills to go to that employer and say: "Hire me, I can provide a service to your company."

Mr. President, I think the training incentives are key to helping distressed areas around the country. Just perhaps, this legislation with its training incentives will prevent the outcome we saw in Los Angeles, from occurring in other cities that are at the boiling point.

I commend the chairman and members of the committee. I will have more to say on some other features of the legislation at an appropriate time, and therefore yield back the floor.

ISRAELI LOAN GUARANTEES

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the White House is the ultimate hot seat.

The heat is always intense when the President makes decisions affecting the national security of the United States.

It can be even more intense when the President's decisions—taken in the American interest—are at odds with the policies or actions of a close ally.

And the temperature shoots to the boiling point when those same Presidential decisions are contrary to the strongly held views of well-organized and politically potent groups and individuals in this country.

President Bush occupies the hot seat and, in the view of this Senator, does so with wisdom, foresight and determination. When the national security of the United States is at stake, he does what he must, period.

On no issue has President Bush demonstrated this quality more vividly than on the issue of loan guarantees for Israel.

He has taken a lot of heat. He has been the target of a lot of cheap shots.

But he has stood his ground, because he believed he was doing the right thing for the United States.

And today the verdict is in—President Bush was right.

Today, the President and Israeli Prime Minister Rabin have announced agreement on a package of loan guarantees that will advance overall United States interests in the region; will encourage, rather than undermine, the peace process; will bolster, rather than undermine, those Israeli political forces most strongly inclined to seek a lasting peace.

President Bush will be meeting with the congressional leadership this afternoon, if our floor schedule permits, and will ask us to move quickly to approve the program.

This important decision was taken in the context of yesterday's announcement of a resumption of the peace talks, and the expectation that Rabin's government will bring to those talks creative new proposals that could move the process forward.

As both President Bush and Prime Minister Rabin said this morning, the decision reflects a renewed warmth in United States-Israeli relations, underscores the profound convergence of fundamental interests between our two countries, and now—with the election of Rabin—demonstrates the strong convergence of goals and views between our two governments.

President Bush deserves our commendation. He did it right—and in doing it right advanced the national interest of the United States, enhanced the long-term security of Israel, and renewed the hope for real progress toward a lasting peace in the Middle East.

ISRAELI LOAN GUARANTEES

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I would like to briefly comment on the very exciting news today from Kennebunkport that President Bush and Israel's Prime Minister, Yitzhak Rabin, announced an agreement on a loan package for Israel. This is a major breakthrough, for it signifies the validation of the President's leadership and discipline in resisting earlier loan guarantee requests without the cessation, or requirement that the President had that no loan guarantees, except there was a cessation of new settlements in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

The President's position as we all recall was roundly criticized by many in our Nation. His position is quite different from that of the present Democratic candidate for President. President Bush should be commended for taking a visionary position which has now contributed so significantly to a Mideast peace agreement. I think it is without dispute that had President Bush listened to his critics the Shamir government most likely would still be in power, the settlements would be continuing, and the peace process would be deadlocked.

Now, Mr. President, I think it is only fair—this is a political year—to note that the President's position was quite different from that of Governor Clinton regarding the loan guarantees. When Governor Clinton was asked about the subject on "CBS This Morning" he stated the guarantees should be granted unconditionally because we have a 20-year commitment to help relocate Jews from the former Soviet Union.

Mr. President, President Bush stood up to his critics. He took the many slings and arrows and today he has shown his policy was absolutely correct. So I salute him as I think we all should. The American people and millions of Arabs and Israelis alike, I believe, should rejoice that we have moved closer to a meaningful peace in the Middle East.

TAX ENTERPRISE ZONES ACT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, America has waited a long time for this moment, especially that segment of America that is quite literally the backbone of our Nation, the hard working middle class. While I cannot agree with all of the provisions in this Finance Committee legislation, I can safely say that some of the measures are necessary and long overdue. Particularly, Mr. President, I am speaking about the individual retirement account—the Bentsen-Roth Super IRA.

I don't want to take the time to outline the countless proposals adopted by this body over the last 8 to 12 years that have not only bruised but pummelled the American taxpayer. The pressure Congress—with its appetite for unbridled spending—has placed on the hardworking American family is crushing. Aside from strapping the weight of the Government on the back of the middle class, Congress has done little, if anything, for the average American family, that stable institution upon which Government depends almost entirely for its sustenance.

It's ironic. Without bleeding middle America of its resources, Government would dry up like a desert bed after a storm. On the other hand, Government does next to nothing to provide for the economic needs of this same segment of society. Today we can change that, Mr. President. Today we can do something that—as an editorial writer back home wrote this weekend—is "good for people and for the country."

Today we can give back to Americans their individual retirement accounts—a critical step for the future of our country that is long overdue—a step that I have advocated time and again, standing on this floor, suggesting that the biggest mistake Congress made in the eighties was to take away the IRA in the first place.

Restoring the individual retirement account with the Bentsen-Roth super IRA is a necessary measure to correct that mistake—a measure that is needed not only to help middle class Americans remain economically vital and self-reliant, but to strengthen America's economic future. In providing incentives for middle America to save, the Bentsen-Roth IRA has family written all over it. It is in harmony with the values that made America: thrift, hard work, sacrifice, self-reliance, and family unity.

It promotes these concepts, allowing working taxpayers to contribute up to $2,000 annually; nonworking spouses can contribute another $250, indexed for inflation in $500 increments. It is flexible, providing IRA contributors the option to select the tax deduction that best suits their needs, either when they contribute the money or when they withdraw it upon retirement. It's even possible for the taxpayers to combine their IRA's—to take half the deduction up front, when they deposit the money, and the other half later on, when they withdraw if after 5 years or more.

Likewise, Bentsen-Roth gives American families peace of mind, control over their finances by allowing IRA contributions to be withdrawn without penalty to make a downpayment on a first home, or to pay for college, or to defray catastrophic health care costs. This IRA can even be used in emergencies, after a specified period of unemployment. And this is what's so wonderful about Bentsen-Roth, Mr. President, it allows families to work together. Parents can help their children with their first-time home purchase, or college with expenses. Children can help their parents with medical costs.

Even grandparents and grandchildren can withdraw IRA funds penalty free to help one another. It's multigenerational, built on concepts that have been instrumental to the success of the American experience. I'm proud to have my name on this legislation. And Chairman BENTSEN and I are not alone in supporting it. This one proposal has 76 cosponsors in the Senate and over 250 in the House of Representatives. A clear majority.

If it doesn't pass, Mr. President, Bentsen-Roth will demonstrate a serious flaw in the dynamics of the legislative process and the inability of these two powerful deliberative bodies to provide even the most basic and necessary economic measures for the American people.

And when I say "people," I mean all Americans, not only the middle class, but even those working to join the middle class. In fact, Mr. President, along with the Bentsen-Roth Super IRA, we will also consider another IRA proposal I introduced in committee—a proposal that will allow families receiving subsidies through Aid to Families With Dependent Children to also save money for college educations.

Under current law, such responsible savings—such responsible behavior—actually penalizes our families on welfare and tragically affects their children. Once these families save over $1,000 for college, their AFDC benefits are in jeopardy. One example of a young woman in New Haven, CT, illustrates my point. Sandra Rosado, trying to break out of the welfare trap that has locked in her mother and seven brothers and sisters, worked at a local community center after school to save money for college. In all, she managed to save $4,900 toward her dream of becoming a teacher.

And how was she rewarded? A stiff penalty from the Connecticut Commissioner of Income Maintenance took away her savings and cost her mother over $9,000 in benefits because under current law the family violates the Federal AFDC eligibility rules.

This isn't how we encourage self-reliance; it's not how we inspire our children to become more than we are and to work to help them toward that end.

I have legislation that will change this, legislation that will allow families like the Rosados to save for their children's educational future without disqualifying them from Government assistance. This will be done through IRA's, and I am pleased that Chairman BENTSEN has joined me to meet this objective as well.

This is good. It will be productive, a strong step toward self-reliance and personal responsibility. Still, it does not overshadow the most important reason why I support individual retirement accounts. Quite simply, I support IRA's because right now almost half of all Americans feel ill-prepared for retirement. Bentsen-Roth will help them prepare.

Tragically, Americans aged 45 to 54 average only $2,300 in financial assets. This is bad for American families, and it's bad for America's future. For the family, this dirth of savings is especially concerning because Americans are living longer.

Statistics indicate that by the end of the century Americans will be living longer in retirement than in their working years. For the country, this lack of savings is disconcerting because our future ability to compete with nations like Japan will rely on a solid pool of savings for research and development. Investment is our key to a successful, prosperous future; savings is the key to investment. Both will result in higher paying jobs for Americans.

For those who do feel prepared for their retirement—those who already have solid savings accounts—the Bentsen-Roth Super IRA will help them become even better prepared. At its foundation, this is what our proposal is all about, providing for self-reliance and economic security in retirement. This is perhaps of greater significance for working women, who, by a large margin, feel less prepared than men to meet the financial needs of retirement.

While I believe passing Bentsen-Roth is essential for the family as well as for security in retirement, I am equally adamant about what it will do for America. Even the most conservative estimates show that Bentsen-Roth will provide $40 billion in new savings—savings as essential to the health of our economy as air is to life. There is no getting around the fact that if America is to remain first among equals in the global community, it will be done by investing in our future, by creating jobs, building homes, researching, developing, and providing educations that are second to none.

If we are to progress in these areas we can no longer afford to penalize savings; we must encourage the growth of capital. This will continue to bring down interest rates and encourage investment.

One study, by the well-respected Lewin/ICF, shows that Bentsen-Roth will have a positive and immediate affect on interest rates. Another study by DRI/McGraw Hill, shows that the Bentsen-Roth IRA will stimulate the economy in the short-run without the "Treasury seeing a measurable impact on the deficit." By 1996, it is estimated that the change in real GNP will be about an $80 billion increase, housing starts will go up by almost 50,000 a year, and over 1 million new jobs will be created.

Another study even estimates that GNP will increase by $447.2 billion by the year 2000, and $12.6 billion in new revenue will result from increased economic growth, bringing with it increased tax revenues.

Mr. President, America cannot afford to let this opportunity pass. Besides the positive affect Bentsen-Roth will have on the economy, beyond the strong statement it makes in support of the American family and the self-reliance it will promote, Bentsen-Roth will prove that when it comes to doing what must be done, Congress can work; both sides of the aisle can come together, setting politics aside, to promote pro-growth, pro-family, pro-America initiatives. The Bentsen-Roth Super IRA must be passed.

With the support it already has in both Chambers of Congress, and the need we have to once again return to supporting those who support Government, there is no reason why Bentsen-Roth cannot be passed.

AMENDMENT NO. 2933

(Purpose: Striking the IRA provisions)

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. CHAFEE], for himself and Mr. DURENBERGER, proposes an amendment numbered 2933.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 875, beginning with line 13, strike all through page 885, line 16, and insert:

PART I—IRA DEDUCTION

SEC. 202. INFLATION ADJUSTMENT FOR DEDUCTIBLE AMOUNT.

(a) In General.—Section 219 is amended by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (i) and by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) Cost-of-Living Adjustments.—

"(1) In general.—If the cost-of-living amount for any calendar year is equal to or greater than $500, then each applicable dollar amount (as previously adjusted under this subsection) for any taxable year beginning in any subsequent calendar year shall be increased by $500.

"(2) Cost-of-living amount.—The cost-of-living amount for any calendar year is the excess (if any) of—

"(A) $2,000, increased by the cost-of-living adjustment for such calendar year, over

"(B) the applicable dollar amount in effect under subsection (b)(1)(A) for taxable years beginning in such calendar year.

"(3) Cost-of-living adjustment.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) In general.—The cost-of-living adjustment for any calendar year is the percentage (if any) by which—

"(i) the CPI for such calendar year, exceeds

"(ii) the CPI for 1991.

"(B) CPI for any calendar year.—The CPI for any calendar year shall be determined in the same manner as under section 1(f)(4).

"(4) Applicable dollar amount.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'applicable dollar amount' means the dollar amount in effect under any of the following provisions:

"(A) Subsection (b)(1)(A).

"(B) Subsection (c)(2)(A)(i).

"(C) The last sentence of subsection (c)(2)."

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 408(a)(1) is amended by striking "in excess of $2,000 on behalf of any individual" and inserting "on behalf of any individual in excess of the amount in effect for such taxable year under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(2) Section 408(b)(2)(B) is amended by striking "$2,000" and inserting "the dollar amount in effect under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(3) Section 408(j) is amended by striking "$2,000".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 2003. COORDINATION OF IRA DEDUCTION LIMIT WITH ELECTIVE DEFERRAL LIMIT.

(a) In General.—Section 219(b) (relating to maximum amount of deduction) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) Coordination with elective deferral limit.—The amount determined under paragraph (1) or subsection (c)(2) with respect to any individual for any taxable year shall not exceed the exess (if any) of—

"(A) the maximum amount of elective deferrals of the individual which are excludable from gross income for the taxable year under section 402(g)(1), over

"(B) the amount so excluded."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 219(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Cross reference.—

"For reduction in paragraph (2) amount, see subsection (b)(4)."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.

On page 893, line 7, strike "2011(b)" and insert "2021(c)".

On page 893, line 9, strike "(9)" and insert "(8)".

On page 893, lines 13 and 14, strike "(other than a special individual retirement account)".

On page 894, strike lines 19 through 21.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, this amendment is very simple. What it does is to strike that part of the committee amendment which restores fully deductible IRA's, and creates the new special IRA's. In this, my amendment, we do retain the penalty-free withdrawals from existing IRA's for education, for first-time home buyers, for medical expenses, et cetera.

The chairman of the committee has proposed to provide greater access to individual retirement accounts in the hope that this will encourage more people to save, thereby improving our Nation's very low savings rate.

Let me say that I share the chairman's concern over the low level of saving that exists in our Nation. Americans save a significantly lower portion of their incomes than do their counterparts in many of our major trading partners. This low level of private savings hampers our ability to make the necessary investments to remain competitive in the world economy. To make matters worse, the Federal Government is running record budget deficits, pushing our national saving rate even lower.

However, I am skeptical that expanding IRA's will improve personal savings. I do not think this proposal will work for two principal reasons.

First, evidence based upon the expansion of IRA's from 1982 to 1986—Mr. President that was the period in which we changed the law in 1981 allowing, starting in 1982, a very considerable expansion of IRA's.

The evidence, based upon that expansion from 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, and 1986, is inconclusive.

Second, whatever gains we may make in improving private savings will be fully offset by decreased public savings, public savings being the deficit.

Let me explain, first, why I do not think expanded IRA's will have much effect on private savings. I think it is important that everybody realize what the current law is, what can be done.

Before these amendments, the existing law in the Nation is that fully deductible IRA's, $2,000 fully deductible, are currently available for single taxpayers with incomes up to $25,000, or families with income up to $40,000, and by fully deductible, I mean the $2,000 is all deductible.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that in 1990, four out of five families, 80 percent of families in the United States of America, were able to contribute to an IRA and take the full deduction, full advantage, of the total tax deduction—80 percent of the families in the United States of America.

Mr. President, this figure would be even greater if you included those American families who are able to contribute to an IRA and take a partial deduction, because the way it works is, as a family you can take the $2,000 deduction up to $40,000 income, and then you can take a partial deduction up to $50,000. In other words, your income is $45,000; you can take $1,000 deduction, partial, not the total.

So if you include those families, then even more than 80 percent of the families would be able to take advantage of some part of the IRA deduction.

So, Mr. President, the chairman's proposal to expand existing IRA's will have no impact on the majority of Americans since most, as I say, can already take advantage of this tax break.

Let me reemphasize. More than 80 percent of all taxpayers with earned incomes can currently contribute to the IRA, take a tax deduction and defer savings on the earnings to the account until the money is withdrawn.

That is what an IRA is, Mr. President. You contribute $2,000, you deduct it from your income, you put it in there, it appreciates with either appreciation or interest. There is no tax to the individual during that period and when the money is taken out at age 72 or earlier under one of the circumstances I previously mentioned, that is when the tax is paid.

So, Mr. President, this represents a significant savings incentive that already exists for an overwhelming number of American families and individuals.

So the chairman's proposal is directed to relatively few families. What the chairman has proposed is everybody be able to do this, and mostly, upper-income families that currently cannot take an income deduction for contributions.

Some call this a millionaire's IRA. Certainly it is a bonanza for millionaires, no question about it. Everybody, the richest person in the country, will be able to put the $2,000 in and get the deduction.

Mr. President, I think it is important to remember that families who will benefit from this proposal are now only precluded from taking the deduction. In other words, even now the rich families can put in the $2,000. It is not a deduction at the time. But the appreciation, the interest, the growth in the account is not taxable to that individual while it is incurring.

So there already exists considerable incentive for an individual at the upper-income brackets to go ahead and put money in. No other way can he put money in some kind of an account and have the interest or appreciation completely deferred.

Economists have studied whether savings incentives, such as IRA's, are effective at encouraging families to save more. This is the nub of the problem, Mr. President. Results from these studies: Do IRA's promote more savings in the United States of America? The studies are inconclusive.

Some economists have come to the conclusion that they do have a positive effect on savings. Several of us, such as Jane Gravelle with the Congressional Research Service, in a 1989 report have concluded: "The evidence does not support the contention that IRA's increase savings."

Obviously, there are a number of factors that go into a family's decision to spend or to save, and tax incentives is just one of these factors.

I do think, Mr. President, we can look to past experience to gain an insight as to how these savings incentives might work. When originally enacted, IRA's were only available to those workers who had no access to an employer-provided retirement plan. That is how these things came about.

Most of us remember this was the era when Keogh plans were developed, other savings programs, for those individuals who might be self-employed or working in an organization that had no retirement plan. We had to do something for those folks. And so the Keogh and the IRA's were developed. At that time, it was available only to those workers who had no access to an employer-provided retirement plan.

However, the law was changed, as I mentioned, in 1981 and starting in 1982, up through 1986, IRA's were available to all taxpayers, just as the chairman's proposal would do—all taxpayers, providing they had earned income.

So what happened to the savings rate?

Mr. President, here is a chart. As you note, the red on the chart is here that the law was changed; as you note, before the law was changed, the investment in IRA's. In other words, up to here, only those who did not have an employer-provided retirement plan could use an IRA.

And so here was the percentage—these are percentages—personal savings as a share of disposable personal income. These are the percentages on the side for the Nation. That, it seems to me, is a significant factor.

Is it doing any good? We see in 1982 it was about 7 percent. In 1981, 7.5 percent. So we changed the law. Somehow this is going to encourage savings. And what happened? It came down, as you can see, in a very steady fashion until 1986.

Here is where individuals can put them in. We changed the law to make them accessible to more individuals, anybody, a millionaire, anybody could come in, just like the proposed law, and noticed the savings rate dropped over 7 percent down to a little over 4 percent.

In 1986, we changed the law again. We went through the tax reform measures, you will recall. We said why should we permit these individuals, many of them have pension plans available, why should they be able to have an IRA?

Our objective, you will recall, Mr. President, was to reduce the rates, the overall rates, and we did bring them down, and we changed the law in 1986. The immediate effect was the next year the savings rate was lower, but then it built up again, and so here we are coming upward until currently it is about 4.5 percent.

Mr. President, now the suggestion is that we go back to the days when everybody could take advantage of it. That is nice. I think everybody in the audience, everybody in the Senate, whose incomes are fairly substantial and who all have advantage currently of pension plans are saying this is nice. But what is it going to do to the country? Let us take a look.

As you can see in this chart, the Department of Commerce data shows that personal savings as a percentage of disposable income fell, as I mentioned, from 7.5 percent in 1981 when IRA's were limited to 4.4 percent in 1985 when they were expanded.

So clearly it did not do any good. This occurred despite the fact that a record $38 billion was contributed to IRA's.

Now, Mr. President, this chart shows all savings. We will get perhaps some dramatic charts showing what happened to IRA's. IRA's are just a part of savings. Individual savings accounts obviously are included in here. The charts we have will show how the IRA's shot up, and indeed they did because what a break it was. If you had your money in a savings account, it was taxable; the buildup was taxable, taxable every year. But if you had it in an IRA, no tax. So what we had was not a growth in net savings, and indeed a decline in net savings took place; we had a shift in savings and that clearly did not do the Nation any good.

So as I say, proponents of the chairman's proposal will claim that IRA's were effective at increasing personal savings because $170 billion was invested in IRA's during this period between 1982 and 1987. They are right. It was a bonanza. All that indicates, Mr. President, is that IRA marketeers were successful in pointing out the very significant tax advantages these savings accounts provided.

Of course, you can see, despite the fact there was a shift, the overall trend was downward.

Now, Mr. President, the second reason I am concerned about expanding IRA's is it results in a tremendous loss for the Federal Government. The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that expanding existing IRA's to all taxpayers will cost $12.6 billion over the next 5 years—$12.6 billion.

I have indicated I am convinced that expanding IRA's will not encourage more people to increase their savings. Yes; it will encourage more people to put them in IRA's but the overall increase in savings will not take place in our Nation.

Mr. President, I am concerned about the effect of the revenue loss that I just mentioned—$12.6 billion. That is a gross figure. Now, it will be pointed out that the net figure for the loss during that time is only $5.8 billion.

What is the difference? I say $12.6—$12.5. Let us make it simple. The opposition will say, oh, no, the loss is a little less than $6 billion. The difference is that because of another feature they have in here, there will be an immediate, swift, rapid payment to the Government as people shift their money out of certain accounts, pay a tax, and that will be to the benefit of the Federal Government during this 5-year period. The trouble is, Mr. President, that at the end of the 5-year period the deluge comes, and I will point that out in just a minute.

Total savings involve not only private savings, that is, what individuals do, and businesses, but public savings represented by local, State, and Federal Government surpluses or deficits. When we decrease Federal tax receipts, thereby increasing the budget deficit, we directly reduce our total savings rate.

The committee's proposal does guarantee increased savings and the tax benefits under the proposal will go to anyone who invests in an IRA even if the money comes from an existing savings account. The point is there is nothing that guarantees this will be new savings. This is just a shifting around of money.

The high cost of IRA's reflects the fact that taxpayers will take advantage of a tax favored investment. It does not take any rocket scientist, Mr. President—and the American people are very, very smart when it comes to handling their money. If they see something that is tax free, they will take their money out of something that is taxable, a savings account, and shift it.

That is why tax shelters were so prevalent. That is why we had the tax reform bill of 1986.

Many of the beneficiaries of this proposal will simply take $2,000 a year out of an existing savings account and put it in IRA's so they will get a benefit of the tax deduction. This is certainly one plausible explanation for the decrease in the savings as I mentioned previously.

All of the taxpayers—and I want to say this once again—all of the taxpayers who benefit from this position, the position suggested by the chairman, all of them currently can have a tax benefit now. True, richer ones have to use the after-tax money, the after-tax $2,000, but once it is in the account the buildup is tax free.

Now, Mr. President, that is part of the program. This splits in two, the suggestion the chairman has in this legislation—it is not a suggestion. It is in. One is this proposal that everybody—you might call it the millionaire's IRA section. Everybody can take advantage of the $2,000 deduction.

But now we go on to an even more questionable position, and this is the creation of what are called special IRA's. This IRA does the following: An individual foregoes the immediate tax deduction in favor of an even bigger benefit. All income earned under this new IRA is not only tax free while it is being built up, it is tax free when it comes out.

Here is a situation, Mr. President, Mr. President. Anybody in the Nation, no matter how rich, can put $2,000 a year aside in an account. This is after taxes. It is not a deduction. And then at the end of 5 years—I do not know why it is an IRA. In IRA, "R" stands for retirement. There is no retirement involved in this. You just wait 5 years. I think this violates the truth-in-labeling law by calling it an IRA. It has nothing to do with retirement. At the end of 5 years, you can take out all the buildup, all the money, tax free.

So let us take this case. Suppose you put in $2,000 a year for 5 years. You have $10,000 in there. And then you keep putting in $2,000 per year up to 10 years. You can take out the first $10,000 you put in plus all the appreciation. Let us say you put it in Coca Cola and it doubles. You can take that all out tax free. Who has ever heard of a bonanza like this? The thing that astonishes me, some people in this Chamber have worries about cutting the capital gains rate. This is cutting the capital gains rate to zero, no tax.

Mr. ROTH. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CHAFEE. Sure. I do not want my thought interrupted too much. I do not want a long dialog, but I will yield for a question.

Mr. ROTH. As the Senator knows, as he himself proposed a 7-year family savings plan, what this so-called new IRA does is follow through on the recommendations of the President. But my question to the Senator is this. Last year when I first introduced the back-ended IRA, I proposed that the funds could only be withdrawn without penalty at the age 59½ with certain limitations. If we withdrew this 5-year provision, would that satisfy the Honorable Senator from Rhode Island as to the viability of IRA's?

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, my problem is I just do not know what the effect is on the deficit. I must say, any proposal that is totally tax free—the withdrawal of the buildup is totally tax free—gives me a lot of difficulty. So I do not know what the consequences are.

As the distinguished Senator from Delaware well knows, we are not able to get estimates from the Joint Tax Committee on revenue effects beyond the 5-year period. So on this measure—if I can call it the Roth provision, or the back-ended IRA, or the special IRA—we have not been able to get exact cost-figure estimates. All of these are estimates on what this will cost, because nothing happens during the first 5 years. The tax consequences are zero, in effect, in the first 5 years because, as I pointed out, it is not deductible. It is an after-tax $2,000 that goes in; the buildup is tax free, as it would be in any IRA.

You could do that right now. Under the law you can put $2,000 in, after-tax dollars, and the buildup is tax free. But under this provision, at the end of 5 years, you can take out all the appreciation with no tax whatsoever.

I must say, I am shocked by that, at the end of 5 years, that that can occur.

So, Mr. President, there we have it. A tremendous expansion of IRA's; the first that says anybody can use an IRA. It just obliterates what we did in the 1986 Tax Code, where we restricted IRA's to those who had either no pension plans, or fell within the $25,000 for an individual or $40,000 for a family.

Then, the other portion, which we call the back-loaded IRA's, or the special IRA's, provides that you put the money in after taxes and the buildup is tax free, and tax free when it comes out.

Mr. President, perhaps the Senator from Delaware can correct me on this. But as I understand this proposal, that there is a further provision that if your money is currently in an IRA, where you have put it in, taking the deduction, and it is built up—let us say you have $40,000 in an IRA. As I understand it, an individual can take the entire $40,000 out and pay tax on it; or, as I understand it, you do not even have to pay tax on it at all. You pay one-quarter of the tax, and you spread the tax over 4 years. And you put the $40,000, or what is left after the deduction of the first year's taxes, back into the special IRA.

So you have this. It is not just some simple thing of somebody having $2,000. And people can dismiss that: Oh, well, that is not much. How many millionaires are going to fool around with $2,000? As I understand this proposal—I am prepared to be corrected—if you have an IRA built up over the years, you can take it all out and pay the tax. And, as I understand, you only pay the tax over 4 years, and put that money back into the special IRA, where you get this tremendous buildup. I would think millionaires would think that was splendid.

What is this going to cost the Nation? The best estimate that we have been able to get from the Congressional Budget Office was that it was estimated as a long-term revenue loss on a simple proposal offered by the administration. As the distinguished Senator from Delaware has pointed out, that could be as high as $17 billion a year. That is serious money, Mr. President: $17 billion a year that this is going to cost.

Mr. President, what is taking place here? We have completely lost the rationale for the creation of these instruments. As I mentioned, they were originally designed to take care of those citizens who did not have a retirement plan.

I can remember when I was practicing law as an individual, and along came the Keogh. I thought that was wonderful, because as an individual practitioner, I could put some money aside in a Keogh, and the IRA was the same thing. But that is wrong.

Under the chairman's provision, the first part of this says you do not have to wait; no matter that you have a wonderful plan. I mean, these people who are millionaires and these big executives can all use this. They can all put $2,000 aside. I do not know why we give them this advantage because, as I have said several times, they can already put $2,000 aside. But the difference is it is after tax. This lets them deduct it and have all the buildup.

Then, we come from that with the back-loaded one, where they have a choice. So they pay taxes on it and put it in. The buildup is free. Everybody recognizes that. That is true now. But when they take it out, the appreciation, there is not one nickel of tax. I wonder if that shocks everybody here as much as it does me?

Here we are, worrying about millionaries getting away with a pretty easy situation. And this is a great giveaway program for them.

As I say, it has nothing to do with retirement, because at the end of 5 years, one can take it.

So, Mr. President, we are abandoning the Tax Reform Act of 1986; we are abandoning the thought of these accounts being for retirement; and, once again, we are creating some tax shelters. They are not shelters for the purpose of encouraging retirement. There is no requirement that anything be involved with the retirement here. The only requirement that must be met to receive the zero tax rate is that the money be held in the account for 5 years.

Mr. President, I do not know who can defend spending this $5.8 billion—that is a net figure, every year, under the first part of this; and then, the outyear program is going to cost $17 billion a year—when we are facing, this Nation is facing these horrible deficits of over $300 billion a year.

So, Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. I think we are treating the wealthy pretty well in this Nation right now. I do not think we have to give them any bonanzas like this.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, America has waited a long time for this moment. I believe that the enactment of the Bentsen-Roth IRA is without question one of the most significant steps that can be taken in the interest of this Nation, and in the interest of the American family.

Almost without exception, every economist will tell you that the most important thing this country can do for its long-term future is to promote savings. It is a fact that American savings is far below that of most other Western countries, including Japan, Germany, and Canada. In the case of Canada, for many years, our savings rates paralleled each other, until Canada improved its rate of incentive for savings and the United States backed out.

When that happened, Canada began saving far in excess of what this country is currently saving. Why is that important? Savings are important because it provides us with the capital, with the funds, to invest in new plants and equipment.

The most important problem this Nation faces is becoming competitive in this emerging global competition. If we are going to be competitive in this emerging global competition, it means that our workers, our people, must have the most up-to-date, modern facilities that incorporate the latest technology.

It is a fact that Japan has spent trillions of dollars in the last few years just to ensure that their facilities are among, if not the most modern in the world. If we are going to have jobs, meaningful jobs for our young people, for our blue-collar workers, for all Americans, it is critically important that we have the most modern facilities in the world. And that cannot be accomplished unless this country begins to save more.

I was interested when the Chairman of the Federal Reserve came before us, and I pressed him on the question of savings, and he said, yes, savings were critically important to our long-term growth. And he also agreed that IRA's were worth trying as a means of improving savings. So that is point No. 1.

IRA's are good for the Nation, because it promotes savings, and savings help make us competitive. But it is also good for the family. It is important to understand that the typical American by the end of this century will live in retirement as long as he or she will live in his or her working years. So it is important that we provide incentives that enable the typical American to begin saving for that long period of retirement.

The fact is, this is not a program for the millionaire, as my distinguished colleague from Rhode Island claimed. It is a proposal to promote savings for all Americans. The fact is that a single person loses his IRA, or it is phased out at $25,000. In the case of a married couple, the IRA is currently phased out at $40,000. Are we saying that a single person who makes $30,000 is a millionaire, or is rich? I do not think so. But what we are trying to do with the Bentsen-Roth IRA is to provide the incentive for people to begin savings.

Why was this put in this 5-year proposal? Well, as I said, it was in recognition that the President contained that proposal in his budget statement. And the reason the President proposed it is that it was felt that it would encourage the young people to save. The one group that tends to save the least is the younger generation. Many people felt that if you require them to retain the funds until age 59½, there was not sufficient incentive to get them to save. That was the reason the 5-year proposal was included in this legislation.

As I said, as far as I am concerned, if the distinguished Senator would support the legislation, I would be personally happy to withdraw it. But it does serve a certain purpose.

Mr. President, the fact shows that in 1986 when the IRA was modified and made not available to many Americans, there was a drop in IRA contributions of $24 billion, or 67 percent. A third of the decline, or $8 billion, came from taxpayers with incomes below $15,000 a year. We are not talking about wealthy people, rich people; we are talking about middle America, and we are trying to help every American family to prepare for the future.

The claim has been made that what happened in the IRA was that savers just shuffled funds from other savings. Again, careful studies have been made and just the opposite has been shown.

No. 1, the typical American family has roughly $1,000 to $6,000 in liquid assets. So the typical American family does not have many funds to shift over the IRA's. As a matter of fact, several careful studies made by economists who initially were of the other school, who believed that IRA's did not result in new savings, came to the opposite conclusion after making a careful examination of the facts.

The fact is that Americans were not shifting from there savings. Not only were they not shifting from other savings, but the fact is that, at the same time they were putting new funds into IRA's, they were continuing and, in many cases, even increasing their contributions to other types of savings.

So the facts do not bear out the charge that IRA's have not resulted in new savings. Persons, as I say, who contribute to an IRA or a Keogh do not appear to have reduced their assets any more than persons who did not have an IRA or Keogh. IRA's were also found not to have been financed by borrowing.

Mr. President, I think it is important to understand that two-thirds of the beneficiaries of IRA deductions were middle or lower income. Of the more than 15 million tax returns with IRA contributions, over 10.5 million, or 66.9 percent, were of families or individuals with adjusted gross incomes of less than $50,000. These returns showed that 58 percent of the total dollars were contributed to IRA's.

Both the number of contributors to IRA's and the level of contributors increased substantially after eligibility was expanded in 1982, and they fell sharply after that eligibility was limited in 1987.

Mr. President, I think it is important to recognize again that the creation of an IRA for all Americans is indeed a very, very important step for the future welfare and growth of this Nation. It is important equally for the welfare of the typical American family. Americans, as I said, are living longer and longer. They are not currently able to meet their needs.

I do not think there are many that would argue that. The IRA does provide a new approach that is both good for the family and good for the Nation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, first of all I commend our colleague from Delaware for his statement and the Senator from Texas for including this provision in this tax bill.

In 1986, I offered the amendment to retain preexisting treatment of IRA's and I lost that vote in this Chamber by a margin of three votes. I remember very well that that debate went on for a number of hours. The central question was whether or not the IRA's were worthwhile.

The Senator from Delaware is absolutely correct that the major argument raised during that debate was the contention that IRA's do not generate any new savings, but draw savings away from other important financial investments in the country.

Mr. President, we did not have the advantage during that debate in 1986 of an important study conducted by Merrill Lynch. That study found that IRA's, so long as all were allowed the full deduction, generated totally new savings in this country, on the order of some $137.8 billion. The study also found that IRA's did no damage whatsoever to other types of savings that were occurring simultaneously in this country.

One point needs to be made and emphasized here. We can have study after study. Lord knows, if you want to find an economist to support your particular point of view, it is not terribly difficult to do. But I think most people in this country agree that one of the most troubling economic problems we have is our very low savings rate. The United States regretfully has one of the lowest personal savings rates of any of the industrialized nations in the world. It is a third of that of Germany and a quarter of that of Japan.

The low savings rate means that too much of our budget deficit is financed by foreign dollars—dollars that investors can choose to withdraw, of course, almost at will. It also means that funds needed to invest in new businesses, and expand existing businesses are too costly. It means that too many people have insufficient savings to meet an emergency and plan for their children's education.

Mr. President, this is a problem that we can and must do something about, and this legislation does it. Ironically, the one proven vehicle for increasing savings, individual retirement accounts, was hobbled, as I mentioned earlier, by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. As I noted earlier, a study sponsored by Merrill Lynch titled "Save, America" estimated that between 1982 and 1986, $137.8 billion in new savings were generated by the IRA's.

Mr. President, we all understand the importance of savings to capital formation, a major concern in this country to assure our future standards of living and global competitiveness. As the "Save, America" study done by Merrill Lynch clearly states: "Savings invested in productive assets increases the capital stock, which in turn results in greater amounts of output and income."

Not surprisingly, as a Fortune magazine article entitled "How Capital Costs Cripple America" points out, "Like all prices, the price of capital is a matter of supply and demand, with the puny supply of U.S. savings guaranteeing that the price will be high." How high? A 1986 study of capital costs by economists B. Douglas Bernheim of Northwestern and John B. Shoven of Stanford reveals that throughout the 1980's the United States has borne the highest cost of capital of the leading industrialized nations, nearly twice that of Japan.

Capital formation is particularly important at a time when we still have not tamed the budget deficit. Despite the promises of supply side economics, our savings rate continues to decline, from 8.7 percent of GNP between 1971 and 1975, to 6.2 percent between 1981 and 1985, to 4 percent between 1985 and 1988. The "Save, America" study points out the importance of this decline by noting "a 2.5-percent increase in the personal savings rate could add roughly 10 percentage points to the GNP or $500 billion in terms of today's economy."

Let me address some of the questions our distinguished friend from Rhode Island raised about the IRA's and our experience with it. The first question raised was, "Wasn't the IRA tax deduction in effect during the decline in saving during the 1980's?" The answer is: Yes, it was. But as Michael Boskin wrote in "A Closer Look at Recent U.S. Saving", "There is a substantial reason to believe that the saving rate would still be lower had universal IRA accounts not been instituted." His conclusion is supported by several other recent studies, including one by David Venti and Steven Wise, "The Evidence on IRA's," published in January, 3 years ago. That study concluded that "IRA's have had a substantial positive net effect on personal savings." The authors of that study found that 80 percent of IRA contributions were new savings; with more than one-half of each marginal IRA dollar coming from reduced consumption and another 20 to 30 percent from reduced taxes.

A second question often raised is, "Aren't IRA's a rich person's gimmick?" This is one we hear quite often. Obviously wealthy people potentially have more money to save; however, the data show that IRA's were used predominantly by moderate- and middle-income people. IRS statistics show that for 1986, fully two-thirds of all taxpayers claiming an IRA deduction were families with incomes under $50,000 a year. Moreover, those returns accounted for almost 60 percent of the payments to IRA's.

The changing demographics of our society also create an imperative for increased private retirement savings. Obviously as people live longer, they will need more resources. In addition, many baby boomers will be unable to accrue significant benefits under private retirement plans because today's increased job mobility will result in them not staying in pension plans long enough for their benefits to vest.

However, many people cannot afford to tie up their money until they retire. They have other more immediate concerns: The potential devastation of a serious illness; a job loss; or a need to put money aside for children's college education. Therefore, this IRA proposal, recognizing the difficulty of buying a home, recognizing the high cost of higher education, and recognizing the financial burdens of a devastating medical crisis that can occur, allows for penalty-free early withdrawal of these funds.

Let me point out as well, and I think we have discovered this just back and talking with our constituencies, that IRA's are tax driven. Go and talk to most middle-income people in our respective States and what you will find is most people take out IRA's between January 1 and May 15, as they calculate their taxes for the previous year. Most average income earners in this country do not have the advantages of passive losses, depreciation, rental properties, and a lot of other things. The IRA was a tax break that was attractive to these hard working middle-income people. It allowed them to lower their tax obligations and put resources that would otherwise have been expended into their personal savings accounts.

Mr. President, one can point out in any piece of legislation improvements he or she might make or to narrow them somewhat. But on the whole, I think the evidence from when the tax treatment of IRA's was more favorable is pretty strong that they were worthwhile.

Last, let me point out that consumer debt continues to rise. More and more people are in bankruptcy. A lot of this is due to the recession but, nonetheless, for whatever the reason, there are an awful lot of people engaging in consumer buying with plastic and incurring considerable debt.

We need to change those trend lines. We need to encourage more savings and less consumer debt, and to encourage more economic stability and empowerment for people. I am not going to suggest that the IRA proposal in this bill is the total panacea for all of that, but clearly anything that we can do to encourage savings is in our interest.

We need to establish the fact that Americans are not genetically incapable of saving. They were certainly not incapable when IRA's were in place. To strike the IRA provisions entirely from the legislation would do great damage to a very worthwhile proposal, one that will go a long way in pushing this country toward economic recovery.

With all due respect to my good friend from Rhode Island, for whom I have the highest regard, I think the chairman of the committee has done an excellent job with this proposal. It deserves broad-based support, and I hope that any amendments to erode this particular IRA provision or to strike it would be defeated.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, while the distinguished Senator from Connecticut is still on the floor, I wonder if he would be good enough to answer a couple of questions that I might have.

I would like to ask the Senator from Connecticut if he is conscious of the second portion of this IRA proposal, the so-called back loaded provision, if you would.

Is he aware it is not the normal IRA that you are familiar with, where you can contribute and thus take a deduction? The so-called back-loaded provision, in the best estimates that we can get, will cost $17 billion of lost revenue a year.

Let me just describe it, and perhaps the Senator is familiar with it. The so-called back-loaded provision permits anyone, regardless of income, to put into an IRA after taxes, $2,000 per year. The buildup is tax free. And when one comes to take the money out, which can be as early as 5 years, the total proceeds are tax free, not just the contribution you originally made but the total appreciation, dividends, interest, whatever it might be.

Is the Senator familiar with that provision?

Mr. DODD. I am familiar with that. As I mentioned earlier there are some elements that one might have written differently. For example, the 5-year period is a legitimate point to raise.

But it seems to me that on the whole, encouraging people to put dollars aside with the limitations that are included in this legislation helps create the kind of capital that I think is in our interest as a Nation to encourage.

Now, my colleague from Rhode Island talks about the net loss to the Treasury as a result of back loading—and I am not going to argue with my colleague about that number—about the $17 billion. But I would say that the net benefit of encouraging savings seems to me to outweigh the economic loss even if the Senator from Rhode Island is correct.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I would say this. Every economist that comes before the Finance Committee, as the Presiding Officer knows so well, says that the single, greatest deterrent to investment, to the cost of capital in the United States of America, is the deficits, the Federal deficits. And so when we do something that results in a substantial increase in those deficits, we are harming the very area that the distinguished Senator from Connecticut expressed concern over; namely, lack of investment in our Nation and the cost of capital.

The cost of capital is driven, I think there is no argument against this, the cost of capital in the United States is driven by these horrible deficits, and the U.S. Government being out there competing for whatever money that can be borrowed, thus driving up the interest rates and driving up the cost of capital.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield on that point, I think all of us would agree that the mounting deficit is a serious problem and has to be addressed. But it is not the only problem that we face in this country. I think you will also find that most economists, when they recite the litany of what things we ought to be doing, will add that the savings rate is something that has to be improved in this country to achieve economic stability and long-term economic growth.

So I do not disagree with him about the deficit issue, but it is not the only problem we face. Savings rates also need to improved.

I would point out—and I am sure my colleague is aware of this—but the average IRA of a person with an income of $20,000 was, as I recall, around $1,800 which is a pretty substantial IRA for someone in that income level. If we can encourage people at that income level to save, that is in the interest of this country. That is an individual and a family that is contributing to their long-term economic stability. And that is very much in the interest of this country.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I notice others wish to speak. I would merely point out to the Senator from Connecticut—and I am sure he is conscious of this—that already we have tremendous incentives for individuals to invest in IRA's. The buildup is tax free.

If you are in the income bracket the Senator from Connecticut was talking about, there is a deduction available. After all, that is pretty nice, plus we have these added features that I have not changed in my amendment which would permit individuals to withdraw from an IRA—IRA standing for retirement. But we have done away with that under the proposal, so an individual can withdraw for education, health expenses, first-time home buying and so forth.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MIKULSKI). The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. BRADLEY. Madam President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island. I think it is an important debate that we have to have, and I think it will be increasingly important as this bill matures toward passage in September and as we think about the budget deficit in the next Congress.

First, let me begin by stating what is probably obvious to most people in this body, and that is there are about 114 million taxpayers in America, and that number of Federal taxpayers far exceeds the number of voters in any Presidential election.

The fact of the matter is that the tax system reaches out and touches many millions more than ever choose to exercise their right to vote and, therefore, it is clearly one of the elements of our democracy that affects more people than any other.

The next question is, who are the taxpayers?

So often we have a debate in the Senate about a provision that affects a very small number of taxpayers. And often that number is at the upper-income level. We spend a great deal of time debating provisions that affect a percent, 2 percent, a half of 1 percent of the taxpayers and not a whole lot of time talking about the issues that affect all 114 million taxpayers.

So, for the benefit of the Senate, let us make a quick review of who pays taxes in this country and what their incomes are: 30 percent of all taxpayers earn under $10,000 in America—30 percent earn under $10,000. About 43 percent of all taxpayers earn between $10,000 and $40,000. So fully 73 percent of all taxpayers in America earn under $40,000.

About 9 percent are in between $40,000 and $50,000, about 13 percent between $50,000 and $70,000, and about 5 percent above $75,000. The number of Americans who earn over $100,000 is 2 percent—2 percent—of all Americans. And the number of taxpayers who earn over $200,000 is about seven-tenths of 1 percent.

So in taking a quick snapshot of who the taxpayers are, we see that the overwhelming majority of the taxpayers are people earning under $40,000, under $50,000. And yet our discussions so often affect issues that will benefit primarily people who earn more than $50,000 or $75,000, or $200,000. And I believe that these numbers have to be kept in mind as we consider the amendment that is before us now.

I know it is popular to walk in a room and tell people you are going to give them back their IRA's. The fact of the matter is that most people in America now have fully deductible IRA's.

Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, anyone who earns under $40,000 on a joint return has a fully deductible IRA. That means that if you can afford $2,000 out of your $35,000 salary, given your four kids and health costs and the cost of keeping everybody afloat, if you can afford $2,000, if you have not spent it just to keep things going, you can put it in an IRA account and fully deduct the $2,000. Then it can accrue interest over the lifetime of the account. And at the end, you take it out and pay your tax.

The fact of the matter is that 73 percent of all Americans are now in a position where they can do that. So when individuals come up on the floor and talk about that person who earns $20,000 and needs an IRA—they have an IRA. If people come out and talk about that young family that makes $35,000 and they need to have an IRA so they can save for the future—they have an IRA. They are not denied an IRA in current law. It exists.

In 1986 we phased out the IRA deduction for joint filers between $40,000 and $50,000. But anyone earning under $50,000 has access to either a fully deductible or partially deductible IRA. That is 82 percent of America; 82 percent of all taxpayers have access to a fully deductible or partially deductible IRA.

So when I hear the distinguished Senator from Connecticut come out and talk in opposition to this amendment, mentioning that two-thirds of the IRA's in 1986 came from people who earned under $50,000, I see that not as an argument for this amendment. That is an argument for the bill we passed in 1986. Because all of those people have a partially or fully deductible IRA,

So it is very important that we keep in mind who will benefit from the IRA expansion that is embodied in the text of this bill. The people who will benefit are the top 18 percent earners in America; 73 percent will not benefit at all. They already have it. But it is the top 18 percent who benefit the most; those people who make more than $50,000.

Some of them are people that I know—the distinguished Senator from Oregon is on the floor. I see him nodding his head. We all know these individuals. Many times they are two-earner families. Many times they are struggling. But the reality is that 82 percent of the people are now fully covered or partially covered. And this portion of the bill addresses only 18 percent of the people.

By the way, those 18 percent now have the benefit, if they choose to take out an IRA—they have the complete benefit of a tax-free buildup. In other words if I am making $60,000 or $70,000 a year, I can take my $2,000 and put it in an IRA account and next year put another $2,000 in. It is after-tax. But every year the interest on the $2,000, $4,000, $10,000, $15,000, $20,000, is not taxed. Under current law you are allowed to have a tax-free buildup. This amendment does not add anything to that.

In addition, what the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island has allowed is, for certain pressing needs, to be able to withdrew funds from your IRA account. I think that is an important addition.

The real question here is whether we want to spend about $5 billion, roughly, to give the top 18 percent in this country a fully deductible IRA. I personally think that is not the way to go.

Then you look at the other provisions and aspects of this IRA and I think it conclusively is not the way to go. Because what we have here is not just the IRA that existed before 1986, but we have what is called a back-loaded IRA, which means if I want to, in 1993, I can take $2,000—I have already paid my taxes so I am not getting any deduction here—I can take my $2,000 and put it in an IRA account and keep it there forever. Interest will grow, interest will grow, interest will grow. And in 5, 10 or 15 years, when I take it out, I do not pay any tax on that at all. I do not pay any tax on the interest buildup.

It sounds good except if you are trying to keep the deficit down, because if you are trying to keep the deficit down, what this means is, lying out there in our future is an enormous increase in the deficit. The more back-loaded IRA's are used, the bigger the increase in the deficit will be.

Then there is another provision here that allows us to raise money. It says if you are an American out there today who has an IRA, and say you have $10,000, $15,000, $20,000 in the IRA account now—that has built up over time—you could immediately roll it over. You could take it out, pay your tax, and put it immediately in a back-loaded IRA. It gives you a big chunk of money early. But of course, waiting down the road is the big loss that comes from the back-loaded IRA.

So, Madam President, I think we have to face the central question, which is what are we going to do about our deficit. This provision I think, the provision in the bill that deals with IRA's, is a deficit explosion in our future. It is a deficit explosion in our future. And not too distant future.

We have had the distinguished Joint Tax Committee come to us and say, no, our view of this is that in the long run it will not increase the deficit. Of course, that is correct. It is a very technical explanation. What I would like to do is to show some of the folly of the 1990 Budget Act by explaining why, technically, we do not have an increase in the deficit in the out years with this provision.

Under the 1990 Budget Act, if Congress enacted a provision that raised revenue but expired beyond 5 years, when that provision expired it would not increase the deficit according to the Revenue Act—the Budget Act of 1990. The baseline for revenues would simply be dropped. Even though obviously the deficit would dramatically increase.

Let me illustrate this by an absurd hypothetical. But it is relevant to this bill and relevant to our calculations as to whether IRA loses money in the long run.

Let us assume that we passed a law that says the entire income tax will expire in 6 years, We all know if the entire income tax expired in 6 years we would have $500 billion less.

Oh, no, no, not according to the Budget Act of 1990. If we decided we were going to renew it, not let it expire, but continue it, say in year 3, we would be credited with raising $500 billion. It is an absurdity upon an absurdity. Yet that is the rule we are operating under now. So here we have an IRA provision that has a deficit explosion out there waiting in our future and the argument is, no, no, it does not increase the deficit.

Why does it not increase the deficit? Because there are a couple of tax provisions that will expire in 1995 and 1996 that we extend. It is an absurd position. But that is an absurd position that is not caused by the distinguished chairman of this committee nor caused by the Joint Tax Committee but is caused by the Senate and the Congress as a whole when we passed the 1990 Budget Act that had this provision in it.

So, Madam President, the issue is whether we should expand the IRA, make it a back-loaded IRA, allow you to roll over, put a deficit explosion in our future, give the bulk of the benefits to the top 5 percent—all of the benefits to the top 18 percent of the taxpayers in this country

I think the answer to that is clearly no. The distinguished Senator from Rhode Island, I thought, made a very compelling case that if we really are interested in getting things moving in this country, we have to get the deficit down. That is the No. 1 problem. You do not pass bills that increase the deficit.

I heard the distinguished Senator from Connecticut saying that a study showed that between 1982 and 1986, there were $137 billion more in savings as a result of the IRA. It is about, as I calculate it, $34 billion a year.

So let me propose the startling idea that maybe if we reduce the deficit by that amount or more, we would have more money available for people to go to the bank and borrow. Instead of them loaning money to the U.S. Government to finance our deficit, it would instead be in banks and institutions around this country, available for people to buy homes and buy cars and finance consumer purchases, and everything else. But we cannot do that as long as over $200 billion a year is paid in interest on a national debt that continues to go up.

And if you believe that providing this sliver of incentive for the top 18 percent of the population is going to produce an explosion of savings that will offset an increasing budget deficit and the need to finance that deficit, then I have a bridge in Brooklyn that I would like to sell you.

The fact of the matter is that we have to get serious in this body about what we want to do with taxpayer dollars. We have a $333 billion budget deficit. What do we want to do with taxpayer dollars? Do we want to continue to have Federal spending benefits—spending benefits; not the Tax Code, but Federal spending benefits—do we want to continue to have the average Federal spending benefit to people earning $100,000 in income, be $5,690? Do we want to continue to have the average Federal spending benefit for people making under $10,000 be $5,560? It seems to me that is at least a debate we ought to have.

Do we want to continue to have $400 billion of the entire budget go to people who are over 62, and $20 to $30 billion go to children under 5? We ought to discuss that.

We ought to have a debate about whether we want public expenditures to be based on need. Do we want public expenditures to be based, a little more balanced, on generational grounds? And then, the final debate is, do we want to take taxpayer dollars and shove it into the pockets of various businesses, industries, companies, and interests who are always lined up outside the Finance Committee?

Do we want to take that wage earner, who is making $25,000, and take that amount of tax they pay and give it to companies to buy equipment? Do we want to take that money and give it to financial institutions, or give it to energy industries, or whatever? That is a debate we ought to have, because we cannot continue along the path that we are now headed. It will not work; $400 billion budget deficits to the horizon is a recipe for disaster.

Here we have a limited amount of money, about $5 billion. Would you rather spend that money by giving it to people in the top 18 percent of the population, so they do not have to pay the tax, or is it conceivable that it would be better spent by reducing the deficit by that amount? Or conceivably spent better to help people who are lower income, or people who are young children?

Those are debates that I think we ought to have, that of course we will not have if we are focused only on the narrow question—and a question that I think is not backed up by evidence—that passing this IRA provision in the bill will dramatically increase savings.

So, Madam President, I hope we will support the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. BENTSEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas, the chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mr. BENTSEN. Madam President, let us look at some of these numbers my friends are talking about. When they talk about 82 percent or 74 percent being eligible for the IRA's, what they are talking about is everybody, all taxpayers. They are talking about all those millions of college students, part-time employees, and unemployed drawing unemployment compensation. Everyone. What we are talking about is families. That is where the difference in the numbers is.

If you are talking about two-income families, 60 percent of them now do not qualify for the IRA. They tell me that by next year, almost 50 percent of all families will not qualify for the IRA.

What kind of people are we talking about? Wealthy people, millionaires, I was told. What they do not tell you is if you are wealthy, you are maxed out on the 401(k); about $8,700 this year, and you cannot use the IRA under our bill. You do not get the deduction for the IRA. Those are the realities of the situation.

Some ask whether you get a net increase in savings. That is a legitimate debate. Economists used to say—the vast majority of them—it is just a shift in savings, not an increase in savings. But then in 1986 we neutered the IRA. The year before that change took effect, we saw $38 billion going into IRA's; and the next year, we saw $14 billion; and now we see $11 billion.

Let's look at the national savings rate. Look at the national savings rate as a percentage of GNP and how it continues to go down. If we are going to continue to have the capital we need to increase productivity, to be internationally competitive, to keep the jobs at home, we have to increase capital available for investment. That means long-term savings.

We have had before the Finance Committee, experts talking about whether or not there is an increase in savings from the IRA. Let me give you some of them. Studies by economists in places like Harvard, Dartmouth, and the University of Virginia, economists who looked at the IRA and found it to be effective: Lawrence Summers of the World Bank; Robert Reich of Harvard; Federal Chairman Alan Greenspan; and Martin Feldstein; economists from the right and the left, Democrats and Republicans.

One of the things you saw when you looked at IRA's is what was gained in advertising because the IRA was universally available. Once we neutered the IRA, we had a 40-percent drop in IRA participation by people who still qualified, because they did not understand it and did not see the ads.

But when you have universal IRA's, all the financial institutions run full-page ads the week before April 15. It is drummed into you to save. Sure, there is a carrot there; sure, there is an incentive there. That is what other countries do in trying to encourage their people to save.

Today, savings in this country is one-third that of the Japanese, per capita; and one-half of the Germans. And those are our principal competitors.

This is the difference in the household savings rate as a percentage of disposable income, 1990: Japan, over 14 percent; Germany, over 12 percent; United States, just above 4 percent.

Let's also look at what happened to the percentage of decline in IRA contributions after the 1986 act. Was it the wealthy who suffered from the IRA cutbacks of 1986?

No; it was not the wealthy. The ones who were hit the hardest had incomes between $50,000 and $75,000. Not poor, but they sure don't think they are rich. Look at the folks with income between $30,000 and $50,000, many of those probably still were qualified but they no longer understood it. They no longer saw full-page ads. They stopped contributing and even those with income from zero to $30,000 saw contributions drop by over 40 percent.

The drop in the contributions to IRA's since 1986 has been staggering. That is why it is important to restore the IRA, to bring it out of retirement. It's only available to working Americans. Those are the only ones who can qualify, the kind of people you see in the grocery store every day: a schoolteacher and a carpenter with three children with combined income perhaps of $45,000, the single mother with two kids who works in an office and earns $30,000.

Those who say the new IRA only helps the wealthy, ought to ask Paula Baker, of Dover, DE, if she thinks she is wealthy. She told the Finance Committee that her job at her child's day care center, combined with her husband's pay from the U.S. Air Force makes her now ineligible for an IRA.

Ask Barbara Green of Boston, a secretary, and her husband Larry, an electrician, trying to save for a home to raise their two sons, if they are rich.

Ask Vaughn Hobson of Raleigh, NC, working now that her children are grown. She learned that her income as the manager of a small office, when added to her husband's income, caused them to be ineligible for an IRA. I know she doesn't consider herself well off, she's having a tough time saving for retirement that seems to be just around the corner. She wants to save, but does not qualify for the IRA. She does not think it is fair that she can't use the IRA.

We also put in penalty-free withdrawals to achieve some of the objectives most cherished by families today. To be able to buy that first home. Too many young couples are finding out they can't get enough for the downpayment. They have to live with mom and dad, when they'd really rather be out on their own. And mom and dad thinking that is a pretty good idea, too.

Try to send your kids to college nowadays. See what it costs today. What does it cost to go to Princeton, the Senator from New Jersey's alma mater? I can remember when my son went there and it costs a bundle. The same is true for any other college, even State-owned colleges. So what we are saying is, we are going to give you an incentive, we are going to give you a carrot to save for the future. For the education of your children.

This is a tough, competitive world we are facing, and you want that education for your kids. You hope they can live as well as you have. But they are not going to do it if they do not have an equivalent education.

Or you are talking about having an unexpected catastrophic illness or unemployment that could wipe out your savings or cause you to lose your home. Once again, we talk about a penalty-free withdrawal to be able to help in that circumstance.

And, of course, the IRA is there for your retirement, as my friend from Delaware was talking about. Today, with improved health care, with technological advances, the number of years people can expect to live after they have retired is much longer. One of the worst things that can happen, is to outlive your money. The IRA will help on that by encouraging Americans to save for their future. That has been an American tradition. Let us bring it back. Let us help people to do it.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Madam President, I have listened with interest to my friend and colleague from Texas, the chairman of the committee, about the fact that some witnesses said they could not—at $40,000—participate in an IRA. I do not think there would be any real discussion on the floor today if somebody had proposed there be some cost-of-living adjustment to the present law. That is not what we are discussing.

We are talking about changing the law all the way over to the point that the wealthiest people in the country can accumulate their money in an IRA without paying any taxes on the interest or the investments they make with that money, without paying any taxes on the money when it is distributed. That goes too far. That goes much further than we ought to be going.

Frankly, I am pleased the Senator from Rhode Island has offered this amendment because my concern about this bill is not alone with the specifics of this provision; it is with the overall provisions of the bill. This is a bill that does not do for America that which we should be doing. It does not address itself to the question of jobs for all Americans. It does not address itself to the problems of the agricultural community. It does not address itself to the problems of the economy. It hits some specific tax issues and helps the wealthy of this country, but does very little for other than those.

Now, there are enterprise zone provisions in the bill, and I am not sure whether they are great or not so great. But I do not take issue with that. I respect the chairman of the committee and those who think these are an appropriate way of solving the problems of the inner cities. I am comfortable with that. As a matter of fact, with some other areas there is much to commend. I recognize this bill as being a bipartisan effort on the part of the committee to address the chronic economic decay in our cities that was violently revealed earlier this year in Los Angeles. The bill also contains a number of sound tax and economic proposals that enjoy widespread support.

But in many ways I am frank to say I am more pleased about what is not in the bill than what is in it. I am grateful that the committee has sent us a bill without a section on capital gains tax cuts. I am also grateful that the chairman has reported a tax bill that departs markedly from a disturbing historical pattern. In the past, tax bills would be loaded with single-shot provisions for individual taxpayers or individual corporations, or with transition rules which carved out a particular interest for special benefit. I find none of those in this bill, and I commend the chairman for seeing to it they are not in the bill.

While there are a number of provisions that do benefit a small portion of the taxpaying community, it is nothing like the Christmas trees of years gone by, and for that I am most pleased.

However, in my opinion, there are a good many additional provisions that ought to be missing from this bill but are not. Born from the rubble in south central Los Angeles, this legislation began as a bipartisan effort to address the decay in our inner cities. I hoped that it would have confined itself to that issue. Regrettably, it has become a bipartisan tax break behemoth that benefits the big businesses that brought us much of the ruin of the 1980's.

I do not find fault with the motives of the members of the Finance Committee who put together this package. I know that they genuinely believe that the tax provisions contained in this legislation will stimulate our stagnant economy. I simply do not share that view. I have great difficulty with the entire package by reason of the fact.

I am supportive of the urban aid provisions as far as they go. You can argue for or against the creation of enterprise zones, one could argue for 25, or 50, or 125 enterprise zones, or even 1 in every congressional district, as Secretary Kemp seems to advocate. Whatever your position, at least this is something that is something new. We are employing a new approach. We are changing the status quo, and that is for the good. But the fact is that up until this morning when the bill was changed there was only $2.5 billion in this bill for the enterprise zones and about $31 billion in tax breaks for the wealthy of this country and the largest corporations of this country.

Since that time the bill has been amended. I believe now that the enterprise zone provision provides for $5.4 billion, or something approximating that amount, and that is a move in the right direction. But it is the tax provisions in the bill where I find ideas that have been rejected, retreaded, and resurrected.

We have tried this kind of thing before and it did not work, and it will not work now. It is because much of this bill is nothing more than another entitlement program for corporate America. A $31 billion collection of tax breaks for business and wealthy individuals; $31 billion of tax breaks for corporations and wealthy individuals, versus $5.4 billion for enterprise zones. It builds in the theory that more money in corporate hands and less intrusion from the Government will allow our economy to grow right out of our recession. I cannot buy that concept.

This bill contains much of the same voodoo economics that George Bush learned to love. You remember the story: cut the taxes on corporations, and the wealthy, and the captains of industry will set sail, investing in our Nation, expanding in their manufacturing facilities, creating new jobs, and rebuilding our economy. That was a fairy tale, Madam President. It did not work before, and it will not work now.

All that actually resulted from those voodoo economics of the past, among other things, was a massive Federal budget deficit, takeover fever, leveraged buyouts, paper profits, the savings and loan disaster, bankrupt banks, record unemployment, and the worst recession since the Great Depression. It seems to me that in a year in which the political clarion call is for change we should either try something different or try nothing at all. More of the same will simply dig us deeper into this national rut and it will make it harder to climb out next year.

I cannot see how this bill will help the families who are trapped without jobs, or education, in America's cities. I cannot see how it will benefit the middle-class families who, while not living in the inner city, are rapidly losing ground due to layoffs and the increase in low-wage jobs. This bill will not help our declining educational system and skyrocketing health care costs.

This bill fails to take the steps that are needed. But that is not really the fault of its proponents. We have been handcuffed by a veto-mad administration. The proponents of this legislation are doing what they think is right but more importantly, they are doing all they think they can realistically do with a do-nothing White House.

For the past 4 years our President has refused to support legislation to get this country moving. He has refused to try something new. He has resisted change. He has sent us 31 vetoes, all of which have been sustained by the Members on the other side of this aisle.

Now the President is sending signals that he may actually sign this bill. That does not surprise me because this bill contains more of the same failed policies that have dragged this country down.

This bill is not about change, and George Bush is not about change. The President has made it quite clear that he will not support the type of aid that cities really need: Increased funding for education, job training, and public works projects to rebuild our cities and create jobs.

If we can find $31 billion in this bill to take care of the wealthy and the corporate structure in America just think what that $31 billion would do for education, for job training, for public works, to rebuild our cities, to create new jobs. The cities need money to provide better education to children. The cities need job training programs for teenagers and adults who do not have the skills to enter the job market. The cities need to rebuild the houses and buildings that have been torn down or fallen apart. The cities need to rebuild their roads, and bridges, and public transportation systems. That is what the cities need.

Unfortunately in its attempt to do something for the cities that President Bush will support we now have a bill that aids the very same sector that let us down in the eighties, big businesses and investors.

We give them wage credits, depreciation deductions, tax losses, breaks for stock purchases, tax-exempt bonds. Somehow we hope that something will trickle down to the inner cities and to the jobless of America. It is as if we have learned nothing from the failed policies of the past 12 years. Trickle-down economics does not work.

Under Reagan-Bush we have given tax break after tax break to the rich in the hope that somehow it would spur the economy and help working people. But none of that has happened. Instead the rich got richer and the poor and the middle class paid the bill, and in the process we bankrupted America.

The modified bill contains $5.5 billion to directly encourage businesses to invest in impoverished areas. It contains another $31 billion in tax breaks for corporate America. Again, I repeat, $31 billion in giveaways to the rich and corporate America.

America is in the middle of the worst recession since the Great Depression. History will probably label it the Great Recession. Unemployment is at record levels with almost 10 million Americans out of work. The economy is not recovering. We are risking the future of our children and grandchildren with a Federal deficit that is out of control. How do we here in the Senate respond? With $31 billion in tax breaks for corporations and the well-to-do.

I ask my colleagues, look through this bill. Look at who benefits from this bill. This bill is 1,811 pages. Look through it and see who gets the benefits.

First we have restoration of the so-called passive loss deduction for real estate investors. We battled that one a number of times here in the U.S. Senate. We finally won the issue, and now it is back in our lap once again.

Does the average taxpayer have access to passive loss deductions from rental property? Does the average taxpayer know what a passive loss is?

You may not know what a passive loss is, but it is going to cost the American people something like $1.5 billion, or $1.8 billion. If a family owns a duplex and cannot find another family to share it, can they qualify for a tax deduction? Of course not. So who is benefiting here? Individuals in the real estate industry, developers who overspeculated in property in office buildings and shopping malls in the 1980's. Those properties are now standing vacant and these developers want to take the 100 percent deduction against their real estate income for space that is going unrented.

Congress fought to get rid of this provision in 1986. It is back 6 years later, and at a cost to the taxpayers. I was wrong in my original figure. It is $2.2 billion. And it will allow many of the eighties' highest real estate rollers to pay no income tax at all.

There also is a provision accelerating the depreciation method for the adjusted earnings of corporations. That is a big mouthful, and most people do not understand what that means. This section gives businesses faster depreciation write-offs against their minimum tax. That comes straight from the President's proposed budget, and its effect is simple. It slashes the amount of minimum tax a profitable corporation has to pay, and at a cost of $1.4 billion to all the taxpayers of this country.

Then we have restoration of individual retirements accounts for upper-income taxpayers, and creation of a new IRA. I commend the Senator from Rhode Island for offering the amendment to strike that provision. I have joined with him as a cosponsor of this amendment. I think he is right on target. Since individuals earning under $25,000 and couples earning under $40,000 are allowed to have IRA's under current law, this provision would only benefit the top 20 percent taxpayers.

I admit that $25,000 and $40,000 limits need to be indexed for inflation. Completely eliminating the income limits will result in a new tax break for those who need it the least.

Under this bill, we go from a maximum of $25,000 for the individual, $40,000 for the couple, and take the top off entirely. We let those people who have the extra dollars invest them, let them accrue, without any tax being paid on them, and let them be then distributed to those same individuals in a later year without any tax being paid.

There is a suggestion that somehow the IRA's are going to help the economy, provide the dollars to stimulate the economy. I believe that those dollars in the hands of the average person would provide better buying power in the economy, rather than being socked away. Socking away is not going to solve the problem for this country.

I do not oppose the whole concept of IRA's. I do oppose the concept of taking off the cap. I believe that the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island should be adopted.

In addition to that part of the IRA provision, this bill creates a new IRA, in which the principal is subject to tax, but all interest is tax free. Someone who puts in $2,000 a year for 20 years will recover $20,000 in tax-free interest.

According to the Joint Tax Committee, the cost of restoring IRA's is $12.6 billion over 5 years. Some of this revenue loss is offset by permitting individuals to transfer existing IRA's to a nondeductible IRA. But look closer at the so-called offset. By allowing individuals to pay tax now on the income which they put into the IRA's, we will, in effect, lose revenue outside of the 5-year budget window. We are claiming to raise money now but, in fact, we are losing $12 billion, and we will lose even more after that, which will be in 1997.

What happens is this: In making the computations for this bill, it was assumed that those with present IRA's would switch over, that they would then have some tax burden, that that tax burden would then pick up some dollars. But, then, all of the rest of the years during the 5-year period, the Treasury would be losing tax dollars, and when we went beyond the 5-year period, the limit would keep going up and up in losses of tax revenue.

We cannot afford that. We have a deficit; it is almost $400 billion a year. What are we doing about it? We are providing new tax gimmicks in this legislation.

According to the Congressional Research Service, the IRA provisions will lose $11 billion a year after 1997. The CRS says that the IRS provisions will lose $11 billion a year after 1997, until we have lost a grand total of $60 billion.

Does this Senate really want to vote into effect, into law, a provision that would cost $60 billion after 1997, including part of the money coming before 1997? The last time I looked, we did not have $60 billion to lose. And who takes that $60 billion? Ninety-five percent of it—95 percent of the tax loss to the taxpayers—will go to the top 5 percent of American wage earners.

What else is in this bill? We have repeal of the luxury tax on expensive boats, airplanes, jewelry, and fur. We only enacted that one in 1990. Two short years later, it is being repealed. Clearly, the wealthy do not like to have to pay extra for their extras. The cost to the American people: $500 million.

Supposedly, this bill is revenue neutral over the next 5 years, so how does it pay for all these tax breaks?

Well, there is a change in the depreciation period for real property. That does not mean business is going to lose anything. It just means it will take them a little bit longer to get the full deduction. We stretch the deduction an extra 9 years, from 31 to 40 years, and claim to raise $3 billion in the process.

Then there are a few provisions to speed up how fast individuals and companies have to pay their taxes. Again, this does not mean they have to pay any more, just that they have to pay it a little sooner, and it means we will be collecting less in the future to pay for something we want to have now, and our grandchildren stand to lose, and the net loss in revenue is a significant number of billions of dollars.

There also is a continuation of limits in the amount of personal itemized deductions that the wealthy may take. No one expected these limits to be phased out anyway. It was expected they would be renewed.

By continuing these provisions, it is claimed—and I do not accept the claim—that we are raising $7.8 billion. But these provisions could be used to reduce the deficit, and now they will be used to pay for the IRA provisions in this bill. That is not logical, and it is not good tax sense. Again, we are increasing the deficit at a time when we should be reducing it.

Finally, the biggest boondoggle in the bill has to do with allowing companies to take and amortize the value of what are known as intangible assets, things like good will and other gimmicks. As I understand it, some companies currently have claimed those deductions on their tax returns, even though no deduction is permitted.

This bill retroactively changes the law to let these businesses keep 75 percent of the deduction they took and makes them pay back 25 percent to the Government. We are retroactively rewarding companies that took a tax deduction that was not permitted under the law in order to pretend to raise $6 billion in 1992 and 1993. That is no raising of dollars at all. These companies owe the money. They are in Tax Court. If they do not owe it, let the cases be decided. You cannot claim we are raising any money just because we are settling those cases.

By giving another tax break to business, retroactively, do we actually raise any money? No; of course not. In the future, we will permanently let companies take these deductions, which will cost us up to $2 billion a year, and which many experts believe will lead to a revival of merger and takeover activity.

Just when we thought the wheeling and dealing of the 1980's that bankrupted much of America was over, we are about to encourage it all over again, according to the Congressional Research Service, at a long-term annual cost of $2 billion a year. Again, we are increasing the deficit and not raising offsetting revenues to pay for it after the budget period.

Madam President, I could go on and on. I hope I have made my point. I do not expect everyone to agree with it. But as strongly as the proponents believe this bill will aid our cities and our economy, I am equally convinced that the bill takes us down the wrong path. It will do too little for the cities, the economy, or the American people. It will not reduce the deficit—that rope around the necks of our children, grandchildren, and our great grandchildren.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. METZENBAUM. Yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. What is the Senator's position on the amendment before the body?

Mr. METZENBAUM. I am a cosponsor of that amendment.

Maybe, Madam President, it is true that the bill is an attempt to make the best of a bad situation. Maybe it is the best the Finance Committee can do.

The President has drawn his line in the sand. He will not listen to new ideas. He will not sign anything ambitious that we can send him. He is content to serve the status quo and no more. America needs leadership and leaders who are willing to act in the national interest of the country to change our way of thinking, to offer alternatives, to accept new ideas.

We are failing in our mission to serve the interests of the American people. I believe that if we adopt the Chafee amendment, getting rid of all of the IRA provisions, we will have made a major step in making this into a better bill than it is.

I hope that it will be adopted. I believe it should be adopted. I believe it will help, as far as balancing the budget is concerned, and I think it will be fair for all Americans.

Mr. BENTSEN. Madam President, the job of the chairman of a Finance Committee is an interesting job.

This morning I was being pilloried for being not supportive enough of business. This afternoon they are working me over because I am too supportive of business. Maybe we have done something right in this bill. We are talking about 1,800 pages in a bill, and I sympathize with that and I understand that. Let me also say that over 600 pages of that is the House bill which we are rejecting. Let me say three-quarters of all you see there has been before this Senate before and has been acted on by the Senate in the past.

When my friend points to all these tax breaks, and says business is getting them, he fails to mention that business is paying for a big part of it. How do you think the securities dealers in New York, investment bankers, think about marking securities to market? It is costing them $2.5 billion. They are pretty upset and strongly protested to the Finance Committee proposal. Most of them have done very well this year. I notice some of the biggest incomes we have seen in the country.

Talking about lengthening the depreciation period for real estate, the Senator said that does not mean anything to the real estate industry; it just takes them longer to get their deduction. Nevertheless, it costs some money not to have that. Then the Senator talks about passive losses, and what happened there in the past. There is no question that the way passive losses were being handled before 1986 in this country wasn't proper. What you saw was limited partnerships with investments by doctors, lawyers, bankers, and people not in the real estate business. In Houston, TX, I began to see the see-through buildings. The same in Dallas. Without question people were building buildings for tax reasons and not economic reasons.

Senator PACKWOOD, the ranking member of the Finance Committee, the former chairman of the committee, moved to correct some of that. The problem is, as often happens, there was an overcorrection. We finally got in the situation where real estate operators did not have the same kind of treatment that people did in other businesses. They weren't allowed to match up their winners and their losers. Now we have acted to correct that, with the assistance of the ranking member of the Finance Committee.

We did not go back and create the windfalls for the limited partnerships and the tax shelters. This is a more restrictive bill than you see in the House in that regard. I do not see the inequity in saying to people in the real estate business, you are entitled to match up your winners and match up your losers. You can do that in the parking lot business. You can do that in other businesses that the Senator and I have been involved in. I think that is fair.

It extends PEP, the personal exemption phaseout. That is for couples making over $150,000 a year.

Itemized deductions, for higher income taxpayers, that is for people making well over $100,000 a year. There is an extension of that. It is true that the Joint Tax Committee only estimates for 5 years, because it gets fuzzy going out beyond that in trying to find out what items cost—what you save and what you collect in taxes. The Joint Tax Committees does tell us that in their best judgment, beyond the 5-year window. This tax bill comes out pretty even, the gains and the losses offset each other.

The Senator talks about not charging wealthy people. The extension of the 55-percent estate tax on large estates, that is one of the highest estate taxes of any major industrial country. That is extended. That proposal brings in $1.4 billion. I did not hear the Senator mention that. That is sure not poor folks.

There is a change in the corporate estimated tax rules. That is large corporations we are talking about. That is another $2.5 billion.

The Senator seems to think this bill is targeted to the wealthy. Don't you believe it. We have targeted jobs credits in here. We have low-income housing in here.

Then we try to keep children from being farmed out to foster homes. There has been an incredible increase in that. We are talking about counseling, treatment and help for substance abuse by mothers help for crack babies, babies that no one wants to claim. They call them boarder babies. It cost over $100,000 a year to maintain life support systems for some of these babies in hospitals today. It is a great moral problem at a time when there is a limitation on what we can provide in health care. But those things are addressed. That is not for rich people. That is for people with compassion and concern about the children. Trying to give kids a better chance to be born with healthy minds and bodies. Trying to make sure they aren't farmed out to foster homes. Trying to hold families together, and trying to see that the husband is going to support that mother and that child. Those are things in this piece of legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WELLSTONE). The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Rhode Island, Senator CHAFEE. I appreciate the opportunity to be here on the floor and listen first to his comments and then to the comments of the chairman of the committee and a variety of other Senators.

I was particularly interested in the comments of our chairman, Senator BENTSEN. It is obviously a thankless job, being chairman of the Finance Committee. You wonder why 19 people on the committee are lined up to take it away from him if he would choose not to continue with it. But maybe this bill is an illustration of how difficult it is to be the chairman of the committee, because many of the things that have been critiqued by my colleague from Ohio have to do with urban policy. Is this good policy to resuscitate cities and provide jobs, and so forth?

I would certainly agree as a tax bill, in my view, it is not a good urban policy bill, and I will have more to say on that subject later when we get around to talking at greater length about enterprise zones.

But I do not think there is much in here that is effectively going to restore jobs to the people who are stuck in the inner cities of America. And yet the Finance Committee got handed the job of doing an urban aid bill and it got handed the job of putting enterprise zones in there because enterprise zones are sort of the frontispiece, if you will, of the administration's urban program.

I must say there is a lot of good tax policy in this bill and I think it has been much criticized by those who look at it in totality rather than those who take the time to look at it in its specifics. But it is also a good income security bill and the chairman of the committee has made some comments on that. It is good for foster kids, boarder babies, good for children, for it has many things in it that the Finance Committee has jurisdiction over that committee seems to be the principal vehicle for exercising jurisdiction that helps the needy and applying new and better policies in this country.

Unfortunately, there is nothing in there about health care, which happens to be the No. 1 and No. 2 issue in the country. The chairman and I believe that we are overdue on fixing the small group insurance reform and a variety of other national legislation that enables States and local communities to help us come to grips with these policies.

There are major parts of this bill which is policy that this Senator has disagreed with and will continue to disagree with. This happens to be one. But I could name others. The problem with naming all the others is that most of them appear in my President's economic recovery package and either I am not being a very loyal Republican or it is too late for the economic recovery and sort of sour grapes on my part to stand here and object. This happens to be one. Some of the provisions on first-time home buyers are another.

Mr. President, like you and like many people in this Chamber, I am driven by the deficit and by the concern that my generation is using a credit card to impoverish its kids.

And so, whether it is income security or health policy or tax policy or urban policy, I cannot really afford not to look closely at each of the policy provisions in this bill.

Now IRA's. Much has been said about IRA's and I do not intend to take a lot of time talking about the details. There are some very good charts up here, all of which seem to point in the same direction. I am not sure exactly what they mean, but they do point in the same direction.

I know they are popular with nearly all of our constituents and why should they not be. All of us remember the blitz of advertising that used to take place in the couple of weeks just before April 15 of every year.

I did not have any of that advertising to bring to the floor with me, but I think we all remember that somewhere between April 1 and April 15, while everybody was making decisions about how to maximize their tax benefits, if you will, IRA's become a very popular form of newspaper advertising. Banks used to advertise IRA's as the quickest and easiest way to cut the family's tax bite, and a lot of people bought, including this Senator. For a time, the banks even encouraged us to take out a loan to fund our IRA's.

I think it was our colleague from Missouri, Senator DANFORTH, who raised that as an issue in the Senate Finance Committee. And we offset the advantage of being able to go into the bank over here, borrow the money and put it in the bank over here to buy an IRA. But that is the sort of thing that went on. If we think that was going on with people who make $25,000 and $30,000 a year, I think we have another think coming.

For many other people, especially the wealthiest citizens in our States, money was merely shifted from a taxable savings account into a tax-deductible IRA and obviously the net effect on savings was nil.

So, Mr. President, for as long as I have served as a member of the Senate Finance Committee, I have noted the genuine concern of all of my colleagues about the dismally low rate of savings in this country. And this concern has led us to adopt measures of occasionally dubious value.

I mentioned my colleague from Missouri earlier. In a rush to good judgment 1 year, he created something called the all-savers certificate. I think that lasted for about a year, year and a half, until we found out it was one of the biggest plugs we ever pulled out of the deficit dike and all of the money was running out of it.

We also had something called universal IRA's, and they did about the same thing.

There is no question that banks and similar institutions love tax subsidized gimmicks like IRA's, and so do our constituents. But did any of these tax subsidies really make a difference in our national savings rate? In this Senator's view, the answer is no.

But the evidence is quite clear as to what is going to happen to this provision.

You look in the August 6 issue of Roll Call, which is our campus magazine around here, our campus newspaper, and you see a lot of advertisements on this subject.

One of them, the most impressive one, is by Merrill Lynch, which has a tradition of trusting the people who sponsor the things that maintain Merrill Lynch in this country. Seventy-five of our colleagues are on this list. There is everyone from Senator BROCK ADAMS to Senator HARRIS WOFFORD, and 73 people in between, plus the coaches, Senator LLOYD BENTSEN and Senator BILL ROTH. And these are the people who are committed to helping America's future through bringing us Super IRA's, as they are called.

So I am not sure exactly what we are going to accomplish with this debate today, since a lot of people have already signed up in advance for some version of this particular program. But it reflects the fact that these things are popular with our constituents.

As I have said, it is popular with the banks and everybody else, because in the same issue of Roll Call, there is a full-page ad—and this is not as big as your hometown newspaper because it is a smaller newspaper, but this is a full-page ad. And it is entitled "What Can Congress Do To help Us Save, America?"

I do not know whether they want to save America, or what can they do to save, and they are addressing this to America. This is hardly read by America. But maybe they want to save America. Who are these people? They are the Savings Coalition of America.

Do you think this is all of our constituents out there? Well, no. This is mainly some of the same folks that back in 1982 got all of our constituents stirred up to tell us that what we did on withholding of dividend and interest was antisavings as well.

I can read just some of the names to give you an idea of perhaps the motivation that the savings coalition would have us invest so much of our children's future in this program.

It begins with A.G. Edwards, Inc., American Association of Engineering Societies, American Bankers Association, American Council for Capital Formation, American Council of Life Insurance, American Council on Education, American Indian Health Care Association, American League of Financial Institutions, Association of American Universities, Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities, Citicorp/Citibank, College Savings Bank, Consumer Bankers Association, Credit Union National Association, Dean Witter Financial Service Group, Delaware Charter Guarantee & Trust Co., Edward D. Jones & Co., EMJAY Corp., First Pension Corp., and I could go all the way to the end, which is U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

I ask unanimous consent that this list of the members, at least as of August 6, of the institutions which are bringing us the opportunity to save in America be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, there are experts who are asked about the issue of savings: Is this positive on savings; not so positive on savings? I suppose the experts will come down on both sides of the issue. I did not rise here to quibble with the experts. But I must note that throughout the 1980's, during the period when universal IRA's were available, the Nation's savings rate was lower than it was in the 1950's, lower than it was in the 1960's, and lower even than it was in the 1970's.

What this suggests to me is that we made the right decision in 1986 to restrict IRA's and we should not go back on that decision for what we see as a political reason.

Moreover the budget consequences of these so-called special IRA's could be catastrophic. These are not individual retirement accounts. Let me say that again. These are not individual retirement accounts; they are tax shelters, pure and simple.

An individual can transfer money out of his current IRA, into the special IRA and pay no penalty. The individual then pays taxes over 4 years on the gains in the terminated IRA. The money transferred into the special IRA and any gains in the account can then be withdrawn tax-free after only 5 years.

Mr. President, this is a back-door IRA. This back-door IRA will raise money in the first few years because just about everybody who currently has an IRA will close the IRA and begin trading in their new special IRA.

People will now be able to trade stocks in their IRA's with the knowledge that after 5 years all the gains can come out tax-free. In other words, a zero capital gains rate for those individuals who shift their money into IRA's.

According to the Joint Tax Committee, after 1997, this proposal could lose more than $17 billion a year. I believe that is an underestimate. In 1981, we experimented with tax breaks for growth and savings. We got some growth, but we did not get savings. What we also got was the deficit.

Mr. President, there are two young people around here now promoting something called "Lead or Leave." And they are asking all of us and Members of the House to sign a pledge that we are either going to participate in reducing the national budget deficit by 50 percent over the next 4 years, by 1996, or leave this place.

These are the people—who I have been predicting since 1984–85, when I got started—from something called Americans for Generational Equity, one day would either show up in this Chamber and change it or they would start a campaign built on the example of our colleague KENT CONRAD from North Dakota, who actually made the promise and then left—or is in the process of leaving. They are going to ask us all to sign up for this.

So I take this proposal with its $17 billion loss proposed in 1997, probably underestimated, and I say thank God it is 1997. You know, maybe it will not impact by the time I have to decide whether to leave or not. But everybody in this place ought to sign that pledge. Or ought to make a commitment to some similar kind of pledge, and to be prepared to do something about it.

I am concerned when I hear the chairman say we ought to bring back the old days of IRA's. I think we ought to begin a new day. And I think that new day ought to begin, not with the savings gimmicks that we have spent so much time working on, but with a commitment that all current income that is saved or invested is taxed at a lower rate or a zero rate compared with current income that is consumed. Something that cuts across the board and cannot be gimmicked.

Mr. ROTH. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DURENBERGER. I will be pleased to yield.

Mr. ROTH. The Senator used a figure of $17 billion of the cost. The cost came from the Joint Taxation. I am not aware—and I have been so advised by Joint Tax—that they have never used such a figure.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I have that figure as referenced to the Joint Tax Committee, that it is possible it could lose that much.

Mr. President, I understand, and my colleague from Delaware, I have been given to understand this figure comes from the Congressional Budget Office, CBO—rather than from the Joint Tax Committee. The Joint Tax Committee has a different estimate. I would be pleased to include their estimate in my remarks as well.

The point is simply that I have learned a lesson from the 1981 experience with IRA's. And I suggest even to my colleagues who are on this list of having signed up for the super IRA, that that does not necessarily commit them to having to be on this IRA. They might distinguish super IRA from this one, and consider that the amendment by the Senator from Rhode Island is a sensible amendment. It is an amendment to eliminate a portion of a basically good bill that does not create new savings.

Mr. President, I hope we will not repeat some of our earlier tax policy mistakes. I urge all the rest of my colleagues to support the amendment by my colleague from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon is recognized.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I wonder if I could ask the Senator from Texas, could he put back up the chart on the national savings, please, that one there? The one that shows the 1950's—yes. That is the one.

I want to use it. I want to make a few comments. I want to use this to explain how confusion over statistics can happen. The chart is titled, "Net National Savings as a Percentage of Gross National Product, Selected Years 1950 to 1990." To the right is the average for 1980–89. It appears to be about 3 percent average.

If you would look at the chart that Senator CHAFEE used which is titled, "Personal Savings as a Share of Disposable Personal Income." On his chart, the last line is the average for the 1980's. I would judge the average to be about 4.5 percent. Maybe the Senator from Rhode Island can correct me. The red line in 1987 is just about 3 percent. Everything else is above it.

I use this only to say you want to be very careful how you use these figure about savings. We are talking about two different kinds of savings. But each side would use the charts to prove the point they want to prove. And I do not mean in this sense any bad will or malice. I just want to illustrate that you want to be careful with statistics.

The chart also shows deposits. Comparing ourselves to Japan and Japan and Germany is fair, but there was a time when we did not have to save as much as they did. Our savings rate in the 1950's averaged about 7.75 percent. The closest it ever got to that rate was '60 to '69 when the savings rate was close to 8 percent. We had 2 years in the seventies when I think it was about 9 percent, but that was unusual. Our average savings rate during the forties, fifties, sixties, and early seventies, when we were growing well was never averaged more than about 7 to 7.5 percent, whereas Germany's and Japan's was much higher.

But all during the 1950's, Germany's and Japan's savings rate was higher for a very specific reason. These were devastated countries. They had to rebuild factories. If they did not have high savings rates, they did not have any capital. The United States was not pouring money into these countries. We contributed some money into the Marshall plan, but it was a modest amount compared to what the countries did themselves. If they did not have a high savings rate they could not reindustrialize. We were not destroyed in World War II. Therefore, we did not have to save 15 to 18 percent in order to succeed.

Second, we had surpluses during those years of the 1950's. We did not have to have a high savings rate to finance a deficit. Whereas today we need to have a higher savings rate than we have ever had before to finance the deficit. I am not sure foreign countries are going to be able to afford to invest in the United States for long periods of time. Japan's economy is falling and seems to be in a free-fall. Germany is occupied, justifiably, trying to reindustrialize East Germany and pick them up from communism. That is going to be a $300 to $500 billion job for West Germany over the next 5 years. They will not be able to invest as much in our debt as perhaps they used to. So there is no question that we are going to need a higher savings rate, personal savings, to help finance the deficit.

The question is a difficult one, and it is one of the reasons, frankly, I support a balanced budget amendment. I am not sure we are ever going to get to where we must be until we are compelled to. The balanced budget is for another time, for another debate.

The question is, will IRA's increase our national savings? Here the evidence is mixed. If you look at the chart of the Senator from Rhode Island, the personal savings rate went down when fully deductible IRAs were in place. The rate went up when we limited IRA's. This is true for savings as a percent of disposable personal income. That is a different figure than total savings. If the total income in the United States is $1,000 and we save $100, the savings rate is 10 percent. If the next year the total income of the United States is $2,000 and we only save $100, the savings rate has fallen to 5 percent. The total amount of savings has not fallen, but the percent of disposable income is cut in half. So this is why you should be careful when examining some of these statistics.

Having said all that, I think we need to increase savings. The question is, will IRA's induce new savings?

First, let us get over the argument that IRA's are a millionaire's device. We discovered this when we eliminated deductible IRA's in 1986 for upper-income people. Once a couple earned above $100,000, the IRA was not a large portion of their savings plan. They used it but did not rely on it. This is especially true if the couple was eligible for 401(k) plans or any other kind of savings plan. After 1986, they were not allowed to have a deductible IRA. IRA's were really a device used by people with earnings below $100,000.

So it is not a rich person's device. Frankly, current statistics show it is not used by lower income people even though after 1986 they can still take a full deductible. If you are making $20,000 a year, you cannot afford to put aside $2,000. Even though you can deduct it, you cannot afford to put it aside. You do not have it. So the people who heavily invested in IRA's were in the $35,000 income bracket. These amounts are from 5 years ago. I do not know whether that argues for or against the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island. Suffice it to say we are going to have to save a lot more in this country than we used to save in the 1950's and 1960's because we have, simply, a bigger deficit to finance. Also, there is going to be less foreign money to help us finance it.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. PACKWOOD. Yes; I will.

Mr. BRADLEY. Today on the floor we have had charts that purport to show national savings, household savings, personal savings. We can have any variety of savings. But would the Senator not agree that the basic question is national savings? Because our national savings is the pool of money that is available for investment. Investment produces growth. Growth produces higher standards of living.

And in economic terms, it makes no difference as to whether the deficit is reduced by $1 billion or personal savings increases $1 billion.

That means that a billion dollars is available for investment. And the basic question is whether you can ever determine what is net personal savings. A far better course, would not the Senator agree, is to reduce the deficit? If you reduce the deficit, you know you have money available for national savings—money available for whatever—more money to buy homes, more money to buy cars.

Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I hear what the Senator is saying, but our experience with extra money has not been to reduce the deficit. If we have it, we spend it. It is a figure I have cited often on the floor.

In 1950, in this country, if you counted all of the governments of the United States—Federal, State, local, all the school districts, all the water districts—we taxed about 20 percent of the gross national product and we spent about 22 percent.

So collectively we had a deficit—counting all the governments within the United States. Forty years later, we are taxing about 31 or 32 percent of it and we are spending about 35 percent of the gross national product.

So the tax has gone way up, and we have not used them to reduce the deficit, we spent the money, so we still have the deficit.

While I agree with your theory, I will wager that any extra money we have someplace in this bill will not go to reduce the deficit, it would go to be spent for something. Until we are compelled to reduce the deficit, and I mean constitutionally, we will not do it. We have proven that, unfortunately, over the years.

I wanted to comment about what the Senator from Ohio said about the passive losses. I want to use an illustration to make it clear, because passive losses is an insider's term of art.

Depreciation is something most people would understand, it creates passive losses. For example, you have a rental building, and as the building gets older, you take depreciation deductions. This may create what we would call a passive loss.

Let us take an example of what the situation was after the 1981 Tax Act.

First, we said that buildings had a life of 15 years. They do not have a life of 15 years. They usually have a life of 30, 40, 50, or 60 years, but we said 15 years. You could depreciate the whole value of the building in 15 years.

Let us say the building cost $1.5 million, and for the moment, I am going to use what we call straight line depreciation, $100,000 a year for 15 years.

You can take that $100,000 and you can offset it—this is depreciation, it is not real money you have lost—you can offset that against your income as a lawyer, doctor, or whatever else. You can offset this against your other income even though you were not involved in the real estate business; you were just an investor.

Let us say they earned $100,000 from practicing law—and I am using this for illustrious purposes—you were allowed to offset against all your other income. In other words, you could get your income down to zero.

For purposes of illustration, you take $100,000 less from depreciation and offset it against $100,000 of real income, cash income, and you have no taxable income; you pay zero taxes. That is why these buildings become a wonderful device for sucking up money. The building made no economic sense, but they made wonderful tax sense. They made doubly wonderful tax sense when you realize if you had $100,000 of income, you were in the 50 percent tax bracket.

Here is what happens with the building. You have a 15-year building, $1.5 million, you keep it for 5 years and you deduct $100,000 each year passive losses, against your income and getting your income down to zero or close to it. even though the tax rate was 50 percent, you were not paying 1 cent in taxes.

Now at the end of 5 years, you sell the building, and there has been some inflation, you sell the building for $2 million. Now your basis, as we call it in the tax law, how much profit you made, is not the difference between $1.5 and $2 million, it is between $1 and $2 million because you have depreciated the building, 5-year's worth. And it was a capital gain. So you only paid a 20 percent tax on the million dollar gain.

So for a number of years, you avoided paying taxes altogether when you were at the 50 percent rate and then you have $1 million profit 1 year and pay a 20 percent tax. It is no wonder people built these buildings.

There is a wonderful quote—I guess he is not the manager of the hotel anymore—from a fellow who used to be the manager of the Western Hotel in 1989. He said, "The hotel business used to be a wonderful business. People invested in it for a tax shelter." He said, "Now people will not invest in hotels unless they can make money." That is what we intended.

But we really hit real estate hard in 1986. We did not treat them like any other business. We just said, in essence, in real estate after 1986 you cannot have any passive losses that you can offset against your other active income.

In any other business, if you are what we would call an active participant in the business—you are running your grocery store, your gas station or chain of 10 services stations and you are actually the manager, the owner, the operator, the participant, the one actively involved in the business—then you can deduct those losses against your other active income. They really are not passive losses.

We said with real estate, you cannot do that. It did not matter if you built the apartment, lived in the apartment, you managed the apartment, you cleaned the toilets, swept the floors, and collected the rents, you could not offset the losses from your rental real estate activities against your other active real estate business income.

All this bill does is provide that those in the real estate business will now be treated like professionals in other businesses. We are not going back to where we were in 1981. You have to be an active participant in the business and you have to meet a certain threshold that is a commonly known threshold for the Internal Revenue Service, and they know how to figure it. You have to prove you materially participate and, if you do, you will be able to write off your rental real losses against your other real estate trade or business income.

There is nothing wrong with that. The reason in 1986 we hit real estate so hard is because it was the largest tax shelter. When you could couple passive losses, capital gains and really no effective minimum tax, that is how you got these stories every year that came from the IRS of how 580 people made $1 million last year and paid no taxes. In 1986, we would have to go home and attempt to justify this to people making $25,000 and paying $1,000, $1,500 in taxes.

We still have a very tough minimum tax. We have not significantly changed that.

This bill increases the depreciation period for commercial property to 40 years. Now remember, just 10 years ago we were talking about 15 years; 8 years ago we were talking about 15 years. We now say 40 years, no up-front deductions, and no accelerated depreciation.

So we have now made the building closer to its useful life, some buildings might be shorter and some buildings might be longer, but 40 years is reasonable. Many people in the real estate business would say that 40 years is an artificially long period. The 40-year depreciation is not an egregious break to the real estate industry.

As for the other comments the Senator from Ohio made, I might agree with some, but I will say the chairman has done a good job, although I do disagree with the bill in the enterprise zones, and we will get to that debate, and where we have taken out the first-time home buyer credit.

I thought that was a good credit. Young people trying to buy a home have a difficult time. But by and large this bill is not a giveaway to the rich. We tried to correct some errors where we thought there were some errors. There may be some honest differences of opinion as to whether we did that properly.

On balance, the bill is a good bill and a fair bill. I hope eventually—I fear now in September—I hope eventually that this bill will pass.

Mr. BENTSEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I yield to the Republican leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman. I was former Finance Committee chairman and can commiserate with the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Oregon, and former chairman.

I want to make it clear, I do not think anybody opposes IRA's on the Finance Committee. In fact, the concept of the universal IRA originated when I was chairman of the Finance Committee in 1981. We adopted the universal IRA because we thought it was good savings policy and we thought it was good retirement policy. And the initial response, as has already been demonstrated here, was overwhelming, each more than we expected. When we last discussed this issue in 1986, we discussed that the actual revenue impact was about four times as large as we had originally estimated.

But this unexpected revenue loss led to efforts to cut back on IRA's as a budget initiative because we could not do all the other things in the tax bill and still have the universal IRA, but we rejected most of those efforts. When the time came in 1986 to review and restructure the entire Revenue Code, we had to strike a balance so we might reduce the rates for all taxpayers. And no doubt about it, the IRA's were part of that tradeoff. We could not have it both ways then, Mr. President, and I am not certain we can have it both ways today.

I know that the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Delaware have spent hundreds and hundreds of hours on this issue. It has particularly been a mission for the distinguished Senator from Delaware, but a dramatic increase in IRA's today, if paid for PEP and PEASE, will result in a tax increase; a tax increase I might add to pay for a tax benefit for the more well-to-do. No question about it, this is for the more well-to-do, and no doubt about it, IRA's favor upper-income retirement over a family struggling to save enough to buy a home or send a child to college.

According to a mutual fund survey, the typical taxpayer who contributes to an IRA is 40 to 60 years of age, higher educated and has a higher income than the average taxpayer.

The people we care about, at least if we listen to all the Senators around here, the low- and middle-income, can under current law continue to make tax deductible contributions to IRA's. So it is not this group we are trying to help; it is the upper-income people, the group we keep talking about we ought to make pay more taxes, we ought to make them do a lot of things.

As my distinguished colleague from New Jersey correctly pointed out, more than 70 percent can claim a deduction now. Why do we need more at a time when our deficit should be a priority—I happen to believe that is still what everybody believes—as it is really what is killing the economy and putting us all at risk.

I certainly support penalty free withdrawals from individual retirement accounts for purchase of a first home, educational expenses, catastrophic medical expenses or in cases of long-term unemployment.

I believe these situations warrant the penalty-free status accorded by the Bentsen bill and that many needy individuals and families will benefit.

But I think the expansion of the IRA sort of dwarfs these necessary changes.

There have been all kinds of editorials, all kinds of estimates—nobody knows for certain—we are going to loose estimated revenues of about $10 billion per year.

Now, if the deficit is a problem, and if we are not trying to help the rich or the upper income or the wealthy, it seems to me that there are other things we might do. I would like to have the home buyers credit restored with some of the money we may be spending here. I would like to have the investment tax allowance restored. They were removed earlier in modification by the majority to make way for additonal enterprise zones. So there are a number of priorities that I think we might want to address.

I ask unanimous consent that certain editorials be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WORM IN THE TAX BILL

The Senate is scheduled to take up a tax bill today that is supposed to strengthen both the economy and the cities but in the long run will reduce the ability of government to come to the aid of either one. The bill's most important provision would put an entire new category of investment income beyond the reach of the tax collector.

Taxable now, this broad stream of income would become permanently tax-exempt. The Treasury would eventually lose—and the mostly upper-income beneficiaries would gain—an estimated $10 billion a year. That's how much larger than otherwise the future deficit would be, how much more the government would have to borrow and how much less it would have to spend on other purposes—urban aid, for example. The theory is that the tax forgiveness would increase national savings; the likely effect would be a reduction instead. This damaging proposal ought to be struck from the bill, or the bill should be killed.

The rest of the bill is pretty ordinary; for a tax bill in a presidential election year, it is even tame. Partly it is a housekeeping measure, extending various "temporary" provisions that were never intended except on paper to expire, tidying up some ragged others. Partly it also includes the weak remains of last spring's full-throated promises on the part of both parties to aid the cities; not much there. Most of all, as a way of neutralizing the president's complaint that Congress won't act on his proposals to revive the economy, it has become the repository for his "growth initiatives," which represent neither much likely growth nor much initiative. To these the members have added some mostly minor pet provisions of their own.

These routine provisions could be more solidly financed, but they're not the problem. The problem is an innocent-sounding provision to create a new kind of IRA, or individual retirement account.

The old IRA benefit was merely tax deferral. A taxpayer or spouse could contribute up to $2,000 a year and deduct it. Taxes were paid on the contributions and earnings later in life as the money was withdrawn. In the 1986 tax reform act, Congress took the benefit away from upper-income taxpayers on grounds they didn't need it and were mainly transferring into tax-advantaged IRAs money they were going to save anyway would reverse the reform, then also create the new kind of IRA. Contributions to these would not be deductible, but then the earnings—so long as the money was left in for at least five years—would never be taxed at all.

It's a giveaway, constructed so that the full effects would not be felt until after the five-year estimating periods that is all that counts under the budget rules. The sponsors claim they nonetheless have paid for it, and indeed they have—mainly by declaring permanent two other "temporary" tax provisions adopted as part of the 1990 budget agreement that no one expected to expire, either. A huge new tax break is offset by a comparable "increase" that involves no change in current levels of liability.

The Democrats are caught between two deficits these days, one fiscal, the other social. The Republicans love it, because the Democrats are hamstrung; they don't have the billions they need to carry out their social agenda. If a Democratic Congress enacts this regressive provision, they'll have $10 billion less.

[From the Washington Post]

YES, VETO THE TAX BILL

Jack Kemp says that the president should veto the Senate Finance Committee tax bill if it reaches him in its present form. The irrepressible housing secretary is absolutely right, but unfortunately for all the wrong reasons. Most of the tax cuts that second-rate buffet contains would do little economic good and aren't really paid for, so that in the aggregate, by increasing the deficit, they would do considerable harm. The unregenerate Mr. Kemp's supply-side solution to the problem would be to exacerbate it; a bill without a cut in the capital gains tax—at least such a cut within enterprise zones—is not worth having, he says. His cure would make the problem worse, not better.

This bill was written and seems likely to pass much more for political reasons than for any economic virtue. The president has accused the Democrats of contributing to the economy's weakness by failing to pass his "growth initiatives." The bill would give him most of these minor adjustments; the table of contents comes largely from his budget. He gets most of his program at the cost of an issue; the Democrats neutralize the issue, shift the finger of blame back to him and have a legislative trophy to wave besides. Government works; that will be part of the message you will hear from both parties.

But not many people are seriously claiming that the bill itself will work—that the provisions as distinct from the parliamentary achievement will make that much difference. Senate majority leader and Finance Committee member BOB DOLE was climbing off the measure even as he helped to send it to the floor. "It's not going to change the economy in three months very much, but at least it's an indication we can get things done," he was quoted as saying.

One provision from the president's budget is an "investment tax allowance" or special depreciation rate for equipment bought in the next year. But the government then would quickly recover the taxes forgone, or most of them, because the businesses would have that much less depreciation to claim later; the stimulus is a deferral only. Another provision would give a $2,500 credit for the rest of this year only to first-time home buyers; what will that turn around? The alternative minimum taxes on profitable corporations and well-off individuals were slightly eased; the minimums are meant to make sure that such companies and people pay something no matter how good their tax attorneys are. A number of minor breaks were also given to the hurting real estate industry.

There's more, but none of it calculated to give much lift to a $6 trillion economy. The most important provision is a huge, unwarranted and unfunded future giveaway to the better-off in the form of a new IRA, or individual retirement account. It would add $10 billion a year to turn-of-the-century deficits and the inability to govern. Instead of debating that, the administration and senators are debating what the capital gains tax rate should be in a handful of enterprise zones. This is a debate over symbols, not substance; the bill itself is a symbol of a government that has ceased to function in a serious way.

[From the Washington Post, July 31, 1992]

WORST BILL OF THE YEAR

In the misappropriate names of fiscal responsibility, urban aid and economic growth, the Senate Finance Committee has produced what could well be the worst bill of the year. This is a tax bill whose real effect would be to reduce the future ability of the government either to manage the economy or to aid the cities; it would do this by adding billions of unacknowledged dollars to the deficit, largely in the form of benefits to the better-off.

The sponsors claim the mislabeled bill is revenue-neutral. The neutrality is a fiction, the product of a set of blind-eye accounting conventions that artificially increase revenues while obscuring costs. More than half the tax increases that the bill would ostensibly impose in the next five years to pay for the cuts it would give are artificial. The counterfeit claim is likewise made that the bill would stimulate growth by increasing national savings, when in fact by increasing the deficit it would much more likely reduce those savings. The urban provisions, the bill's original rationale, have meanwhile been reduced to a footnote; they are inconsequential.

The legislation is said to contain about $30 billion in matching tax increases and cuts over the next five years. In fact, by the committee's own reckoning, at least $17.5 billion of these "increases" are merely speed-ups, money the government would have gotten a few months or years later anyway. Ultimate tax liability would be unchanged, and in some cases revenues would be increased between now and 1997 only by reducing them thereafter. Another $7.7 billion would be achieved by simply extending two provisions of current law: the phase-out of the personal exemption and limits on deductions for higher-income taxpayers that were voted in 1990 and no one expected to expire. Again, current liability would be unchanged. Meanwhile, some of the larger cuts in the bill were carefully constructed so that their full effects would not show up until after the five-year accounting period; the costs are masked.

The most flagrant such masking involves a new kind of backloaded IRA, or individual retirement account. It and the other generous IRA provisions in the bill are projected to have a net cost of $7.7 billion over the five-year period. But in the long run this provision alone is expected to cost as much as $10 billion in a single year. The IRA provisions, which the administration also supports, would end up shifting an enormous share of the country's investment income from taxable to tax-deferred or tax-exempt status. That, in the name of growth, is the election-year handiwork of some of the same politicians who not too many weeks ago were piously urging adoption of a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution in the face of the $400 billion deficit that they have created.

The bill is full of such supposed stimuli for savings and growth. Not even most of the people who will vote for it think that it will produce very much of either. For all the rhetoric that will surround it, its main effect will be to shift even more of the burden of government to middle class that can't afford it. The urban aid has meanwhile been turned into a minor pumpkin of some enterprise zones that hardly anyone believes in, either, plus a little bit of social spending. They ought to kill this hulk, just a they killed the year's earlier tax bill. The main purpose of this bill is not so much to produce results as to give the appearance of producing them in an election year.

Mr. DOLE. It seems to me that notwithstanding the argument that has been made—and I do not quarrel with the argument that has been made—this is not what will restore the economy and get the economy moving. There is no certainty there is anything we can do in the Congress that is going to get the economy moving, but I am not certain this should be the centerpiece. I hope that the Chafee amendment might prevail.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have discussed this with the author of the legislation, and at some point I will be moving to table. I would prefer to do that at 7 o'clock, if he feels he has had adequate time to discuss this issue. We have been at it for some time.

I would like to say, with respect to the comments of the minority leader, no, this bill is not going to turn the economy around overnight. There is no question about that. We did not get into this mess overnight. It is going to take awhile to accomplish it.

I would like to look at it as being a downpayment to try to move us in the direction of getting this economy moving again, and much more of it has to be done in the year to come. I am sure it will be a big part of the Presidential debate this year on both sides. But to the degree that we can make this a bipartisan movement in that direction, that is what I am trying to do.

Mr. MURKOWSKI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I will be very brief.

I congratulate the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Delaware on their leadership in cosponsoring the Super-IRA provisions of this bill. I think it is evident to all of us that America is losing the international savings game. As a percentage of our gross domestic product, Americans save less than do citizens of Canada, Japan, France, Germany, or United Kingdom. Our savings rates are now 25 percent lower than they were in 1980 and a full 50 percent below what they were in the 1950's, 1960's, and 1970's.

I think it is legitimate to question what this may mean, Mr. President. It is no secret money goes to the highest return the least risk. We have attracted tremendous amounts of foreign savings in purchases of our Treasury bills to offset the financing of our deficit, nearly $4 trillion of accumulated debt, and the interest on that is running about 15 percent of our current budget.

I think it is evident that IRA's have proved themselves in the past. In 1986, IRA's accounted for nearly one-third of the personal savings in this country, but the savings rate fell back to its lowest point in a century following the cutback in IRA's in 1986. It is simple. The full deductible IRA's worked well and I am pleased to say that this bill will bring them back.

I would also note that H.R. 11 includes a provision to include penalty-free withdrawals for first-time home purchases. I remind my colleagues that the value of that incentive has already been lost as a consequence of the crunch in the Pacific Northwest timber market which has resulted from the spotted owl issue. That crunch, if you will, has increased the cost of the average home on the west coast by approximately $5,000 per home for a home roughly 2,800 square feet.

So we really have not gained much there.

On another issue, I think we should reflect on the policy which has prevailed in this Nation for some time, and that is that more often than not we have rewarded the accumulation of debt. We do not have to go back many years to the time when debt was deductible, your credit card debt was deductible on your income tax, and clearly to have a system that rewards debt and does not induce or provide incentives for savings is contrary not just to fiscal responsibility but to the fact that in order to have a prosperous Nation we must have adequate sources of savings, and to have high savings we must have the inducement to save. I am pleased to say that is what the Bentsen and Roth Super IRA provisions of H.R. 11 do. I am pleased to support those provisions.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I want to confess right up front I was a cosponsor of Senators BENTSEN and ROTH's special or Super IRA bill. But I rise tonight, to support Senator CHAFEE's motion to strike the IRA provisions from the bill. Let me take a couple of minutes of the Senate's time to discuss it.

I do not think there is any question but that the United States of America has a serious problem with sustained economic growth at low inflation rates, which ought to be the principal, prime policy goal of this Nation and all of our leaders, because sustained economic growth at low inflation rates means increased opportunity for everyone.

Economic growth provides more Americans with a chance to do for themselves and attain upward mobility than any other policy we could have.

Having said that, there may be a number of things that adversely affect our ability to sustain, with any consistency, a high rate of growth. But there is one that is certain, and that is the lack of savings by the U.S. people. There are too few savings available to stock and feed the machines of growth.

Actually, one can talk about trying to sensitize the American people to save more. But the truth of the matter is that until and unless you change our appetite for deficit spending, you cannot really significantly increase the net savings rate. You can do all of the sensitizing you want, but if the deficit keeps going up, you have a gobble machine, gobbling up the savings, even if you had a nice, neat way to excite people about savings.

I see my friend from New Jersey wants to ask a question or make an observation.

Mr. BRADLEY. Yes, Mr. President. Does the Senator not admit that the GAO report, that we jointly requested, "The Deficit and its Growth," shows that if there are no changes made by the year 2020, interest on the Federal debt will be $1 trillion?

Mr. DOMENICI. That is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does the Senator not agree, Mr. President, that if we are truly interested in savings, that reducing the budget deficit is the best way to achieve national savings?

Mr. DOMENICI. No question; we repeat what many others have said.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does the Senator also not agree that the provision that purports, without sufficient evidence, to increase personal savings a small amount, but costs in the longrun large increases in the Federal deficit, is not worth it at this time?

Mr. DOMENICI. No question about it, Mr. President.

Now that I have made my initial thoughts known to the Senate, let me proceed with a couple of additional ones.

Actually, we are not going to do a great deal to change the personal habits of the American people regarding savings, I regret to say, until we change the emphasis of the Tax Code of the U.S. Government.

We have a kind of a policy that one part of it goes to the left, and one part goes to the right. Most current tax policies regarding savings have the effect of discouraging savings. On the other hand, we say we want savings. So we enact certain specialty incentives, yet overall tax policy is against it.

The Tax Code encourages consumption. The more you borrow, the more you buy on installment, the less you save; the better off you are under our Tax Code. That goes for individuals and it goes for business. Therefore, how are you going to get savings up until you face that issue?

If you want to know what President Bush, if he is reelected ought to do to change things, it is to come forward with a statement that the Tax Code of the United States will ruin the American people and the economy. Because you cannot tell the American people: "Spend, don't save"; and on the other hand, say "The economy needs savings." Impossible. You have to change the basic Tax Code to some kind of consumption-based income tax; that will encourage saving and discourage consumption.

Even that kind of model has been produced of late, and it is pretty good. I say such a tax can be made progressive; it can be an income tax that is based upon consumption. It is a rather exciting concept, and it ought to be advocated by some American leaders who are in charge of changing the laws.

Having said that, let me suggest that the deficit, which eats up what savings we have, should not be added to here on the Senate floor by reinstituting IRA's. It is ironic that we would add to the deficit in the name of savings.

You see, we now have less than 3 years left on this budget agreement. So if you can get anything outside the window, you are not governed by anything like what is the effect of the revenues. You are exempt from the so-called "Hey, let us be sensible about this." Let us sort of pay-as-you-go.

And it is not perfect. The pay-as-you-go has some very serious idiosyncrasies. We really should let you average over the years, instead of making you meet that pay-as-you-go each year. We are inviting some distortions. And this special IRA takes advantage of that, because—it is an accident of it—it makes some revenue in the first years.

So it is nice for those writing tax bills, because you can give this great, great gift to the American people; meet the onerous burdens of the budget agreement; and say to everyone: Everybody is coming out fine. Except that 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 years from now, you are starting to add $10 billion a year, even $15 billion a year in less revenue take. But it is outside the window of the budget agreement.

I am fully aware that nobody who is proposing this is suggesting that it do anything but good for the country. Those who suggest it say it is going to cause dramatic changes in the savings patterns of our people.

If I believed that for a minute—that it would dramatically change them and dramatically accelerate the amount of savings, out of proportion or disproportionate to the increase in the deficit—then I would say maybe we have something.

But I am not at all convinced that that is the case. I am convinced the amount that you are going to add to the deficit by loss of revenues is in no way going to be made up by the addition to the net savings pot and pool of American total resources by way of savings. And, therefore, it is a net loser in that regard.

From my standpoint, talking about where we were 5, 6, 8 months ago versus today, we have lost something very important in that period of time. Those on that side of the aisle would say it is the President's fault; we would say, on this side of the aisle, that it was their fault. We lost the investment tax credit—the temporary one, the 15 percent one—called an allowance. We lost the incentive for the home buyers.

Some do not think it is necessary, but 7, 8, 9 months ago, those were two very important parts of a minimum package.

In this bill that is brought to the floor, those two have been relegated to 3 or 4 months anyway. So they were not worth much. I have been heard to say that heretofore. But the point of it is, in order to fill the gap for the IRA's, what it would cost, you had to narrow down or skinny down those two to 3 or 4 months. And I do not think that was worthwhile, either. I would have had the two in for the next 18 months, even if you could not afford any of the IRA's—the normal one or this one. But that did not happen.

I am here on only one issue. I commend the Senator from Rhode Island for bringing the issue to us.

I do not want to use any more time. Much has been said about this.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, we are coming close to a vote. At this point, I would like to briefly summarize.

First, what is the existing situation as far as IRA's go? Everybody who is an individual with an income of $25,000 or less can get the complete deduction. Families with incomes of $40,000 or less can get the complete deduction. That is 80 percent of the individuals in the United States of America which are eligible.

In addition, for those who are above those brackets, Mr. President, still an IRA has an enticement to it, because those who are above those brackets can put after-tax dollars, to the extent of $2,000, into an IRA. During that period until the individual retires, and indeed, up to the age of 72 of that individual, the total buildup within that IRA is tax free. It is not taxable to the individual every year—the appreciation, the interest, and the dividend.

So, Mr. President, that is a very, very satisfactory arrangement. In addition, there is one more feature. Even if an individual is a millionaire, if they are not a participant in a pension plan, that individual can get the total deduction under the IRA.

So, Mr. President, nobody can say that IRA's are not very generous right now—right now.

What has the chairman of the committee proposed? He has proposed the following: First, that everybody, regardless of his or her income, earned income, can have the benefit of an IRA, the total deduction of $2,000.

In addition—this is the kicker, Mr. President, that I really find appalling in these times of tremendous deficits—there is a provision that if you so choose to not take a deduction, but instead put in after-tax dollars, not only will the total buildup within that individual retirement account be nontaxable, while it is occurring, but when you withdraw it—and indeed you can withdraw it as early as 5 years, so it really has nothing to do with retirement. When you withdraw it, you can get all that appreciation, interest, and dividends tax free.

Mr. President, I am astonished at this proposal.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does the Senator mean to say that—contrary to the way we have always thought of IRA's, which was that you get your $2,000 deduction, you put your money in an account, and it accrues interest, tax free; and when you retire, you take it out and you pay taxes on it—the Senator is saying that under this provision you put in after-tax dollars, it accrues interest tax free, and then you take out whatever amount it is and pay no taxes?

Mr. CHAFEE. The Senator is absolutely right. If you can be fortunate enough to invest it in Merck, Coca-Cola, and maybe you triple your money like any other citizen in the United States, you take that money out tax free.

Mr. BRADLEY. That increases the deficit.

Mr. CHAFEE. This is the ultimate in zero capital gains. I mean, it is so odd that many in this body are disturbed over a cut in the rate of capital gains. This is zero capital gains.

What will this cost the Treasury of the United States? Mind you, Mr. President, this takes place 5 years out. So, as I previously mentioned, the Joint Tax Committee will not give us an estimate. However, we have two estimates that are not that far apart, although they are dealing with something that occurs 5 years out.

The Congressional Research Service, in a March 5, 1992, letter from Jane G. Gravelle, senior specialist in economic policy, says: "We estimate that the long-run, steady-State cost, at current income levels, would be slightly over $11 billion per year."

Mr. President, we have here an estimate, as I previously gave, from the Congressional Budget Office, prepared at the request of the Senate Committee on Appropriations. On page 44, an analysis. There, depending on how much would shift, "the annual loss would stabilize at about $17 billion."

Mr. President, which is right, I do not know. All I am saying is that this is an extremely expensive program, particularly the so-called backloaded IRA's that, as I say, should not—it should be an IA, individual account, not an individual retirement account, because it has nothing to do with retirement. Mr. President, there we are. I hope that everybody who is deeply concerned, as I believe every Senator is, about the deficits of the United States of America will vote in favor of this amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. Does this provision in the tax bill do anything for people making $20,000 or $30,000 or $40,000?

Mr. CHAFEE. If they are a family, it does nothing for them.

Mr. BRADLEY. Would it be correct to perhaps call this an expanded tax entitlement for the top 18 percent of taxpayers in this country?

Mr. CHAFEE. There ought to be jubilation in all of the country clubs in America, Mr. President. This really is a great program for those who are in the upper-income brackets.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am voting to table the Chafee amendment because I support expanding the eligibility for individual retirement accounts [IRA's]. I believe that IRA's for which a deduction is given at the time a person deposits money into the IRA is an important savings incentive. I think it was a major error in the 1986 tax reform bill when we greatly restricted the availability of this form of IRA. It was one of the reasons why I voted against the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

However, I am concerned about the portion of the Finance Committee bill, known as the back-loaded IRA. Although there does not appear to be an official estimate of the long-term revenue loss associated with this proposal, there have been references during the debate to the possibility that this provision could cost billions of dollars in revenue after 1997. I would urge the Finance Committee to look further into this issue while the bill is still on the floor or in the conference with the House. I have talked many times on this floor about the dangers of the budget deficit to the long-term economic health of our country. We must be very careful to avoid making it more difficult to deal with that urgent and serious problem.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, we have had a good debate and a thorough debate, and all sides have expressed their views. What we are talking about is trying to increase savings in this country, trying to have the capital to be able to modernize, to make ourselves internationally competitive. We are looking at our top competitors, the Japanese, saving at three times our rate, the Germans at twice our rate.

We are trying to let people accomplish some of their most cherished objectives, such as owning their first home, sending their kids to college, taking care of a catastrophic illness, and taking care of their retirement. We have 78 cosponsors on this piece of legislation, who believe this is the way to go.

And, we pay for it. We pay for it all the way beyond the 5-year window, and the Joint Tax Committee says we have done that. We pay for it by people having a phaseout of the personal exemption of those making over $150,000 or more, by putting a limitation on our itemized deductions for those people making $100,000 to $125,000 or more. So we have matched them together to accomplish an objective that is good for our country—increasing our savings.

Mr. President, I join with the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH] and I move to table the amendment.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays are ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] are necessarily absent.

Mr. SIMPSON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] is absent due to illness.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 72, nays 25, as follows:

FARMER COOPERATIVES

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I wish to commend the distinguished Senator from Texas for his modification regarding farmer cooperatives to the Finance Committee amendment to H.R. 11.

Mr. President, this is vitally important legislation for farmer cooperatives. Leaders from both local cooperative associations in Missouri and from the regional cooperatives they own have spoken to me about the need for congressional action in this area. Radical change in the Code is not needed. Clarification of congressional intent is. Presently, cooperatives are receiving conflicting signals from the courts and the Internal Revenue Service as to what may be treated as patronage sourced income. This has been a particular problem with respect to sales of assets held by cooperatives for use in connection with day-to-day patronage operations. As a result, cooperatives face great uncertainty in their tax and financial planning. They also are incurring millions of dollars of outlays in administrative disputes with the IRS in litigation in the courts.

Under subchapter T of the Internal Revenue Code, farmer cooperatives are required to determine whether income or loss items derive from patronage or nonpatronage sources. The distinction is important because patronage sourced items are not subject to tax at the cooperative level provided it is distributed as a patronage dividend. Nonpatronage sourced income is taxable at the cooperative level whether or not it is distributed to patrons. There is substantial case law discussing what is properly characterized as patronage income. The courts have repeatedly endorsed the facilitative test as the standard for determining whether an income or loss item is patronage sourced. By this measure, patronage treatment results whenever a cooperative realizes income or loss from a sale or other transaction involving any asset that is used in more than an incidental manner to facilitate the conduct of business done with or for patrons.

The proposed amendment would codify the facilitative test and clarify that the test applies to all types of assets whether they are tangible or intangible, depreciable or nondepreciable, capital or noncapital. Therefore, I would like to emphasize, in particular, that the amendment is aimed at clarifying the facilitative test. The application of that test requires what is essentially a factual inquiry: namely, whether the asset disposed of, whatever its nature or character, was actually used by cooperative "to facilitate the conduct of business done with or for patrons." Under the proposed amendment, the burden of proof for this test remains with the farmer cooperative.

It is my understanding that the very same factual inquiry is required under existing law. In view of the clarifying purpose of the modification, the IRS should make every effort to resolve current disputes in a manner consistent with the facilitative test provision of the modification.

Mr. President, farmer cooperatives play a unique role in meeting the enormous agricultural demands of this great country. Enactment of this legislation will remove a substantial and unnecessary impediment that cooperatives and their member-patrons now face in carrying out that important role.

This is important for Missouri. It is important for the Nation.

CREATION OF TREASURY FORFEITURE FUND

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my objection to the creation of a new forfeiture fund in the Department of the Treasury by this amendment, which is titled the Treasury Forfeiture Fund Act of 1992.

As chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee I have taken an active role in the implementation, effectiveness, and efficiency of the Department of Justice [DOJ] and Customs Service forfeiture funds. In May of last year my Committee held a hearing on the possibility of consolidating the two funds then in existence. The GAO had completed a study at the Committee's direction and determined that the consolidation of management functions would save the government money. One big factor in that determination was the elimination of duplication of similar efforts by different government agencies. The Justice and Treasury Departments are the two leaders in seizing assets. GAO testified that a needed first step in asset consolidation included these two agencies.

This proposal would create a new forfeiture fund in the Treasury Department that does exactly what the Justice fund does. How many little slush funds, administered by department heads and unaccountable to Congress do we need?

In May of last year, after the GAO testified, both the Treasury and Justice Departments pledged to work together toward a consolidation of management of assets and the elimination of duplication of effort. This act would defeat the very purpose that the Justice and Treasury Departments were trying to achieve. Rather than streamlining and downsizing duplicative purposes and functions, it would increase the Treasury Department management, without significantly reducing the Justice asset management office. This is simply not good management or good government. It is a waste, and an unnecessary expense.

The new Treasury fund would simply create competing interests among law enforcement agencies. Apart from the obvious waste of resources, this duplication of effort and services would encourage a dash for cash among local law enforcement officers who want to share in the profits based on their participation in Federal cases. An unhealthy competition would be created in which local law enforcement officials could sell their services to the highest bidder. We would wind up with a law enforcement effort fueled not by solid law enforcement principles, but rather by free market capitalism.

The Justice Department currently administers a fund which collects, manages and disperses the assets seized by agents of the FBI, DEA, Postal Inspectors, IRS, Secret Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and Immigration and Naturalization Service. In addition, the Customs Service has its own fund. When members of the Governmental Affairs Committee staff met with representatives of all of these law enforcement agencies, they expressed satisfaction with the way the Justice Department was handling the fund, and did not complain of unreasonable delays nor did they find fault with Justice's decisions.

Now the Treasury Department has come to Congress claiming that the Justice Department fund has not served its purposes and it needs to run its own fund. Mr. President, this situation is becoming just like the "M" accounts where agencies are able to create slush funds that are outside the review of the appropriators and everyone else in Congress. As we have found with these M accounts, they do not die, they multiply.

Why is the Treasury Department insisting that it needs its own fund? We are told that it is because of problems in decisionmaking and delays at the Justice Department. This just does not wash. I am sure the Justice Department can improve the management of its fund. But I am equally sure that the creation of a new fund in another agency will serve no useful purpose.

I understand that Attorney General Barr has taken the position that he does not oppose the creation of this second forfeiture fund. That is all very well and good, but I still do not think we here in Congress should then acquiese simply because the Justice Department has decided it can live with this decision. It is our responsibility and duty to look at the bigger picture, the scope of the entire Government, and determine whether this makes good management sense. It is my firmly held position that it does not. Therefore I urge the chairman of the Finance Committee to delete this amendment from the bill, and I urge my colleagues to agree with me and strike this amendment if it is offered.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to call attention to two provisions of the Revenue Act.

In the hope that these words might be heard, and perhaps read, I will be brief.

The bill incorporates the Charitable Contributions Tax Act of 1992, which I introduced earlier this year along with Senators DANFORTH and BOREN. It provides for permanent repeal of restrictions on the deductibility of gifts of appreciated property. These include works of art, securities, collections, and such. It also removes the cap on the amount of tax-exempt bonds that can be issued by private colleges and universities, and restores to them their status as exempt persons under the Tax Code.

This section could well be the most important tax legislation of this decade. It will not be seen as such; which is precisely the reason it could be. The United States is the only country on Earth in which by and large the most important institutions of the civic culture are private. Which is to say, they are not Government institutions. This comes so naturally to us that we hardly notice it.

But consider, 60 percent of all first professional degrees in fields such as medicine, engineering, business, and law are granted by private colleges and universities. We take this for granted; it would be unimaginable in, say, Europe where education is overwhelmingly the domain of government. Similarly, our great research hospitals, our treasure-filled museums, our symphony orchestras, opera companies, zoological and botanical institutes, are almost all of them—outside of the capital—institutions founded by private citizens and to this day run by boards made up of private citizens. They are heavily dependent on private endowments and private gifts.

We also take for granted, or somehow assume, that these private institutions are wealthy. Well, they aren't. We look up and find them, especially the research universities, in trouble all over the land. This trouble could develop to the point where the finest institutions of learning on Earth, the most productive sector of American society, begin an irreversible decline. It wouldn't take long. The great Viennese economist, Joseph Schumpeter, predicted that the decline of liberal society would come about through the conquest of the private sector by the public sector. We are betting that it needn't. It is a big bet.

New York State is home to more of these private institutions than any other State in the Nation, more than any other nation on earth. Consider just some of our research universities: Columbia, NYU, Rockefeller, Rochester, Cornell. These are institutions of world status. And they go far back in our history, and in the history of modern science. Columbia, as King's College, received its charter from George II in 1754. Just so, our medical centers, New York Hospital, which received its charter from George III in 1771; Columbia-Presbyterian, Mount Sinai, the list goes on. Our New York Philharmonic was founded in 1842, before, that is, nine-tenths of the nations in the world today even existed. Our Metropolitan Opera, was founded in 1883. Come to think, Lorenzo da Ponte, who wrote the libretto of Don Giovanni, ended his career as a professor of Italian at Columbia. As for the Metropolitan Museum, the Museum of Modern Art, the Guggenheim, the Jewish Museum, the Brooklyn Museum, the New York Botanical Gardens, the Brooklyn Academy of Music—I could go on and on—they have few peers anywhere. In the nice phrase used by New York University, private institutions in the public service.

Upstate we are blessed with a string of world-class institutions, including the Buffalo Philharmonic and that City's Albright Knox Art Gallery; Rochester's Philharmonic and Memorial Art Gallery; the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra and Utica's Munson-William-Proctor Institute. Again, I could go on.

The tax legislation of the 1980's resulted in a serious cutback in the amount of private giving to such institutions. In the case of Columbia, NYU, Rochester, Cornell, and Rockefeller University, it stopped tax-exempt borrowing for capital improvements such as laboratories, libraries, infrastructure. The Revenue Act of 1992 repeals the restrictions on bonds and on gifts of appreciated property.

It does more. It restores to these universities their status in law as exempt persons. That is to say, the law recognizes their public purpose, and gives them equal status with State-run institutions. As also with state governments and other government bodies. For research institutions of any kind, this status is indispensable. To have stripped the private institutions of this status, as we did, in 1986, was indefensible. But it was done, and there was little, if any, notice. That fact should put us on notice. The private sector is in jeopardy, if not better understood. It is estimated that the provision will cost $420 million over the next 5 years. I hope and trust it will turn out to be more. There could hardly be a more deserving tax expenditure.

The bill makes permanent the limitations on itemized deductions and personal exemptions that were enacted on a temporary basis in 1990. In effect, this is a permanent increase in the top tax rate of 3 percent for a couple with two children. One percent (0.93 percent) from the limitation on itemized deductions, and about one-half percent for each of four exemptions claimed.

The case can be made that this revenue is needed. But no case can be made for hiding the tax increase in an unfathomable ten-step calculation that only a tax lawyer could love. I read from the IRS instructions for complying with the itemized deductions limitation:

Itemized Deductions Worksheet—Line 26 (keep for your records)

1. Add the amounts on Schedule A, lines 4, 8, 12, 16, 17, 18, 24 and 25 .... 1. ____
2. Add the amounts on Schedule A, lines 4, 11, and 17, plus any gambling losses included on line 25 .... 2. ____

Itemized Deductions Worksheet—Line 26 (keep for your records)—Continued

Caution: Be sure your total gambling losses are clearly identified on the dotted line next to line 25.

3. Subtract line 2 from line 1. (If the result is zero, STOP HERE; enter the amount from line 1 above on Schedule A, line 26.) .... 3. ____
4. Multiply line 3 above by 80% (.80) .... 4. ____
5. Enter the amount from Form 1040, line 32 .... 5. ____
6. Enter $100,000 ($50,000 if married filing separately) .... 6. ____
7. Subtract line 6 from line 5. (If the result is zero or less, STOP HERE; enter the amount from line 1 above on Schedule A, line 26.) .... 7. ____
8. Multiply line 7 above by 3% (.03) .... 8. ____
9. Compare the amounts on lines 4 and 8 above. Enter the smaller of the two amounts here .... 9. ____
10. Total itemized deductions. Subtract line 9 from line 1. Enter the result here and on Schedule A, line 26 .... 10. ____

Set at a 3-percent disallowance rate, the effect of the itemized deduction limitation is more or less neutral as between different States with different tax systems and tax burdens. But should the rate begin to climb the point would soon be reached where New York would be unfairly burdened. And charitable giving could well be affected for the worse. I would like to lay down a marker here. No such increase will be enacted if I can help it. And as second ranking member of the Committee on Finance majority, I certainly intend to see to it.

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

AMENDMENT NO. 2931

(Purpose: Limiting individuals eligible to use IRA deductions and simplified IRA's)

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator RUDMAN and myself, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM], for himself and Mr. RUDMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 2931.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 875, beginning with line 13, strike through page 876, line 9, and insert:

Subpart A—IRA Deduction

SEC. 2001. INCREASE IN INCOME LIMITATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (B) of section 219(g)(3) is amended—

(1) by striking "$40,000" in clause (i) and inserting "$100,000", and

(2) by striking "$25,000" and inserting "$75,000".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable year beginning after December 31, 1993.

On page 884, strike lines 5 through 9, and insert:

"(e) QUALIFIED TRANSFER.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified transfer' means a transfer to a special individual retirement account from another such account or from an individual retirement plan but only if such transfer meets the requirements of section 408(d)(3).

"(2) LIMITATION.—A transfer otherwise described in paragraph (1) shall not be treated as a qualified transfer if the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for the taxable year of the transfer exceeds the applicable dollar amount.

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms 'adjusted gross income' and 'applicable dollar amount' have the meanings given such terms by section 219(g)(3), except subparagraph (A)(ii) thereof shall be applied without regard to the phrase 'or the deduction allowable under this section'."

AMENDMENT NO. 2934 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2931

(Purpose: First-time homebuyer credit)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send a second-degree amendment on behalf of Senator PACKWOOD to the desk.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], for Mr. PACKWOOD, proposes an amendment numbered 2934 to amendment No. 2931.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the amendment add the following:

SEC. 2001A. CREDIT FOR PURCHASE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to nonrefundable personal credits) is amended by inserting after section 22 the following new section:

SEC. 23. PURCHASE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER

"(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—In the case of a first-time homebuyer, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter an amount equal to 10 percent of the purchase price of the first principal residence purchased by the taxpayer during the eligibility period. Except as otherwise provided in this section, such credit shall be allowed for the taxable year in which such residence is purchased.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) MAXIMUM OVERALL CREDIT.—The credit allowed by subsection (a) to the taxpayer shall not exceed $2,500.

"(2) MAXIMUM FIRST YEAR CREDIT.—Of the aggregate credit allowable under subsection (a) after the application of paragraph (1)—

"(A) not more than 50 percent shall be allowed for the taxable year in which the residence is purchased, and

"(B) the remaining credit shall be allowable for the succeeding taxable year.

"(c) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' means any individual unless such individual or such individual's spouse had a present ownership interest in any principal residence at any time during the 3-year period ending on the date of the purchase of the residence referred to in subsection (a).

"(2) UNMARRIED JOINT OWNERS.—An individual shall not be treated as a first-time homebuyer with respect to any residence unless all the individuals purchasing such residence with such individual are first-time homebuyers.

"(3) ALLOCATION OF LIMITS.—All individuals purchasing a residence shall be treated as 1 individual for purposes of determining the maximum credit under subsection (a), and such maximum credit shall be allocated among such individuals under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

"(4) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS INELIGIBLE.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' shall not include any individual if, on the date of the purchase of the residence, the period of time specified in section 1034(a) is suspended under subsection (a)(6), (h), or (k) of section 1034 with respect to such individual.

"(5) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN CONTRACTS OF DEED.—In the case of an individual described in section 143(i)(1)(C) for any year, an ownership interest shall not include a contract of deed described in such section.

"(d) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) ELIGIBILITY PERIOD.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'eligibility period' means the period beginning after July 27, 1992, and ending before January 1, 1993.

"(B) BINDING CONTRACTS.—A residence shall be treated as purchased during the eligibility period if—

"(i) during the eligibility period, the purchaser enters into a binding contract to purchase the residence, and

"(ii) The purchaser purchases and occupies the residence before April 1, 1993.

For purposes of clause (i), a contract shall not fail to be treated as binding merely because it is contingent on financing or on the condition of the residence.

"(2) PURCHASE.—The term 'purchase' means any acquisition of property, but only if—

"(A) the property is not acquired from a person whose relationship to the person acquiring it would result in the disallowance of losses under section 267 or 707(b), and

"(B) the basis of the property in the hands of the person acquiring it is not determined—

"(i) in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the person from whom acquired, or

"(ii) under section 1014(a) (relating to property acquired from a decedent).

"(3) PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—The term 'principal residence' has the same meaning as when used in section 1034.

"(4) PURCHASE PRICE.—The term 'purchase price' means the adjusted basis of the residence on the date of its acquisition.

"(e) CARRYOVER OF UNUSED CREDIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(A) the credit allowable under subsection (a) exceeds

"(B) the limitation imposed by section 26(a) reduced by the sum of the credits allowable under sections 21 and 22.

such excess shall be carried to the succeeding taxable year and shall be allowable under subsection (a) for such succeeding taxable year.

"(2) 5-YEAR LIMIT ON CARRYFORWARD.—No amount may be carried under paragraph (1) to any taxable year after the 5th taxable year after the taxable year in which the residence is purchased.

"(f) RECAPTURE OF CREDIT FOR CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if the taxpayer disposes of property with respect to the purchase of which a credit was allowed under subsection (a) and such disposition occurs at any time within 36 months after the date the taxpayer acquired the property as his principal residence, then the tax imposed under this chapter for the taxable year in which the disposition occurs is increased by an amount equal to the amount allowed as a credit for the purchase of such property.

"(2) ACQUISITION OF NEW RESIDENCE.—If, in connection with a disposition described in paragraph (1) and within the applicable period prescribed in section 1034, the taxpayer purchases a new principal residence, then paragraph (1) shall not apply and the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which the new principal residence is purchased is increased to the extent the amount of the credit that could be claimed under this section on the purchase of the new residence (were such residence the first residence purchased during the eligibility period) is less than the amount of credit claimed by the taxpayer under this section.

"(3) DEATH OF OWNER; CASUALTY LOSS; INVOLUNTARY CONVERSION; ETC.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to—

"(A) a disposition of a residence made on account of the death of any individual having a legal or equitable interest therein occurring during the 36-month period referred to in paragraph (1).

"(B) a disposition of the old residence if it is substantially or completely destroyed by a casualty described in section 165(c)(3) or compulsorily or involuntarily converted (within the meaning of section 1033(a)), or

"(C) a disposition pursuant to a settlement in a divorce or legal separation proceeding where the residence is sold or the other spouse retains the residence as a principal residence."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 22 the following new item:

"Sec. 23. Purchase of principal residence by first-time home-buyer."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending on or after July 28, 1992.

SEC. 2001B. ELIMINATION OF DEDUCTION FOR CLUB MEMBERSHIP FEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 162 (relating to trade or business expenses) is amended by redesignating subsection (m) as subsection (n) and by inserting after subsection (l) the following new subsection:

"(m) CLUB MEMBERSHIP DUES.—No deduction shall be allowed under this chapter for amounts paid or incurred for membership in any club organized for business, pleasure, recreation, or other social purpose."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to dues paid after July 1, 1992.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the two amendments which have just been offered be laid aside for approximately 1 minute in order to take up the agricultural appropriations conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 1993—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on H.R. 5487 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5487) making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1993, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of August 7, 1992.)

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the conference report be agreed to; that the Senate concur, en bloc, with the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate; that statements by Senators BUMPERS, COCHRAN, LEAHY, a colloquy between Senators DOLE and COCHRAN, and a colloquy between Senator LEAHY and myself be printed in the RECORD, as if read; and that all the preceding motions be reconsidered, en bloc, and tabled.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate are as follows:

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$7,250,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$73,411,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$20,795,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$430,143,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$1,000,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$1,000,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$414,500,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$10,428,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert ": Provided further, That, hereafter, funds made available to the Agricultural Cooperative Service shall be available for a field office in Hawaii".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert "$228,266,000, to remain available until expended (7 U.S.C. 2209b)".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 47 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert: "$313,039,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

ALCOHOL FUELS CREDIT GUARANTEE PROGRAM ACCOUNT

For the cost of guaranteed lines of credit available pursuant to an emergency declaration as provided at section 321 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1961), $9,000,000, to remain available until expended, but not beyond fiscal year 2009: Provided, That such costs shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974: Provided further, That these funds are available to establish a guaranteed line of credit program level of $30,000,000, to remain available until expended, but not beyond fiscal year 2009, which the Department shall make available for the purpose of purchasing grains or cellulosic materials for the production of alcohol fuels at established cooperative facilities as necessary to meet deliveries under contract: Provided further, That a guarantee fee of one percent shall be paid at the time a guarantee is issued.

In addition, for administrative expenses necessary to carry out the credit guarantee program, $100,000.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken by said amendment, amended to read as follows: "That of this amount, $25,000,000 shall be available for water and waste disposal systems to benefit the Colonias along the U.S./Mexico border, including grants pursuant to section 306C: Provided further, That, with the exception of the foregoing $25,000,000,".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert "Provided further, That amounts made available under this heading in fiscal year 1992 shall be available in fiscal year 1993".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$100,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 98 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$6,826,553,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 99 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$2,536,098,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$1,661,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 106 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment, insert "$509,996,000".

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 119 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken by said amendment, amended to read as follows:

SEC. 730. For loan guarantees authorized under sections 1465–1469 of Public Law 101–624 for the Agricultural Resource Conservation Demonstration Program, $10,000,000. For the cost, as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, $3,644,000: Provided, That, hereafter, no other funds are available in this or any other Act to carry out this program, other than those provided for in advance in Appropriations Acts, except for the cost of administering the program: Provided further, That such limitation shall not apply with respect to the duties and obligations of the Secretary regarding any loan or note guarantees, interest assistance agreements, or other understandings entered into during fiscal year 1992, and the personnel of the Department shall carry out the duties and obligations of the Secretary, and any other requirements imposed on the Secretary regarding such Agricultural Resource Conservation Demonstration Loan Program with respect to the loan made and guaranteed in 1992.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120 to the aforesaid bill, and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken and inserted by said amendment, insert:

SEC. 731. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be used to pay the salaries of personnel who carry out a program within the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for the purchase of computer hardware and software and other costs in support of long-range Information Resources Management objectives in Automated Data Processing if the aggregate amount of funds transferred by the Commodity Credit Corporation to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service for such purchases exceeds $52,400,000.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring before the Senate, the conference report on H.R. 5268, the appropriations bill for agriculture, rural development, and related agencies for fiscal year 1993. I hope my colleagues will support it.

The conference report contains several significant changes from the Senate-passed version of the bill. First of all, the conferees were unable to fund the Wetlands Reserve Program due to the tight fiscal constraints. This action by no means indicates a lack of support for this program. I would like to read from the conference report what we said about the Wetlands Reserve Program.

> The conferees fully support the concept of the Wetlands Reserve Program and are disappointed that the Department has not provided the reports required by the House, Senate, and conference reports on the fiscal year 1992 Agriculture Appropriations Act. The conferees direct that these reports, along with a complete analysis of the fiscal year 1992 sign-up, be submitted to the appropriate committees of Congress by February 1, 1993. Pending the results of this information, the conferees expect the Department to consider submitting a supplemental appropriations request.

A second major change from the Senate-passed version of the bill is that the Market Promotion Program is funded at a level of $147,734,000 instead of $170,700,000 as proposed by the Senate. Again, due to fiscal constraints, the funding had to be reduced. Again, the conferees have drawn attention to the program and reiterated the Senate's request for a report on the program covering the last 5 years including: First, the number of companies or groups receiving MPP funds for the first time in each fiscal year compared to the number of companies or groups that received MPP funds in at least one of the previous 5 fiscal years; second, the dollar value of the annual export sales of MPP participants and the percentage of the MPP participant's marketing budget represented by MPP funds; third, the number of small business participants in the MPP program; fourth, whether MPP participants would have entered an export market regardless of the availability of MPP funds; fifth, the dollar value of annual export sales directly attributable to MPP funds; and sixth, the number of new applicants for MPP funds, especially small businesses, that were not funded compared to the number of companies or groups that received MPP funds in at least one of the previous 5 fiscal years.

In addition to this Senate language, the conferees added the following:

> The Market Promotion Program should focus its resources on promoting value-added agricultural exports to maximize job creation. The Market Promotion Program should make certain that the content of agricultural products it promotes is predominantly U.S. grown and manufactured. Promotion funds should be allotted to U.S.-based participants which export agricultural products and should encourage smaller, medium-sized, and new-to-export participants. The Department is expected to review marketing plans submitted to assure that products are predominantly U.S. grown and manufactured.

The Public Law 480 program has also been changed from the Senate version. Rather than providing $13 million for debt restructuring under the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative, the conference agreement provides $40 million. As a result, the title I program level has been reduced from $581 to $555 million and the title III program level has been reduced from $344 to $334 million.

Domestic food assistance programs remain a high priority in the bill. Based on current estimates of need, child nutrition programs are funded at a level of $758 million above this year and the Food Stamp Program is increased by $4.8 billion over this year's level. The WIC Program is funded as proposed by the House and Senate, at $260 million over the 1992 level. Mr. President, I want to reiterate that almost two-thirds of the bill—64 percent—or $38.4 billion is for domestic food programs that go predominantly to urban areas.

For the Food and Drug Administration, the bill restores the $200 million in funds assumed by the administration through user fees and has added $20 million over the 1992 appropriations for the agency.

The conference agreement provides funding levels similar to the Senate bill for agricultural research, rural development, conservation, extension, and inspection programs.

In summary, the conference bill proposes to spend $60.5 billion.

I commend the conference report to my colleagues and recommend that it be accepted.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, we have before us the conference report on H.R. 5487, the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations bill for fiscal year 1993. This agreement was reached Thursday, August 6, and filed on Friday, August 7. The other body passed it earlier today.

H.R. 5487 makes funds available for the many programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, such as research and extension, conservation, rural housing and farm loans, and farm income and price support programs.

Total obligational authority in this conference agreement is $60.5 billion, which is $166.6 million more than the budget estimates for new authority for 1993.

A major part of this bill—64 percent of the total amount appropriated—consists of funding for the various domestic food programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. These include the Food Stamp Program; the child nutrition programs—school lunch and breakfast, summer food programs, and child and adult day care, etc.—; the feeding program for Women, Infants and Children [WIC]; and the Emergency Food Assistance Program. I believe the funding levels provided for these important nutrition programs are justified by the current estimates of need that have been received by the Congress.

Mr. President, I am pleased to report that this conference agreement supports continuation of the existing conservation programs administered by the Soil Conservation Service and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. These activities are critical to improving and conserving our soil and water resources.

An important element in the success of agriculture in the United States is the support it has enjoyed from both private and public research. In this agreement, $1.6 billion is directed specifically to research and extension programs. Of this amount, $97.5 million has been provided for the National Research Initiative, a program which has proven successful in attracting high quality research proposals from a broad spectrum of scientists.

This conference agreement places increased emphasis on rural development. Almost one-fourth of the bill total is available for programs that assist rural areas. Specifically, the agreement provides funding for rural water and waste disposal loans and grants, solid waste management grants, emergency community water assistance grants, and low-income housing loans. Many of these programs have been very beneficial and have improved the lives of those who live in our Nation's small towns and rural communities.

Through various programs, the conference agreement also attempts to strengthen U.S. agriculture's potential in world markets. Continued efforts to expand agricultural markets overseas are critical to a healthy domestic farm economy. Reflected in this agreement is continued support of the intermediate and short-term export credit guarantee programs, export credit guarantees to emerging democracies, the Public Law 480 or Food for Peace Program, the Export Enhancement Program, and the Market Promotion Program. In addition, the conferees provided $40 million for Public Law 480 debt restructuring under the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative, EAI. This debt reduction can provide substantial benefits for economic growth and environmental protection in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Funding is provided for the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and for the Department of the Treasury for interest expenses incurred by the Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation, and a limitation is established on the administrative expenses of the Farm Credit Administration.

The committee of conference on H.R. 5487 considered 124 amendments in disagreement between the two Houses. Although the conferees were faced with some major challenges due to the current fiscal conditions that we face, I believe those challenges were met and the differences were resolved to make this an agreement that is fiscally responsible and reflective of agricultural needs.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to approve this conference agreement.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, last Thursday the House and Senate conferees on the agricultural appropriations bill decided to provide no funds for the Wetlands Reserve Program in fiscal year 1993. I cannot express how profoundly disappointed and disturbed I feel by this decision of the conferees. Last Tuesday, when the Senate decided to add $54.9 million to the bill, I felt we had saved the program. But the decision of the conferees on Thursday made it a dark day for the environment, and one that I believe the Congress and the agricultural community will come to regret.

I am disappointed for many reasons. The first and primary is because, by approving the conference report before us now, Congress will miss the historic opportunity the wetlands reserve presents us. The program is unique because it brought the farmers and environmentalists together in a way that we had never before achieved. It was one of the programs that offered us the most hope that we could find our way out of the seemingly endless fighting between the two communities.

I am also disturbed because the program is immensely popular. This year was its first, and the program had enough funds to enroll 50,000 acres. Farmers responded by offering to enroll 466,000 acres—10 times the intended amount. We are cutting this program down dead in its tracks. And I just do not understand why.

Some may say—"This is not really a set-back for the program. The Department and farmers can go ahead and act as if they can sign up for the program, and we will just wait until 1994 to provide the moneys." This position ignores the tremendous damage the conferees action will do to the credibility of the program and the farming community's willingness to participate.

My amendment on the Senate floor stopped certain computer purchases at USDA pending USDA's reorganization. If I have a choice between wasteful spending, and investment in our future, my choice is clear. If I have choice between making bureaucrats wait for new computers, and helping farmers help the environment, my choice is clear.

Fortunately the conference did include funding for other critical initiatives such as the Water Quality Incentives Program. This program assists farmers in their efforts to farm in a more environmentally positive fashion.

The conference also included funding for the Organic Standards Certification Program and the Low Input Sustainable Agriculture Program, two of the many environmental initiatives in the 1990 farm bill.

It also included a significant increase in funding for the Rural Water and Sewer Program, which is important to both clean water and economic development in rural areas.

Finally, a number of the environmental initiatives in the farm bill are not dependent on funding decisions. These include reorienting the Conservation Reserve Program from a land retirement program, to focusing on environmentally significant land, and the pesticide recordkeeping requirements.

These permanent changes in the law still stand.

Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with the manager of the bill, H.R. 5487, that has come from the House.

The report contains language related to the recovery of the administrative costs of the Organic Certification Program.

Am I correct that the conference committee was not directing that the planning costs in 1993 must be recovered when the program becomes operational in 1994, but instead was stating its belief that the administrative costs should be recovered, as is required in the 1990 farm bill?

Mr. BUMPERS. The Senator is correct. The Department must make a determination, consistent with the law, about which costs are properly recoverable and which are not.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I was pleased to see that the agriculture conference report includes funds for the rural development grants add to the Senate bill. One of those grants would provide $400,000 for the North Central Kansas electric cooperative, NCK, to replace equipment destroyed by an inland hurricane on July 8.

Soon after the Senate accepted my floor amendment, the Jewell-Mitchell Cooperative Electric Co. contacted my office with a similar problem. The cooperative has suffered losses of $228,007 as the result of two major storms in June and July. This co-op faces very serious financial consequences as a result of storm damage, but unfortunately, I received their request too late to be of assistance.

I discussed this situation with the Rural Development Administration, RDA, and they see no problem with allowing both co-ops to be eligible for the $400,000 grant for disaster assistance. It seems only fair to let both co-ops use the funding, since they both face similar difficulties.

Would the Senator from Mississippi foresee any problems with the Jewell-Mitchell co-op using a portion of the funds set aside for the NCK co-op? I would like the Senator's thoughts on this subject, because, as ranking Republican on the subcommittee, he has been of such great assistance in securing the funding for the NCK co-op.

Mr. COCHRAN. I appreciate the Senator from Kansas bringing this to my attention, and I certainly would have no problem with this grant being allocated between the two co-ops in Kansas who have suffered these losses. In fact, I would strongly encourage the RDA to work closely with these co-ops to resolve the problems they have encountered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the majority leader.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, as indicated, there will be no further rollcall votes this evening. I assume the distinguished chairman of the committee will want the opportunity to review the amendment just filed before debate and action is taken on that.

I would like at this moment, with the Republican leader present on the floor and the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee present, to make a brief statement about the executive calendar. There are a number of nominations pending on the executive calendar. These are noninations which have been made by the President, have been reviewed by the various committees of jurisdiction of the Senate and are now ready for Senate action.

As majority leader, I have received a large and growing number of telephone calls and letters from people concerned about these nominations and urging actions on these nominations. I have checked with the distinguished Republican leader, and I have checked with the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. I am advised that the nominations are being held up by a Republican Senator.

I just want to make the RECORD clear for all of those who have been calling and writing me about these nominations by the President and insofar as I am concerned, we are prepared to act on these nominations. But we have been prevented from doing so at the request of a Republican Senator.

So I would like now to yield to the distinguished Republican leader, if he wishes to make any comment, and then I know that the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee wants to comment on this matter.

I just want there to be no misunderstanding about this. I personally have no objection to any of these nominees and am prepared to act on them. I am advised that we can proceed with respect to all but three of the persons on the calendar, including the persons listed under the judiciary calendar items 571, 634, 635, 636, and 637, which I believe are the most controversial items.

And so, therefore, I would hope that we could act with respect to as many of these nominations as possible before the Senate recesses tomorrow evening.

Mr. President, I would like to yield to the distinguished Republican leader for any comment he may choose to make if he wishes to do so.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader. In addition to nominations, there are also a number of treaties, some rather important treaties, that are also being held up because of an objection on this side.

I have notified the Senator who has the objection and asked him to come to the floor. I hope he will come to the floor. I hope that he will be here to make his case.

But I would also suggest, as pointed out by the majority leader, we could now clear all but three of these that have been on the calendar for some time. A number of these involve people who have made changes in their entire life, sold their property, prepared to move to a new station, and who are now being denied that opportunity because of one Senator with one hold. It seems to me that we cannot tolerate that. We are going to have to move forward. If that Senator wishes to discuss these all night and all day tomorrow, and whatever, that certainly is his prerogative and his right.

But there is a problem in the Judiciary Committee, as I am advised by the Senator in question, on getting one of his nominations for the U.S. district attorney on the agenda tomorrow in the Judiciary Committee.

I would just say that nobody is holding that nominee on this side of the aisle, and I understand nobody is holding it on that side of the aisle. But it is hard to explain to the Senator in question why, if that is the case, his nominee is not on the agenda for tomorrow.

So I would be very happy to yield the floor. I know the Senator, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, is here and will make a statement on that particular nomination.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN].

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I thank the leaders for the opportunity to speak to this.

Quite frankly, we have been working now for 18 months to deal with Senator PRESSLER's nominee as U.S. attorney. And the Judiciary Committee has not held up that nominee. There have been requests from the executive department relating to the need to follow up on a number of things relating to that nominee.

Now, it is true that a supplemental report—which is the fancy language for saying, in the Judiciary Committee, the report we needed to get from the executive branch—came in, I guess it was 12 days ago. It is an inch thick. I have no reason to believe there is anything in that report that suggests this gentleman should not become a U.S. attorney.

But I must tell you, A, the Judiciary Committee has not held him up. B, the Democrats have not held him up. C, nobody, to the best of my knowledge, in the Senate has held hin up. And the fact we have been going out of our way—and I see some of our Republican colleagues on the floor; I think they will tell you. It is fair to say we have done everything in our power to get as many of these judges up as quickly as we can, even some who were relatively controversial.

Now here we are, on the eve of adjourning—as we should and must—for a national convention, and we are trying to pass some of these folks out. As a matter of fact, there are people we held hearings on today. And the problem—I say for the RECORD, and I say to my friend from South Dakota, Mr. PRESSLER, who is listening—is just that this fellow has not been a priority. We got this thing on—do not hold me to Monday; but we got it within the last 12 days, while everybody is trying to work on all the other nominees. There are not but 15 Senators on this floor who have not, understandably, come to the Senator from Delaware and said: It is urgent; my judge must come up; can you follow up on the FBI report; can the staff look at it?

I might add for the RECORD, we would be able to move some of this faster. But we tried to work out, with the help of the ranking member, Senator THURMOND, and myself, having to ask the Justice Department and the White House whether they will allow us more investigators. And they would not allow us to have more investigators to have access to clear these things.

All I am trying to explain is that there is a bit of a gridlock here. And if my friend from South Dakota would reconsider holding everyone up—everyone; not just judicial nominees. There are people in the Department of Justice, Department of Energy, the National Institute of Building Sciences, the Department of Defense, et cetera. There are 30-some people being held up here.

I can assure the Senator that we just have not had the time, the staff, to sit down and read the report. And this is the last thing I will say. We read the report, Mr. President. The investigative staff reads the RECORD. And it usually takes someone between three and five followup telephone calls, in the regular course of business during the day, because it is the only time you can get these people, to follow up on what is said in the report and just to sign off on them.

So I can assure my friend that that is being done, and will be done. But it will not be done by the time the Judiciary Committee meets tomorrow.

Lastly, even if, when the Judiciary Committee meets in executive session, even if we were to favorably report on this U.S. attorney for Senator PRESSLER, under the Senate rules, under committee rules, there are 7 days, I believe it is, 7 working days, before he can be reported to the floor, without unanimous consent, to come to the floor to be voted on.

So, Mr. President, I hope our friend, Senator PRESSLER, will reconsider this. I have spoken to him repeatedly about this. I have—and I think he would be prepared to tell you on the RECORD over the last year and a half, helped him move this nominee through the maze downtown, where there was less than a receptive ear. So I would hope we not do this, and reconsider this.

I thank my colleagues for the opportunity to explain this. I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Republican leader, Senator DOLE.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have notified the Senator from South Dakota, and I hope that he will come to the floor. Otherwise, I hope the majority leader will take care of these nominations. If you want to object, you want to put on a hold, then you had better be here and protect yourself. I have done about all the protecting I care to do in this instance. We have tried to be reasonable, tried to work it out. I do not think that is going to happen.

I understand the frustration of the Senator from South Dakota, but there comes a time when we also have to understand other people may be a bit frustrated. And they may be the people involved and the families involved and the others involved, who may not have asked for these appointments, who may have been recruited for these appointments, and now are being blocked under the rules, which the Senator has the right to do.

So I hope the Senator from South Dakota will come to the Senate floor and give us his explanation.

My view is that we can accommodate the Senator's request, or try to accommodate the Senator's request. And if everything else fails, I would hope the majority leader will put all these nominations en bloc before us. Some of us are prepared to spend all night here, if necessary, to resolve this matter. We should not penalize innocent nominees because someone has a problem, particularly when that problem is being addressed by both sides of the aisle.

So I hope that if the Senator from South Dakota does not appear within the next 5 or 10 minutes, the majority leader will let us proceed to these nominations and get them out of here. People have paid the price for public service. They did not expect all this.

So, Mr. President, I hope that within the next 10 minutes, the majority leader might renew his request.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI].

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I want to thank Senator DOLE and Senator BIDEN for their comments on the floor.

I happen to have a U.S. attorney from the State of New Mexico on this list for tonight. There is absolutely no reason that he should be held up. The man is a splendid individual. He has served the public for years, and he anxiously awaits the confirmation that he is the U.S. attorney. He has been acting for months. It is not fair to him.

Tomorrow, there will be reported out by the Judiciary Committee a U.S. attorney of the State of New Mexico. Let me suggest that there is no reason for that to be held up tomorrow by anyone on the floor, in particular with the facts that have been discussed. This gentleman, for reasons that he had nothing to do with, has been held up for a long time. His family has suffered. His business has suffered. I just do not believe we ought to hold him up because somebody feels they have been dealt short shrift.

So I thank those on the floor tonight who talk sense. I will stay here if the leader needs me tonight, in case somebody wants to debate. I will be glad to do that. But the Senator ought to come down here and have to spend some time holding this up, not just by remote control. I think our leader on the Republican side, speaking for most of us, has indicated that, and I commend him.

Now, Mr. President, I am not sure what the order of business is, but I want to make some remarks on a subject that is unrelated specifically to this. I do not want to shut anyone off from this debate.

Is it appropriate for the Senator from New Mexico to speak now as if in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may speak on any subject. The 3-hour Pastore rule has expired.

Mr. DOMENICI. I want to yield the floor, however, because I see the Senator from Wyoming desires to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON].

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, it has been a very difficult matter. Indeed, it has.

I was elected to the Senate in 1978, and one of my fine colleagues was Senator PRESSLER from South Dakota, my neighboring State.

I have the highest regard for him. I consider him a friend. I have campaigned with him, I have laughed with him, we have legislated together, we have done things in my role as assistant leader. I worked with him. He has been quite supportive of the administration in most cases. We do not ask a test of purity, but I just say—and I think my colleague is on the floor, and I am pleased that he is, I address the Chair but I know that he is listening intently. I do not know what more our leader, Senator BOB DOLE, could do to accommodate my friend from South Dakota.

Mr. PRESSLER. Will my friend yield for a question?

Mr. SIMPSON. Indeed.

Mr. PRESSLER. What is the Senator from a small State to do when a judicial vacancy in his State lays open after he has submitted the names of all the Democrats, Republicans, Independents, and people who have applied or have been interested? I fight very hard for my small State of South Dakota. I know it. This is the first time in my career I have put a hold on any nomination. I just did it this morning. But what kind of ineptitude—maybe it is my ineptitude—is there in the U.S. Government that we cannot get these appointments moving faster than we have? Today I held them up for, so far, about an hour, I guess, from when they would have moved. But a small State Senator at some point has no choice but to stand up on the floor of the Senate and fight for his small State.

There are only three U.S. Federal judges in my State. Two of them are now working overtime, doing Indian cases over which they have primary jurisdiction. I discussed this matter with the Justice Department last December. I said, "I will take anybody you appoint if you want to appoint this person or that person."

What do I do? Do I just sit silently by and let my State suffer? What is the role? What am I supposed to be doing here as a Senator? Do I pack my bags and sit at home? What is the advice of my colleague?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I can talk about a smaller State than the State of South Dakota—the one I represent. I can tell you what this Senator would do. I would try to move through the avenues of comity, courtesy, common sense, and good judgment. I have, and my senior colleague, the Senator from Wyoming, MALCOLM WALLOP, presented a name for Federal district judge which has not gone anywhere yet. But I have not chosen to come to the floor of the U.S. Senate and place a hold on people that have no possible communication or contact with me in any way, who do not even know me, whose families have been uprooted, whose children have been removed from the schools, and who have been waiting for weeks and months to be processed by the U.S. Senate. That I can express to my friend from South Dakota.

I do not know that will happen with that hope-to-be-judge of Wyoming. But I do know that I will continue to work through the process with it as carefully as I can, knowing that time alone is my greatest enemy.

Mr. PRESSLER. If my friend will yield for a question, I am learning things. I learn new things every day. How long has there been a vacancy in the State of Wyoming?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, we have a senior judge who was in senior status who died, a very dear and respected man named Ewing T. Kerr. That just recently occurred. And we have another judge on senior status, and it has been many months. I will be glad to furnish that for the RECORD.

Mr. PRESSLER. Will my friend yield further? This was a vacancy that we anticipated, and we gave the necessary information. I did everything I was supposed to do as a Senator. What more do I do? If I do not come to the floor, what would my constituents say?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, constituents have a way of speaking every 6 years in a manner of clarity which is rather staggering to us all. So I cannot possibly discern that. But I wonder what the constituents would say in my State if, at each occasion, because I very much wanted a person who had been on my staff to be placed in a position within the Federal Government, especially as sensitive as U.S. attorney—I did not know Mr. Kevin Schafer, but I have read the FBI report just this afternoon. It took me an hour and a half. Personally, I cannot share with anyone what is in it, but certainly there is nothing in it, in my mind, that would prevent that man from being appointed as U.S. attorney.

There are certain things that appear there, the disgruntled employee of the Senator from South Dakota who apparently decided to pull the chain on the nominee who is now sitting as acting U.S. attorney in South Dakota. Those allegations then were renewed and reviewed by the FBI, and the Bureau then submitted a supplemental report—its most recent designation, I believe, is July 30—stating that certainly there is nothing to proceed with with regard to any kind of criminal conduct or further activities of the Department of Justice against this person.

I would say that his record—and I can go no further—is certainly one that would allow him to be sitting as U.S. attorney. But for one thing, he has had no experience as a lawyer nor as a trial attorney, and he must have had it now because he is acting attorney, and I hope it is going well. I have no problem with that at all. But that is the fact. And then, not only has the Senator from South Dakota presented the nominee of his choice—and it certainly should be considered, just like the one from the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP] or the Senator from California [Mr. SEYMOUR] who has one there that he cannot move either, or the Senator from New Mexico, who has been waiting patiently while a man gave up his entire career.

I am just saying that it is time to move forward. So when we move forward, then, if I am not mistaken, I will ask the Senator from South Dakota a question, that there was even a possibility that the man who is sitting as the acting U.S. attorney is now being considered by the Senator from South Dakota as the Federal district judge appointment. Is this correct?

Mr. PRESSLER. No; that is not directly correct. Let me say this: I always seek the advice and wisdom of others in this body. I come from a very small State, and I am amazed at how, on Federal projects, we have to fight doubly hard. I am amazed at how in getting judgeships, still we have to fight twice as hard. Senators from a small State cannot deliver Presidential votes, they cannot deliver large PAC contributions. I do not know if that is the reason. Maybe it is my own shortcoming.

But my concern here is the United States Federal judgeship and why there has not been action on that. That is the point that I am trying to raise. I am not worried. I have not read through the files my friend has read, and I thank him. I have the highest regard for the person he has mentioned and everything I know is of a very positive nature.

I do think that in the Senate I have conducted myself with comity and courtesy—maybe not good judgment, but I have always been available to the Senator from Wyoming to help him on matters that are of importance to him.

I am seeking to somehow make the point that this is a classic example, a judgeship, and that regarding the judgeship in South Dakota there has not been any action and there has not been any reason for it. The person he mentioned is not among those last December who expressed an interest. I sent their names to the Justice Department. But may I ask my friend from Wyoming how long ago it was?

May I ask my friend how long has it been since he submitted his names to the Department of Justice?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, many months ago, 6, 8. I would be glad to furnish that for the RECORD. I do not recall, but it has been many, many months.

But the Senator from South Dakota has asked me questions about "what do you do when you represent a small State?" I have tried to respond. I am responding myself, and I can only say if I had a gigantic beef with one agency of the Federal Government—maybe it is the Justice Department, or maybe it is the President of the United States—I would not direct my anguish and frustration and concern to 31 people who are on this calendar, who are waiting to be processed, because of a sitting U.S. attorney in a small State.

Mr. PRESSLER. That is not my only reason. This is the first time I have ever placed a hold on nominations in nearly 18 years in the Congress. I sympathize with all of the people who are trying to get through. I want to move them through faster. Let us find out why it takes so long. What is it that takes months and years to move things forward? Who do I talk to? I placed four calls to Boyden Gray. None of them have been returned. I am sure he is a busy man. Where do I go?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I wish I could chronicle it for this body, but it would be an exhausting chronicle of how many times I have tried to intervene to help my friend from South Dakota with problems in South Dakota. I have personally, on many occasions, spoken to the Chief of Staff, then John Sununu, to counsel Boyden Gray, to the present Chief of Staff, and to the President of the United States on more than several occasions with regard to requests from the Senator from South Dakota, and each and every time, whatever is accomplished is never enough. It is an insatiable maul of requests that I can no longer meet.

Therefore, I honestly say to my friend from South Dakota, whatever you wish to do, I will be here in a friendly adversary position to prevent you from doing it. And that is my intent, whether it be all night at the old corral, or here, or wherever it would be, high noon, low noon. But we are not going to sit still and watch 31 people dragged down because of some personal obsession with a single person, who I hope will receive whatever Federal position he wants. And I hope that the rest of them will be considered, just like mine are being considered. And I will get a list of all of the people I have requested to be appointed to this administration.

I am known as a personal friend of the President of the United States. I will get my scorecard out, which I think shows that I have recommended 340 people for positions in this administration, and 9 of them have been selected. If I were keeping score day after day after day, there would have been no calendar passed in this body. I do not. We cannot.

Therefore, I say with the greatest respect, whatever the Senator from South Dakota thinks has to be done, he should do. I will do everything in my power to do a singular thing, and that is move 31 people out of the turnstile here in the dungeon deep, who do not deserve to be there in any sense, under any circumstances, under anybody's sense of good faith and just plain old fairness.

Mr. PRESSLER. If my friend will yield, I say that it is not my intention to deprive 31 people of their jobs. But I do want to raise the issue of the judgeship in Pierre, South Dakota. It is primary Indian jurisdiction, original jurisdiction. I am meeting with the Sioux Indian tribal leaders later this month and again in October. I do not know why we have not been able to have progress on that judgeship, because we began discussing it in December.

It is not the U.S. Attorney that is my principal concern here. It is the U.S. judgeship. I cannot understand why I cannot get my calls returned from Boyden Gray. I cannot get a response as to what is wrong with any of the candidates. Now the judge from Rapid City has to take over the work in Pierre.

This is primarily a court of Indian original jurisdiction where Indian people have matters that would not normally be dealt with by a Federal judge.

Today, when I put this hold on, for the first time this year, I had a call from the Chief of Staff of the White House. That was pretty nice to get a call from Mr. Skinner. He said, "one of those guys is acceptable to us." I think it is a little too late to go forward this year. So I am kind of beaten down.

But I think this leads to the philosophical question of, what does the Senator from a small State do in a situation like this, when he is trying to protect his State? I do not intend to keep this hold on these people. I think this is a good exchange we are having. Maybe I am learning something.

Mr. SIMPSON. Well, Mr. President, I can understand the commitment of the Senator from South Dakota to the native American population. I represent a State that has two tribes, the Arapahos and the Shoshone. So I understand that.

I understand, too, the situation the Senator is in. I understand that. I hope the Senator understands, too, as I have done in the past with great regularity and sincerity, I will take this matter to the highest levels of the administration. I will try very much to go to bat again and again, and again, as I have in the past on this occasion. And that will be the case, regardless of what happens here, whether we have 4 nights and 4 days of vigorous discussion, or whatever it takes before this recess takes place, because I am perfectly willing to be here myself and to have others. Senator DOMENICI has indicated that he is ready to assist. But there are so many nuances and ramifications of this.

If you want to address the Indian issue, then it is my understanding that the former U.S. attorney was an Indian, or of Indian origin, or at least part Indian, and that person was displaced by this appointment. I understand the Indian community was quite incensed by that. So maybe that is in there, too.

Mr. PRESSLER. If my friend will yield, that is not the case. But that is not the purpose of my hold. We are talking about two different things.

Mr. SIMPSON. Is that the case?

Mr. PRESSLER. No.

Mr. SIMPSON. Who was the former U.S. Attorney?

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. Hogan.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Hogan is part Indian; is that correct?

Mr. PRESSLER. Yes.

Mr. SIMPSON. I understand the native American population was quite disturbed at the fact that Mr. Hogan, a skilled trial attorney who had served and done some very fine work, was replaced by a former staff member of the Senator's office with no previous legal experience, no trial experience, nothing; is that correct?

Mr. PRESSLER. No; that is not correct. The Indian community in South Dakota is very strongly supporting that appointment. In fact, there is currently a dispute going on that demonstrates just the opposite of what my friend has said.

The fact of the matter is that my position on the floor tonight is regarding a U.S. judge. If you wish to talk about the U.S. attorney, fine, but it is a vacancy in the U.S. judgeship in Pierre that has bothered me very much.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, do I have the floor? I believe that is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRYAN). The Senator retains the floor.

Mr. SIMPSON. Let me retain the floor and yield to my friend from New Mexico.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Wyoming and thank Senator PRESSLER. I think the exchange to the extent it helped the Senator, I am very pleased he saw fit to indicate he does not intend to hold the 31 nominees the Senator from Wyoming and Senator DOLE referred to.

I happen to have a U.S. attorney on that list. Tomorrow I hope late in the day I will have a U.S. district judge. I thank the Senator very much.

I frankly believe every U.S. attorney situation is different, I say to Senator PRESSLER. It is not easy to get any of them through. It takes a lot of time, obviously a lot of clearance, and obviously the U.S. Attorneys General and their staff have a lot to do and say about whether the nominee is going to clear or not. I think your principal argument is with them, as I see it.

I cannot tell anyone how to handle that. I had my share of problems. I am going to clear a judge soon. We started to work, you wonder about time, last February or March. He is clearing tomorrow. He got to the Senate about 6 months ago. All remaining time was in negotiating, FBI preliminary reports and those kinds of things. It happens. It is difficult to put in an exact formula or a way to do each one.

I do not know that it is a small State problem. I am a small State. Wyoming is a small State. There are a number of small States. It must be some other peculiarities.

MORATORIUM ON IMPLEMENTATION OF REGULATIONS UNDER THE SAFE DRINKING ACT

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, a while ago I rose to try to get a statement in the RECORD regarding a moratorium I am going to try to have the Senate vote on as part of the HUD appropriation bill. I have a statement explaining what I am going to do. I am going to ask it be made a part of the RECORD in its entirety after I make just a couple remarks, with the Senator from Wyoming's permission, and they will be brief.

Let me indicate that the legislation is going to give the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency the authority—during the time of the moratorium—to implement additional regulations that present significant risk to human health. Despite what some may say, this is real authority that I expect the Administrator to exercise. To the extent there is concern that roadblocks make it difficult for him to act, I am prepared to make appropriate changes to ensure prompt action.

In addition, I have repeatedly stated I expect the first regulation that the Administrator would move forward on would be the lead and copper rule. The health risks from lead and copper are well known, particularly for young children. While I believe there is sufficient authority for the Administrator to move forward on this rule, for the sake of insuring that is the case, when I offer Senate bill 2900 as an amendment, it will be altered to pull the lead and copper rule from under the moratorium.

Third, there has been a tremendous amount of misinformation about this bill and thus this amendment. I have listed each one of the criticisms, some from environmental groups, some from others, and I have listed the truth about them. I am hopeful that Senators who have cosponsored this—there are now 20—and those who are thinking about it will read this statement or their staffers will, because I believe we are doing right by all the small communities of the United States, and we are not incurring any risk for small children and grown adults or senior citizens in its adoption.

Mr. President, I would like to take a few moments of the Senate's time to discuss legislation I introduced on June 26, along with Senators BROWN and NICKLES—S. 2900.

This legislation imposes a moratorium on the implementation of further regulations under the Safe Drinking Water Act until EPA completes an in-depth review of the program, submits recommended changes to the Congress, and the Congress reauthorizes the statute.

Mr. President, serious problems exist with this program. The excessive costs to administer and implement the program are being called into question because many of the contaminants slated to be regulated pose absolutely no risk in drinking water.

This bill has three purposes: First, it provides relief to small water systems who have argued they cannot afford to meet Federal monitoring requirements; second, it is an interim measure that will provide the authorizing Committee time to review the impacts of the Safe Drinking Water Act and consider fundamental changes to the program; and third, it will ensure the continued protection of public health and monitoring for a very large number of contaminants.

Communities all over the country do not understand why they must comply with regulations for contaminants that do not even exist in their water systems, or at levels well below health concerns.

I would like to bring this body up-to-date on several developments on this issue.

First, the National Governors' Association last week adopted a resolution, endorsing the basic tenets of S. 2900.

The Governors' strongly worded statement points out the serious problems with this program. The Governors' recommendations are divided into three components—statutory change, improving program efficiency, and addressing funding shortfalls. I would like to share with this body the recommended statutory changes:

> It will not be possible to make the Safe Drinking Water Act work properly without Congressional action. The Governors believe that the following three actions are the minimum necessary:
> 1. Until the Safe Drinking Water Act is reauthorized, Congress should freeze implementation of the national primary drinking water regulations at the thirty-five rules that states have implemented in full as of July 1992, and place a moratorium on promulgation of new rules. Congress should require that EPA conduct risk assessment studies of the contaminants referenced in and listed pursuant to Safe Drinking Water Act section 1412. Congress should require that EPA promulgate and/or implement national primary drinking water regulations for any contaminants if the risk-assessment studies indicate that regulation is justified by significant risk to public health.
> 2. Congress should reauthorize the Safe Drinking Water Act as soon as feasible and eliminate rigid provisions that require regulation of specified numbers of contaminants regardless of the risk they present. The law should allow EPA and the States to focus on the most significant risks.
> 3. If the administrative proposals recommended in items 5 and 6 are not allowed under existing statutory authority, they should be incorporated in the reauthorization of the Safe Drinking Water Act. The goal is to have clean and simple standards and to allow States maximum flexibility in meeting these standards.

Second, in my discussions with other Members, I have indicated my intention to make changes to S. 2900, as introduced. The bill now halts further implementation of regulations beyond the 35 contaminants being regulated at the time the bill was introduced.

However, the legislation gives the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency the authority—during the time of the moratorium—to implement additional regulations that present significant risk to human health. Despite what some may say, this is real authority that I expect the Administrator to exercise. To the extent there is concern that roadblocks make it difficult for the Administrator to act, I am prepared to make appropriate changes to ensure prompt action once the Administrator determines regulation is warranted.

In addition, I have repeatedly stated that I expect the first regulation the Administrator would move forward on would be the lead and copper rule. The health risks from lead are well-documented, particularly for young children. While I believe there is sufficient authority for the Administrator to move forward on that rule, for the sake of ensuring that is the case, when I offer S. 2900 as an amendment, it will be changed to pull the lead and copper rule out from under the moratorium.

Third, a tremendous amount of misinformation is being spread around about this bill and the potential impacts of it.

I would like to set the record straight.

The existing standards that would continue under this bill represent the contaminants that pose the greatest risk to public health. One estimate is that these standards will prevent nearly 440 cases of cancer each year. In addition, they include important microbiological and virus protection.

The standards that would be put on hold, by one estimate, prevent only .8 cancer cases per year and health effects arise only after long-term or lifetime exposure. Obviously, because this bill establishes only a temporary moratorium, significant exposure is not realistically expected.

Significant monitoring, beyond the 35 contaminants, would continue during the time of the moratorium. There are 12 methods used to monitor for the 35 standards. Those 12 methods can identify more than 60 contaminants—providing valuable information to the Administrator to support a decision to issue additional regulations in the future.

Regulations in place prior to the cutoff for the moratorium would remain in effect—including those standards regulated under the interim primary drinking water regulations. I believe members have received information stating that these regulations would be stopped under the bill. That is simply not correct and I want that to be understood by everyone.

For example, you have been told that a standard for nitrates would be placed under the moratorium. Nitrates contamination causes blue baby syndrome, a serious, serious health problem. Let me make it perfectly clear, the nitrates standard would continue in effect under this bill. The information you received on this is not correct.

A tremendous amount of information is being circulated about the health hazards of disinfection byproducts, a problem that one study concludes causes 10,700 cases of colon and rectal cancers per year. The existing standard applying to trihalomethanes—one disinfection byproduct—is not affected by the moratorium. In addition, EPA would continue in its current process of studying whether additional regulation is warranted.

Some have expressed concern that with this bill, we are suggesting that different health standards apply to small systems than to large systems. Let me make it clear, while I believe we need to review whether or not we should provide a different regulatory structure for small systems, I have never advocated less health protection for rural areas than for cities.

Finally, there are some who argue that this is simply an issue of providing more money to the States in order to get the job done. Mr. President, I wish it were that easy.

On the one hand, we are hearing from our States because they do not have sufficient resources to administer this program.

On the other hand, we are hearing from water systems around the country who do not have sufficient resources to implement the requirements of the act. It is estimated that the monitoring requirements of the program may cost over $200 per family per year for small systems. When many of these contaminants don't even occur in drinking water, it is inconceivable why we are asking people to spend scarce resources.

Mr. President, the Congress cannot ignore this problem any longer. We must act affirmatively on S. 2900, and move forward in addressing the numerous problems with the Safe Drinking Water Act.

S. 2900 sets up a rational process by which such a review can occur.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Senator for giving me time. If he thinks I should remain to help with this matter I will. If not, I will yield the floor and leave at this time.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming retains the floor.

Mr. SIMPSON. I yield for a question to my friend.

Mr. PRESSLER. My friend from Wyoming has said something about a replacement of the U.S. attorney in South Dakota. Let me emphasize my main concern here is a judgeship in South Dakota. The previous U.S. attorney served 10 years. The Justice Department notified me—I did not initiate this—that they wanted to rotate after 2 years or something to that effect. I wanted to make that part of the record.

Let me also say in terms of the Indian communities being incensed, I believe every tribal chief in South Dakota will strongly support this U.S. attorney. I have not heard that this is not true. As far as I know, this attorney is supported by Senator DASCHLE and myself and many others. We are trying to get him confirmed or trying to find out why he is not confirmed or, at least, what is going on.

The real issue is the U.S. judge in Pierre. We have now two judges doing the work of one. I spoke with one judge the other night, Judge Battey. This is a tough thing. I feel responsible.

People in the State asked me, and should, they should kick me in the pants: What is wrong with you? Why do we not have another U.S. judge?

We had a retirement announced well in advance. I went to the Justice Department well in advance. I remember once calling to speak to the Attorney General or someone over there last year. I have done everything I can do.

By putting a hold on for 8 or 10 hours here today I seem to have created a firestorm. There is something wrong in the way we do this. There should be orderly procedure. This is a professional position, U.S. Federal judge. We get good quality people to apply in our State, the best people.

That is where I stand. I am not going to object. But I wanted to say my piece.

Mr. SIMPSON. I plan to assist the Senator from South Dakota in any possible way that I can to achieve his objective, just as I have promised, not just promised but done in the past, and I will continue to do that at every level. It is not my position here to get into the merits of the nominees. Neither should we be checking the merits of 31 people who are disruptive of clearness, who are truly in a sense innocent victims of whatever it is that we do and we do these things.

But am I hearing from the Senator from South Dakota that he is willing to accept my word that I will do everything I can, I mean that, to break this logjam, and hopefully Wyoming judge, too? If he will help me on that one I will help him on this one. There is no quid pro quo, I jest. That is where we are. We do not get the things we want here and certainly I have not. I think I hope that we can go forward and I will make that pledge.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I look forward to working with the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand the distinguished Senator from South Dakota no longer objects to considering the nominees. It will be. I first thank the Senator from South Dakota and indicate as the Senator from Wyoming has that we will continue. I hope this Senator has in the past to be of assistance to all of my colleagues on this side, particularly my friend from South Dakota, and I appreciate his sensitivity to this rather important issue, because other Members indicated that they were prepared if necessary to have extended debate on the nominations. That will not now be necessary. For that I thank the distinguished Senator from South Dakota.

APPOINTMENT BY THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the majority leader, pursuant to Public Law 102-325, appoints the following Senators as members of the National Commission on the Cost of Higher Education:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG], from the Appropriations Committee; and

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL], from the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

The Chair recognizes the majority leader.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATE RESOLUTION 330

Mr. RUDMAN. Mr. President, I rise in strong opposition to Senate Resolution 330, a resolution urging the President to seek Security Council authorization for the use of force in Bosnia-Hercegovina to provide humanitarian relief for civilians, to secure access to the refugee and POW camps, and to place heavy weapons under U.N. supervision.

Like all Americans, Mr. President, I am horrified by the news reports and television pictures coming out of Bosnia and the rest of the former country of Yugoslavia. As terrible as the atrocities and fighting are, however, the decision to commit the U.S. Armed Forces to combat is one that must be undertaken after very hard and realistic thinking about our objectives, the national security interests at stake, the forces we are prepared to commit, and their relationship to the objectives, the sacrifices we are prepared to ask of our servicemen, and the willingness of the American people to support such a commitment.

Regrettably, the pending resolution is not the product of such a careful analysis. Instead, this resolution represents an emotional response, albeit for the best of reasons, to the tragedy unfolding in the Balkans. It states objectives which cannot be met without the massive application of American force, probably for a period of years. That is a commitment I am not now prepared to make, and that I am confident the American people are not prepared to support.

The area encompassing the former nation of Yugoslavia has been racked by tension and conflict for over 1,000 years. The fighting has been between the Slavic people indigenous to the region and the great powers which occupied it for much of the time, as well as among those Slavs who have been, and are, separated by religion and nationality. They fought the Ottoman Empire, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and each other at the same time. When Nazi Germany invaded in 1942, they fought the Germans even while continuing to fight and kill each other. It is worth noting that the German invasion force consisted of 550,000 men, and over 30 German divisions could not suppress the partisan guerrillas during the 2-year German occupation.

In 1945, guerrilla leader Josip Broz Tito took power and established a Communist government. While Tito was able to suppress the religious and ethnic divisions which had plagued the nation during his 35 years of rule, he faced a new problem following his break with Stalin and the Soviet Union in 1948: He feared a Warsaw Pact invasion. To forestall this, he took two steps. First, he opened a relationship with the United States. Second, and more important under the present circumstances, military service was made mandatory and every household was armed. In short, the Yugoslav Government decided to prepare for a prolonged guerrilla war if necessary to fight Soviet and other Warsaw Pact forces.

That brings us to the present time. We have a bitter conflict bred by centuries of religious, ethnic, and national divisions; Lebanon represents the prime example of how difficult such a conflict is to resolve. We have a geographic area consisting primarily of heavily wooded mountains. Finally, we have a people who have been trained in the use of arms, and who have the arms to use.

As a result, there are hundreds of thousands of Serbian, Croatian, and Bosnian militiamen fighting in Bosnia. There is another large number of Serbian and Croatian militiamen in Croatia, who continue to fight each other notwithstanding the presence of a 15,000 man U.N. peacekeeping force. Finally, the Serbian-dominated Yugoslav army and more Serbian militiamen remain in reserve in Serbia. The control by the civilian governments of the three countries over these forces varies widely, and, in many cases, is tenuous at best. Atrocities have been committed by all sides, although the Serbians seem to be guilty of more of them.

Senate Resolution 300 proposes to address this tragedy by setting out objectives that cannot, in all probability, be met without the massive application of force. The resolution specifically urges the adoption of a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing the use of force to ensure the delivery of humanitarian supplies and international access to refugee and POW camps. In addition, the resolution calls on the Security Council to develop the means to implement a cease-fire plan, including placing all heavy weapons in Bosnia under U.N. control.

Let us examine what it will take to meet these objectives. First, it requires the commitment of ground troops. Airpower cannot suppress armed militias and snipers. There are no key command and control facilities to knock out, no critical logistic depots to destroy, and no important lines of communication to interdict. It is also very difficult to hit artillery in mountains from the air. Even if the first attack has some success, the artillery will then be dispersed and dug in, making them more difficult to find and attack thereafter.

Our military experts have estimated that it would take at least two divisions, or 30,000 troops, to secure Sarajevo airport alone. Alternately, there have been discussions about opening a Croatia to Sarajevo road; General Galvin, the former commander of NATO and U.S. forces in Europe, estimated just yesterday that such an effort would take about 70,000 troops.

But, while such a large commitment might secure the airport or the road, it does not protect the soldiers. What happens when these soldiers are attacked? Do we continually expand the allied zone of control in an effort to drive the militias back? How far do we expand our lines—until we have the entire country? What is our response, when the Serbs go to ground and start launching guerrilla or terrorist attacks, as will inevitably occur?

Access to the camps would require an additional commitment of troops and, 150,000 troops later, nothing will have been done to resolve the territorial disputes, the settlement of refugees, and centuries of hatred in the region. As General Galvin stated yesterday: "We could drive down the level of fighting, but it would still be a guerrilla war, and we would have to put a lot of forces in for a long time. We'd have to take casualties. It would cost a lot of money, and it would be unpredictable. It would be like Afghanistan with the tribes fighting each other and us in the middle."

As for gaining control over the heavy weapons, none of the militias will agree to turn over what they have. Moreover, the pending resolution contains seeds which poison whatever minimal chance there was of Serbian cooperation in such an endeavor by raising the prospect of trying Serbians for war crimes and lifting the existing arms embargo for the Bosnians alone. Once again, to meet this objective, it will require the deployment of ground troops, and that means significant casualties.

Where will these ground troops come from? Even if our NATO allies are willing to substantially contribute to this endeavor, and that is doubtful, a large percentage will have to be from the United States. I seriously doubt the American people are willing to support such a massive effort.

Some Members have suggested that demonstrations of force, primarily involving air power, will be enough to make the Serb militias see reason. That, I regret to say, is the worst kind of wishful thinking. It ignores the powerful forces of hatred at work, the tenuous control civilian authorities have over the militias, the fact that those militias control territory they will not voluntarily yield, the nature of the terrain, and hundreds of years of history.

The reality is that a serious and effective effort to bring an end of the fighting and the atrocities will involve a massive deployment of troops to occupy most of Bosnia, parts of Croatia, and possibly all or most of Serbia. It will be a long-term commitment, there will be many casualties, and violent attacks on the occupying force and elsewhere in the world will continue at some level for years. While such a plan might be militarily feasible, I hear no Member suggesting that he or she is willing to incur the resulting costs. And if we level with the American people about what is involved, their answer will be a resounding "No."

Eight years ago, Secretary of Defense Weinberger laid down the conditions he felt had to be met to commit U.S. troops to combat. They included that the "vital" interest of the United States be at stake, that the United States have a "clear intention of winning," that the political and military objectives to be achieved be clearly defined, and that there be reasonable assurance of support by Congress and the American people. None of these conditions have been met to date in this case.

Accordingly, I believe that it is irresponsible for the Senate to urge the United Nations to adopt a course of action which, if followed through on, will inevitably require the commitment of U.S. forces to combat.

Mr. President, in closing, let me state that I appreciate the compassion that led to this resolution, and I recognize the human tragedy now taking place in Bosnia and Croatia. But millions have died from brutal fighting and starvation in many countries throughout the world in the last few decades—Nigeria, Ethiopia, and Cambodia are a few examples—and the United States chose to not intervene because there was no compelling national interest or way to achieve the objective at a cost we were willing to incur. Similarly, there are no calls today to intervene in Somalia, where it is estimated that one-quarter of the people will die in the next 6 months due to fighting between various clans.

As tragic as the situation now is in the former Yugoslavia, it is not significantly different from the others. The American national interest does not justify the costly commitment being proposed by this resolution, and accordingly, I cast my vote against it.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

CRISIS IN BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, like people everywhere, I am horrified by the senseless slaughter and destruction that is taking place in Bosnia. Who cannot be moved by the pictures we see daily of dead and wounded civilians—waiting in line outside a store to buy bread; at a cemetery burying a murdered grandchild? Who is not shocked by the stories coming out with flood of refugees; stories of ethnic cleansing, of death, and mistreatment in camps eerily reminiscent of the Holocaust. What is so chilling about the civilian toll is that these unfortunates are not inadvertently caught in the crossfire; they are the intended targets and victims of a deliberate and horrific campaign to rid greater Serbia of any unwanted inhabitants of the wrong ethnic or religious background.

Seeing these pictures and hearing these stories, many people are calling for the United States to do something—a most natural reaction. I am a veteran of two wars and am wary of any military engagement where the goals are unclear and the means are uncertain. We have to be clear about what we are, and are not, willing to do in Bosnia.

I think the resolution recommended by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, outlines a specific, measured course of intervention aimed at protecting the aid pipeline. The resolution anticipates a multilateral effort under U.N. auspices. Further, the resolution does not authorize anything. Rather it urges the President to do exactly what he is doing—seeking a U.N. consensus on appropriate multilateral actions to be taken in response to the crisis in Bosnia. When and if, with U.S. leadership, such a consensus is reached, the President will come back to the Congress and to the American people to explain what the goals of the U.N. action will be and what role the United States will play in that operation.

Undeniably, ensuring the delivery of humanitarian supplies to the people of the beleaguered Bosnian nation will not be a risk-free operation. And if we make such a commitment, we must be prepared to follow through—we cannot bluff. The United States, of course, enjoys a veto over any Security Council action. Therefore, we can rest assured that any action by the Security Council will have to be satisfactory to the U.S. Government.

On the other hand, I believe we should be very careful when talking about bringing peace to Bosnia through military force. Inserting ourselves into an ongoing war driven by ethnic animosity that is centuries old would require a major U.S. force commitment of indeterminable duration, with the very real probability of casualties. I am not at all sure the American people, outraged as they are about the atrocities occurring in Bosnia, are prepared to make that kind of commitment.

Nevertheless, expressing caution about one end of the spectrum of possible U.S. intervention—militarily imposing peace on the region—does not mean we should throw up our hands and conclude that we can do nothing about this continuing tragedy but wring our hands. I believe there is a middle ground. I believe the President is pursuing this middle ground in the United Nations; I believe this resolution, a bipartisan resolution, brings the executive and the legislative branches together in this pursuit.

BOSNIA-HERCEGOVINA

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of Senate Resolution 330, a sense-of-the-Senate resolution urging the President to call an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council in order to accomplish two specific objectives.

First, the resolution urges the President to seek U.N. Security Council authorization of all necessary means, including multilateral military force, to provide humanitarian relief to the civilians in Bosnia-Hercegovina. Second, the resolution states that the question of how to ensure access of United Nations and International Red Cross personnel to refugee and prisoner of war camps in the former Yugoslavia should be discussed.

Mr. President, the Senate is considering this resolution today not because we are trigger-happy and seek to involve this country in a very difficult conflict overseas.

We are considering this resolution today simply because President Bush has failed to provide the necessary leadership on this issue.

For months, war has been raging in Bosnia, and the administration has been unwilling to take American policy beyond an ineffective economic and diplomatic embargo of Serbia. Torture and executions of civilians in Bosnia are only tragic examples of what can happen when the leader of the free world acts too late and too timidly in the face of aggression and murderous campaigns of ethnic cleansing.

The American people, who, for the first time last week saw pictures of internment camp victims, are asking why our Government is so late in calling attention to, and demanding a halt, to these atrocities, particularly when we responded so dramatically to aggression in Kuwait.

Why, they ask, were we willing to spend billions of taxpayers dollars to liberate Kuwait, but when it comes to taking meaningful steps to provide relief to the citizens of Bosnia who are being slaughtered, the administration requires evidence of Nazi-style death camps before deciding to act.

What did the President think would occur when Serbian armies in Bosnia began pursuing policies of ethnic cleansing?

With reports that Serbia is engaged in its own final solution against non-Serbs and those Serbs who disagree with the present policy, no further delay can be justified; no more excuses can be tolerated. We ignored Hitler's genocide against 6 million Jews, and we must not make the same mistake again.

After earlier criticizing as reckless Bill Clinton's support for the use of force, if needed, President Bush has finally decided that force may be necessary to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid. In addition, the administration has now decided to extend full diplomatic recognition to Bosnia-Hercegovina, Croatia, and Slovenia.

While these steps are welcome, the American people are asking where our President, who prides himself on his foreign policy expertise, has been for the last month, 5 months, or 10 months while this brutal war raged on?

Standing silent in the face of the kind of human suffering we are witnessing in Bosnia is not what the new world order is supposed to be all about.

Mr. President, the United States, in concert with our allies, must wait no longer to respond to the atrocities occurring there and throughout the former Yugoslavia.

The resolution now before the Senate, which urges the United States seek United Nations authorization for all necessary means to implement U.N. Security Council resolutions, represents an important response to the situation in the Balkans.

The actions proposed by this resolution are not reckless, but responsible. What is reckless is the administration's failure to act up to now, and its apparent inability to understand the facts.

First, this is not simply a civil war, but a situation where independent and sovereign states are being brutally invaded.

Second, while atrocities are occurring on all sides, it is clear that the aggressor is Serbia, armed with guns and ammunition supplied by Belgrade.

And, third, the United States does have strategic interests which require that we not turn our backs on this crisis. The risks of doing so are spelled out in an article entitled "It is bad policy to neglect the Balkans" by Daniel Nelson, which appeared in the June 25, 1991 edition of the San Francisco Chronicle. I ask unanimous consent that that article be printed in full at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. President, U.S. policy concerning the former Yugoslavia has been woefully inadequate. The economic and diplomatic embargo of Serbia has not been effective in stopping Serbian aggression against Bosnian civilians, and past expressions of American condemnation have been dismissed as pure rhetoric.

Adoption of the resolution before us today will demonstrate our resolve to address the crisis in Yugoslavia in a serious manner, and I strongly urge my colleagues to give it their support.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the San Francisco Chronicle, June 25, 1991]

IT IS BAD POLICY TO NEGLECT THE BALKANS

(By Daniel Nelson)

Mention the Balkans and you inspire visions of backwardness, corruption, Count Dracula and the Orient Express.

But behind these images is political reality—that Balkan discontents repeatedly have fueled European crises. In the 1990s, this Balkan imbroglio may again spill over to affect states from the Atlantic to the Urals, and the West seems not to care.

What is it that makes this peninsula between the Black, Adriatic, Aegean and Mediterranean seas so volatile?

Ethno-nationalism, a symbiosis between ethnic identity and intolerant chauvinism, is a key propellant. Soviet occupation, the weight of Communist bureaucracy and secret police repressed, but never ameliorated these visceral emotions.

The wrenching shift from centrally planned to market economics has raised the ante. For Romania, Bulgaria and Albania, the Stalinist model prevailed more completely than even in the U.S.S.R., and changes now are abrupt and costly. Yugoslavia's economic halfway house led to unimaginable corruption by the party elite.

But why should we care? In the 1990s, the Balkans have regained autonomy but with little assurance of peace or prosperity. Today the region is fertile ground for demands fanned by nationalist rhetoric.

During the 1980s, moreover, Albanians and Turks were the continent's fastest growing ethnic groups. The Balkans are also far poorer than the rest of Europe. As the European Community grapples with the issue of mass migration, a surge of Balkan peoples toward economic opportunity causes Western Europe great anxiety.

Finally, we ought not forget that the furtherance of democractic values and institutions will nowhere be tested more vigorously than in southeastern Europe. Here democracy's re-birth will be slow and painful.

This reading is one that ought to turn Western heads. The poorest and demographically fastest-growing part of Europe is, simultaneously, where democratic development is most challenged by volatility. To most, this spells trouble.

Indeed, the case with Yugoslavia suggests that domestic unrest could, in short order, spread throughout the region. Unless we foolishly assume that we can insulate the rest of Europe from desultory politics of the Balkans, there is no way to make European security immume from these afflictions.

A notion of a Europe whole and free and the ideals of the Charter of Paris cease to be universal if the West chooses to defend them selectively. If we accept that the Balkans can be left to endure new traumas without our concern, then new European walls will be erected.

The Balkans are not without hope. Turning the corner from a rigidly constrained political sphere provides new strength from below. Leaders and their policies are today matters of public discourse, and it would be impossible to again repress this.

But absent substantial Western commitments to the Balkans' development and security, the Balkans will once again be the Achilles heel of European peace. What can we do?

Secretary of State James Baker's June 18 speech in Berlin offered small-scale, technical aid proposals and vague institutional ties. Instead, tangible economic measures ought to be foremost—debt swaps, debt foregiveness, and additional multilateral loans from the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Heightened political and security assistance can be provided by institutionalizing the role of Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe in all domains.

But specific proposals are less critical at this jucture than Western engagement. The Balkans can become an open wound from which European and U.S. interests will suffer. Balkan neglect is bad policy.

TODAY'S "BOXSCORE" OF THE NATIONAL DEBT

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, Senator HELMS is in North Carolina recuperating following heart surgery, and he has asked me to submit for the RECORD each day the Senate is in session what the Senator calls the "Congressional Irresponsibility Boxscore."

The information is provided to me by the staff of Senator HELMS. The Senator from North Carolina instituted this daily report on February 26.

The Federal debt run up by the U.S. Congress stood at $3,999,397,071,325.80, as of the close of business on Friday, August 7, 1992.

On a per capita basis, every man, woman, and child owes $15,570.40—thanks to the big spenders in Congress for the past half century. Paying the interest on this massive debt, averaged out, amounts to $1,127.85 per year for each man, woman, and child in America—or, to look at it another way, for each family of four, the tab—to pay the interest alone—comes to $4,511.40 per year.

RELEASE OF SENATE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON AGING'S REPORT ON THE AFFORDABILITY AND ACCESSIBILITY OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, today I am joining Senator PRYOR, the Chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, in releasing a report which once again dramatically illustrates the huge difficulties that senior citizens across this Nation are having in meeting the costs of their prescription drugs.

For millions of older Americans, taking prescription drugs can mean the difference between life or death. Unfortunately, however, far too many older Americans are unable to afford the drugs they need to sustain life, or to avoid hospitalization, because the price of prescription drugs has skyrocketed over the past decade.

As this report illustrates, far too often senior citizens are left on their own to pay prescription drug prices, which have soared beyond their reach.

Unlike hospital or physician services, there is little public—or affordable private—coverage for prescription drugs. While Medicaid does provide some prescription drug coverage for very low-income Americans, millions more low-income older Americans are exposed to potentially catastrophic prescription drug costs. In addition, Medicare does not cover out patient prescription drugs, and Medigap insurance policies generally offer inadequate prescription drug coverage.

The consequence of all this is to leave millions of older Americans living on fixed incomes at the mercy of exorbitant, unrelenting increases in prescription drug prices.

I want to share with my colleagues a few of the real-life stories behind the statistics.

A 79-year-old woman from Lisbon Falls, ME, testified earlier this year at an Aging Committee field hearing that the $200 per month she and her husband spend on medications takes a major chunk out of their limited income from Social Security. Because of high prescription drug bills, they depend on neighbors and friends to pay for food and heating.

A man from Presque Isle, ME, wrote me to say that his drug costs reach about $3,000 every 90 days. While he has some prescription drug coverage, the price of these drugs has more than doubled over the past decade.

A widow from central Maine wrote:

> I am living on a fixed income and wonder each month what food I can cut to pay for my prescriptions.

A senior citizen from Lubec wrote:

> There are people who don't get their prescriptions filled because they don't have the money. Those who do take only half their prescription and make do, because they cannot afford them.

I could go on and on, but it is clear from these comments that the problem of escalating prescription drug prices is far-reaching and so severe that people across the country are forced to make life or death decisions on whether to eat, keep warm, or take their medicine.

While our senior citizens are scrimping and reaching deeper into their pockets to pay for their prescriptions, the pharmaceutical companies are hitting the American public with a one-two punch: they are reaping the benefits of excessive tax subsidies with one hand and continuing to raise the price of their products with the other.

The annual profit margin of the drug industry is more than three times the profit margin of the average Fortune 500 company. Prescription drug price increases have tripled the rate of general inflation since 1980. While there is nothing wrong with profits, they should not be collected at the expense of the most vulnerable in our society.

Some major drug companies would have us believe that the way to make prescription drugs more available to seniors is through more insurance coverage or through a Medicare outpatient drug benefit. Mr. President, unless we take steps to curb excessive price increases, these solutions simply shift the cost of inflated drug prices to other payors, and do not address the underlying problem of massive increases in the cost of prescription drugs themselves. In my view, cost containment must come first—or at least hand-in-hand with—more coverage for prescription drugs.

Some drug companies also point to their own indigent drug problems which provide drugs free of charge to poor Americans as a means of improving access to prescription drugs. As the report we are releasing today illustrates, these programs are commendable efforts, but they are by no means a substitute for curbing high drug prices. Some drug programs exclude large segments of indigent patients, have cumbersome distribution procedures, and are not widely used by doctors whose patients could qualify for the programs.

While the pharmaceutical industry has taken steps in recent months to promote their indigent drug programs more extensively, these programs are still not a substitute for more affordable drug prices.

The report we are releasing today makes several recommendations on how physicians, patients, and pharmacists can make better use of these drug programs, and I hope it will be useful to physicians, patients, and agencies which serve elderly and low-income Americans.

Mr. President, in closing, I want to state that the drug companies should not be expected to give their drugs away free, nor should they be castigated for making reasonable profits. Gouging a public which is dependent on prescription drugs is, however, outrageous and should not be tolerated.

TRIBUTE TO MAJ. GEN. CHARLES A. HINES

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity to salute Maj. Gen. Charles A. Hines who, as of August 31, 1992, will retire from the Army after 38 years of continuous service. General Hines will be retiring from his post as the Commanding General of Fort McClellan Army Base, near Anniston, AL. It was General Hines' consummate professionalism that helped rescue Fort McClellan from closure last year.

General Hines has held a wide variety of important command and staff positions during his military tenure. He has worked in the Army as the Director of Manpower for the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel. His assignments have also included a role as Strategic Research Analyst and Director of Evaluation and Organization Effectiveness for the U.S. Army War College. He was Commander of the 14th Military Police Brigade of U.S. Army in Europe. In July 1989, General Hines took over at Fort McClellan, becoming the first black commanding general of a major military installation in the South.

Soon after the general took over the position, he was told that the base had been selected for closure. Luckily, the base closure process was revamped and the base was spared. But the base was again slated for closure in April of last year. The base again escaped closure as the Base Realignment and Closure Commission caused it to remain open. While he had to act within restraints imposed by the Department of Defense, his advice and leadership, exercised in a superb professional manner, proved to be of enormous value.

With base closure behind him, General Hines shrewdly began concentrating on finding additional missions for the post. His efforts paid off when the 11th Chemical Company moved its operations there last December. The 209th Military Police Company is also relocating to Fort McClellan. Other Federal and State agencies have used the post facilities for many types of training. The Alabama Army National Guard has more personnel training at the base now than at any time in the past 25 years. The Departments of Defense and the Army have begun investing more resources in the fort's future. Millions of dollars have been released or earmarked to augment current training or to initiate new programs. These projects are due in no small part to the general's expert leadership.

One need look no further than General Hines' impressive list of awards and decorations to realize just how important his service has proven over the years. He has received the Legion of Merit three times, the Bronze Star Medal and the Meritorious Service Medal six times each, and the Army Commendation Medal twice.

The general's energies have not all been spent on military matters. He was personally involved in a number of programs designed to encourage and motivate young people. He tutored grade school children, invited others to the fort for a tour and a visit to his office, and challenged boys and girls in foster care programs and local chapters of national organizations to work diligently as they sought to reach their goals. He presently serves as an advisor to the President's Committee on Employment of People With Disabilities.

Members of the business community of Anniston and Calhoun county have said that none of Fort McClellan's previous commanding generals has ever received or deserved more respect or admiration than Chuck Hines. According to Gerald Powell, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the Calhoun County Chamber of Commerce:

> It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find anyone in the area who would say that he did not do an outstanding job at Fort McClellan. His personality and commitment merged in excellent fashion with the local leadership, and he seemed to have as much concern for the welfare of the community as he did for the fort itself.

Another prominent leader of the business community, Mike Claborne, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, says that General Hines' "professional conduct and caring attitude endeared him to the people of this area during his command at Fort McClellan. It is easy to understand why he has been so successful in his military career and in life. Few people have the combination of integrity, intelligence, charisma, and concern for others possessed by this unique man."

Mr. President, General Hines' service at Fort McClellan has indeed been invaluable and will be sorely missed. He can be justly proud of his career of service to the United States military. He has excelled in every one of his many diverse assignments in the Army. The tenacity and fortitude with which he has tackled every one of his jobs can be an example to every young soldier just entering the service of how hard work does have its rewards.

I proudly commend and congratulate General Hines on his long career of exemplary military service, and wish him and his entire family all the best as they return to Washington, DC, his hometown. The Smithsonian Institution, where he will direct the Protection Services upon his arrival in the Capital, will have yet another living treasure with the addition of General Hines.

TRIBUTE TO JAMES QUINNON STANPHILL

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, on August 4, a dear friend of mine and of the north Alabama community which he called home died. James Quinnon Stanphill was a long-time resident of the Quad Cities area, made up of Sheffield, Florence, Tuscumbia, and Muscle Shoals.

James Stanphill was the owner of Alabama Oil Co., located in Sheffield. He was a past member of the Shoals Community College Foundation board of directors and a founding director and chairman of the board of First Metro Bank in Muscle Shoals. Upon learning of James' death, First Metro's president, Billy Bowling, remarked that its founder was one of the most dedicated men he had ever known.

In addition, James was a member of the Northwest Junior College Foundation Board; a member of the American Association of Retired Persons Alabama Legislative Committee; a past director of the Muscle Shoals Chamber of Commerce; a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board; and past president of the Alabama Oil Marketers Association. This impeccable community and State leader was also a World War II veteran.

James Stanphill was a person who inspired others by his strong sense of values and of serving others. He was a good friend to many and was highly respected. Like the many others who were fortunate to have known Jim, things that always impressed me about him were his insight into what was going on in the community and his high standards of moral value.

Jim had a keen sense of humor and a contagious laugh. He would play practical jokes on his friends, and frequently they rejoined him in kind. He was affectionately and jokingly called "the Oil Sheik" on occasion. Sometimes his friends would get mad at each other, but Jim had the ability to bring about harmony and reconciliation. He was a wonderful person to eat a meal with. His thought-provoking and humorous conversation was more than a dessert.

I extend my sincere condolences to James' wife, Marvaline, and their entire family. He will be sorely missed by all who knew him.

TRIBUTE TO LENA LANDEGGER

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to the memory of Mrs. Lena Landegger, who died on July 25. This esteemed businesswoman, philanthropist, and community leader resided in New York, but also maintained a home in my home State where she presided over the operations of the family business, Parsons & Whittemore. Under the leadership of Mrs. Landegger and her late husband, Karl Landegger, Parsons & Whittemore became the world's largest nonintegrated producer and seller of market paper pulp.

Mrs. Landegger was born in Moscow, Russia, in 1908, and came to the United States in 1940 after living with her husband, a manufacturer of pulp and paper and pulp- and papermaking machinery, in Austria and Great Britain.

In America, the Landeggers established the parent firm that opened the Alabama River Pulp Co. in 1979 and Alabama Pine Pulp Co. in 1991. Alabama River Newsprint Co., which began as a joint project with Abitibi-Price of Canada, started operation in 1990. In tribute to Mrs. Landegger upon her death, all three pulp mills shut down operations for 1 day.

Mrs. Landegger's activities and achievements stretched far beyond the business arena. As the president of the Landegger Charitable Foundation, she supervised the organization's educational and rehabilitational works around the world. Her view was that sound education is the best preparation for the challenges of life. In Alabama, she was active in the development of the Writing to Read Program. Additionally, she took great interest in the adult literacy program and the construction of Our Place teen center.

In 1987, Georgetown University awarded Mrs. Landegger an honorary doctoral degree, the accompanying citation of which read, in part:

> Lena Landegger is a woman who has lived the type of life about which novels are written. It is a life full of joy and grief, of participation in great successes and being subject to great reverses. Through it all her inner strength and outer peace have enabled her to achieve the primary goal around which her whole life has been built. Mrs. Landegger's internal strength and the confidence she brought to her husband and her family contributed in large measure to the success achieved in the United States * * *.

Mr. President, I stand with Lena Landegger's many friends in sending my sincere condolences to her family. She led an extraordinary life, and was a true citizen of the world.

EFFORTS OF UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST AND NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES OF CHRIST

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the tireless efforts of the United Church of Christ and the National Council of the Churches of Christ in working to end the carnage and bloodshed in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Since the world learned of the concentration camps run by the Serbian Army last week, and indeed, throughout this terrible civil war, the United Church of Christ and the National Council of the Churches of Christ have been striving to offer relief services and humanitarian aid to victims and refugees of this war while concomitantly seeking a political solution to this crisis.

As we in Congress work to shape Government policy and force Serbian leader to desist their practice of ethnic cleansing and war on civilians, we must also remember the essential role of charities and private relief efforts in helping bring justice to this beleaguered part of the world. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senate I would like to thank the United Church of Christ and the National Council of the Churches of Christ for their efforts, and encourage their continued dedication to bringing a lasting peace to the Balkans.

TRIBUTE TO ARKANSAS' OLYMPIC ATHLETES

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the efforts of nine Olympic athletes close to the hearts of all Arkansans.

The entire world marveled at the skills of Hamburg native Scottie Pippen, who as part of the Dream Team, set new standards for excellence in men's basketball.

Fayeteville resident Mike Conley added to an already brilliant track and field career by capturing the gold in the men's triple jump.

Equally inspiring as these gold-medal performances was the courage of 800 meters runner Julie Jenkins. Mrs. Jenkins' ability to come back from a 1991 accident and compete in Barcelona, is a shining example of the Olympic spirit.

In addition to Mike Conley, the University of Arkansas' successful track program could boast ties to six other athletes, representing four different nations. Reuben Reina, Frank O'Mara, Paul Donovan, Graham Hood, Edrick Floreal, and Brian Wellman are to be congratulated for their efforts.

I know I speak for everyone across our State, when I commend these individuals for their dedication to excellence and adherence to the ideals of the Olympic games.

THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I am proud to rise today in support of the conference report on the Family and Medical Leave legislation passed by the Senate today. I was a cosponsor of this legislation and am pleased to see it move a step closer to law. I urge the President to sign the bill to make a long overdue and much-needed change for American families.

America's families are presented with a number of difficult challenges today. Over the past several decades there have been vast changes in our economy and the way American families must respond to those changes. It has become increasingly difficult for families to provide economic opportunities to their children. Today, at least half of all mothers with children under the age of 1 work outside the home, two-thirds of mothers with children under 3 work outside the home. Yet, should a child become seriously ill, parents risk losing their jobs and jeopardizing the family's income if they take leave to care for their child.

Similarly, on the other end of the age spectrum our Nation is changing. Americans are living longer and with more chronic disabilities and illnesses. Changing demographics squeezes the working Americans between caring for their children, maintaining a job, and caring for aging parents. At least 7 million Americans provide informal care to the elderly today. The majority of these caregivers are women. With no comprehensive long-term care policy in this country and nursing home costs that average at least $30,000 a year, we must do what we can to support these caregivers in their efforts.

The Family and Medical Leave Act does this. It provides much-needed support and assistance to hard-working Americans as they attempt to meet the needs and demands of their jobs and their families.

Mr. President, we owe it to the families of America to provide them the assistance they need to balance the demands of work and family, promote economic security and stability of families, and allow workers to take reasonable leave without the fear of losing their jobs.

THOMAS PAINE MEMORIAL—SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 110

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I rise today to ask unanimous consent that my friend and colleague Senator GRAMM of Texas be added to our 73 colleagues as a cosponsor of Senate Concurrent Resolution 110, the Thomas Paine Memorial.

Seventy-four Senators have joined more than 125 members, professors, department chairs, and presidents of colleges, universities, and organizations throughout our Nation.

Additionally, I ask unanimous consent that the current list of endorsing entities be included in the RECORD, followed by the names of each of the Senators who are now cosponsors of this legislation to allow the private sector to honor, on the Capitol Grounds of our Nation, the patriot who first called for separation from England, the abolition of slavery and a written constitution to protect the civil, religious and property rights of men and women of all races.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. ARMS CONTROL AND DISARMAMENT AGENCY

Linton F. Brooks, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JUDGE RUDOLPH THOMAS RANDA

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I am certainly pleased that Judge Randa has been nominated by the President, and now confirmed by the Senate, to fill the open judgeship on the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin.

I was not surprised when Judge Randa was one of the five candidates that was considered most qualified by the Federal Merit Selection Commission that was established. That Commission included members chosen by Senator KOHL, the State Bar of Wisconsin and me.

The Commission had the difficult job of reviewing the credentials of 22 highly qualified individuals. Though the qualifications of the five individuals recommended by the Commission reflected the high caliber of jurists and practitioners that we have in Wisconsin, I was pleased to recommend to the President the fine jurist that we have now confirmed.

Judge Randa has distinguished himself as both a practicing attorney and as a jurist in Wisconsin's fine judicial system. He has practiced on his own, served for 5 years in the Milwaukee City Attorney's Office, and then has served since 1975 as a judge on various courts.

Prior to his current position as Milwaukee County circuit court judge, which he has held for 10 years, Judge Randa also served as a judge on the Milwaukee Municipal Court, an earlier stint as a Milwaukee County circuit judge, and service on two different panels of our State's Court of Appeals.

Though we all wish it were not so, Wisconsin—and the Milwaukee area in particular—have been hit hard by the crime and drug problems that plague this Nation. Beyond the sadness that such problems mean to the individuals involved as victims, a severe strain is put on the whole judicial system as criminal cases must take precedence over civil matters.

The Eastern District bench needs for the current vacancy to be filled as soon as possible. Working from the premise that justice delayed is justice denied, the 19-month time period that civil matters take to get through the Eastern District must be reduced. A great step in that direction has been taken with this confirmation.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MR. HENRY HUDSON

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to briefly comment on the nomination of Mr. Henry Hudson who was selected to be Director of the U.S. Marshals Service.

Mr. Hudson earned an undergraduate degree from the American University School of International Service in 1969. In 1974, he obtained a juris doctorate degree from American University Law School.

Mr. Hudson began working as a deputy sheriff for Arlington County while completing his undergraduate studies, and during law school, he served as deputy clerk of the Circuit Court for Arlington County. In 1974, Mr. Hudson became an assistant Commonwealth's attorney, and in 1978, he joined the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Virginia where he was an assistant U.S. attorney. In 1979, he entered into the private practice of law, and in 1980 Mr. Hudson became the Commonwealth's attorney for Arlington County where he served for 6 years. In 1986, Mr. Hudson was appointed as the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia and served in this position until 1991. At which time, he became of counsel with the law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay. President Bush nominated Mr. Hudson to be the Director of the U.S. Marshal Service on November 20, 1991, and in February 1992, Mr. Hudson began serving as the Acting Director.

Mr. President, I have reviewed Mr. Hudson's record and I believe his background as a prosecutor as well as his management experience will be a tremendous asset to him in this very important position. I strongly support his nomination and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JOHN J. EASTON

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, on August 5, 1992, the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources favorably reported the nomination of John Easton to be Assistant Secretary of Energy for Domestic and International Energy Policy by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Easton currently serves the Department of Energy as general counsel and previously was Assistant Secretary of Energy for International Affairs and Energy Emergencies. Prior to joining DOE, Mr. Easton was in private law practice, and from 1981–85, he served as attorney general for the State of Vermont. Mr. Easton holds a doctor of laws degree from Georgetown University Law Center.

Mr. President, Mr. Easton is well qualified for the position to which he has been nominated, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting his confirmation.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF C.C. HOPE, JR.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. President, I rise today to express my strong support for the nomination of C.C. Hope, Jr., to serve another term as a member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation [FDIC]. C.C. Hope, Jr., brings not only his impressive credentials as a banker to the FDIC, but also his numerous talents as reflected in his experience as a leader of financial and civil organizations.

Mr. Hope has had a long, distinguished career in banking, which he began some 45 years ago as a teller at First Union National Bank in Charlotte, NC. At that time, First Union National was a $35 million bank. During his 38 years at First Union, C.C. served in several capacities in the bank, participated in the negotiations for 28 mergers, and helped the bank grow into a multibillion-dollar institution. He also played a key role in establishing the bank holding company, First Union Corp., which now has assets of approximately $45 to $50 billion. In addition, C.C.'s talents and accomplishments did not go unnoticed by the State of North Carolina, as evidenced by his service as secretary of the North Carolina Department of Commerce from 1983 to 1985.

Mr. Hope's successful banking career has naturally placed him in leadership positions in a variety of financial organizations. He has served as president of the American Bankers Association and also as chairman of the ABA task force on relationships with the bank regulatory agencies. This task force conducted seminars across the Nation between banks and regulators, including the FDIC, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Reserve Board. He has also served on the advisory board of the Federal National Mortgage Association, and the Comptroller of the Currency's Advisory Committee.

Mr. Hope's strong interest in education has certainly been evident; a graduate of Wake Forest University, he has also completed graduate work at the Harvard Business School, and the Stonier Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University. Currently, he is vice chairman and former chairman of the board of Wake Forest University; he is chairman of the board of the foundation, and has served as dean of Southwestern Graduate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, TX.

Finally, C.C. Hope, Jr., is a decorated veteran who has also contributed to his local business and religious communities. He led the effort to establish the Charlotte Coliseum, has spoken out for arts and education, and is chairman of the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corp. He is a deacon in his church and a Sunday school teacher.

Mr. President, C.C. Hope, Jr., is a man of talent and integrity. He has had 6 years experience already at the FDIC, and his contributions could not have come at a more important time. I am pleased that his nomination has been considered in such an expedited manner, it is important that we return him to his post so that he can continue to apply the knowledge he has gained from a long distinguished career to the FDIC, to facilitate the safety and soundness of our Nation's banking system.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

UNANIMOUS CONSENT ON TREATIES

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to consider the following matters.

Mr. President, these are treaties, conventions, and protocols. I will identify them by calendar number—Executive Calendar Item Nos. 29, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44.

I further ask unanimous consent that the treaties be considered as having been advanced through the various parliamentary states up to and including the presentation of the resolutions of ratification; that the recommended understandings to Executive Calendar Item No. 29 be considered as having been agreed to, that no other amendments, provisos, understandings or reservations be in order; that any statements appear as if read in the RECORD; and that the Senate vote en bloc on the resolutions of ratification without any intervening action or debate with one vote to count as nine.

I now ask for a division vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All those in favor of the resolutions of ratification stand and be counted. [After a pause.]

All those opposed to the resolutions of ratification stand and be counted.

Two-thirds of those voting, having voted in the affirmative, the resolutions of ratification are agreed to.

The resolutions of ratification considered and agreed to are as follows:

(The resolution of ratification on the Basel Convention of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD:)

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the People's Republic of the Congo Concerning the Encouragement and Reciprocal Protection of Investment, signed at Washington, February 12, 1992.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Republic of Tunisia Concerning the Encouragement and Reciprocal Protection of Investment, with Protocol, signed at Washington on May 15, 1990.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka Concerning the Encouragement and Reciprocal Protection of Investment, with Protocol and a Related Exchange of Letters, signed at Colombo, Sri Lanka on September 20, 1992.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic Concerning the Encouragement and Reciprocal Protection of Investment, with Protocol and Three Related Exchanges of Letters, signed at Washington on October 22, 1991.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Russian Federation Concerning the Encouragement and Reciprocal Protection of Investment, with Protocol and Related Exchanges of Letters, signed at Washington on June 17, 1992.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Finland to the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce, and Consular Rights of February 13, 1934, as Modified by the Protocol of December 4, 1952, signed at Washington on July 1, 1991.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Ireland to the Treaty of Friendship, Commerce and Navigation of January 21, 1950, signed at Washington on June 24, 1992.

Resolved (two-thirds of the Senators present concurring therein), That the Senate advise and consent to the ratification of the Conservation of Anadromous Stocks in the North Pacific Ocean, with Annex, which was signed by the United States, Canada, Japan, and the Russian Federation on February 11, 1992, in Moscow.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the motions to reconsider the votes be tabled en bloc; that the President be notified of the Senate's action; and that the Senate return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BASEL CONVENTION ON THE CONTROL OF TRANSBOUNDARY MOVEMENTS OF HAZARDOUS WASTES AND THEIR DISPOSAL

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, today the Senate has before it for its consideration the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal.

The convention was negotiated under the auspices of the United Nations Environment Programme. Its goal—as described by the Department of State—is "the reduction of risks to health and the environment posed by improperly-managed wastes."

There can be no doubt about the need for strict controls on waste exports. I suspect that we all have heard horror stories about hazardous waste dumping. Perhaps the most publicized of these incidents was the 1986 saga of the Philadelphia "garbage barge" which left port with nearly 14,000 tons of toxic incinerator waste. The ship made a number of unsuccessful attempts to unload its cargo in the Caribbean and along the coast of Africa. Ultimately the ship appeared off the coast of Singapore with a new name, but without its cargo of ash. Presumably the ash was dumped at sea.

Reforms in Eastern Europe have shone a new light on the use of that region as a dumping ground for waste from throughout Europe.

Mr. President, the convention has three basic features. First, it requires the "environmentally sound management" of all transboundary shipments of hazardous and other wastes. The convention defines this as "taking all practicable steps to ensure that hazardous wastes or other wastes are managed in a manner which will protect human health and the environment against the adverse effects which may result from such wastes." Technical guidelines for "environmentally sound" waste management will be determined by the parties to the convention at their first meeting.

Second, the convention establishes a notice and consent system. Any export of hazardous waste requires the prior approval of the exporting State, any transit States, and the recipient State prior to its shipment. States are obligated to prohibit the export of wastes covered by the convention if they have reason to believe that the wastes will not be handled in an environmentally sound manner.

Third, the convention prohibits trade in hazardous and other wastes between parties and nonparties except under separate bilateral or multilateral waste agreements. Preexisting agreements, such as the United States bilateral agreements with Canada and Mexico, must be "compatible with the environmentally sound management of hazardous wastes and other wastes as required by the convention." New agreements must contain provisions ensuring that internationally transported wastes will be managed in a manner "not less environmentally sound than those provided for by this Convention. * * *"

The administration has requested that the Senate provide its advice and consent to the convention with four understandings. The committee agreed to the administration's request and these understandings have been incorporated in the resolution of ratification recommended to the Senate.

The first understanding makes clear that, in accordance with customary international law, the convention does not apply to sovereign immune vessels and aircraft. The second understanding clarifies that the notification requirements in the convention do not apply to ships passing through territorial seas and exclusive economic zones.

The third understanding relates to the U.S. understanding of Article 4(9)(a) of the convention which states: "Parties shall take the appropriate measures to ensure that the transboundary movement of hazardous wastes and other wastes only be allowed if: (a) The State of export does not have the technical capacity and the necessary facilities, capacity or suitable disposal sites in order to dispose of the wastes in question in an environmentally sound and efficient manner;" The understanding states that the United States will consider the cost of disposal, including the comparative cost of environmentally sound disposal outside the United States, as one factor in deciding whether disposal sites in the United States are "suitable."

The fourth understanding clarifies the U.S. interpretation of article 9(2) of the convention. This article states:

> In case of a transboundary movement of hazardous wastes or other wastes deemed to be illegal traffic as the result of conduct on the part of the exporter or generator, the State of export shall ensure that the wastes in question are: (a) taken back by the exporter or the generator, or, if necessary, by itself into the State or export, or, if impracticable, (b) are otherwise disposed of in accordance with the provisions of this Convention.* * *

The understanding clarifies that the general language of the convention is not interpreted to create an obligation for the exporting state with regard to cleanup, beyond taking such wastes back, or disposing of them in accordance with the convention.

The State Department has informed the committee that it will not ratify the convention prior to the enactment of implementing legislation both in the Letter of Submittal accompanying the convention itself, and in a subsequent letter on July 24, 1992. I ask unanimous consent that the letter appear following my remarks in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, the Basel Convention could mark a significant advance in efforts to promote the sound management of the international trade in hazardous wastes or it could simply ratify the status quo. As is so often the case, the devil is in the details. A key issue facing parties to the convention will be the elaboration of technical guidelines that give substance to the convention's requirement of "environmentally sound management." It is my hope, and the committee's hope, that these guidelines will provide equivalent environmental protection to standards established in U.S. law.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to make some brief comments about Article 26(1) of the convention which states that "no reservation or exception may be made to this convention." As chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations I would like to record my concern with the practice exemplified in article 26(1) of this convention, and most recently in article 24 of the Antarctic Protocol (Treaty Doc. 102–22), of including in treaties a provision which has the purported effect of inhibiting the Senate from attaching reservations deemed necessary in the national interest or of preventing the Senate from exercising its constitutional duty to give its advice and consent to all treaty commitments before they can in any way have a binding effect upon the United States.

Whatever justifications may have existed for inclusion of such a prohibition in the Antarctic Protocol (Treaty Doc. 102–22) or the Basel Convention (Treaty Doc. 102–5) in view of the peculiar circumstances there present, the Senate's approval of these treaties should not be construed as a precedent for such clauses in future agreements with other nations requiring the Senate's advice and consent. This committee has made its position on this issue clear in the past (S. Exec. Rpt. No. 3, 85th Congress, 1st Session, p. 17, 1957). The President's agreement to such a prohibition can not constrain the Senate's constitutional right and obligation to give its advice and consent to a treaty subject to any reservation it might determine is required by the national interest.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support ratification of the convention.

EXHIBIT 1

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, DC, July 24, 1992.

Hon. CLAIBORNE PELL,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations, U.S. Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On March 12, Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Richard J. Smith testified before your committee on the importance of ratification of the Basel Convention on Control of Transboundary Movements and Hazardous Wastes and Their Disposal. In requesting prompt Senate action in support of ratification, he also stressed the urgent need for Congressional approval of proposed Administration legislation to implement the Convention. Both actions are needed before the U.S. can ratify the Convention.

Since Mr. Smith's testimony, international developments have made U.S. ratification of the Convention even more urgent. On May 5, the Basel Convention entered into force for those countries having ratified the Convention.

I would like to take this opportunity to re-emphasize the reasons we attach such importance to the issue of ratifying this Convention.

First, the Basel Convention represents an important step in reducing the potential risks to health and the environment posed by improperly managed wastes. It also establishes a uniform scheme worldwide to control those transboundary movements that do occur, both for disposal and for recycling. It is very important for the United States to take a leadership role in fostering and developing this regime.

Second, since the United States is not a Party to the Basel Convention, there may be significant disruptive effects on the movement of wastes out of and into the United States for disposal, and particularly for recycling. Articles 4(5) and 11(1) of the Convention obligate Parties to prohibit exports to and imports from non-Parties of Basel-covered wastes, except where there is a regional, multilateral or bilateral agreement providing for the environmentally sound management of transboundary movements of such wastes. U.S. recycling trade with other OECD members will continue under a Council Decision adopted on March 30, and movements of hazardous wastes between the United States and Canada and the United States and Mexico will be governed by existing bilateral agreements, all other transboundary movements of Basel-covered wastes with respect to Basel Convention Parties are now prohibited.

For several years, the U.S. has exported small volumes of hazardous wastes to Finland, primarily dioxins for disposal in a highly sophisticated incinerator. Since May 5, exports of these wastes to Finland (now a Party to the Basel Convention) have been stopped. No facility for appropriate disposal of such materials currently exists in the United States. These exports to Finland are not permissible under the OECD Council Decision because they are not exported to Finland for recycling. We have determined that we do not have sufficient legislative authority, in the absence of our proposed implementing legislation, to enter into a bilateral agreement with Finland that "stipulates provisions no less environmentally sound" than the Basel Convention.

Finally, under Article 15, the first meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention must take place within the first year after the Convention's entry into force. The Basel Interim Secretariat has tentatively scheduled this first meeting for November 30–December 4, most likely in Montevideo, Uruguay. Important implementation decisions will be made and processes set into motion in Montevideo to develop technical guidelines for environmentally sound management as well as possible protocols to the Convention, such as one covering liability and compensation. The United States, if it has not ratified the Convention by that time, would not be able to be a full participant in this meeting, and therefore would not be able to promote fully U.S. approaches and views in developing such technical guidelines and protocols.

Failure to become a Party would preclude United States involvement in important first steps in the life of the Convention and would have a significant impact on the interests of U.S. exporters and importers of hazardous and other wastes. We continue to believe that it is critical for the United States to ratify the Basel Convention at the earliest possible time. We remain anxious to assist in this process in any way we can.

I look forward to hearing from you in the very near future.

Sincerely,

JANET G. MULLINS,
Assistant Secretary,
Legislative Affairs.

BILATERAL INVESTMENT TREATIES WITH CZECH AND SLOVAK FEDERAL REPUBLIC, THE CONGO, THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION, SRI LANKA, AND TUNISIA

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, pending before the Senate are bilateral investment treaties with the Russian Federation, signed at Washington on June 17, 1992, and transmitted by President Bush on July 28, 1992 (Treaty Doc. 102–33); the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, signed at Washington on October 22, 1991, and transmitted by President Bush on June 2, 1992 (Treaty Doc. 102–31); the People's Republic of the Congo, signed at Washington, February 12, 1990, and transmitted by President Bush on March 19, 1991 (Treaty Doc. 102–1); the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka signed at Colombo, Sri Lanka on September 20, 1991, and transmitted by President Bush on March 24, 1992 (Treaty Doc. 102–25); and the Republic of Tunisia, signed at Washington on May 15, 1990, and transmitted by President Bush on May 17, 1991 (Treaty Doc. 102–6).

The principal purpose of the bilateral investment treaties is to promote the free flow of international investment and to encourage and protect U.S. investment in developing countries.

Before entering into negotiations, the United States developed a model treaty which sought to incorporate provisions which would facilitate the free flow of investment, prohibit practices which have emerged in various countries which inhibit that free flow, and generally codify rules on investment and dispute settlement, which the United States views as well-established international law and precedent. Specifically, the model treaty seeks to achieve the following objectives:

The better of either national or most-favored-nation treatment, for each party to the treaty, thereby providing in the case of United States companies a level playing field in competing with national and third country investors, subject to specified exceptions set forth in the annex to each treaty;

International law standards shall apply to the expropriation of investments, permitting expropriation only for a public purpose and requiring the payment of prompt and fair compensation;

The free transfer of funds associated with an investment into and out of the host country;

Access to binding international arbitration for settlement of investment disputes;

A prohibition on the imposition of performance requirements, which have become important as countries have increasingly imposed requirements to use domestically produced goods; and

The right of companies to hire top managers of their choice, regardless of nationality.

The earliest formal economic treaties that the United States negotiated with other countries were a series of Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation [FCN] treaties. These treaties set the framework for U.S. trade and investment relations with foreign countries.

With the advent of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade [GATT] in 1948, U.S. trade relations began to be set with foreign countries through multilateral trade agreements and the use of FCN treaties faded; the last two FCN's were negotiated in the late 1960's. This multilateral approach left a gap in relations with foreign countries involving U.S. investment abroad, since investment matters are currently outside the scope of GATT. However, the United States has included the investment issue of performance requirements in the Trade Related Investment Measures [TRIMMS] of the current Uruguay trade negotiations. The North American Free-Trade Agreement also has investment provisions similar to a bilateral investment treaty.

In an attempt to promote the free flow of investment internationally, in the absence of multilaterally agreed to rules, the United States began, in 1981, to negotiate a new series of treaties called Bilateral Investment Treaties [BIT's]. The BIT Program is designed to provide certain mutual guarantees and protections and to create a more stable and predictable legal framework for foreign investors with each of the treaty partners. A special tenet of the program is to ensure that United States direct investment abroad and foreign investment in the United States should receive fair, equitable and nondiscriminatory treatment. The BIT's are, therefore the modern successor on the investment side to the Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation Treaty series. In comparison with its predecessor, the BIT is far more detailed and provides greater protection for the foreign investor, including an investor-to-state disputes mechanism that generates to United States investors the right to binding arbitration against the host state without the involvement of the U.S. Government.

The Senate gave its advice and consent to ratification of BIT's with Senegal, Zaire, Morocco, Turkey, Cameroon, Bangladesh, Egypt, and Grenada in 1988, and in 1990 a BIT with Panama and a business and economic relations treaty with Poland which contained BIT elements. The treaty with Poland was the first extension of this program to facilitate the continuation of economic and political changes which have taken place in Eastern Europe over the last 4 years. All of these treaties have entered into force except the one with Poland. The treaty with Poland has not been brought into force because Polish law on intellectual property rights has not yet been revised in conformity with the terms of the treaty.

The negotiation of BIT's has accelerated dramatically since 1990. The administration has signed a BIT with Kazakhstan, Argentina, and Romania. These treaties should be submitted to the Senate later this year. Negotiations are currently ongoing with Uruguay, Bolivia, Nigeria, Hungary, Jamaica, Armenia, Costa Rica, Hong Kong, Venezuela, Colombia, Pakistan, Peru, Mongolia, Kyrgyzstan, Barbados, and Bulgaria. In addition, there are 14 other countries with which the administration hopes to initiate negotiations in the near future.

The administration has informed the committee that there have been no major problems involving a United States investment, with the exception of Zaire, in countries with which bilateral investment treaties are in force. They have also stated there have been no cases in which the bilateral investment treaty dispute settlement mechanism for international arbitration has been invoked.

The administration has indicated that in a number of the countries with BIT's in effect, U.S. investment has increased since the BIT went into force. However, the administration has pointed out that the existence of a BIT will not guarantee increased U.S. investment. Because investment decisions are based on a variety of factors and the BIT's have only been in force for a short period of time, the administration says it would be difficult to draw a relationship between increased investment and the BIT's.

The proposed treaties with Russia, the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, the Congo, Sri Lanka, and Tunisia generally satisfy the major objectives contained in the model treaty and variations from these objectives are set forth in the committee's reports.

During the committee's hearing on August 4, 1992, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic and Business Affairs, Eugene J. McAllister urged the Senate to give its advice and consent to the treaty as soon as possible:

> At first glance, given the possible separation of Czechoslovakia into two states, it may appear to be premature to act at this time. However, we believe it is important to act quickly. While separation of the country appears likely, it is still not a certainty that the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic will split.

The administration has urged the committee and the Senate to act quickly to give advice and consent to ratification of this treaty. It is scheduled for consideration by the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic Federal Assembly in September. The administration has said it does not expect any opposition to the treaty and that the Czech and Slovak Federal Government is prepared to bring the treaty into force once ratified.

If the two governments are able to bring this treaty into force prior to a possible separation of the Federal Republic the committee has been assured by the administration that the treaty would be binding under international law on the successor states.

In the event the treaty is not ratified by the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic and does not enter into force prior to any separation of the Federal Republic, the administration has informed the committee that it would ask the successor states to accept the treaty for ratification as is. In the event any substantive changes in the treaty are agreed to with a successor state to the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, the administration has agreed to submit the revised treaty for advice and consent.

The committee acknowledges the confidence expressed by the administration that it is possible for this treaty to enter into force prior to any possible separation of the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, and its representation that the treaty will be binding upon any successor states should a separation subsequently occur. Accordingly, the committee has accepted the urging of the administration to act quickly on this treaty and recommends that the Senate give its advice and consent to ratification at the earliest possible date.

On August 4, 1992, the Committee on Foreign Relations held a hearing on these treaties. Testimony was received by the Honorable Eugene J. McAllister, Assistant Secretary for Economic and Business Affairs Bureau, Department of State.

The committee also received answers from the administration to numerous questions regarding the operation of the bilateral investment treaty program and the provisions of this treaty. This material, together with the administration's description of the U.S. Model Bilateral Investment Treaty [BIT] of February 1992 has been made a part of the official record of these hearings.

In addition, the committee received statements in support of the treaty from the National Association of Manufacturers, the U.S. Council for International Business, and Kenneth J. Vandevelde, associate professor of law, Western State University College of Law, San Diego, CA.

The Committee on Foreign Relations voted to report favorably these treaties, and recommend that the Senate give its advice and consent to their ratification at a meeting on August 6, 1992.

Mr. President, I urge that the Senate advise and consent to the bilateral investment treaties with Russia, the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic, the Congo, Sri Lanka, and Tunisia.

PROTOCOLS TO THE FRIENDSHIP, COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION TREATIES WITH FINLAND AND IRELAND

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, pending before the Senate are protocols to the existing Friendship, Commerce and Navigation Treaties with Finland (Treaty Doc. 102-34) and Ireland (Treaty Doc. 102-35), transmitted by President Bush on July 30, 1992.

These protocols will establish the legal basis by which the United States may issue investor (E-2) visas to qualified nationals of Finland and Ireland by supplementing the United States-Finland and United States-Ireland friendship, commerce, and navigation [FCN] treaties to allow for entry and sojourn of investors, a benefit provided in the large majority of United States FCN treaties. United States investors are already eligible for Finnish and Irish visas that offer comparable benefits to those that would be accorded nationals of Finland and Ireland under E-2 visa status.

The protocols are a precondition to the issuance of a treaty investor visa to a Finnish or Irish national, inasmuch as section 101(a)(15)(E)(ii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act [INA], 8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(E)(ii), permits issuance of an E-2 visa only to a nonimmigrant who is "* * * entitled to enter the United States under and in pursuance of the provisions of a treaty of commerce and navigation between the United States and the foreign state of which he is a national * * * solely to develop and direct the operations of an enterprise in which he has invested, or of an enterprise in which he is actively in the process of investing, a substantial amount of capital."

Although the United States FCN treaties contain a provision qualifying the treaty partner's nationals for E-2 visas, the existing United States-Finland and United States-Ireland treaties do not. The protocols are intended to overcome this deficiency.

The Treaty protocols reflect language found in the INA and in U.S. FCN and investment treaties generally. The principal substantive article of the protocols provide that:

> Nationals of either Contracting Party shall be permitted, subject to the laws relating to the entry and sojourn of aliens, to enter the territories of the other Party and to remain therein for the purpose of developing and directing the operations of an enterprise in which they have invested, or in which they are actively in the process of investing, a substantial amount of capital.

The administration has informed the committee that Finnish direct investment in the United States totaled $1.763 billion at yearend 1990, while United States direct investment in Finland amounted to $542 million. Irish direct investment in the United States totaled $905 million at yearend 1990, while United States direct investment in Ireland amounted to $6.776 billion.

On August 4, 1992, the Committee on Foreign Relations held a hearing on these protocols. Testimony was received by the Honorable Eugene J. McAllister, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic and Business Affairs Bureau. On August 6, 1992, the committee voted to report favorably these protocols and recommended that the Senate give its advice and consent to their ratification.

Mr. President, I urge that the Senate advice and consent to the pending protocols with Finland and Ireland.

CONVENTION FOR THE CONSERVATION OF ANADROMOUS STOCKS IN THE NORTH PACIFIC OCEAN

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, today the Senate has before it for its consideration the Convention for the Conservation of Anadromous Stocks in the North Pacific Ocean, or, more simply, the Salmon Convention.

The convention prohibits the directed take of salmon stocks, and requires that their incidental take be reduced to the maximum extent practicable. The convention applies to the area of the North Pacific Ocean north of 33 degrees north latitude and beyond coastal state 200-mile exclusive economic zones [EEZ's].

The need for this convention was underscored in a hearing before the committee by our colleague from Oregon, Senator PACKWOOD; as well as Mr. Richard Lauber, the chairman of the North Pacific Fisheries Management Council and the commissioner of the International North Pacific Fisheries Council; and Mr. David Colson, the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Oceans and Fisheries Affairs.

The convention is notable for its conclusion of enforcement mechanisms. It authorizes parties to take measures cooperatively and individually to prevent trafficking in illegally harvested stocks. Further, the convention authorizes the boarding, search, and seizure of ships of states parties or the arrest of individuals by duly authorized officials of another party. Any ship seized or individual arrested in this manner shall be turned over to their government as soon as possible for appropriate legal action.

The convention also establishes a new organization—the North Pacific Anadromous Fish Commission—to promote the conservation of anadromous stocks in the convention area. The convention vests the Commission with broad authority to make recommendations and collect information. This includes authority to: Recommend measures for the conservation of anadromous stocks; promote the exchange of information about activities contrary to the purpose of the convention; consider and make proposals for the enactment of schedules of equivalent penalties for activities contrary to the convention; and recommend amendments to the convention. All important Commission decisions will be made by consensus, with each party having the right to decide if an issue is important.

Mr. President, the committee's report makes three recommendations with regard to the convention. First, it notes that the convention is consistent with agenda 21—the program of action to promote sustainable development adopted at the recently concluded U.N. Conference on Environment and Development—and urges the administration to continue its support for agenda 21. Second, the committee strongly encourages the U.S. representatives on the Commission to advocate proposals for the adoption by each of the parties of uniform certificate of origin programs. Finally, the committee encourages the administration to seek adherence to the terms of the convention by those nonparties whose fishing activities affect the conservation of Pacific salmon.

One final note Mr. President, I would note that the convention draws heavily on principles found in customary international law, as reflected in article 66 of the 1982 U.N. Convention on the law of the sea. That article recognizes that states in whose rivers anadromous stocks originate have primary interest in and responsibility for these stocks, even when they move to the high seas.

In my view, the fact that the administration so frequently draws on the law of the sea, as it has in this convention, underscores the desirability of seeing this convention submitted to the Senate for this advice and consent.

Mr. President, I am aware of no opposition to this treaty, and I urge my colleagues to support its approval.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume legislative session.

PROVIDING FOR THE CONDITIONAL RECESS OR ADJOURNMENT OF THE SENATE AND THE HOUSE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, on behalf of the two leaders, I send a concurrent resolution to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the concurrent resolution.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 135) providing for a conditional recess or adjournment of the Senate from Wednesday, August 12, 1992 until Tuesday, September 8, 1992, and a conditional adjournment of the House on the legislative day of Wednesday, August 12, 1992, until Wednesday, September 9, 1992.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the concurrent resolution is agreed to.

So the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 135) was agreed to, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 135

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That when the Senate recesses or adjourns at the close of business on Wednesday, August 12, 1992 pursuant to a motion made by the majority leader, or his designee, in accordance with this resolution, it stand recessed or adjourned until 12 noon, or until such time as may be specified by the majority leader, or his designee, in the motion to adjourn or recess, on Tuesday, September 8, 1992, or until 12 noon on the second day after Members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this resolution, whichever occurs first; and that when the House of Representatives adjourns at the close of business on the legislative day of Wednesday, August 12, 1992, pursuant to a motion made by the majority leader, or his designee, in accordance with this resolution, it stand adjourned until 12 noon on Wednesday, September 9, 1992, or until 12 noon on the second day after Members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this resolution, whichever occurs first.

SEC. 2. The majority leader of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, acting jointly after consultation with the minority leader of the Senate and the minority leader of the House, shall notify the Members of the Senate and the House, respectively, to reassemble whenever, in their opinion, the public interest shall warrant it.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

REHABILITATION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1992

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 589, S. 3065, a bill to revise and extend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3065) to revise and extend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, with amendments, as follows:

(The parts of the bill intended to be stricken are shown in boldface brackets and the parts of the bill intended to be inserted are shown in italics.)

S. 3065

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—ADMINISTRATION AND VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION SERVICES

Subtitle A—Administration

SEC. 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

Section 2 (29 U.S.C. 701) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. FINDINGS; PURPOSE; POLICY.

"(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) millions of Americans have one or more physical or mental disabilities and the number of Americans with such disabilities is increasing;

"(2) disability is a natural part of the human experience and in no way diminishes the right of individuals to—

"(A) live independently;

"(B) enjoy self-determination;

"(C) make choices;

"(D) contribute to society;

"(E) pursue meaningful careers; and

"(F) enjoy full inclusion and integration in the economic, political, social, cultural, and educational mainstream of American society;

"(3) individuals with disabilities continually encounter various forms of discrimination in such critical areas as employment, housing, public accommodations, education, transportation, communication, recreation, institutionalization, health services, voting, and public services; and

"(4) the goals of the Nation properly include the goal of providing individuals with disabilities with the tools necessary to—

"(A) make informed choices and decisions; and

"(B) achieve equality of opportunity, full inclusion and integration in society, employment, independent living, and economic and social self-sufficiency, for such individuals.

"(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to empower individuals with disabilities to achieve economic self-sufficiency, independence, and inclusion and integration into the society, through—

"(1) comprehensive and coordinated state-of-the-art programs of vocational rehabilitation;

"(2) independent living centers and services;

"(3) research;

"(4) training;

"(5) demonstration projects; and

"(6) the guarantee of equal opportunity.

"(c) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States that all programs, projects, and activities receiving assistance under this Act shall be carried out in a manner consistent with the principles of—

"(1) respect for individual dignity, personal responsibility, self-determination, and pursuit of meaningful careers, based on informed choice, of individuals with disabilities;

"(2) respect for the privacy, rights, and equal access (including the use of accessible formats), of the individuals;

"(3) inclusion, integration, and full participation of the individuals;

"(4) support for the involvement of a parent, family member, guardian, advocate, or authorized representative if an individual with a disability requests, desires, or needs such support; and

"(5) support for individual and systemic advocacy and community involvement.".

"(22) The term 'assessment for determining eligibility and vocational rehabilitation needs' means, as appropriate in each case—

"(A)(i) a review of existing data—

"(I) to determine whether an individual is eligible for vocational rehabilitation services; and

"(II) to assign the priority described in section 101(a)(5)(A) in the States that use an order of selection pursuant to section 101(a)(5)(A); and

"(ii) to the extent additional data is necessary to make such determination and assignment, a preliminary assessment of such data (including the provision of goods and services during such assessment);

"(B)(i) to the extent additional data is necessary, a comprehensive assessment of the unique strengths, resources, priorities, interests, and needs, including the need for supported employment, of an eligible individual to make a determination of the goals, objectives, nature, and scope of vocational rehabilitation services to be included in the individualized written rehabilitation program of the individual, which comprehensive assessment may include—

"(I) to the degree needed to make such a determination, an assessment of the personality, interests, interpersonal skills, intelligence and related functional capacities, educational achievements, work experience, vocational aptitudes, personal and social adjustments, and employment opportunities of the individual, and the medical, psychiatric, psychological, and other pertinent vocational, educational, cultural, social, recreational, and environmental factors, that affect the employment and rehabilitation needs of the individual; and

"(II) an appraisal of the patterns of work behavior of the individual and services needed for the individual to acquire occupational skills, and to develop work attitudes, work habits, work tolerance, and social and behavior patterns necessary for successful job performance, including the utilization of work in real job situations to assess and develop the capacities of the individual to perform adequately in a work environment; and

"(ii) the administration of the assessment described in clause (i);

"(C)(i) referral;

"(ii) where appropriate, the provision of rehabilitation technology services to an individual with a disability to assess and develop the capacities of the individual to perform in a work environment; and

"(iii)(I) the provision of vocational rehabilitation services to an individual for a total period not in excess of 18 months for the limited purpose of making determinations regarding whether an individual is eligible for vocational rehabilitation services and regarding the nature and scope of vocational rehabilitation services needed for such individual; and

"(II) an assessment at least once in every 90-day period during which such services are provided, of the results of the provision of such services to an individual to ascertain whether any of the determinations described in subclause (I) may be made.

"(23) The term 'assistive technology device' means an item, a piece of equipment, or a product system, whether acquired commercially off the shelf, modified, or customized, that is used to increase, maintain, or improve functional capabilities of individuals with disabilities.

"(24) The term 'assistive technology service'—

"(A) means any service that directly assists an individual with a disability in the selection, acquisition, or use of an assistive technology device; and

"(B) includes—

"(i) the evaluation of the needs of an individual with a disability, including a functional evaluation of the individual in the customary environment of the individual;

"(ii) purchasing, leasing, or otherwise providing for the acquisition by individuals with disabilities of assistive technology devices;

"(iii) selecting, designing, fitting, customizing, adapting, applying, maintaining, repairing, or replacing of assistive technology devices;

"(iv) coordinating and using other therapies, interventions, or services with assistive technology devices, such as therapies, interventions, or services associated with existing education and rehabilitation plans and programs;

"(v) training or technical assistance for an individual with disabilities, or, if appropriate, the family of an individual with disabilities; and

"(vi) training or technical assistance for professionals (including individuals providing education and rehabilitation services), employers, or other individuals who provide services to, employ, or are otherwise substantially involved in the major life functions of, individuals with disabilities.

"(25) The term 'community rehabilitation program' means a program that provides directly or facilitates the provision of vocational rehabilitation services to individuals with disabilities, and that provides singly or in combination, for an individual with a disability to enable the individual to maximize opportunities for employment, including career advancement—

"(A) medical, psychiatric, psychological, social, and vocational services that are provided under one management;

"(B) testing, fitting, or training in the use of prosthetic and orthotic devices;

"(C) recreational therapy;

"(D) physical and occupational therapy;

"(E) speech, language, and hearing therapy;

"(F) psychiatric, psychological and social services, including positive behavior management;

"(G) assessment for determining eligibility and vocational rehabilitation needs;

"(H) rehabilitation technology;

"(I) job development, placement, and retention services;

"(J) evaluation or control of specific disabilities;

"(K) orientation and mobility services for individuals who are blind;

"(L) extended employment;

"(M) psychosocial rehabilitation services;

"(N) supported employment services and extended services;

"(O) services to family members when necessary to the vocational rehabilitation of the individual;

SEC. 111. POLICY; AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) FINDINGS; PURPOSE; POLICY.—Section 100 (29 U.S.C. 720) is amended—

(1) in the section heading, by striking "PURPOSE" and inserting "POLICY"; and

(2) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"(a)(1) Congress finds that—

"(A) work—

"(i) is a valued activity, both for individuals and society; and

"(ii) fulfills the need of an individual to be productive, promotes independence, enhances self-esteem, and allows for participation in the mainstream of life in America;

"(B) as a group, individuals with disabilities experience staggering levels of unemployment and poverty;

"(C) individuals with disabilities, including individuals with the most severe disabilities, have demonstrated their ability to achieve gainful employment in integrated settings if appropriate services and supports are provided;

"(D) reasons for the significant number of individuals with disabilities not working, or working at a level not commensurate with their abilities and capabilities, include—

"(i) discrimination;

"(ii) lack of accessible and available transportation;

"(iii) fear of losing health coverage under the medicare and medicaid programs under titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq. and 1396 et seq.) or fear of losing existing private health insurance; and

"(iv) lack of education, training, and supports to meet job qualification standards necessary to enter or retain or advance in employment;

"(E) enforcement of title V and of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 holds the promise of ending discrimination for individuals with disabilities; and

"(F) the provision of vocational rehabilitation services can enable individuals with disabilities, including individuals with the most severe disabilities, to pursue meaningful careers by securing gainful employment commensurate with their abilities and capabilities.

"(2) The purpose of this title is to assist States in operating a comprehensive, coordinated, effective, efficient, and accountable program of vocational rehabilitation that is designed to assess, plan, develop, and provide vocational rehabilitation services for individuals with disabilities, consistent with their strengths, resources, priorities, concerns, abilities, and capabilities, so that such individuals may prepare for and engage in gainful employment.

"(3) It is the policy of the United States that such a program shall be carried out in a manner consistent with the following principles:

"(A) Individuals with disabilities, including individuals with the most severe disabilities, are generally presumed to be capable of engaging in gainful employment and the provision of individualized vocational rehabilitation services can improve their ability to become gainfully employed.

"(B) Individuals with disabilities must be provided the opportunities to obtain gainful employment in integrated settings.

"(C) Individuals with disabilities must be active participants in their own rehabilitation programs, including making meaningful and informed choices about the selection of their vocational goals and objectives and the vocational services they receive.

"(D) Families and natural supports can play an important role in the success of a vocational rehabilitation program, if the individual with a disability requests, desires, or needs such supports.

"(E) Qualified vocational rehabilitation counselors, other qualified rehabilitation personnel, and other qualified personnel facilitate the accomplishment of the employment goals and objectives of an individual.

"(F) Individuals with disabilities and their advocates are full partners in the vocational rehabilitation program and must be involved on a regular basis and in a meaningful manner with respect to policy development and implementation.

"(G) Accountability measures must facilitate and not impede the accomplishment of the goals and objectives of the program, including providing vocational rehabilitation services to, among others, individuals with the most severe disabilities.".

(b) REAUTHORIZATION.—Section 100 is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) For the purpose of making grants to States under part B of this title (other than grants under section 112) to assist States in meeting the costs of vocational rehabilitation services provided in accordance with State plans under section 101, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1993 through 1997 except that the amount to be appropriated for a fiscal year shall not be less than the amount of the appropriation under this subsection for the immediately preceding fiscal year, plus the amount of the Consumer Price Index addition determined under subsection (c) for the immediately preceding fiscal year.

"(C) in the case of a State that, under section 101(a)(1)(A)(i), designates a State agency to administer the part of the State plan under which vocational rehabilitation services are provided for individuals who are blind and designates a separate State agency to administer the remainder of the State plan—

"(i) an independent commission is responsible under State law for both such agencies and meets the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii); or

"(ii)(I) an independent commission is responsible under State law for overseeing the first agency described in this subparagraph and meets the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii); and

"(II) an independent commission is responsible under State law for overseeing the second State agency described in this subparagraph and is required by such State law to be consumer-controlled by individuals who are blind and to represent individuals who are blind.".

(r) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 101 is amended by striking subsections (c) and (d).

SEC. 113. DETERMINATIONS OF ELIGIBILITY AND INDIVIDUALIZED WRITTEN REHABILITATION PROGRAM.

(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Section 102(a) (29 U.S.C. 722(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) An individual is eligible for assistance under this title if the individual—

"(A) is an individual with a disability under section 7(8)(A); and

"(B) requires vocational rehabilitation services to prepare for, enter, engage in, or retain gainful employment.

"(2) An individual who has a disability or is blind as determined pursuant to title II or title XVI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401 et seq. and 1381 et seq.) shall be considered to have—

"(A) a physical or mental impairment which for such individual constitutes or results in a substantial impediment to employment under section 7(8)(A)(i); and

"(B) a severe physical or mental impairment which seriously limits one or more functional capacities in terms of an employment outcome under section 7(15)(A)(i).

"(3) Determinations made by officials of other agencies, particularly the education officials described in section 101(a)(24), regarding whether an individual satisfies one or more factors relating to whether an individual is an individual with a disability under section 7(8)(A) or an individual with a severe disability under section 7(15)(A) shall be used (to the extent appropriate and available and consistent with the requirements under this Act) for making such determinations under this Act.

"(4)(A) It shall be presumed that an individual can benefit in terms of an employment outcome from vocational rehabilitation services under section 7(8)(A)(ii), unless the designated State unit can demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that such individual is incapable of benefiting from vocational rehabilitation services in terms of an employment outcome.

"(B) In making the demonstration required under subparagraph (A) with respect to cases in which the issue concerns the severity of the disability of an individual, the designated State unit shall first conduct an extended evaluation by providing the services described in subparagraph (C)(iii)(I), and conducting the preliminary assessment described in subparagraph (C)(iii)(II), of section (7)(22).

"(5)(A) The designated State unit shall determine whether an individual is eligible for vocational rehabilitation services under this title within a reasonable period of time, not to exceed 60 days after the individual has submitted an application to receive the services unless—

"(i) the designated State unit notifies the individual with a disability that exceptional and unforeseen circumstances beyond the control of the agency preclude the agency from completing the determination within the prescribed time and the individual with a disability agrees that an extension of time is warranted; or

"(ii) such an extended evaluation is required.

"(B) The determination of eligibility shall be based on the review of existing data described in section 7(22)(A)(i), and, to the extent necessary, the preliminary assessment described in section 7(22)(A)(ii).

"(6) The designated State unit shall ensure that a determination of ineligibility made with respect to an individual prior to the initiation of an individualized written rehabilitation program, based on the review, and to the extent necessary, the preliminary assessment, shall include specification of—

"(A) the reasons for such a determination;

"(B) the rights and remedies available to the individual, including, if appropriate, recourse to the processes set forth in subsections (b)(2) and (d); and
